

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JULY 7, 1910.

C. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

VOL. 57—No. 27.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2839.

REV. D. C. HULL,
President of Millsaps College,
Jackson, Miss.

THE TRIUNE I.

By Mildred Tate Wells.

Great and glorious creation, this immortal, triune I!
Like a chrysalis enshrouded with God's love, so strong and deep,
Growing for triumphant flight beyond earth's stretch of sky
Into a life of light undimmed, where endless ages sweep.

With heart we feel the beating of the Triune Heart, and love
Is kindled, glows, and, throb for throb, it ever pulses on,
To touch the great encircling love beneath, around,
above,
Till Heaven is reached where Christ, the Lord, of blood-bought I has gone.

With never-resting mind we think of life and all it brings;
Of yesterdays so quickly gone, and other days
to be,
While present joys and sorrows speed as Time its swift flight wings:
Till heart and mind find rest and peace in calm Eternity.

And with immortal soul we see the Christ and angel throng;
That house of many mansions prepared for you and me:
A home of love and endless life where saints join in the song,
"Glory, glory evermore—Our Savior, Lord, to Thee!"

O wonderful, God-spoken I!—the breath of God thy strength—
And when thy Lord a courier sends in aspect cold and grim,
'Tis only to brush back the dark, and in the light at length,
On pinions strong enough for flight, thou wilt soar away to Him.

CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP.

By Mrs. Fannie Minor Montgomery.

Many years ago our sainted Bishop Parker said, in reply to an observation of this scribe, "Yes, there is such a thing as communion of saints." He spoke from a knowledge born of experience. Now comes Bishop Candler, justly lamenting its lack among church members of to-day. He likens the church to a trolley car filled with people who are strangers to each other, having neither spiritual acquaintance nor fellowship. This figure is fully warranted, and passengers are too often received because they swell the fares and count up in the profits. Is it to be wondered at that they get off at any temporary corner and few remain to the end of the line? Too frequently every department of church work, from the infant class in the Sunday school up, becomes an effort for money-getting rather than soul-saving; the love of money becomes the root of all evil, and the command is forgotten, "Make not my father's house an house of merchandise."

It was when all the people offered willingly that they rejoiced; and until this condition is fulfilled we need not expect the joys of his salvation; the upholding of his free spirit, nor sinners to be converted to him. Cast out the bond-woman and her son, and the Heir will come into his inheritance. When this good day shall come and his people be filled with his Spirit, out of the abundance of the heart the mouth will speak, for "where the Spirit of the Lord is there is liberty." It was in obedience to this Spirit that Mr. Wesley established the class-meeting and the love-feast. It was his custom and that of his successors to choose a subject-text by which they and all the members could examine themselves and see if they were in the faith. For example: "Are you poor in spirit? Are you hungering and thirsting after righteousness? Are you setting your affections on things above? Are you looking to Jesus, the author and finisher of your faith? Do you feel that you are led by the Spirit of God?" Any one of these will supply a line and a plummet by which a Christian can test his building, whether it be of God or of man.

The love-feast was a class-meeting of the whole church, where the love and sympathy learned in the class-room was broadened till it included all the members, and where the people of God overcame the enemy by the "word of their testimony and the blood of the Lamb."

To-day, in too many cases, the presiding elder comes, and, after preaching once or twice and meeting the stewards in a business session, goes away knowing nothing of the membership aside from the statistics, and leaving them in equal ignorance of himself. Brethren, these things ought not so to be. Let us return to the old paths, when it could be said of Methodists, "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another: and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels, and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him." (Malachi iii, 16, 17.)

THE SIN AGAINST THE HOLY GHOST.

By Rev. G. A. Guice.

Mention this sin, and at once there will spring up in the mind of almost everyone who hears you, What is the specific act which I must leave undone; if I would be free from this great sin? Say one is a sinner, and by far the major part of mankind will begin to wonder what is it that he does that makes him a sinner. The world makes no distinction between what one does and what one is; hence they reach the conclusion that it is possible for one, by the strength of his own character, to do the same thing and to live the same life that the Christian would lead, yet without religion. Therefore, they conclude that since it is possible to live the same external life, and to do the same thing the Christian does, it is possible without religion to reach the same goal which the Christian is seeking.

They are constantly asking the question, therefore, is not the voice of Scripture speaking too loudly when it says, "without me ye can do nothing?" So many have reached the conclusion that all that is needed to reach heaven is a right life externally.

The doings or actions of our days is not the matter of supreme importance for anyone. Behind all the outward activities lies the inward state—the heart—more or less given to righteousness and the love of it, the character built up more or less of the true instincts of life. We need to grasp the idea that when a man does nothing at all he is either what he ought to be or less than he ought to be. The Bible and our own conscience say he is less. Back of all things we do, then, without regard to the present moral quality of the action, lies the thing we are.

When God lays the charge of sin against us he has no reference to what we do, but to what we are. The difference between the right act of a Christian and the right act of a sinner is the difference in the motive which prompts the action; so then when the gospel charges us with sin it is but proclaiming the imperfection in the thing we are.

I take it that it will be admitted on all sides that somehow, somewhere, human life has lost its way. How shall it find itself? is the question of chief concern. "Be born anew," says the Scripture.

Conversion, says Henry Clark, is the correspondence of the moral qualities in man to the moral qualities in God. Or, it is God giving himself to us until we become like him. David was not a man after God's life, but after God's heart. Somehow, somewhere, man must produce, or have produced in his character, a response to God's.

What then is the sin against the Holy Ghost? And, first, what is the first office of the Holy Ghost in the world? See John xvi, 8: "And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, of righteousness, and of judgment." Consult the Standard Dictionary and you will find that one of the chief meanings it gives of "reprove" is to convince, to convict. We shall use the word in the sense of convince.

When he is come he will convince the world of sin. Not that the thing which he does is wrong, that is not needed; his reason teaches him that bad actions are wrong; but he convinces us that we are sinners—out of harmony with God. And he does this without regard to whether man consents to it or not.

Ask every man you meet, Are you a Christian? One will at once answer you yes or no, thus showing that the Holy Ghost has performed his office for that life.

Having once convinced a man that he is a sinner, he can do no more for that man until he acts upon the conviction—repents and turns away from his sin. He may convince one over and over again, but further than this he can not go until we, on our own part, have performed the act of repentance.

What then is the great sin? It is the refusal or the neglect to repent when conviction is come. It is the choosing to shape our life after the bent of our own will, rather than to draw it from the fountain which God has opened for us.

Refuse to repent, and we are hopeless. Repent, and at once the Holy Ghost performs his second office; he convinces us of righteousness; he comes in to make our heart his abiding place—to make us strong where we are weak, to be our stay, our strength, our comforter in time of trouble.

Thank God for such a promise, for such a hope.

LIFE.

By E. Davies, A.M., M.D., Ph.D.

"Canst thou by searching find out God?"

Huxley's definition of life is that of a "molecular machine of great complexity, depending in its workings upon its construction and upon the energies supplied to it." He makes no effort to explain the source of this energy.

Joseph Cook says: "Precisely here is the rock on which materialism and the radical form of the evolution theory wreck themselves."

John Stuart Mill, while trying to reconcile the action of the mind with the physical manifestation and to explain life, as Haeckel does, as a result of physical force, says: "The laws of nature do not account for their own origin." It is true that science is limited by man's knowledge, and ends with the end of physical law. There is an instinctive tendency in the human mind to reach beyond the limits of human knowledge and to believe, through the apparent possession of an innate consciousness, that there is a real cause for all things created. The existence of a Supreme Being is a fundamental conviction of the human mind, and both science and philosophy maintain such an existence.

With the scientist's own reasoning, if "the laws of nature do not account for their own origin," the human mind must reach on for a cause, or its search be incomplete. It must reach on into the physically unknowable—beyond the bounds of science, and following the instinctive tendency of human belief, it is satisfied that the laws of nature are of divine origin and that God is the Creator and Designer of the universe and all its laws.

Sir John Herschell, Dana, Carpenter, Pierce, Beale, Grove, Agassiz, and many other modern philosophers declare unequivocally that force, wherever exhibited, is of divine origin. The so-called scientific explanation of life and forces are purely intellectual processes. To the mind open to a knowledge of God, God is eminently knowable, and once actually known and appreciated, it becomes in no sense, to the individual, a process of reasoning that there is a God. There is an indescribable, conscious knowledge of that fact, which cannot be explained. As he develops that knowledge, by conforming his will and his life to the standard God has set for him, there is revealed to him a consciousness of God's sufficiency, omniscience and omnipotence, which no one can conceive of who refuses to be placed in harmony with God. To such a mind the perfection and faithfulness of all nature's processes manifest the perfection and faithfulness of this great Designer. And this perfection, instead of leading man to an opaque materialism which leaves him in darkness as to a cause, correctly reflects God in His unchangeable character and as the Author of all life.

Earth's crammed with heaven,
And every common bush afire with God;
But only he who sees takes off his shoes."

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By H. P. Lewis, Sr.

Chapter XVII.

Once, before leaving Lauderdale, I had my oldest preacher-boy, Barney, to try his hand at preaching. I called on Brother Allen Morse to make the closing prayer. He was one of our best men. He prayed earnestly for the young brother; then he invoked the blessings of God upon his "aged father." This happened twenty-four years ago. I did not think I had the appearance of being aged. Yet I knew I was not as young and strong as I had been.

After spending three years at Lauderdale, which were to us, at least, both pleasant and profitable, we moved to Benton in Yazoo County. Here we were well received. It was the best work financially we had ever served. We found a good parsonage very well furnished. The stewards seemed ready and willing to take good care of us. We found pleasant people everywhere we went; kind, generous, noble-hearted, liberal, but not spiritual, as a rule. There were the Swayzes, Kings, Ellisons, Ewings, Bunches, Smiths, and others, all whole-souled people, but with most of them the one thing needful was lacking. I suppose not more than one family altar existed on all the work. Yet a kinder people I never served. I grew faint, tired and hungry for some real spiritual fellowship.

I began work in real earnest for a revival of religion. In July, with the help of Rev. J. A. Bowen, of the North Mississippi Conference, we secured the services of Rev. Joe Jones, brother of the noted evangelist, Sam Jones, of Cartersville, Ga. He came and we began the meeting the third Sunday in July. He preached three times a day for seven days. The people came in large crowds from all over the county. More than one hundred were awakened and joined the church. Everybody seemed pleased. Many family altars were erected. A large number of heads of families were converted and joined. Many of them proved faithful, while some fell by the way.

One, Dr. Caruthers, who had been a drunkard, but a mighty clever man, was converted, and with his good wife, joined the Church. He made a faithful, good member. He was soon elected as Sunday school superintendent, and served the church as steward, recording and district steward, and was elected as delegate to the district and annual conferences. After his conversion he also served his county for more than one term as representative. He died last year in Yazoo City, after a long and painful illness. I loved him like a brother. After the death of my first wife, in August, 1904, I received from him one of the most heart-comforting and helpful letters it was ever my pleasure to receive. May God watch over and take special care of his lonely widow.

When Dr. Caruthers was made superintendent of the Sunday school, he first hesitated to serve, saying he never had any experience in such work. Old Brother King and others assured him that they would stand by and help him. I gave him a book on the Sunday school work. The school was started in October, 1889. In a short time he had a large, flourishing school. He threw his whole soul into the work. He told the school that they could depend on his being there and on time, rain or shine, cold or hot. One Sunday morning, when he awoke, it was raining. He waited till just time to get there, hoping the rain would hold up. But instead, the rain increased. He started not to go, not expecting any one else to venture out in such weather, but remembering the promise he had made the children, which up to that time he had not broken, he decided to go. When he reached the church, to his great surprise he found twelve or fourteen children there waiting for him. This ought to be a lesson to all superintendents, teachers and Christian workers.

I heard Bishop McTycire, talking to a class of young preachers some years ago, and among other things he said: "Be prompt—always be on time. It is better for the preacher to wait for his congregation than for the congregation to wait for the preacher." One young fellow straightened himself up at full length and said: "I always endeavor to be on time, Bishop." The good Bishop looked at him quizzically and said: "Were you here at roll-call this morning?" "No," said the young brother. "That is what it means," said the Bishop. By attending faithfully and timely to his duties Dr. Caruthers was honored by the church and the people of his county. It pays to do things just right and at the right time.

Once during my stay at Benton, while performing a marriage ceremony, the first time I stopped to get my breath, the groom said in an excited way: "I will." A man sitting on the floor in front of me laughed. I was amused, of course, but finished the ceremony.

On another occasion, I received a letter from a young widow to be at her home a certain evening to perform a ceremony for her. On reaching the place, I found the groom had secured the services of a Baptist preacher, who was present. In a few moments some one handed me the marriage license with a $10 bill. The next day a notice of the marriage appeared in a Yazoo City paper stating that the ceremony was performed by this same Baptist preacher. I had the fee, and did not object to his sharing the honor.

At another time I was sent for to officiate at the funeral of a man who was to be buried at Midway Church. I went, and to my surprise a very large crowd had gathered at the church, most of them strangers to me. Not knowing anything about the party, I read Job 14th chapter, and took for my text: "Man dieth and wasteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?" I had unusual liberty in talking. Uncle Billy King said to me afterwards: "Brother Lewis, you did not give those old 'Hard Shells' any showing whatever." "I did the best I could," was my reply. He said: "I never heard a more appropriate sermon." The man that died belonged to a 'Hard Shell' family, but he himself died out of the church.

On one occasion, a doctor, an old man, said to me: "Mr. ——— belongs to your church, does he not?" I said: "Yes." "He is no good," said the Doctor. Afterwards this same doctor joined the church, and I was made to think by the doctor just as he had said about Mr. ——— "he is no good."

At the close of my second year at Benton, I said to my presiding elder: "I have been here long enough. It is time for me to move." He seemed surprised and grieved, and said: "I have not heard an objection to your being returned from any source." The stewards told him to let me remain on the work. He did, but as I saw it, it was a mistake.

The welfare of the church is always of more importance, and I believe should be so considered by the presiding elders and others than the interest of men who serve the work. Many works have suffered by keeping the same man too long in charge. One year is just as long as some men ought to stay on a work. Many preachers wear out in less than two years. When such is the case, it usually works detriment to the interest of the cause to keep a man longer. It is better for a preacher to have to suffer inconveniences and hardships on account of having to move often, than to allow the church to suffer by keeping a man in charge who proves ill adapted to the place.

Some years ago a man said to me: "Our church is dead. It will be dead as Hector, if C. is returned." His preacher and presiding elder were fond of playing certain games, and would hurry through prayer meeting on Wednesday evenings so as to be on hand at the "Social Club," where these games were played. The preacher was returned, and the church has had no spiritual life since. We read of churches being twice dead—plucked up by the root. Some one is to blame. A man who has not courage to move a preacher when he ought to be moved, should not be a presiding elder.

While at Benton, for the first time I felt able to buy a piano for our home. We had with us at the time our six youngest children, and all of them were fond of music. So early in the year 1889, we had a nice, new piano placed in our home. It proved a great blessing to our children. It served to give them profitable employment and entertainment when at home; also to keep them from places where a preacher's children ought not to go. We had music, but not dancing, at our home nearly every night for ten years.

Dr. Abby, late of Yazoo City, enjoyed visiting our home and hearing the children sing. Rev. J. M. Pew, late of our Conference, visited our home quite often. He would sit and listen to the children sing, get happy and shout.

One of our boys was converted while we were in Benton. He was a little over six years of age. He is now telling the story of the Cross to others, and God is blessing him in his work. His mother had him praying in family service before he was seven years of age.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

Rev. T. B. Holloman, D. D.

To one who has been a visitor to this institution at nearly every commencement since its founding, either officially or as a patron, these occasions have become of great interest. In these eighteen years of its remarkable history so great and so gradual has been its advancement along all lines, and in every department, that one can scarcely realize its growth. The campus, which was a barren and worn-out field, has developed into a well-sodded, beautiful grove of some twenty acres, which rivals in attractiveness any in our Southland. The work of the painstaking landscape gardener has been well and carefully done. No professor in his class-room took more interest therein and watched with greater pleasure the development of his plans than did "Professor Acklan," keeper of the grounds and buildings. We missed his presence at our last gathering, he having died suddenly only a few days before the commencement season. He was escorted to the city of Natchez by proper representatives of the college and given honorable burial among his people. So well has his work been done that another who shall be selected to assume his duties will find little difficulty in taking up the work laid down by him.

From one brick building, in which practically all of the work of the first sessions was done, the conveniences for class work have been increased to three handsome structures. While the cottages still remain for the convenience of those students who may wish to take advantage of them, the boarding facilities have been increased by one large brick building (Founders' Hall), which will accommodate eighty or more young men, besides a community of refined Christian families, where students may find all the comforts and healthy atmosphere of the parental roof.

The committee appointed to inspect the grounds and buildings made suggestions which will be carried out during the summer for the improvement of all the buildings, which will greatly enhance both the comfort and attractiveness of the institution. From a property valuation of not exceeding $50,000, it now reaches into the hundreds of thousands; and from an endowment of $50,000 there has been a growth up to $250,000, which it is confidently believed will reach $300,000, productive, by the first of 1911. This can be easily reached if those who have given notes to that fund will respond promptly to the call of Commissioner T. W. Lewis.

At the session just closed there were twenty-five graduates from the literary department and fourteen who received the degree of Bachelor of Laws.

The contests for the different prizes and honors of the college were of unusual interest, the embarrassment to the committees being to select the best from so many that were excellent.

China, Mexico and Russia were all represented in the student body, and a remarkable feature was the graduation of a young Russian with the degree of Bachelor of Science, who also took the prizes for the best essay in English literature on Tennyson, and the essay on our form of government. This young man, it is said, landed in America six years ago entirely ignorant of the English tongue.

Unusual interest attended the sessions of the Board of Trustees, since it had become necessary to choose a president, that place having been made vacant by the election of Dr. Murrah to the Bishopric of the Church.

After spending the greater part of two days in discussing the needs of the college and the fitness of the several names which had been presented for that responsible position, the board adjourned to meet two weeks later, when such selection would be made. It was gratifying evidence that the position was not going begging among the educators of the Church. At the adjourned meeting of two weeks later—June 21st—when the several applicants were before the board, their final decision fell almost unanimously on Prof. D. C. Hull, who has for the past years been connected with the A. and M. College of Mississippi. So many and so strong were the endorsements of this gentleman, both as to scholarship and executive ability, that the board recognized its great fortune in having one so competent to assume the re-

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?
GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH

LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 535.

responsibilities so faithfully and so successfully borne by our retiring (bishop) president.

President Hull is a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, ready to serve the brethren at their convenience.

Bishop Murrah gave great joy to all when he announced that he would make his home in Jackson, but to none more than to the Board of Millsaps when he announced that it would be his great pleasure to keep in immediate contact with the institution.

The friends of the college may well take courage and go forward with such forces at work in its interest as its splendid faculty, its intelligent, aggressive president, and our Mississippi Bishop all at work in its interest.

According to arrangement by President Murrah, Rev. W. E. McMurry, D. D., secretary of our Church Extension Board, was to have preached the 11 o'clock sermon before the school in the college chapel, but at the last hour he found it impossible to attend. Rev. George R. Stuart, the well-known evangelist, who was on hand to deliver the annual address to the Y. M. C. A. of the college, was pressed into service. Both of his discourses were highly gratifying, but that of the morning, based upon Daniel, the "man with a purpose," has not been excelled for wholesome lessons and impressive eloquence in the eighteen years of such occasions. We doubt not that those lessons will go to the end of life with the young men who were fortunate enough to have heard him. In every particular it was a commencement sermon.

MONROE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Monroe District Conference met in its annual session at Lake Providence. Nothing was lacking on the part of the estimable people of this thriving town and the honored pastor to make our stay pleasant and profitable. An auto-car met the incoming delegates at the station, and soon all were safely homed. On Thursday morning the body met in the commodious church and soon were busy with the routine work, as provided by our Book of Discipline. Dr. S. S. Keener presided, and showed deep interest in the welfare of the district and gracious consecration toward his brethren in the ministry. The spirit of brotherly love was regnant, and the dominant note seemed to be, let each esteem the other better than himself. The reports from the various charges showed marked advancement—about one hundred and twenty-five members received, churches being built and repaired, new territory occupied, and the financial outlook not altogether discouraging, though it might be better.

A ringing call was made for more men and means in our extensive missionary field, now white unto the harvest. Facts, indubitable facts, were adduced, evincing that the most fruitful field for home missions lies in the country. Larger results are obtained and a more permanent footing established than in cities where more money has been expended. If this be heresy, prepare your stake.

The reports of the Sunday-school work were especially gratifying. I think, with one exception, every report made spoke most encouragingly of this department of church activity. The heart of the child is the gateway for the entrance of the Kingdom. Surely, the great Sunday-school work of the day is a radiant prophecy of its coming.

The preaching was plain, direct and forceful. Each preacher seemed bent on carrying his message to his audience for its spiritual profit. Brother George Fox, from Lake Providence charge, was licensed to preach and recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial into the traveling connection.

Our educational interests were represented by a speech from the writer, on Centenary, and one from Dr. Keener on Mansfield College. No editor or Bishop projected a presence on our vision, for which we felt sorrow, as we had a place and a welcome for both or either. Nevertheless, the interest in the Advocate abides, as many subscribers were reported. Rayville was chosen for the place of meeting next year, Brother Henderson and his people having given a pressing invitation to the Conference.

S. J. DAVIES, Sec'y.

THE ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The fortieth session of the Alexandria District Conference convened in Melville, La., June 10, at 3:30 p. m., with Rev. Paul M. Brown, P. E., in the chair. The morning sessions were held from 8:30 to 10:30, and the afternoon sessions from 3:30 to 5:30.

As the Discipline directs, "prominence was given to religious exercises," the several services suggested having been duly held during the conference.

Rev. G. D. Purcell preached the opening sermon, which had the revival note from beginning to end. Our president "magnified" his office, and conducted the business of the conference with dispatch, at the same time fully exhibiting the traits of a painstaking presiding officer and leader.

The attendance at the opening was not what we desired, but grew better during the session. Some of the brethren failed to reach the seat of the conference because of sickness in their homes.

There was special prayer offered for Sister Ledbetter, whose critical condition necessitated the presence of her husband at her bedside, and who was no better when Conference closed. Let prayer be made for this home, and may the divine consolation be theirs in its fulness.

One thing greatly marred our enjoyment of this annual meeting, viz: the absence of a number of our laymen. In some instances they were excusable, having sickness in their homes.

Our Conference was fortunate, indeed, in having with us Brother W. B. Stubbs, whose presence was a benediction, and who delivered three soul-stirring addresses on his specialty, the Laymen's Missionary Movement. The man who can listen to him and not have his missionary zeal quickened must be wholly destitute with reference to "the true riches," about which Brother Stubbs so frequently spoke. The pastors are all hard at work and hopeful. Some have had gracious revivals, and others will hold revivals soon, "the Lord willing."

Sister James, our district secretary of the W. H. M. Society, was present and stimulated us to greater efforts along the line of her special work.

Brother Vaughan clearly presented the situation at the orphanage, and the Conference pledged greater activity on behalf of this worthy institution.

The next session of our District Conference, by unanimous vote, goes to Boyce.

I. T. REAMES, Sec'y.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

On Monday evening, June 13, this Conference was begun with a profitable sermon by Rev. Elton Wilson, of the Keatchie charge, and the next morning at 9:30 the Conference was called to order, with Rev. T. J. Warlick, presiding elder, in the chair. Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux, of Bon Ami, was elected secretary.

Quite a number of the lay delegates from the smaller charges were absent, but, with several exceptions, the ministerial members were all present. The District during the past quadrennium has grown to twenty-five pastoral charges. There is still missionary territory, which, in the near future, will become "church-established."

The usual committees were appointed, and reports were called of pastoral charges. The hours of preaching were 11 a. m. and 4 p. m.; the night services, at 8 o'clock, being in the hands of the laymen, who ably presented the Laymen's Missionary Movement. The preaching was Scriptural and uplifting. It was made by Revs. Elton Wilson, B. H. Sheppard, J. W. Booth, R. W. Vaughan, W. R. Harrell, R. J. Harp and S. S. Holladay.

The following lay delegates from Shreveport delivered well prepared addresses at the evening hours: Messrs. V. L. Fulton, Thomas Jordan, W. A. McKennon, J. S. Johnston and A. W. Baird. Mr. Baird's charming solo was an inspiration to all.

The resolution of the laymen was adopted as a whole, as follows:

"In order that our Church may measure up to the standard aimed at by the Laymen's Missionary Movement, we, your committee, make the following recommendations:

1. A missionary pastor;
2. A missionary committee organized in each church.
3. A missionary Sunday school (officers and teachers with the missionary spirit).
4. A program of prayer for missions both in the Sunday school and church.
5. A systematic missionary education. We urge each pastor to make persistent, strenuous efforts to have his missionary committee purchase the Laymen's Missionary Library, and that each member of all missionary committees subscribe for "Men and Missions."
6. An every-member canvass for missions.
7. The weekly offering for missions.
8. The organization of mission study classes."

The resolution was signed by S. H. Porter, V. L. Fulton and J. M. Middleton.

Resolutions were adopted welcoming Bishop W. B. Murrah to this part of his new work in presiding over the next session of the Louisiana Annual Conference. Resolutions were adopted appreciative of the past successful quadrennium of the presiding elder, T. J. Warlick.

The interests of the Ruston Orphanage were ably presented in a touching speech by Rev. R. W. Vaughan, and the Conference pledged itself to raise fifty cents per capita among the membership of each pastoral charge towards paying the $13,000 debt.

The District has a parsonage which cost $6500; indebtedness, $3000, being paid at the rate of $37 per month.

Among the church building projects is the Noel Memorial, at Shreveport, Rev. J. G. Snelling, pastor. They have already in bank $40,000 towards constructing this edifice.

The following laymen were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Messrs. W. F. Henderson, local preacher; J. S. Johnston, V. L. Fulton, S. H. Porter, alternates, W. J. Sharp, Geo. L. Harrell.

A licensing committee was elected as follows: B. T. Crews, J. G. Snelling, H. M. Whaling, H. J. Boltz, R. J. Harp and T. J. Warlick.

Spencer J. McLain and Will F. Roberts were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission. Will F. Roberts was recommended unanimously to the Annual Conference for deacon's orders.

The interests of Centenary College were represented by Prof. J. S. Johnston. Upon his earnest solicitation $2,200 was subscribed to establish a loan fund for worthy students, lay and ministerial. Under the able presidency of Dr. Felix R. Hill, the old college has a great outlook for the future. Rev. H. Wade Cudd, of the District, and student "pro tem." at Centenary, was a vigorous seeker for prospective students. We may be sure that if this popular young clergyman "wades" in with bait for a boy to bite, the bone will never be broken.

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, financial manager of Mansfield College, spoke of forgotten and of recent difficulties in that great old institution. The session just closed reflects credit upon President George L. Harrell, and some changes in the Board of Trust point to a beneficial future. During the discussion one important fact concerning Mansfield College was emphasized by Rev. W. R. Harrell. The secretary is impressed to place it in this account for the benefit of our people who do not know the high standing held by the school. That fact is that graduates of Mansfield College are entitled to teach anywhere in the Pelican State without passing any examination, except on one book, "The Theory and Practice of Teaching." Let our people bear this in mind and send their girls to a religious, home-like school, as good as the State Normal, with the advantageous assurance of preserving their qualities of individuality. In a school where numbers are the chief concern, the individual is lost in the mass. But in the small college, interest is centered in each person—development of individuality is thus a certainty. There will be noticeable improvements at Mansfield College, and Rev. Sheppard struck a high note of optimism when he declared that he would quickly secure a sufficient number of girls to reach the capacity next session. We believe him, for he is no joker, if he is young for his age, and we know that under the able leadership of our beloved Dr. W. L. Weber, the session will be a triumph.

There were two regrettable features to the Conference, however: one was, there were no applicants for license to preach; the other, our brethren all failed to bring their quarterly records but seven. Should we grow too informal and become careless?

In the election of district lay leader, the wise choice was made of V. L. Fulton, of Shreveport, la. First Church, Shreveport, entertains the next District Conference.

Thus ended an exceedingly profitable assembly from a very large district, so large that some point to the near future when there shall be two, instead of one. Let time tell.

THE SECRETARY.

"THE WORLD MISSIONARY CONFERENCE."

By Rev. N. E. Joyner.

The great gathering convened in Edinburgh, Scotland, this day (June 14) is rightly called "The World Missionary Conference." There has not been anything like it since the ecumenical councils of the earlier centuries, and in character and purpose it is unique. The councils while contending for the essential things of our holy religion were full of contention and strife. Here widely divergent views are agreed in loyalty to the one Lord and Master and all are intent on one thing—the evangelization of the world because the Master said so. More than 160 distinct bodies are represented in the 1,200 delegates. In fact, only two large communions, the Greek and the Roman Catholic, are not included.

Last evening at 8 o'clock a formal reception was tendered the delegates in the Museum of Science and Art by the Corporation of Edinburgh. The Lord Provost and the Councilors in the full regalia of their office made an imposing spectacle. It was estimated that 5,000 persons were present. At noon on the 14th, a special service was held in the famous St. Giles Cathedral, arranged by the Minister and the Session of the Cathedral for the delegates. The ritual was somewhat more elaborate than a simple Methodist preacher is accustomed to, but such a structure, rich in historic associations and memories, such a congregation representing the Church of Christ in all the world, many of them bearing, as did the apostle, the marks of the Lord Jesus in their bodies; such music, such preaching, earnest, eloquent, evangelical, left the worshiper glad that God had given him the privilege of being present. The pastor, the Rev. Dr. Williamson, occupied the pulpit, and his text was "The field is the world."

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon the Conference was formally opened. Lord Balfour of Burleigh, the President, occupying the chair. The Business Committee made a report, announcing the hours of the session of the conference: morning, 9:45 to 1 o'clock; afternoon, 2:30 to 4:30; evening 8 to 9:30. Dr. Jno. R. Mott was elected chairman to preside during the morning and afternoon sessions, when the regular work of the conference will be transacted.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon the University of Edinburgh conferred a number of honorary degrees on several of the delegates, Robt E. Speer receiving the degree of D.D., and John R. Mott that of LL.D. The delegates were given special invitations to this function.

On the evening of the 14th, at 8 o'clock, the Conference was again convened. Lord Balfour, delivered a very able opening address and presented to the Conference a message from His Majesty King George V. The king expressed his hearty wish and firm belief that the Conference would not only contribute to the general good of mankind, but would tend to promote peace among the nations of the entire world. The addresses of the evening were delivered by His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, and Dr. Robert E. Speer, of New York. The Archbishop discussed "The Central Place of Missions in the Life of the Church," and Dr. Speer's subject was "Christ the Leader of the Missionary Work of the Church." These addresses were in every way worthy of this great occasion, and at once indicated the catholicity of the spirit and the intensity of earnestness characterizing the Conference. The very heart of the Church's life is its missionary activity, and the Master himself leads. However we may differ in many ways, the Lord has set us all to the same task, and he who goes anywhere in response to the Great Commission follows the Lord Christ!

A year and a half ago eight commissions, composed of the world's experts in missionary problems, began a careful and exhaustive study of world evangelization. The results of their labors have been printed, and special proof copies, were placed in the hands of local delegates some three weeks prior to the opening session of the Conference. These reports of the commissions, each a volume in itself, will form the basis of all the discussions and deliberations. A daily paper, in magazine form, is issued by the Business Committee, outlining each day's work in advance, and giving the minutes of the previous day.

Any one who wishes to speak must send his card to the chairman—indicating what subject he wishes to discuss, and his name is called in order, and he is allowed seven minutes.

Having outlined the opening sessions of the Conference, I shall, with the editor's permission, write of each day's proceedings in later articles.

Edinburgh, Scotland, June 14, 1910.

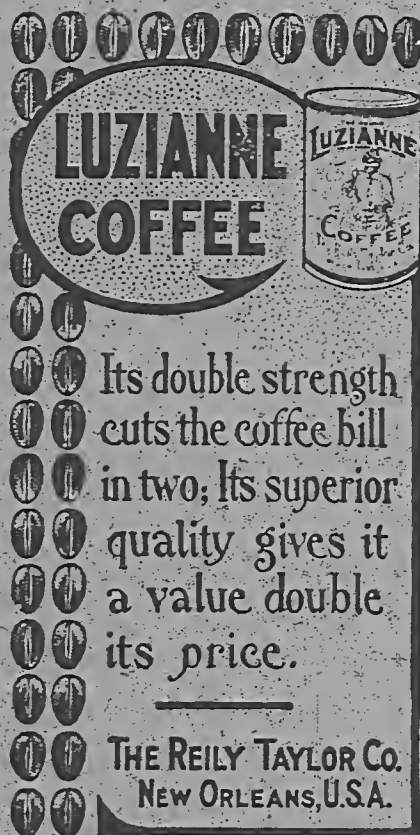

ROOMS and BOARD

634 and 638 SOUTH STREET

(Lafayette Square)

Corner St. Charles St.
Unlimited Meals.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.
Alvin Porter, Mgr.

LUZIANNE COFFEE

Its double strength cuts the coffee bill in two; Its superior quality gives it a value double its price.

THE REILY TAYLOR Co.
NEW ORLEANS, U.S.A.

Church News

Rev. R. A. Torrey, the distinguished evangelist, is slated to conduct a union meeting in Paducah, Ky., next October. The services will be held in a hall which has a seating capacity of 4000.

The Baptists of Texas have decided to establish a Woman's Training School at Fort Worth in connection with their Southwestern Theological Seminary. They are a great host in the Lone Star State and are wonderfully aggressive.

Mr. Charles D. Norton, the newly appointed private secretary of the President, is the son of a pioneer Congregational preacher. Prior to his present appointment he was filling a $4500 position in the treasury department, which he surrendered a $50,000 salary to accept. The manes of the country have given to the nation not a few of its most serviceable public men.

The Supreme Court of Illinois handed down a decision on the 29th ult. to the effect that religious exercises—reading the Bible, singing and praying—cannot be conducted in the public schools of that State. The litigation thus terminating was instituted by the Roman Catholics of Scott County. Such a decision is an outrage and strikes at the very foundation of the government, since the Republic cannot continue to exist unless the morals of its citizenship are conserved. America is not only a Christian, but is also a Protestant country. It is equally as much so as Great Britain, where the king is required to express publicly his disbelief in the Romish faith.

Rev. George C. Cates, the well known evangelist, has been sorely afflicted for several months. He held his last meeting in Cardale, Ga., last August, following which he was stricken down and confined to his bed for many weeks. When he recovered sufficiently to be up, he had a severe fall, which resulted in the breaking of his collar bone. This was improperly set, and in consequence the cure is an imperfect one; also he has been much annoyed by an inflamed sore throat. But notwithstanding all this, Mr. Cates says that he is impressed that his greatest work for the Master is yet before him. His present postoffice address is Louisville, Ky.

Prof. Walter L. Fleming, of the Louisiana State University, has recently brought out a twenty-four page pamphlet entitled "The Religious Life of Jefferson Davis." It shows that, like Lee and Stonewall Jackson, the distinguished chieftain of the Confederacy was a man of strong faith and beautiful Christian character. Especially did he bear himself admirably during his prison life and the period when the storm of relentless persecution was raging about him. His private devotions were never neglected, and at Beauvoir it was his custom to call his family and servants together daily and have them to join in religious exercises which he himself conducted. It is well that this feature of Mr. Davis' character should be brought to public attention, and Mr. Fleming's discussion of it is timely.

The July number of the Methodist Review comes to hand full from cover to cover of highly interesting and instructive matter. The opening article, by Bishop A. W. Wilson, is on "The Atonement: God's Attitude toward Sin." It is the companion piece of his great paper on "Sin in its Relation to the Atonement," which appeared in the April issue of this periodical, and is a masterful and timely discussion. The Bishop's style in these articles is quite different from his usual manner of expressing himself, his sentences being short, pithy and strikingly clear. He has rendered the Church a distinct service by his able elucidation of this important theme. Other papers of special interest are: "Hamlet: the Tragedy of Inaction," by Prof. George Herbert Clarke; "The Modern Man's Bible," by Dr. J. A. Rice; "The Religious Value of Bible Study," by Dr. H. N. Snyder; and "Montaigne: the Man and the Essays," by Dr. James Mudge. The book reviews, as usual, are excellent.

A MESSAGE FROM NORTHEAST MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Doctor Meek: I send you third round. "All is clear," and "it's full steam ahead." I am not given to any great reverence for titles. However, when one is bestowed worthily, both as to institution and individual, no man has a keener sense of appreciation. I believe the editor of our Conference organ is in every way worthy and well qualified, therefore I rejoice. It is more than an individual matter—our whole Conference is honored. I am beginning to have a sense of pride in that I am a member of the North Mississippi Conference. It was not one whit behind the best of them at the General Conference. Our delegates were known and honored. They had sense enough to let their work represent them—not their jaws. It was positively refreshing. When they did speak, it was where it was worth something, and they had something to say.

Bishop Hoss was easily the leader, but he was by no means the only strong man at the General Conference. But the General Conference was discussed so much prior to the meeting that it behooves us to let it rest for a time, and carry out the sane and conservative policies outlined.

In the Aberdeen District the machinery is well oiled and the work is being done smoothly. R. O. Brown, the genial and popular pastor at Amory and Nettleton, has been doing the work of a presiding elder some of late. He has brought the writer under lasting obligation, and won for himself the appreciation of many of our laymen. J. T. Murrah begins well here at Aberdeen. I expect the best four years of his life among this people. Joe Beasley, of Millsaps, will take charge of Okolona Circuit, No. 2. He has been tried as a supply in this district before, and was not found wanting.

The outlook for Grenada College was never so good as now. There is a real enthusiasm that is going the rounds with J. R. Countiss that speaks as mere words cannot.

The W. F. M. Society recently held at Tupelo the best Conference in the history of that organization. They reached the high tide of enthusiasm—of holy zeal. It was good to be there. No more capable women are to be found in the State. And Duren was the man of the occasion. His work at Tupelo has "grip" to it.

The League Conference at Kosciusko was well attended. Not many of the preachers, but the young people were there. They are working sanely. Their enthusiasm is of the kind that does things. They are wisely turning their attention to the education of some of our worthy boys and girls who are giving their lives to the Church. Whatever may be true of the League in the whole Church, it is alive in this Conference.

Sorry the editor will be unable to reach the Aberdeen District Conference. There are those that love him in these parts, and would have been glad to look on his face and hear his voice. However, I hereby give assurance that the Advocate will not be without representation. Poe and Carlisle will not go to sleep while on duty. They are not that kind—and as to John Lowe, well, he has a way of having a "spell" at the right time and place and doing things. These men will speak for the Advocate, and one of them will solicit subscriptions, and send in the cash. The presiding elder will take warning at your "summer-time suggestion"—and pay his own subscription "down to date."

I am not much on long-winded dissertations on higher and lower criticism, satis eloquentiae, sapientiae parvum, (see Webster's Unabridged, ahem!), but it will afford me a real pleasure to do what all our preachers ought to do, namely, write brief items of interest from all parts of the work occasionally. These need not contain "falsely flattery, compliments, or artifices," but personals and the like that many men are interested in. More than one layman has said to me of late, when I was pressing the claim of the Advocate, if it would only tell me about my old pastors, where they are and what they are doing, etc. See! Let's keep up with each other, brethren. The Advocate will be helped, and the work will be helped.

There isn't a drone among the preachers of the Aberdeen District. They are not all well equipped for the best work—but they are not afraid of work—and they are doing things. Cordially.

J. H. FELTS.

Aberdeen, Miss.

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY.

By Hon. W. W. Magruder.

The recent developments at Nashville have been astounding. If Vanderbilt University belongs to the Church, then well and good. If it does not belong to the Church, then the sooner we find this out the better.

The time for compromise, for amicable treaty, has passed. The hour for action has come. However deplorable it may be, the property of the Church should be protected as a matter of principle and common honesty. The responsibility for the breach rests not upon Methodism, but upon the Board of Trust.

Board of TRUST. What does the word "Trust" mean? What does it imply? What is its significance? Does it import fee simple ownership? Is the very term not a declaration that the corpus of the estate is held in trust for its owner, that the property rights are administered by the Board in trust? Then, if in trust, in trust for whom? Who is the owner? The rejection of the Bradford resolution is an emphatic declaration that the Church is not the owner. The Board of Trust announces to the world that Vanderbilt University does not belong to the Church. Property can not own itself any more than the small boy can lift himself by the bootstraps. If the Church does not own the University, who does own it? Does Chancellor Kirkland own it? Does W. K. Vanderbilt own it? Where is the fee simple title? Under fundamental legal principle, it must be vested somewhere. Does the University belong to its self-perpetuating Board of Trust?

Will the laws of Tennessee and of the United States, in its court of last resort, permit this body to accept a trust as a Board of Trust and then repudiate the fiduciary relation? We shall see. Starkville, Miss.

AN IMPORTANT REQUEST.

To the Members of the Louisiana Conference.

Dear Brethren: Please send to Brother J. L. P. Sheppard the names of those girls in your charge who will likely attend a boarding school next session. Brother Sheppard is having fine success, and wants to see every girl in Louisiana who may be induced to attend Mansfield College.

A. W. TURNER.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Rev. M. L. Burton will preach the opening sermon of the Hattiesburg District Conference at Lucedale on the evening of July 13.

IMPORTANT.

The following contributions to the boat fund have been received to date: Rayne, W. L. Doss, Jr., $4; Iota, E. Zoble, $3.10. As this matter is important and urgent, will the brethren kindly send to me their contributions as soon as possible?

J. E. DENSON, P. E.

Lafayette, La.

WANTED—FOR SEPTEMBER.

A position as matron—in College or Hospital—by an experienced, energetic woman. Would like to take charge of old couple, and keep house during the winter. Address Mrs. E. Pennell, box 177, Monteagle, Tenn.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location. Includes furniture. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

HOUSE ON CAMPGROUNDS FOR SALE.

Desirable two-story cottage, with four rooms and bath, bathroom with latest sanitary improvements; completely furnished, facing open square in front of Keller Lodge, with a small, shady park in the rear. Address, Christian Advocate, 512 Camp, New Orleans.

SEASHORE CAMP-MEETING.

39th ANNUAL CAMP MEETING JULY 13-20.

The Seashore Camp Meeting is known over a large part of Methodism to-day. Men have attended it from all parts of the Union. The religious services are under the direction of the Presiding Elders of New Orleans, Seashore and Mobile District Conferences of the M. E. Church, South, and these brethren will be assisted by the best preaching talent that can be obtained.

Preaching under the Tabernacle, Grove, and Cottage Prayer Meetings, and other religious services, will be held during each day and evening, to which all persons on the ground are not only cordially invited, but are expected to attend.

Annual Camp Meeting July 13-20. The Camp Meeting really gives the right to exist to the grounds, and it was for this purpose that Christian men invested their money in this property, in order that men might come away for a season from their other cares and commune with God. We hope for a revival this year.

Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, July 21 to 31. This is the successor to the former Seashore Epworth League Assembly. It has simply broadened the scope of its work. While not undertaking to do especially evangelical work, but rather to train the young people how to work, this assembly usually numbers many conversions as an immediate result of its work. Some of the gracious revivals that have blessed some of the churches have had their inception in the new motives for service given the young people in this assembly.

For full particulars, address as follows:

In regard to accommodations: R. G. Price, Biloxi, Miss., or S. G. Meyer, 116 St. Charles St., New Orleans, La.

Christian Workers' Assembly: Rev. F. S. Parker, D.D., Nashville, Tenn.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure.

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McClosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec.-Treas.
Geo. A. Hero.

Secular News and Comment

General Porfirio Diaz was recently elected President of Mexico for the eighth time. He has been at the head of that republic since 1876—thirty-four years.

Yale University has given the degree of Master of Arts to Miss Jane Addams of Chicago. This is the first time that that historic institution has conferred such a distinction on a woman.

Miss Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of the Chicago public schools, has been accorded by the State University of Illinois the unusual distinction of being made a Doctor of Laws.

There is talk of Baltimore entering the contest for the Panama Exposition. Some contend that the canal will be completed in 1914, and that the 1915 plans of New Orleans and San Francisco are a year behind the proper time.

Mrs. Marella Ricker, of Concord, New Hampshire, has formally declared her candidacy for the governorship of that State, accompanying her announcement with the required fee of $100. She was the first woman admitted to the bar in the District of Columbia and also the first to practice law in the commonwealth in which she now resides.

It is reported that the conference between the two political parties in Great Britain concerning the legislative powers to be exercised by the House of Lords, which was held at the instance of King George, has resulted in failure, and that the contest will have to be fought out before the people. This will necessitate an autumn session of Parliament.

Prof. Goldwin Smith bequeathed to Cornell University $1,000,000. Never were the Northern colleges and universities the beneficiaries of such an unceasing flow of benevolence as now. Harvard's gifts this year aggregate $880,000. But though vastly poorer, the Southern educational institutions are surrounded by a more wholesome moral atmosphere and exhibit loftier ideals. We advise our young people to pursue their courses of study in the South.

A New York grand jury, of which John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was the foreman, reported a few days since that they were unable to find any evidence of an organization to carry on the white slave traffic in that city. They criticized moving picture shows as tending to poison the minds of the young and stated that they found 215 massage and manicure parlors to be nothing more nor less than disorderly houses. They recommended the enactment of laws to govern and keep clean such establishments.

Dr. A. D. Cudd, of Spartanburg, S. C., who is a graduate of Johns Hopkins University, claims that he has discovered a cure for pellegra. The treatment consists of an incision reaching the appendix, the end of which is clipped off so that a tube can be inserted into it, through which the medicine is injected into the large intestine. Hitherto, the appendix has been regarded as a valueless part of the human anatomy, but it may be that after all it is to become of service to the human family.

All the foreign professors in the University of Peking, numbering ten Europeans, three Americans and four Japanese, have signed a "round robin" declaring that they will refuse to continue their courses unless measures are at once taken to remedy the unsanitary conditions of the dormitories and class rooms. This protest has been sent to the Chinese administration. As a result of the prevailing conditions there have been outbreaks of typhoid fever, diphtheria and smallpox. Up to the present time the Chinese authorities have paid no heed to this complaint.—Zion's Herald.

England and America are now connected by about twenty cables, and the Commercial Cable Company announces its intention of laying down one more between Valentia, County Kerry, and Carso, Nova Scotia. It is evidently, says a contemporary, the opinion of the company that wireless telegraphy is not destined very speedily to supplant the older system. There are in all about 260,000 miles of cables in existence at the present time, and of these some 100,000 miles have been laid within the past ten years—a fact not very widely known.—The Daily States.

United States Senator Samuel Douglas McEnery died at his home in New Orleans on June the 28th. Only two days before he had left Washington, where Congress had just adjourned, in apparently good health, but while en route to the Crescent City was seized with a violent attack of indigestion, which marked the beginning of the illness to which he succumbed. Senator McEnery was in the 73d year of his age. Though not a man of remarkable brilliancy, his public career had been long and useful and he was held in high esteem by the people of Louisiana. His obsequies were largely attended.

Senator John Warwick Daniel, of Virginia, died in a sanitarium in Lynchburg on the 29th ult., after a protracted illness of several months. He was in the 68th year of his age, and had been in the public service longer than any other Democrat in the Legislative branch of the national government. He was a gallant Confederate soldier, a statesman of recognized ability, and an orator of national renown. As a lawyer he stood in the forefront, and was the author of an authoritative work on Attachments under the Virginia Code and of a valuable text book on Negotiable Instruments. He was personally a most charming and agreeable gentleman, and was almost idolized in the Old Dominion. His passing removes from the stage a noble and majestic figure.

Dr. Craighead, President of Tulane University, in delivering an address on John C. Calhoun at Clemson College, South Carolina, made the following reference to his great Kentucky contemporary: "To Henry Clay has been attributed the utterance, 'I would rather be right than President.' It may be doubted whether Mr. Clay was in earnest, or merely making a striking phrase. It sounds very much as if uttered after the first Tuesday following the first Monday in November." This iconoclastic remark of the distinguished educator has subjected him to severe criticism. The Jackson (Miss.) Daily News thus takes him to task: "It was not necessary for Dr. Craighead to make invidious comparisons. Calhoun's fame is too firmly built up to need the tearing down of Henry Clay's fame. We are led to suspect that Dr. Craighead fell a victim to the weakness which he attributed to Clay—that he wished more to make a striking phrase than he did to be historically correct. The famous utterance of Clay, according to history, was not made because of an election in which he was defeated. It was made after he had taken a positive position on a burning issue. He had taken sides on a question on which the people were widely divided. Because he did take sides on such a question, experienced political advisers told him that such a position would defeat him for the presidency. Whereupon he gave utterance to the phrase, which has been famous since that campaign. Henry Clay was never president, but he was right in making the famous declaration. It would have been better for Dr. Craighead's reputation as a scholar and an educator if he had not made any invidious comparison, and if he had not given the wrong switch to history in his address to the young men."

A TIMELY SUGGESTION.

Christian Advocate: In this week's Christian Advocate, is a letter from Mr. Vaughan, of the "Orphanage," making an earnest appeal to all Methodists, and Christian people generally, for financial aid to liquidate the indebtedness of that institution.

I have just mailed him an order for $15, and I write to ask how many will duplicate my order, or how many will give what they can, remembering not to despise the day of small things. I hope every Methodist will respond liberally to this worthy cause.

Let us rally to the support of Mr. Vaughan, and with a strong and united effort, pay off the debt which now hangs like a pall over that deserving institution.

MRS. G. B. BROWN.

Zachary, La., June 24, 1910.

A FRIENDLY WORD.

Dear Brother Meek: I hail the weekly visits of the Advocate with delight, and especially do I enjoy the editorials, which have this week been doubly helpful. I certainly voice your sentiments when you exclaim, "The most priceless possession of the Church is the Holy Spirit, and her primary mission as representative of her ascended Lord, is to seek and save the lost." "If she fails in this, she will betray her holiest and most sacred trust, no matter what she may achieve in other directions."

Everything you have written in regard to our "chief pastors" is certainly timely and will doubtless help to set our great machinery in motion for the accomplishment of spiritual results. I feel that you have struck the keynote to the situation, and that great good will result therefrom. I hope that our Bishops may heed the call of Bishop Wilson and join him in leading a revival campaign throughout the connection.

MRS. M. W. MORRISON.

OUR FRENCH MISSION WORK.

Dear Brother Meek: Will you permit me space in your appreciated paper to express some deep impressions made on my mind and heart during the recent session of the Lafayette District Conference? I do not wish to write of the reports of the preachers or the general business of the Conference. The secretary doubtless will furnish this. I desire to write of the reports of the preachers of the French Mission work located in southwest Louisiana. As I listened to the address of Rev. C. V. Brethaupt to the Conference, setting forth the good work already accomplished, despite the great difficulties under which these faithful men who serve these charges have labored, and the possibilities that are within reach of the M. E. Church, South, in this promising Home Mission field of southwest Louisiana, and the great need of financial aid in order that our church may grasp and push the work, I thought, Oh, that I had the money at my command, it would be a delightful privilege for me to place it in the hand of my worthy presiding elder, that he might at once appoint suitable preachers and erect houses of worship that these people, who for so long a period have been dominated by traditions of men and superstition which enslave and keep out of their lives the light of the truth as it is in Jesus, might have the gospel in its purity preached unto them.

Will not some of our liberal people of the great State of Mississippi respond to the call to help in this great work? I am satisfied that the readers of your paper will pardon my reference to the liberality of the Methodists of Mississippi, when I state that I spent the longest period of my life within the bounds of that State, and for a number of years was a member of the dear old Mississippi Conference. Therefore I know whereof I speak when I say they are a liberal people. Should any one desire to invest in this grand work, which will pay dividends throughout eternity in souls that have been saved, and the lifting up of a people to a higher standard of living, write to Rev. J. E. Denson, P. E. of the Lafayette District, who fully understands the needs of this Home Mission field in southwest Louisiana, and whose heart yearns to be able to place men there and possess this territory which is now ready to receive the gospel of the Son of God as preached by the consecrated ministry of the M. E. Church, South.

Rev. M. Hebert and Rev. C. V. Brethaupt, with their assistants, are doing a noble work, but greatly handicapped for lack of means. Let us pray earnestly to the Lord of the harvest that he may touch the hearts of those of our people who have the money and the will to help remove the barriers in this promising mission field.

H. P. VANDENBURG.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TRAINING SCHOOL.

This school is located at Montrose, Miss., and is under the capable management of the Rev. W. W. Moore. In a healthy location, with expense at the minimum, it is doing a great work for the Church and the citizenship of the future, that justifies Brother Moore's investment of himself, and of our faith and investment of means in the enterprise.

The Spirit of the Lord is evidently leading in the management of this school, and wise things are being projected for the future development of its usefulness. They are securing a home and land, where poor boys can greatly reduce the cost of living by working a few hours each day. If but one boy each year should take advantage of this opportunity, it would be a large dividend on the investment.

Then, they wish to build a J. W. Lambuth memorial mission room, where maps, charts and all necessary literature for a thorough instruction concerning this great movement of the Church will be kept. All this they can and will accomplish with the small sum of twenty-five hundred dollars. Only think and pray over the great things proposed in this small investment, and send your contribution, large or small, to Rev. W. W. Moore, Montrose, Miss.

JAS. M. WEEMS.

SPEARING & CO.,

(Established 1817.)

SAIL MAKERS

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS and TENTS.

CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOULAS STREETS

Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER

Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

The Home Circle

POLLY'S COMFORTER.

In the old parson's garden grew a tall white birch-tree that pointed, like a slender finger, up to the blue sky.

Little Betty loved the birch-tree. Its leaves rustled like her mamma's silver-gray gown.

When Betty came to her grandfather's home, the parsonage, to visit, she was at first a little homesick. You see, the house was so much bigger than the little home she had just left, and then her aunts wore their hair brushed down so very flat and straight over their ears that it gave her a queer, swallowing feeling. But, when she looked out of her windows and saw the birch-tree, it was like finding an old friend with upreaching arms.

On all three of the first nights of her visit, when Betty's bedtime came, Aunt Alice happened to be going upstairs at the very same moment. That was so comforting, because Aunt Alice's face was one you were not a bit afraid of, even the first time of seeing it. And, oddly enough, on each of these nights this kind auntie remembered she had left something—twice her thimble and once her prayer book—in Betty's room.

Betty liked, as on the first night she sat on the floor unlacing her shoes, to watch Aunt Alice moving about the room. It wasn't having mamma, but it was next best. It took a long time to find the thimble. Surely that was it, on top of the book-case! But why need Aunt Alice be told? If the shining object proved to be something else, she would only be disappointed. So Betty held her peace.

"Where do you sleep?" she asked.

"My room is right under yours, on the floor below."

"And do you sometimes leave your door open?"

"Always." (Heaven forgive her!)

Aunt Alice drew aside the white dimity curtains opposite Betty's bed, and showed her the dipper, made of stars. There was a bright-eyed star held within the crescent moon, just as if 'twas rocking in a little boat! said Betty.

Her bed was very narrow, and Betty was about as broad as she was long, but Aunt Alice managed to lie beside her for ten minutes, and told a quiet yet funny story that sent the child to sleep with a smile on her lips and the gentle voice linking her grieving day to a happier night.

Before Aunt Alice herself went to bed, she came up to replace a slipping blanket and tuck it in comfortably. Then she happened to remember that, when in her own home, Betty slept with her sister, Katherine. "She will miss Katherine when she wakes in the morning," thought Aunt Alice. "We must contrive something."

Presently Aunt Patience, winding up the tall clock in the hall below, heard steps on the attic stairs.

"What are you going to do, Alice?" she called.

"I want to find something," called back Aunt Alice, in a meek little voice.

"Now, don't slip, Alice, with your lamp! If it's an extra quilt you want, there's one in"—but Aunt Alice was out of hearing.

In six minutes she was down again, a filmy cobweb resting, quite like a cap, upon her still lovely hair. In the hand which held up her green delaine skirt she carried an ancient rag doll, named Polly.

The doll had black painted hair, with a parting as rigidly straight as dear Aunt Alice's own, and her cheeks, although they had been painted so many years ago, were far redder than Aunt Alice's.

Polly's eyes were bright black, rather like huckleberries. Her frock was of buff and white striped calico, and a little blue shawl, crossed over her shoulders, was clasped by a silver pin that had been one of a pair worn by Uncle Robert when he was a baby. It said "Robbie" on it, but that didn't trouble Polly, who was as proud of the gleaming pin as of anything she wore.

Aunt Alice now very carefully propped up the doll against the foot of Betty's cot-bed. And when, next morning, earlier than usual, the little girl awoke, with rather a sinking heart as she remembered that mamma and Katherine were many miles away, it was indeed a surprise to see the huckleberry eyes looking encouragingly into her own.

You know if a little girl is away from papa and mamma, there is nothing, not a peach, a frosted cookie, a story-book—no, not even a kitten or a canary—nothing so cheering as a doll. Aunt Alice knew this, as she knew all really important things about children. And Betty reached at once for Polly, and hugged the doll tight, while Aunt Alice, through the open bed-room doors, heard her laughing with pleasure.

Betty examined all Polly's clothes with interest, and found them quite different from what dollies wear nowadays. For instance, the waist of the buff-striped frock came away up under the arms and the skirt down to the ankles, while the shoes were heelless and what were called Congress, with a piece of elastic cloth set into their sides. Aunt Patience, Aunt Alice and Aunt Harriet wore just such shoes.

Betty thought the silver pin wonderfully beautiful, and handled it with awe.

"I'll pretend it was given to her by a little brother named Robbie, and so he had his name put on," she said to herself. "Only mamma said jewelry shouldn't ever be worn in the morning, so I'll put it away in my treasure-box for now."

She drew the treasure-box from under her pillow. It was of "the little speed-well's blue," and in it were all the things she held most precious, such as a rose-leaf pudding (baked in the garden yesterday), carefully wrapped in tissue paper, the tiny pink pencil from Miss Mollie's last dance-order, a satin-smooth shell, and a pressed blossom of the scarlet pimpernel.

There was plenty of room in the blue box for this new treasure, and it was snuggled in between the rose-pudding and the pink-pencil.

"You shall wear the beautiful pin right after dinner," said Betty, drawing the doll's shawl more closely and fastening it with a common pin.

Then it was past time to get up, and, as Betty scrambled into her clothes, she talked cheerfully to the doll. "Do you see the birch-tree out there?" said she. "I love it, and it loves me. We are friends, and I know what I'll do! I'll make you a swing in it, like the one Katherine and I have at home. Aunt Alice will find me some string."

"Breakfast's ready, Betty!" called Miss Mollie.

"Yes, I'm coming! I'm all ready but one button!" answered Betty.

"Well, it's good to hear the child's own voice back again!" said Aunt Patience. "What's come over her, all in a night?"

Aunt Alice smiled. She and Polly had a secret, hadn't they?

Breakfast was very good. There was mince-meat and baked potatoes (with thick cream) and Johnny-cake, with rice griddle-cakes afterwards. And you had your choice of cold apple-sauce or hot baked apples. Aunt Patience had remembered, too, Betty's favorite cream cheese, and had, with her own skillful hands, made for her a little pat of it. The cheese was in a saucer that had little shamrock leaves all around the edge. Grandfather had, twenty years before, brought a set of this china from Ireland, and no piece had ever been chipped. That was because Aunt Patience every morning washed the china carefully, and Aunt Alice wiped it with a fine soft towel, and, reaching on tip-toe, put the dainty cups and saucers and all the rest far back upon the third shelf of the closet.

"It's too bad," said Aunt Patience, as she gathered the silver, "that the Worcester Conference comes to-day. It leaves Betty quite alone for the morning. Hannah promises to give an eye to her, to be sure."

"We must contrive something," said Aunt Alice, smiling at the little girl, who was brushing the crumbs. And later, just before the stage-coach rumbled up to the door, she took Betty aside.

"When we've gone, run down into the Fairy Circle," said she, mysteriously.

"Is it a secret?" asked Betty.

"Yes, darling," said Aunt Alice.

Then grandfather, in his Sunday black, and with a flat book of sermons clasped under one arm, held the stage-door wide for Aunt Patience. Aunt Alice, and Miss Mollie, and stepped briskly in after them, while the driver cracked his whip.

Betty watched them till grandfather, at the turn of the road, waved a last good-bye. She then reached for her tiny pocket, from which she drew a morsel of a handkerchief, but, suddenly, remembering the secret, stuffed it back again.

How her little feet flew across the road and over the grass. In a moment she came to the Fairy Circle. This was a quite perfect circle of stately pine-trees, planted, when he first came to live in the parsonage, by grandfather.

Now what do you suppose Betty found as, pushing aside the low-sweeping fragrant branches, she stepped between two of the tall trees down in the middle of the Circle? Why, she could hardly believe her eyes! And I am sure you, too, would have opened yours very wide could you have seen what Betty saw.

There was an actual croquet-set, of the size needed for a doll of medium height. The wickets were nicely contrived of supple willow twigs, and the spaces between the wickets had been measured with exactness. The stakes were made of clothes-pins, and had violet, white, blue, and pink bands painted around them.

But what made Betty first stand stock still, and then roll herself over and over on the pine carpet with delight, was the sight of the doll Polly, in her buff frock, standing beside the first side-wicket, her hand resting upon a mallet (Uncle Doctor missed one of his medicine-pounders next day), and one foot firmly pressed upon the blue ball. To tell the truth, the doll was propped in this position with sticks, but they hardly showed.

Betty saw in the huckleberry eyes a mind bent on playing croquet as it ought to be played, so, choosing a mallet herself (this took some time, for you see the colors were all most charming), she took the violet ball to match, and the game began in dead earnest.

Polly beat four games and Betty beat three. Then they made a pillow of pine-needles under one of the trees, and, lying down, watched, through the green branches, a fleecy white cloudlet straying. Betty thought, like a little lamb across the field of blue. While Polly gazed at the sky unflinchingly, the little girl's eyelids drooped slowly—slowly—till presently the doll's rag hand slipped from her arm, and Betty was sound asleep. Here, at eleven o'clock, Hannah found her, just awakening.

Over Hannah's arm hung a red-and-blue fruit napkin, which she at once spread on the ground under the shadiest pine. In one hand she carried a stout little pitcher of lemonade, and in the other hand a dish of small, freshly-baked cookies. They were of sugar gingerbread and had caraway seeds in them.

"O, Hannah, are we going to have lunch out here?" cried Betty, sitting bolt upright.

"Ye are that, Missy. 'Twas Miss Alice said 'twould be more 'plaisin'-like," replied Hannah, filling a little glass with lemonade. Oh, how good it tasted! The cookies, too, were delicious!

"Only half-a-one, Polly my love," said Betty. "You know your dinner-time isn't very far off."

"The sinse av' her!" said Hannah, going away, chuckling.

"But you have more than half-a-one," Polly grumbled.

"I'm old. I'm nearly eight. In ten months more I'll be eight. You're three, you know," explained Betty, disposing of a fourth cookie. "Here! You may have a bit of mine. That's for beating the most games."

When Betty took up the last cookie, she spied pinned to the napkin covering the plate, a small strip of paper, on which was printed, "Fold the napkin." As Betty's eighth birthday was so nearly at hand, she could read these words easily. She at once removed the pretty fringed napkin, shook out the crumbs, and was about to fold it, when she saw on the plate a thin paper-covered book.

Betty loved reading. She forgot all about what the paper had said, and, seizing the little book, rested it upon her knees, which were drawn up almost to her chin. She turned the cover, saw the first of many pictures, and then—Polly might have been miles away, the croquet-set stood unheeded, a fat robin presently dared to reach for a crumb lying close to Betty's brown-dimpled hand, but she saw him not.

For it was a Fairy Circle indeed that now held the little girl, and the pages of her book were magic doors opening to entrancing scenes. She read of the Snow Maiden, the Little Tin Soldier, the Happy Fir-tree, and other tales, so that the time fairly flew, and for once the dinner-bell was to her, if not to Polly Comforter, an unwelcome sound.

Meanwhile, grandfather, Aunt Patience, Aunt Alice, and Miss Mollie were rumbling home again in the stage.

"Of course," said Aunt Patience, "she's used to all those brothers and sisters. I'm not sure that she'll be contented to stay here all summer."

"If the dear child is really homesick"—began grandfather, in a troubled voice.

"We must contrive something!" said dear Aunt Alice.—Christian Register.

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

For all the Ills and Accidents which come to the Hunter or Fisherman—invaluable!
Cuts, Burns, Bruises, Sprains, Insect Bites and Prickly Heat—internally for Colic and Cramps. Always have a bottle in your kit.
AT ALL DRUGSTORES
25c and 50c

THE SPORTSMAN'S SAFEGUARD

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers of all Denominations, $1.00.PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Mounser, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murray, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.*Editorial.WHERE THE RESPONSIBILITY RESTS.

"But the manifestation of the Spirit is given to every man to profit withal." So wrote St. Paul in his remarkable discussion of gifts in the twelfth chapter of First Corinthians. In this verse and throughout that chapter, he plainly teaches that it is incumbent upon every member to contribute, as his ability admits, to the life and growth of the Church; that just as the human body can be healthful and vigorous only when every organ properly performs its appropriate function, so the body of Christ can attain to the highest prosperity only when every unit is faithful in the fulfillment of its mission. In other words, he fastens the responsibility for the condition of the Church, not upon the leader or the officials, but upon the entire organization, upon the membership as a whole.

This teaching needs to be strongly emphasized in our day. Everywhere there is a disposition to hold the pastor of a congregation exclusively responsible for its religious status. If piety is at a low ebb and the people display a lack of interest in the services of the sanctuary and are inactive in Christian work, the almost unvarying assumption is that the preacher in charge is to blame, and that the only remedy for the unfortunate situation is to have him go elsewhere, and secure another minister to take his place. This erroneous and unscriptural view does the clergy great injustice, and is the cause of many unnecessary, and perhaps unwise, transfers of faithful men under our itinerant system.

Of course, we do not mean to take the position that the pastor is not an important factor in the spiritual life of a community. Efficient leadership counts for much in everything. Napoleon said: "It is better to have an army of lambs led by a lion, than an army of lions led by a lamb." A consecrated minister, in touch with God and burdened with a sense of his responsibility—brave, manly, and faithful—wields an influence which eternity alone can measure. But visible success does not always attend his labors. Not even the thunders of Savonarola's eloquence could reform the corruption of Florence. There were places where the majestic apostle to the Gentiles sowed and reaped not. Of our Lord himself in Nazareth, it was said, "He did not many mighty works because of their unbelief." The master-builders of Christendom have not, as a rule, been those who accomplished prodigious things single-handed, but those with a genius for putting others to work.

The Church can achieve large success only when the rank and file of its membership are active. Herein lies the explanation of the phenomenal triumphs of the early disciples. So uniformly diligent were they that there was then no distinction between the laity and clergy. Every follower of the Master was an earnest propagandist; the story of "Jesus and the resurrection" was upon every lip. All were busy—there were no drones among them. And it is true to-day that when a congregation awakes and bestirs itself, spiritual results quickly follow. The successful revivalist is the man who can arouse and enlist the Church in the glorious work of soul-winning.

The ablest and most zealous preacher may fail in his individual efforts to reach the unsaved, but never God's people in a community when filled with the Holy Spirit and working aggressively together.

Since, then, it is the general membership of the Church that holds the key to the religious situation in our various charges, what ought they do? Certainly they ought not to sit idly down and find fault with the pastor for not improving the condition of things. The obligation to do this is not less theirs than his. The Lord did not say like priest, like people, but "like people, like priest." Great is the influence of the ministry upon the Church, but to a still more marked extent does the Church give type to the clergy. There is little doubt that our depleted ministerial ranks is due to the waning piety in our Methodist homes, where the family altar has largely ceased to exist. And if our preachers are lacking in spirituality, it is because they have cooled down to the temperature of the parishioners whom they serve. This they should not do, but it is difficult to keep from it. It is well-nigh impossible to be a flame of fire in an ice-box.

The following are some of the things that the laity of a congregation may do to promote its prosperity:

1. Encourage the pastor. He needs it. The lack of spirituality among the people which depresses you, is apt to weigh doubly upon him. Ofttimes there is loneliness in religious leadership, and the preacher's heart aches for the want of sympathy. Appreciative words cheer and inspirit him.

2. Practice the ministry of intercession. Pray for those who are of the "household of faith" and also for the unsaved. Who can measure the influence of the prayers of a godly man or woman? Invincible is the Church whose membership knows the way to the Father's throne. It is as strong as the promises of God, and commands omnipotence for its achievements. And remember the pastor especially in your supplications. Spurgeon used to come straight from a season of prayer with his officials to the pulpit. No wonder he preached with a tongue of flame that set human hearts on fire. If our ministers were supported, as they should be, by the united petitions of their people, no doubt they would speak with a new and life-giving power.

3. They can do personal work. Efficient laborers are the crying need of the hour. The attendance upon public worship could be largely increased if the members of the church would only exert themselves a little in that direction. We have known indifferent preachers, with an active congregation, to minister regularly to full houses, while in the same town men of brilliant pulpit-gifts, serving a negative and unconcerned people, discoursed to empty pews. And every lay member should have a part in the supreme work of rescuing the lost. To turn this work over to the pastor and expect it to be accomplished through the agency of the Sabbath sermon alone, is to leave it undone. The place to impress souls is in the home, in the office, in the store, on the street—everywhere that men meet and mingle. Most of the fruit for the Master must be hand-picked. Gathering it is a task for each and all. Challenging the disciple on every side, are white harvest fields. "And he that reapeth, receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal."

A SENSIBLE VIEW.

The discussion of the question of the organic union of the two Episcopal Methodisms in America has gone on quite vigorously of late. Several of the fraternal delegates to the General Conference at Asheville aired their views on the subject at considerable length, and some of our church papers have been speaking as if the coming together of the two bodies is an event impending and all but accomplished. In view of the vast amount of sentimental and thoughtless talk that has been indulged in with reference to the matter, it is somewhat refreshing to read the following practical summary of the situation from the pen of Dr. Charles M. Stuart, the brilliant editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate:

"Organic union, if it ever comes at all, lies some distance in the future. It should be borne in mind, however, that organic union is not the final test of spiritual unity or even of spiritual harmony. No one could listen to the discussions of our own General Conference at Baltimore, and compare them with the discussions at the Southern General Conference at Asheville; and not feel that there was a difference deeper than could be accounted for by the accident of geographical situation. It is not a question of higher or of lower, but of essential difference. There is a Southern way of looking at things. And there is a Northern way of looking at things. It is, of course, a commonplace to say that there could be no union of the two Methodisms while the North retains its negro membership and a potential negro episcopacy. But even with the negro out of the question, it is by no means evident that organic union would or should follow. The Southern attitude on, let us say, the tobacco issue; or on the issue of women's rights in the Church; or on the time limit; or on the powers of the episcopacy; or on a number of other issues all minor, but characteristic, is one with which Northern Methodism would find itself reluctant to sympathize and which Southern Methodism could not yield and remain Southern."

PREACHERS AND TOBACCO.

In view of the recent action of the General Conference, the question may be pertinently asked, "Ought a minister to use tobacco?" Without hesitancy we answer, no. In the first place, it is indisputably established that it is injurious physically. One should surely avoid what is prejudicial to health. The State teaches in its public schools that tobacco has a pernicious effect upon the human system, hoping thereby to influence the youth of the country not to use it. Certainly a preacher ought not to fall below the standard set up by secular educators. Moreover, the question of expense should be considered. Thousands of dollars are annually spent for the worthless weed that might be put to a better use. We do not think an ambassador for Christ should encourage such an unnecessary waste of money, when great enterprises of the Church are languishing for the lack of means. More and more, our people are coming to realize that the tobacco habit is an evil. In some of our charges the sentiment is already such that the pastor addicted to it is sharply criticised. Nor is there any doubt that the sentiment will continue to grow. Doubtless some of our clerical brethren will differ from the view which we have expressed, but we scarcely expect them to say so publicly. Most of them, we dare say, are like Bishop Haygood, who, when he was asked if he had the tobacco habit, is reported to have said, "Yes, but I have more sense than to try to defend it."

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

This assembly has just closed its second session under circumstances highly gratifying and encouraging. The lectures and addresses were of a superior order, and the interest was thoroughly sustained from the first day until the last. Dr. Bishop, Dr. Cope, Dr. Rice, Dr. Alexander, and Dr. Shailer Matthews, all acquitted themselves admirably, and rendered service which commanded universal approval. The work of instruction was well done, and the undergraduates who took advantage of the opportunity offered were much profited. The attendance was about double what it was last year; more than eighty matriculating. The management is to be heartily congratulated upon the success of the session just ended. This organization promises to develop into one of the most useful summer schools in the entire South. The Annual Conferences should liberally sustain it, and make possible its enlargement and improvement.

"Sentimentality is the most broken reed on which righteousness can lean." So said Mr. Roosevelt in his Guildhall speech in Great Britain. And the distinguished American is right. A Christianity dominated by pity is too weak to conquer. If it is to triumph, it must have the vigor and aggressiveness to battle for the right and against the wrong. It must not only seek to uplift the fallen, but it must strike down the things that make them fall. It must not only know how to forgive, but also how to punish. Society now needs nothing more than a faithful and impartial enforcement of law. Mercy, properly exercised, is beautiful, but when it obliterates justice, it becomes a prolific source of weakness and demoralization.

PERSONAL.

Prof. and Mrs. H. B. Carré will spend the summer at Entre Lac, Canada, in the Province of Quebec.

The church at Pass Christian is now enjoying services every Sunday, the pastor being assisted by local preachers and others.

Rev. W. J. Ferguson has been having a refreshing series of services at Brooklyn, Miss., where he has had the efficient help of Rev. Arden Williams and of Dr. R. C. Bethen, local elder.

Rev. E. W. Lipscomb, of Biloxi, has lately been on the sick list, but is now improving. He will probably spend some days at Cooper's Well, with the hope of recuperating more rapidly.

Rev. R. S. J. Worley, of Marshville, Miss., finds much to encourage him in his work. The people are kind, and he hopes to be able to make a creditable record at Sardis. We thank him for remembering the Advocate in his rounds.

Rev. J. J. Smylie, Superintendent of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, who has recently been seriously indisposed with small-pox, has recovered and is again about his work. He expects in the near future to move his family to New Orleans.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. H. T. Carley, who is one of the quartette at the Seashore Divinity School, Rev. E. N. Evans occupied the pulpit of the Carrollton Avenue Church at the evening hour last Sunday. The editor preached at 11 o'clock and administered the Sacrament.

Bishop E. D. Mouzon will hold the Hattiesburg District Conference at Lucedale, Miss., July 14-17. On that occasion he will also dedicate the Methodist church at that place. Elsewhere in this issue Brother Golden extends a cordial invitation to all former pastors to be present.

Bishop McCoy has appointed Rev. J. M. Carpenter to the Mathiston Circuit, in place of Rev. L. D. Worsham, deceased. Brother Carpenter has recently been associated with the Rev. W. G. Harbin in evangelistic work, in which he conducted the singing. His home formerly was Booneville, Miss.

The Sailors' Rest at Gulfport is accomplishing a great work under the capable superintendence of Rev. W. T. Griffin. The attendance upon the gospel services is exceptionally good, and the seamen, officers and sailors, are appreciative of the interest shown in them. The outlook for this mission is very bright.

Dr. J. A. Rice and Rev. A. S. Lutz, who have been attending the Seashore Divinity School, returned to the city last Saturday and occupied their pulpits on the Sabbath. Dr. F. N. Parker, who has also been at the Camp Ground for some days, likewise came in to meet his appointment, which was at the Louisiana Avenue Church.

Rev. D. L. Cogdell, of the North Mississippi Conference, has recently held interesting meetings at all the appointments in his charge. The singing throughout was conducted by Mr. J. M. High, of Greenville, Miss., who reports that the pastor preached with marked effectiveness and that great good was accomplished.

At the recent session of the Brownsville District Conference (Tennessee) Rev. Samuel Ramsey, a son of Rev. E. B. Ramsey and a nephew of Dr. S. A. Steel, was licensed to preach. His maternal grandfather was also a Methodist minister. With such an ancestry we do not doubt that the young gentleman will give a good account of himself in the years to come.

We acknowledge the reception of a picture of the beautiful new Methodist church at Columbia, La., kindly sent us by Rev. I. T. Reames, the pastor. It was erected during the administration of his predecessor, Rev. H. O. White, and was opened for public worship on the first Sunday in April. It is a tasteful, modern structure, which cost approximately $5,000.

A dispatch from Wesson, Miss., to the Commercial Appeal on the 28th ult. says: "Forty-two new members were received into the Methodist Church last Sunday, they being converts of the revival recently held here by Rev. D. E. Kelley. The Baptists also received several as a result of the meeting. Never was there more unity manifested in a revival in Wesson than in the one just closed."

Rev. K. W. Dodson, the pastor of New Iberia, La., recently passed through the city en route to the Seashore Camp Ground, where he attended the Divinity School. He is much pleased with the church, which he is at present serving. They are paying all claims promptly, and are not unmindful of the many little kindnesses and attentions which make life pleasant for a preacher and his family.

The evangelical spirit has been active in the Mississippi Coast country for several weeks, and a number of fine meetings have been held. One of the best of these was conducted at Ocean Springs, where the pastor, Brother Fikes, did the preaching, and Rev. James Lewis led the singing. Rev. E. D.

Phillips has also had a series of quickening services at Carriere, where he had the efficient aid of Rev. W. T. Griffin.

We regret to learn that Mrs. Lula Lipscomb Waters, wife of the Rev. B. W. Waters, died at St. Helena, Cal., on June 22. She and her husband had been missionaries to Japan for several years. Her health became impaired some months ago, and she returned to the United States, hoping that the change of climate would prove beneficial to her. The Advocate extends sympathy to the sorrowing relatives and friends.

Rev. D. C. Hull, the newly-elected President of Millsaps College, occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church at Starkville on Sunday, the 26th ult., and delivered an able and impressive discourse. After the sermon, Messrs. Gill and Wellhorn and Prof. J. T. Hebert expressed their regret at losing Prof. Hull, who is held in the highest esteem by the entire community. Prof. Hull also delivered a brilliant address on the "Ideal Citizen" at Clinton on July 1.

Writing under date of June 27th, Rev. B. F. Lewis, of Columbia, Miss., says: "I have arranged to have my church canvassed for subscribers to the New Orleans Advocate by my Boys' League. I will leave in two or three days for a month's vacation, and this work will be in the hands of the Superintendent of the League, Mr. A. L. Smith." We greatly appreciate Brother Lewis' kindly interest, and shall be grateful for anything that our young friends may do to extend the circulation of our paper in their community.

In a personal letter to the editor, Rev. R. A. Clark, of Okolona, Miss., says: "My charge is in good shape. All missionary assessments have been paid in full, our finances are up, and our congregations are good. We had a revival about two months ago, conducted by Rev. T. H. Dorsey, when about twenty were received into the Church. We can still see the good effects of the Annual Conference, held here last fall. Our Sunday school and the Methodist Sunday school of Houston will have a picnic together here in Okolona some time in July."

GOOD NEWS FROM RUSTON.

Dear Brother Meek: Please say to your readers that at the close of the first day of July, when our note for $1,000 is due, that we have $2,000 with which to pay same. Parties in Ruston have given $1,250; a friend, $50, and the good people of Morgan City have wired me $700. We can pay the note and look hopefully forward to the glad day when there shall not be a dollar against our beautiful home for homeless children, and when we can carry on this great work to the glory of God, the credit of the Methodist Church, and untold blessing to helpless children. Rejoice with us! Cordially,

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN.

REPORT FROM MERIDIAN DISTRICT.

On June 15th I sent a blank report to the pastors of the district with the request that they fill it out and send to me by return mail. I have waited patiently for nearly two weeks and only fifteen have responded.

From these fifteen reports, I cull the following statistics, which furnish food for thought: Accessions to the Church on profession of faith 82, by baptism 41, certificate and otherwise 169. Three pastors report: Loss 31, loss 10, gain 112. Infants baptized 29, family altars 214, conversions, 63. Church papers taken 200, pastoral visits 2,205. Only seven pastors report any conversions; one makes no report concerning family altars; two fail to report number of pastoral visits. Collected to date on the Conference assessments $769.97. Two failed to report anything. Collected for Orphans' Home $613.33; the largest contribution coming from the Shubuta charge, $350; one other reports $100.

Brother Peebles, of South Side, Meridian, leads the district in number of pastoral visits. He reports 400. Brother Harmon, of East End, Meridian, follows with 350. But the reports indicate that all the pastors have been faithful at this point.

A new parsonage has been built at South Side, and Sister Peebles seems happy in her new home. A church is in process of construction at Hiwanee, on the Matherville charge, and will soon be finished. Brother Harmon, of East End, is enterprising the erection of a $25,000 church; about $11,000 has been subscribed, with some cash paid.

Improvements have been made on churches and parsonages to the amount of $1,127. In connection with the demands of their regular work, some of the brethren have established new preaching places, a few new Sunday schools have been organized, and there are indications of increased interest and spiritual growth throughout the district.

Of course, the above figures do not begin to indicate all that has been accomplished by the faithful pastors, but ought we not to desire and expect larger results? Six months of the year have gone, and only 63 conversions that have been apparent so as to be counted. Can there be a true conversion and it not be found out in six months? A net gain in membership of only 81. Have we been true to every trust committed to us? I am sure there would have been a little better showing for the district, as a whole, had the other five brethren reported.

Some of the pastors of the district are banded together in a special covenant of prayer, and we are confidently expecting gracious revivals to sweep over the district before the year draws to a close. I wish every pastor would join in this covenant. There is efficacy in united prayer.

W. D. Hawkins, the district leader of the Laymen's Movement, has in hand the raising of $800 for the support of a missionary as a special from this district. He has in subscriptions $220. I sincerely hope the laymen will respond to his appeal with liberal contributions; $800 is a very small amount for a district like this, and surely it will not be long before Brother Hawkins can report the amount in full.

W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

BISHOP MCCOY AT SARDIS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Bishop McCoy occupied the pulpit of our Church in Sardis on Sunday evening, June 26. He was greeted by a large audience. The doors of the Sunday-school room were thrown open, and every seat in the room and the large auditorium was occupied. He gave us a brilliant sermon. It was entertaining and edifying, and well delivered in good English. Our hearts burned within us as he talked of the hope that saves. He has given us a foretaste of what we are to expect next November, when he will be here as our Conference preacher. We will hail him with double joy.

From Sardis, the Bishop went West to wrestle with the brethren in Arkansas, where his first episcopal duty in that section will be the appointment of a presiding elder to the Little Rock District. And, judging by the number of letters coming to him at Sardis from different sections of Arkansas, he will have his hands full of other matters. He is entering upon the hardest work of his life. That follows as a matter of course. Bishop Kavanaugh said: "That is characteristic of Methodism—the higher a man goes, the harder the work." May he have grace and strength to meet the demands of his office! Yours cordially,

JNO. W. BOSWELL.

A WORD COMMENDATORY.

Editor Advocate: "The Modern Man's Bible" is the suggestive title of our Dr. Jno. A. Rice's forceful article in the July issue of the Southern Methodist Review, and I earnestly wish the thinking folk among us everywhere might read and inwardly digest its wholesome truths. Especial emphasis should be placed upon the following quotation I make from it:

"The power of the Bible over life can neither be increased nor decreased by any devices of men. You can as easily destroy gravitation with a pickax as to disturb the Bible's divine efficacy with critical apparatus. Its authority is out of the reach of its enemies and above the help of its friends. All it asks is the right of way to the unbiased heart."

Read in the light of the above statements, the article will undoubtedly richly repay a careful study. Personally, I feel under lasting obligation to the good Doctor for the invaluable information and inspiration he has brought me through it. Yours sincerely,

W. A. BETTS.

W. F. M. S.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Following is the report of the Louisiana Conference, W. F. M. S., for the second quarter of 1910:

Number of auxiliaries, 47; number of new auxiliaries, 1; number of members, 1181; number of subscribers to the Missionary Advocate, 301; number of subscribers to the Young Christian Worker, 193; number of life members, 24; number of members added during the second quarter, 50; number of Bible women, 7; number of scholarships, 18.

	Collected.	Remitted.
Amount of dues	$237.66	$150.22
Amount of pledge	165.50	218.30
Amount Contingent and expense	98.61
Amount to scholarships	150.00	140.00
Amount to Bible women	60.00	60.00
Amount to retirement fund	23.00	23.00
Amount of special pledge	20.00	20.00

Total

MRS. J. J. HOLMES, Treasurer.
MRS. S. A. MONTGOMERY, Cor. Sec'y.

THE Grant Furniture Co.
THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that
— Lasts a LIFETIME —
WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.
427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

A CORRECTION.

Dear Brother Meek: I see in this week's Advocate Brother High's report of the Board of Missions, and Shaw has no credit for $29, our assessment in full of domestic missions. I hold Brother High's receipts for $39, him all remittances of Children's Day domestic missions, dated March 7, and for $53, foreign missions in full, dated March 24.

L. A. McKEOWN.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

Mississippi Conference.

The treasurer of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Board is Mr. W. H. Morse, Tylertown, Miss. To Mr. Morse all remittances of Children's Day money may be made.

B. F. LEWIS, Chairman,
Mississippi Conference S. S. Board.

LOW WAGES.

"What does Satan pay you for swearing?" said a gentleman to a boy. "He don't pay me anything," was the reply.

"Well, you work cheap—to lay aside the character of a gentleman, to pain your friends and all good people, to risk losing your own soul, and all for nothing—you certainly work cheap—very cheap, indeed."—Selected.

Tidings from the Field

Ackerman, Miss.

I am serving my third year on the Ackerman charge, and I am sure it will be the best of the three. We have here a splendid people who know how to appreciate the pastor and others who come to preach to them the gospel. We have just closed a good meeting, which was very much good. We had with us Brother H. S. Spragins, who did all the preaching, except two sermons, one of which was preached by Rev. Mr. McClain, of the Presbyterian Church. The other by the pastor. Brother Spragins is a great preacher. His preaching is plain, simple and direct, and while his sermons show learning and great thought, the children can understand him. He made a lasting impression on my people; they will never forget him. Our congregations were good, better than usual. Our ladies had ordered a new organ for the church; it failed to come in time, but we placed it in the church during the meeting, and it was a great blessing to us. Our good women are to be given credit for this splendid instrument, which cost them $450. Our people here sing, and sing well. The meeting resulted in eight additions to the church. We have just organized an Epworth League. We now have forty-five league members. Our Sunday schools are doing well; prayer meetings are well attended. We expect to meet our financial obligations in full. I think the charge is in very good condition. We have done some work for the Advocate, and expect to do more. My people say it is a great paper. Pray for us.—J. D. Simpson, P. C.

Columbia, La.

On the first Sunday in April our beautiful, new church in Columbia was opened. Rev. H. O. White, under whose pastorate the enterprise was begun, preached the opening sermon, after which the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by Rev. Paul M. Brown, our presiding elder, assisted by Brothers Vaughan, Roy and the pastor. Our church is a beautiful building, modern in design, and very conveniently arranged, with Sunday-school rooms, pastor's study, and lighted with acetylene gas. The lights are arranged in such manner as to produce the finest results. In fact, the light is superior to any I have seen, even where electricity is used. The Sunday-school classrooms are formed by the use of rolling partitions, and, when necessary, almost the entire building can be used as an auditorium. The people of this beautiful little town have wrought well in the erection of this building, which is in advance of the buildings generally of the place. On the fifth Sunday in May our new church at Boeuff River was dedicated. This act was also performed by Brother White, my predecessor. The people of Boeuff River deserve great credit for this building. With practically no money to put into the enterprise, it is little less than marvelous how this building was completed. A generous-hearted physician who owned a small saw-mill in the vicinity, offered the use of the mill to saw the lumber. This offer was acted upon, and thus the lumber was sawed. Then a number of men came together, built the church and painted it inside and outside. Brother Henry Hebert and some others deserve a great deal of credit for the manner in which this new church was erected. Surrounded by the beautiful green forest, it shows to great advantage. May many souls be born into the Kingdom within the walls thereof. I. T. REAMES, P. C.

For Indigestion

Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate. Especially recommended for the relief of nervous dyspepsia, loss of appetite and headache.

Here It Is

It Is Waiting For You

Here is just what you want, just what you need. You have been looking for it and here it is. Send for it and stop worrying. Say the word and it will be sent to you. Send us the message in the coupon, saying you have read this announcement, saying you want to try it and it will be sent by mail, without a penny. It is Bodi-Tone, the real remedy for the sick, whose fame is spreading like wild-fire from the Atlantic to the Pacific, which is curing sick-folks by the hundreds, the medicine your neighbors are talking about. This announcement is put in this paper by the Bodi-Tone Company of Chicago, who invented Bodi-Tone over a year ago, and immediately offered it on trial to all the sick, a fair and honest way, so everyone could try it and judge its curative value before paying a penny for it. The Bodi-Tone Company has sent out over one hundred thousand $1.00 boxes during the past year in this way, to people in all parts of the country, without a penny in advance, and thousands have seen, felt and known its great curative benefits. Now the Bodi-Tone Company wants you to try a full-sized one dollar box of Bodi-Tone at its risk and expense, so that you, too, will get to know the great curative and restorative forces in this extra-ordinary medicinal combination, which is rapidly proving its superiority over the common and ordinary proprietary medicines that have so badly disappointed the sick. We want you to fill out and send us the "Trial Coupon" printed at the bottom of this announcement, giving us your full name and address, and the one dollar box of Bodi-Tone will be sent to you by next post, without a penny for you to pay unless it proves its value in the ailments which are troubling your body, unless it benefits you, unless it proves to you that it can cure.

Bodi-Tone

does just what its name means—cures disease by toning all the body, and we want you to try it and see what it will do for your body. Bodi-Tone is a small, round tablet, that is taken three times every day, either before or after meals as you may prefer. Each $1.00 box contains seventy-five of these tablets, enough for twenty-five days continuous use, and we send you the full box without a penny in advance, so that you can try it and learn what it is, so you can learn how easy and simple it is to take, so you can learn how it works in the body, how it cures stubborn diseases by helping nature to tone every organ of the body. The composition of Bodi-Tone is not secret. Every one of the many valuable ingredients used to make this splendid remedy are well known to all doctors of all schools, each has a well defined, well known and thoroughly established place in the realm of medicine and is prescribed by physicians every day of the year. Each ingredient is named and fully described in the Bodi-Tone book, which tells all about Bodi-Tone and is sent free to every Bodi-Tone user. You know just what you are using and know it is good and safe. Among the ingredients which compose Bodi-Tone are Iron to give life and energy to the Blood, Sarsaparilla, to purify it, Phosphate to nourish the Nerves, Lithia for the Kidneys, Gentian for the Stomach, Chinese Rhubarb and Oregon Grape Root for the Liver, Cascara which restores tone to the Bowels and Intestines, and Peruvian Bark for the General System. All these ingredients pull together to restore health in the body, each serves to build upon the others work, each one helps.

Highest Medical Authority

We claim no credit for discovering the ingredients in Bodi-Tone, each of which has its own well-deserved place in the medical books of most of the civilized world, and all of which are recommended by the best modern medical writers and teachers. Many are prescribed regularly by the medical profession for diseases in which we recommend Bodi-Tone, most of them have been successfully used separately or in combination with other drugs for the treatment of innumerable diseases, but the exact combination found in Bodi-Tone is peculiar to Bodi-Tone alone and gives Bodi-Tone a curative and restorative power peculiar to itself, that has brought health to thousands during the past year's time. We simply claim credit for the formula which we have invented, for the way in which these valuable ingredients are combined, for the proportions used, for the curative value which thousands have found in Bodi-Tone, for the cures which make it different from other remedies. That is why we want to send a box on trial to you immediately, as soon as you write for it, for we know you will find it different and superior. Though Bodi-Tone is a scientific medicinal combination, most of the ingredients used in it are familiar to the common people, and are remedies which they as well as the doctors know to be good, remedies in which they can place the fullest confidence and which they know they can safely use. Bodi-Tone is right all through, from the first to the last ingredient, a remedy that knows its work in the body, and does it in a way that satisfies the body-owner. It is a pure remedy that all the family, young and old, can use. It contains no narcotic or habit-forming drugs, it contains nothing that we are ashamed to tell all the world, it contains no ingredient that your own family doctor will not endorse and say is a good thing. It does not depend on drugging the body. It does not kill pain with opium or morphine. It does not excite the body with alcohol, but it tones the body and cures its disorders with the remedies nature intended to tone and cure the body or that power could not have given to them.

Bodi-Tone

offers its valuable services to you right now, right from this page, if you are sick, if you need medicinal help, if your bodily organs are not acting as they should, if your body is not in right, natural and normal tone. This is what Bodi-Tone is for—to help nature restore tone to the body, to restore normal health, energy, vigor, vitality and strength. If there is anything wrong with your Kidneys, Bodi-Tone helps to restore tone to the Kidneys, helps to set them right. If there is anything wrong with your Stomach, Bodi-Tone helps to tone the Stomach, helps to set the wrong right. If there is anything wrong with your Nerves, your Blood, your Liver, your Bowels or your General System, the ingredients in Bodi-Tone, which are endowed by nature with a special action in these parts, go right to work and keep on working day after day, exerting always a well-understood, definite action that produces curative results of the kind sufferers appreciate. If you have Rheumatism, Bodi-Tone, a splendid eliminant, helps to eliminate the Uric Acid from the system while it restores tone to the Kidneys, Stomach and Blood, thereby exerting a continual anti-rheumatic effect which makes it hard for Rheumatism to obtain or retain a foothold in the system. Bodi-Tone should be used by all women suffering from any of the various Female Ailments, for its toning properties are of special value in such ailments. Bodi-Tone is especially useful for all chronic sufferers who have tried honest, reputable physicians at home and elsewhere without getting the relief and permanent benefit desired. If your local doctor is doing you no real good, if you have given him a real and honest chance to do what he can and the medical combinations he has used have failed, then give this scientific, modern combination of old-time remedies a chance to show what it can do for you.

It Is Proven

The curative powers of Bodi-Tone have been amply proven by one solid year of cures. It has been tested in thousands of cases, covering a great variety of ailments in both sexes, at every age, and the results obtained are more than sufficient to amply prove the wide curative value of this splendid formula. Over one hundred thousand people have used it during the past year. Persons suffering from Rheumatism, Stomach trouble, Kidney, Liver and Bladder Ailments, Uric Acid Diseases, Bowel Complaints, Female Troubles, Blood and Skin Affections, Dropsy, Piles, Catarrh, Anemia, Sleeplessness, La Grippe, Palms, General Weakness and Nervous Breakdown, have tested Bodi-Tone and proven its value in such disorders. Their experiences have proven beyond a shadow of doubt that the Bodi-Tone plan of toning all the body is a right plan that helps to cure these and other disorders, that it is a real aid to nature. How Bodi-Tone has acted in these cases is best shown by the letters of praise received from former sufferers. Every day's mail brings its share, for the fame of Bodi-Tone is spreading like wild-fire, because Bodi-Tone is doing the work and proving its superiority over common remedies. Many who have for years been in poor health and have tried most all of the prominent medicines, have written us that one box of Bodi-Tone did more good than all the others combined. Other sufferers who have tried good physicians and specialists for their various troubles, often doctoring at great cost over a long period, have written that Bodi-Tone did the work, after the doctors' medicines had failed.

The following letters are but a sample of the many we are receiving every day. Read them and judge for yourself.

COTESFIELD, NEBR.—I have had Stomach trouble for eleven years and very bad for the past four years. Before taking Bodi-Tone, I had to throw up my supper every night. I would have such pain and such a heavy weight at my stomach and would nearly smother with gas. I would almost die and had to throw up what I had eaten to keep from smothering to death. It was so bad for four years that I was almost a walking skeleton. Now I am much stouter and don't look like the same person. My stomach digests what I eat and that trouble is all gone. Before using Bodi-Tone I was so nervous and had such pain in the top of my head, and Bodi-Tone has remedied that also. I have tried home-physicians, have doctored with a well-known specialist, and have taken a number of different patent medicines, but they only did me harm.

MRS. W. B. BECK.

CLEVELAND, IND.—I am telling all of my neighbors and friends about Bodi-Tone, and when they ask me what I know about it I tell them all I know is that it reached my case and did me more good than any other medicine I ever took, which is enough for me. My troubles were lame back and continual tired feeling, due, as I believe, to weak kidneys. My back was so bad that when I stooped over I could hardly raise up again and I suffered much pain with it. I took most everything recommended for lame back and kidney trouble, but found no relief until I used Bodi-Tone. I used only two boxes and have not since been bothered with my back, and instead of feeling tired I feel like working all the time.

OTIS E. MAISH.

GASTONIA, N. C.—When I began Bodi-Tone I was in a very weak condition, and had tried so many medicines that I became discouraged. I had been in very poor health for five years, suffering from different diseases and with a debilitated, run-down system. I was full of malaria. I had two physicians waiting on me and they gave me only temporary relief and told me I would have to have an operation, which I would not do. I scarcely had strength enough to dress myself in the mornings and had to stay in bed, not able to do my household duties. I began the use of Bodi-Tone three months ago and my improvement was so rapid that in a few weeks I was attending to my household duties and rested better at night than in years. I now enjoy perfect health and have gained 10 pounds.

MRS. R. M. C. KIDDE.

DORSET, VT.—I had rheumatism very bad and was lame and sore. However, my kidneys bothered me; Bodi-Tone has freed me from all of these troubles.

MACK FISHER.

Trial Coupon

Clipped from N. O. Christian Advocate
Bodi-Tone Company, Home & North Ave., Chicago
I have read your trial offer and want a dollar box of Bodi-Tone on trial. I promise to give it a fair trial and to pay $1.00 for this box if I am benefited at the end of 25 days. If it does not help me I will not pay one penny and will owe you nothing. The following is my full name and address to which the Bodi-Tone should be sent by mail, postpaid:

NAME _____
TOWN _____
STATE _____
ST. or R. F. D. _____

Bodi-Tone Company—Chicago.

Obituaries.

WESLEY WASHINGTON GUTHRIE was born in Union Parish, July 11, 1837, and died at his home in Ruston, La., June 10, 1910. His parents, Geo. W. and Annett Oliveaux Guthrie, were Christians and the son was reared in a home pervaded by a Christian atmosphere and he gave his heart to God early in life. He was married in November, 1865 to Miss Sue P. Taylor, who lived only ten months after their marriage. In 1870 he married Miss Rosatta E. Stancill, who still survives him. Brother Guthrie served his Parish as deputy sheriff for three years before the war. At the beginning of this struggle, he joined the Confederate Army and remained in service until the close. Returning home after the surrender, he was immediately elected sheriff of Union Parish, which position he held for three consecutive terms and was offered the office for the fourth term, but he thought best to decline and go to farming. In 1865, Brother Guthrie began his work as Sunday school superintendent, having been elected to such place by a union school at Farmerville. In this school he served six years, when he moved to his farm in Ouachita Parish. Here he was made superintendent of another union school which he conducted for two or three years. His health failing, he moved to Ruston in 1885 and it was in this place he lived the remainder of his earthly life. He was elected superintendent of the Methodist Sunday school at Ruston and was kept in this office for quite a number of years. Besides this official capacity he served as steward, recording steward, trustee and Sunday school treasurer, in all of which he served well. "Uncle Wesley" enjoyed the unlimited confidence of all who knew him. His was a quiet, unpretentious life and yet his religion was not of a negative sort. If there was a moral issue, no one had any doubt as to the side he was on. He lived his religion in his home, it controlled him in his dealings with men, it enabled him to serve faithfully and acceptably in any position to which he was called by Church or State. He was one of God's noblest men. In no way was his nobility of soul more markedly shown than by his taking into his own home a homeless child and lavishing upon the little one all that wealth of affection that a true father bestows on his own child, bringing her up "in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." At the close of the day, June 10, Brother Guthrie gathered his little family about the home altar, as was his custom, for evening prayer and before the clock struck the midnight hour he slipped away and was at home with God. The earth has been made better by his presence in it. His life was a contribution to the ongoing of our Lord's kingdom. I am glad it was my privilege to have known him. May the good Father richly bless and comfort the sorrowing wife and adopted child.

A. G. SHANKLE.

Another old veteran is gone, both of the Confederate army and the army of our Lord. THOMAS A. SWAFFORD was born in Bledsoe County, east Tennessee, April 9, 1831. He enlisted in the Confederate army early in 1861, and served to the close of the war, without ever receiving a wound. He moved to Lee County, Mississippi, in 1865, where he spent the remainder of his life. He professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, forty-two years ago. His membership was at Palmetto Church all these years. He was an unpretentious man, a good citizen, and loved the Church. He was afflicted seriously for almost twelve months before his death, and was perfectly conscious of his approaching end and spoke of it many times to his family and friends, saying his way was clear. He leaves two daughters in Tupelo, where he died May 25, 1910; has another daughter in Texas, and a son at Hot Springs, Ark. These are left without a father or mother to instruct, comfort or pray for them. May they find consolation in the promises of God.

D. W. BABB.

MRS. AMANDA LYLES ROGILLIO departed this life June 17, 1910, at Abbeville, La., in her eightieth year. She was a relict of the late W. Thomas Rogillio, of West Feliciana Parish. Interment took place at Concord, near Jackson, La., on Sunday, June 19, at 3 p.m. She is survived by two sons and one daughter: R. R. Rogillio, of New Orleans; P. H. Rogillio, of Shaws, La.; and Mrs. Capt. F. A. Broussard, of Abbeville, La. Captain N. G. Rhodes, of Batchelor, La., is her only brother. Sister Rogillio was a consecrated Methodist, having joined the church during girlhood. She died in the faith, relying on the promises of her Redeemer. Since the death of her husband, ten years ago, she had been ready, and seemed to await the summons with a great degree of patience and fortitude, saying always that "it would not be long."

ENOCH MARVIN, the son of Mr. and Mrs. I. T. Roach, was born Aug. 23, 1883, and died Feb. 6, 1910. When 18 years old he was converted and afterwards joined the Methodist Church, under the ministry of Rev. J. B. Williams, and thereafter lived a consistent Christian life. He loved the church devotedly and exemplified its doctrines in his life. Some years ago, when his health failed, he was advised by his physician to go west with the hope that through better climatic influences he might regain his health. He at once left his home in Louisiana and went to southwest Texas, where in a year or two his health was restored. Last January he became ill with typhoid fever and after a few weeks of intense suffering he quietly passed to his eternal home. He died in the faith of the gospel, rejoicing in the abounding grace of God. He leaves a father, a mother, two brothers and three sisters to mourn his loss. To these we extend our heartfelt sympathy, and pray that our Father in heaven may bless and keep them in this their hour of great sorrow. J. O. BENNETT.

Mrs. BELL ALEXANDER, nee Johnson, was born in Chickasaw County, Miss., Aug. 2, 1873, and died at Meridian, Miss., March 11, 1910. Mrs. Alexander was a Christian from childhood, having professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Wesley Chapel Church when a small girl. She lived a faithful and consistent member of the same until the ravages of disease wrecked her mental powers and she went to the asylum at Meridian, where she remained until a year before her death. She was happily married to Mr. J. Johnson in November, 1893, who died five years previous to her own death. She could never become reconciled to the death of her husband, but mourned for him to the end. This happy union resulted in two bright children: coming into the home—a boy and girl. Dear little Hugh is a bright boy, and little Mattie, 12 years of age, is quite a sweet child. Both of them followed in the steps of papa and mamma, gave their hearts to God and joined the Methodist Church young. We predict great things for them as lights in the Church, for they are putting their faith in the great Christ. As for Mrs. Alexander, she was a good girl in girlhood, a good woman in womanhood, a noble wife and affectionate mother. She was obedient to parents when a child and remained obedient until death. She loved her husband and children as no one but a true wife and mother could. We hope to see her again, and drop a tear of sympathy for the children and pray God's richest blessing on them.

T. J. DURRETT.

(Continued on last page.)

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

618 618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US. WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY! NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,869.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Richl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd.,
JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. . . . NEW ORLEANS
D. C. Godfrey Optician.

THE VOTAN LINE

All coffees of good quality have a somewhat sameness of taste. VOTAN has a distinctive characteristic flavor. You don't have to cultivate a liking for it. Appreciation comes with the first sip; infinite satisfaction with the first cup.

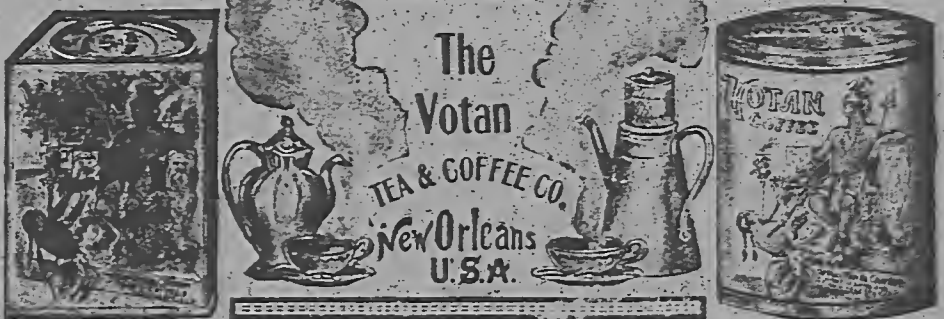

In 1, 2 and 3-lb cans.

VOTAN TEA is a fit companion for Votan Coffee. Clear, clean and perfect in the leaf; fragrant and stimulating in the cup, sparkling and crystal-like in its transparent purity when used as an iced drink; it fills every requirement of a satisfying beverage.

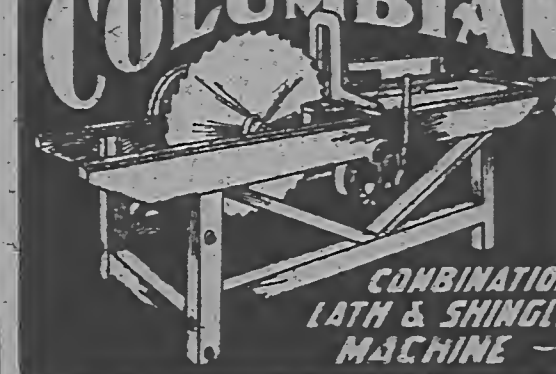

1/2, 1 and 1 lb. canisters.

THERE IS AN EXCLUSIVE AGENT IN YOUR TOWN (If not, write us.)

The Votan
TEA & COFFEE CO.
New Orleans
U.S.A.

COLUMBIAN

COMBINATION
LATHE & SHINGLE MACHINE

"It Turns Your Waste Material Into Dollars."

THREE MACHINES IN ONE.

SHORT Log Saw Mill, Lath and Shingle Machine. Does all kinds of sawing. Just the machine for small Saw Mills and Farmers' use.

It's a Big Money Maker.

Write for circulars and particulars.

Manufactured only by COLUMBIAN IRON WORKS
Chattanooga, Tenn.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Natchez Dist.—Third Round.

Woodville Station July 10,
 Liberty, at Salem July 16, 17
 Natchez, Pearl St. July 24, 26
 Natchez, Jefferson St. July 24, 25
 Fayette July 25,
 Washington July 23,
 Meadville, at Eddiceton July 30, 31
 Hamburg, at Knoxville Aug. 6, 7
 Homochitto, at Mt. Vernon Aug. 13, 14
 Adams, at Ebenezer Aug. 20, 21
 Centreville Aug. 24,
 Gloster, at Woodland Aug. 27, 28
 Nebo, at Ebenezer Sept. 3, 4
 Bayou Pierre, at Sweet
 Water Sept. 10, 11
 Barlow, at Rehoboth Sept. 12
 Wilkinson, at Friendship Sept. 17, 18
 Scotland, at Galatia Sept. 24, 25
H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN,
 Gloster, Miss. P. E.

Jackson Dist.—Third Round.

Brandon 8 p. m. July 13
 Jackson Ct., at Dusklo Chp. July 15
 Madison, at Ridgeland July 16
 Jackson, Rankin St. July 17
 Camden, at Thomastown July 20
 Jackson, First Church July 24
 Sharon, at Millville July 29
 Yazoo City July 31
 Florence, at Wesleyana Aug. 2
 Canton 8 p. m. Aug. 3
 Mendenhall, at Pinola Aug. 13, 14
 Lintonia, at Bethany Aug. 20, 21
 Yazoo City 8 a. m. Aug. 22
 Eden, at Phillips Aug. 27, 28
 Benton, at Tranquill Aug. 29
 Flora, at Livingston Aug. 31
 Harrisville, at Poplar Sps. Sept. 3, 4
 Jackson, Capl St. 7:30 p.m. Sept. 5
 Jackson, Galloway Church,
 7:30 p.m. Sept. 7
 Deasonville, at Dover Sept. 10, 11
 Jackson, First Church,
 7:30 p. m. Sept. 12
 Fannin, at Holly Bush Sept. 14
 Canton Sept. 18
J. R. JONES, P. E.

Vicksburg Dist.—Third Round.

Rolling Fork, at Cary July 16, 17
 Mayersville, at Lockwood July 19
 Oak Ridge, at Redbone July 21
 Utica July 28, 31
 Bottom, at Raymond Aug. 4
 Edwards, at Edwards Aug. 14, 15
 Harrison, at Mispah Aug. 21, 22
 Sartartia, at Sartartia Aug. 27, 28
 Anguilla, at Sunflower
 Chapel Aug. 31
 Hermanville, at Carpenter Sept. 3, 4
G. H. GALLOWAY, P. E.

Meridian Dist.—Third Round.

Shubuta and Quitman, at S. July 24, 25
 East Clark, at Hopewell July 27,
 Waynesboro Aug. 7, 8
 Scooba, at Spring Hill Aug. 10,
 Meridian, Central, 11 a.m. Aug. 21,
 Meridian, East End, 8 p.m. Aug. 21,
 Meridian, South Side and
 Poplar Springs, at S. Side. Aug. 24,
 De Kalb, at De Kalb Aug. 26,
 N. Kemper, at Mt. Zion Aug. 27, 28
 Buckatunna, at Chicora Sept. 1,
 Enterprise and Stonewall,
 at Concord Sept. 3, 4
 Porterville, at P. Sept. 10, 11
 Vimville, at Pleasant Hill Sept. 13,
 Meridian, 5th St., 11 a.m. Sept. 18,
 Meridian, 7th Ave., 8 p.m. Sept. 18,
W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

Newton Dist.—Third Round.

Raleigh, at Pleasant Hill July 16, 17
 Trenton, at Trenton July 23, 24
 Shiloh, at Clear Creek July 29,
 Morton and Pela, at Lindsey Chapel July 30, 31
 Walnut Grove, at Good Hope Aug. 5,
 Carthage, at Conway Aug. 6, 7
 Rose Hill, at Hopewell Aug. 13, 14
 Laurel, 1st Church Aug. 20, 21
 Laurel, Kingston Aug. 20, 21
 Laurel, 6th Street Aug. 22,
 Newton Aug. 23,
 Homewood, at Gasque Aug. 24,
 Lake, at Lake Aug. 27, 28
 Hillsboro, at Lane's Chapel. Sept. 3,
 Forest, at Coutrel Sept. 3, 4
 Montrose Sept. 6,
 Chunky, at Lost Gap Sept. 10, 11
 Decatur, at Union Sept. 15,

Neshoba Sept. 16,
 Stallo, at Cook's Chapel Sept. 17, 18
 Philadelphia Sept. 19,
 Hickory, at Spring Hill Sept. 24, 25
 Indian Mission, at Talla
 Chulah Sept. 30,
 Edinburg, at Scotland Oct. 1, 2
T. J. O'NEIL, P. E.

Brookhaven District—Third Round.

Maxie, at Batson's Aug. 9, 10
 Ellisville, at Overt Aug. 7, 8
 No. Wesson, at Providence July 9, 10
 Osyka, at Muddy Springs July 12,
 Magnolia, at M. July 13,
 Summit, at E. McComb July 16, 17,
 La Branch and Fernwood, at La Branch July 17,
 Monticello, at Bahala July 23, 24
 Brookhaven, at B. July 31,
 Gallman, at Old Crystal Springs Aug. 6, 7
 Crystal Springs Aug. 9,
 Topisaw, at Topisaw Aug. 13, 14
 Silver Creek, at S. C. Aug. 20, 21
 Wesson, at W. Aug. 28, 29
 Bogue Chitto and Norfield,
 at Bogue Chitto Sept. 3, 4
 Prentiss, at Santee Sept. 10, 11
 Buford, at B. Sept. 17,
 Tylertown, at Tylertown Sept. 18, 19
 Pearlhaven, at P. Sept. 24,
 Hazlehurst, at H. Sept. 25, 26
J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

Hattiesburg Dist.—Third Round.

Hattiesburg, at Court St. July 12,
 Purvis, at Pinegrove July 20,
 Lux, at Good Hope July 23, 24
 Eucutta, at Good Water July 29,
 Voshurg, at Sandersville July 30, 31
 Pachuta, at McGowan's Aug. 2, 3
 Hattiesburg, at Main St. Aug. 4,
 Hattiesburg, at Broad St. Aug. 5,
 Oloh, at East Columbia Aug. 13, 14
 Sumrall Aug. 21, 22
 Leakesville, at Adam's M. Aug. 24, 25
 New Augusta, at N. A. Sept. 4, 5
 Eastabuchle, at E. Sept. 10, 11
 Magee, at Rials Sept. 15, 16
 Bethel, at Summerland Sept. 17, 18
 Seminary, at S. Sept. 19,
 Lucedale Sept. 21,
 Collins, at Ora Sept. 24, 25
 District Conference meets at Luce-dale, July 14, at 9 o'clock a.m., and continues through the 17th. Bishop E. D. Mouzon will preside. All members of the Conference are especially requested to be present at the beginning. M. B. SHARBROUGH, P. E.

Seashore Dist.—Third Round.

Brooklyn and Bond, at B. July 11,
 Ocean Springs July 12,
 Gulfport, 29th Street July 23, 24
 Logtown July 26,
 Bay St. Louis July 27,
 Mentor, at Mt. Zion July 30, 31
 Hub, at Wesley Chapel Aug. 13, 14
 Poplarville Aug. 15,
 Carriere and McNeill, at
 Picayune Aug. 16,
 Columbia Aug. 17,
 Oakville, at Baxterville Aug. 18,
 Coalville, at White Plains Aug. 20, 21
 Long Beach Aug. 26,
 Lumberton Aug. 27, 28
 Vancleave, at Red Hill Aug. 31,
 Wolf River Mission, at Beau-
 lah Sept. 1,
 Moss Point Sept. 2,
 Americus, at Big Point Sept. 3, 4
 Pascagoula Sept. 5,
 Escatawpa, at Orange Gr. Sept. 6,
 Gulfport, 25th Avenue Sept. 10, 11
 Biloxi Sept. 14,
W. B. JONES, P. E.

A NEW HIT.

"Character Talks," by Prof. R. E. Smith, is charming old and young—especially school people. It is just off the press and is sent free to advertise the good work done at Ruskin. Free while they last. Write to Ruskin-Cave College, Ruskin, Tenn.

An old proverb says: "It is a poor heart that never rejoices." But that is quite different from saying that it is never the heart of the poor that rejoices. It is the people of small means who are the greatest givers, for it is among them that the richest hearts abound. What would the rich world do without the poor to help it?—Selected.

The Mississippi Conference Training School

MONTROSE, MISS.

This School has the largest and most competent Faculty in its history. Our pupils are prepared for Sophomore Class in high-grade Colleges. Our Musical Directress is in a Northern Conservatory, adding to her already splendid equipment for Piano and Voice Culture. We will build a Mission Hall on the School Campus, and have added the subject of Missions to our Curriculum. Our rates for board and tuition are reasonable.

Write for catalogue to

Rev. WALDO W. MOORE, A. M., President.

The Woman's College of Shreveport.

A high-grade College for Girls and Young Ladies. Ideal location. Steam heat. Modern improvements. Non-sectarian. Faculty of specialists. College and Preparatory Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Session begins Wednesday, September 21, 1910. Write for catalogue. GEORGE L. HARRELL, President, Shreveport, La.

MRS. NELSON'S SCHOOL FOR FEEBLE-MINDED CHILDREN.

(SOUTHERN PHYSIOLOGICAL SCHOOL.)

A PRIVATE Institution for the mental and physical development of Nervous, Backward and Feeble-minded Children. Each child receives individual attention. The Superintendent has made a life study of the training of Backward Children. Endorsed by Southern Medical Association. For full particulars, address: Mrs. Cora Bristol-Nelson, Superintendent, Murfreesboro, Tenn.

MEDICAL STUDENTS

Are invited to write for free catalogue and bulletins of the college and hospital of the Combined Medical School

OF THE

UNIVERSITY of NASHVILLE

AND THE

UNIVERSITY of TENNESSEE

Fifty-one teachers, twelve laboratories, three hospitals and dispensary. Beside instruction a special feature.

Nearly 8,000 graduates. For catalogue and full information as to expenses and educational requirements for entrance to a medical college, address: E. F. TURNER, Registrar, 632 Second Avenue, South, NASHVILLE, TENN.

Randolph-Macon

Woman's College

LYNCHBURG, VIRGINIA.

Classed by the U. S. Commissioner of Education as one of the sixteen "A" colleges for women in the United States. Four laboratories, Astronomical Observatory, New Gymnasium, Swimming Pool, Athletic grounds, boating course, etc. Fifty acres in the campus. Endowment reduces cost to students to $300 a year for full literary courses. For catalogue, address WM. W. SMITH, A. M., LL. D., President.

THE BEST MADE

Angell's Cough and Whooping Cough Syrup

For Whooping Cough, Bronchitis, Coughs, Colds and Throat Trouble.

Contains no Opium or Morphine.

All Druggists, Price 25 and 50 cents.

VACATION DAYS!

CERULEAN SPRINGS, - CERULEAN, KY.

The ideal place to spend your vacation any time in the year. The one fascinating place that turns "Vacation Dreams" into "Delightful Realities."

Skating, fishing, trap and target shooting, bowling, riding and driving. Modern, up-to-date hotel, surrounded by a beautiful forty-acre park. High, healthy and cool. Malaria and mosquitoes unknown. Seasonable vegetables fresh from our own gardens. Water strongly impregnated with sulphur, chloride of lime, soda, bicarbonate of lime and free sulphuretted hydrogen, rendering its curative powers most effective, creating a hearty appetite and benefiting the entire system.

SEND FOR CATALOG AND RATES.

CERULEAN SPRINGS HOTEL COMPANY,

Cerulean, KY.

EDUCATIONAL.

Port Gibson Female College,
PORT GIBSON, MISS.

71st session opens Sept. 14th. Literature, music, art, elocution, stenography, bookkeeping, sewing. Physical culture and chorus work free. Special attention given health and morals. Confers degree of A.B. Preparatory department. Students can reduce expenses by taking duties. For catalogue, address
REV. H. G. HAWKINS, A. B., Pres.

Whitworth College.

Twenty carefully selected teachers and officers. More than two hundred students last session. A most excellent literary course leading to the degrees of L.B. and A.B. Departments of Music, (including piano, violin and voice culture) expression, art, commerce.

Next Session begins Sept. 8, 1910.

For Catalogue address.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

RANDOLPH-MACON ACADEMY For Boys and Young Men
Fits for college, scientific schools, or business. Work endorsed by over 30 colleges and universities. Beautiful and healthful location. Athletic grounds, gymnasium. Terms only $230. No extras. For catalogue, address: E. SUMTER SMITH, Principal, Bedford City, Va.

Vanderbilt University

NASHVILLE, TENN.

1007 STUDENTS 100 TEACHERS
CAMPUS OF 80 ACRES

New College Hall and Chemical Laboratory Just Completed

Expenses low. Literary courses for graduates and undergraduates. Professional courses in Engineering, Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, Theology. Send for catalogue, naming department.

J. E. HART, Secretary.

Belmont College

For Young Women. Nashville, Tenn.

IRA LANDRITH, D. D., LL. D., President

Miss HOOD and Miss HERON, Principals.

The excellence of its educational methods and the broad and liberal courses of study, combined with its beautiful location in a matchless magnolia-shaded hilltop park, within the city limits, but with country environment, give Belmont its enviable reputation of a really high-grade school. The college comprises twelve schools. Diplomas conferred by these schools. Courses leading to degrees B.A. and M.A. Prepares for all colleges and universities. Music, Art, Expression, Physical Culture, Modern Languages, Domestic Science in hands of Masters. Director of School of Music, Edouard Hesselberg, eminent pianist and composer. Outdoor sports and study. Horseback riding a feature. 34 states represented last year. 20 per cent. Northern girls. Early registration necessary. Catalogue on request. Address:

BELMONT COLLEGE, Box 7.

What we have to do is to let down our friends who are ill or in trouble or far from God at Jesus' feet and Jesus, seeing our faith (not their faith) will say to them, "My sins are forgiven," or "Arise and walk." Selected.

Opium Morphine and Liquor addicts cured in TEN DAYS by our new PAIN-LESS method. Money can be placed in bank until cure is effected. References: Any Banker, Minister or Citizen of Lebanon. Large Booklet sent FREE. Address: Cumberland Sanitarium, Dept. 12, Lebanon, Tenn.

NOTICE.

The annual camp-meeting at Palmer Creek Campground will be held Sept. 23 to Oct. 3. Everybody is invited. Conveyance from Wortham and tent for accommodation of the public at reasonable rates.

R. T. PICKETT, P. C.

DEDICATION AT LUCEDALE.

We expect to have Bishop E. D. Monzon dedicate our nice new church at Lucedale, Miss., on Sunday, July 17. We cordially invite all former pastors to be present.

J. J. GOLDEN, Pastor.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

W. D. Wendel, Hernando, $25.00
J. R. BINGHAM, Treas.
Carrollton, Miss.

CALENDAR.

Seashore Camp Meeting, Seashore Camp Ground, July 13-20.

Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, Seashore Campground, July 21-31.

Gulf States School of Methods for Sunday School Workers, Seashore Campground, Biloxi, Miss., Aug. 11-14.

Palmer Creek Campmeeting, near Wortham, Miss., Sept. 23-Oct. 3.

Hattiesburg District, Lucedale, Miss., July 14-17.

Marriages

June 22, 1910, at the Methodist parsonage, South Side Meridian, Miss., by Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, Mr. WILLIAM H. WELLS to Miss JESSIE QUINN, both of Meridian.

At the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Q. Braine, Bay Springs, Miss., by Rev. W. A. Hays, Mr. G. WELDON MANAR, of Purvis, Miss., and Miss Ruby BRAME.

June 15, 1910, at the Methodist Church, Long Beach, Miss., by Rev. H. H. Sudd, of the Episcopal Church, Mr. REYNOLD A. PEARCE, assistant superintendent of the Sailors' Rest, of Gulfport, to Miss ANNIE STARKEY, of North Taunton, England.

At the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. W. W. Perry, Mr. DUDLEY E. LEWIS to Miss SALLIE M. CHAPMAN, both of Hinds County, Miss.

June 7, 1910, at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. G. P. McKeown, Mr. MARVIN DAVIS to Miss TINA SIMMONS.

June 27, 1910, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Hartwig, Edwards, Miss., by Rev. G. P. McKeown, Mr. LEWIS ROBERTS to Miss DRUE FLEMING.

Take your life day by day and hour by hour. Do not look too far ahead. If you are suffering, you have only to suffer that day. If you have an anxiety, God undertakes to see you through it, but only day by day. One of the great secrets of a happy, calm, and strong life is to pray day by day, and trust day by day.—Bishop of London.

Being in Christ, it is safe to forget the past; it is possible to be sure of the future; it is possible to be diligent in the present.—A. MacLaren.

AGENTS WANTED.

WANTED—Good men and women agents at once for "Roosevelt's Famous Hunt for Big Game," also for "Traffic in Girls." Immense sellers. Price, $1.50, 50 per cent commission. Outfit free. Send 15c for mailing. Both outfits 25c. Also district managers for easy payment installment plan. Permanent work. $2,000 to $5,000 per year profits. Particulars free. Address: A. B. Kuhlman Company, Chicago, Ill. 7616.

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Courses. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE.

THE OLDEST COLLEGE FOR WOMEN IN AMERICA—THE RECOGNIZED STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE FOR THE WHOLE SOUTH—NOTABLE PROGRESS AMONG SOUTHERN INSTITUTIONS.

Splendid plant—worth $350,000—with all modern comforts, on an eminence in the best residential district in Macon. $200,000 now being raised for improvements and endowment.

One of less than a half dozen colleges for women in the South, on a full fourteen units basis. Courses leading to A. B. and B. S. degrees. Faculty of thirty-nine officers and teachers. Nearly 3,000 alumnae throughout the Nation. The Wesleyan diploma is the highest academic honor open to a woman in the South.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, employing fourteen officers and teachers, is the Mecca of artists and those preparing to teach. Schools of Art and Expression at the same high standards. Diplomas and teachers' certificates are conferred.

The moral and physical health of Wesleyan young ladies is safeguarded at every point. The discipline and training are non-sectarian, but Christian to the core. Wesleyan's high aim is to send out young women of genuine Christian culture. Health record without a parallel. Serious sickness has been rare, and not a single death has occurred at the college in many years.

Rates within reach of all. The College is not conducted for money making, but to bless the world. Apply for catalogue and information in detail to REV. W. N. AINSWORTH, D.D., President, Macon, Ga.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jackson, Tenn.

Next School Year begins Wednesday, September 14. Every facility offered for a thorough education for girls and young women. All departments taught, including besides regular Classical and Literary Course—Music, Art, Expression, Stenography, Typewriting, Business course, Etc. Charges reasonable. For catalogues, etc., apply to

REV. A. B. JONES, Jackson, Tenn.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute is one of the oldest Female Colleges in the South, having been chartered in 1843. The college has 250 attendants and 125 of them are boarding pupils.

Parents desiring to send their daughters to school should write for a catalog of

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Which has a record of high grade work for half a century, maintaining a faculty of Specialists in the schools of Literature, Mathematics, Science, Languages, Music, Art, and Expression. Beautiful location in most healthful town in State of Virginia. For full information write

REV. S. D. LONG, President, Abingdon, Va.

THE TEXAS DENTAL COLLEGE

HOUSTON, TEXAS

THE SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION BEGINS OCTOBER 4th, 1910.

Offers to the prospective dental students unsurpassed clinical advantages and teaching facilities for the study of the most modern and up-to-date dentistry. Ideal winter climate. Reasonable living expenses, and the most wholesome moral influences.

For full information and catalogue, address the secretary, CHAS. H. EDGE.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

A home school for girls. 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful hill country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue.

Address, Pres. H. H. BROWNLEE,

CLINTON, LA.

FOR GIRLS AND YOUNG WOMEN

Ward Seminary Nashville, Tennessee

46th year. Seminary and Special Courses. Conservatory of Music—Emil Winkler, Director; Signor Campobello, Voice; Fritz Schmitz, Violin. 175 Boarding Pupils. Complete appointments. City advantages. Beautiful campus for outdoor sports. For catalogue address J. D. BLANTON, President.

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

THIRD QUARTER. LESSON II. JULY 10, 1910.

MISSIONARY LESSON.

Matthew xxiv. 14; xxviii. 18-20.

14. And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.

18. And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth.

Golden Text: "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." (John iii, 16.)

Again our Southern Methodist Church turns aside from the regular order of lessons provided by the International Committee; and in place of a Review Lesson for the past quarter gives a Missionary Lesson, consisting of a discussion of "The Missionary Program of the Master," as distinguished from "The Missionary Program of the Father," given as the lesson some two months ago. The article is by Dr. Ed. F. Cook, and is published alike in the Magazine, the Senior and Intermediate Quarterlies. We shall not attempt to follow his discussion, which covers the teachings, the prayers, the death and the resurrection of Jesus, as related to missions; but shall rather attempt a brief exposition of the lesson text, as given above.

It should be noted that the first verse is from the 14th chapter of Matthew, not the 28th, as are the others. "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Many see in these words of Jesus not only a prophecy of the world-wide spread of Christianity, but also a sign by which may be determined the time of Christ's coming. Only recently I heard of a minister's arguing solemnly that the end is near, for only Tibet, he said, has not been preached to, and if only a missionary might obtain entrance there and preach once, the conditions would be fulfilled and we might expect Christ then at any moment. It may be surprising to such interpreters to know that even John Wesley and Adam Clarke, pillars of evangelical orthodoxy, hold no such thing. Wesley's note on this verse is as follows: "This gospel shall be preached in all the world—Not universally; this is not done yet; but in general through the several parts of the world, and not only in Judea. And this was done by St. Paul and the other apostles before Jerusalem was destroyed. And then shall the end come—of the city and temple." In Clarke's Commentary we read: "In all the world—perhaps no more is meant here than the Roman Empire; for it is beyond controversy that all the world (should be taxed) in Luke xi, 1, means no more than the whole Roman Empire. Then shall the end come. When this general publication of the Gospel shall have taken place, then a period shall be put to the whole Jewish economy by the utter destruction of their city and temple." Certainly the words that follow allude to the destruction of Jerusalem, but the words that precede this verse are clearly eschatological, and Whedon and Meyer we think rightly connect this verse with those preceding it, 14, and allow verse xv to be a return to the discussion at the beginning of the chapter. So Whedon interprets: Shall be preached in all the world—in all nations, and thereby the Messiah's universal kingdom become universally acknowledged. "Then shall the end come. What end? Unless our Lord answered very deceptively, he meant the end about which they inquired, namely, the end of the world."

For once we disagree with Messrs. Wesley and Clarke—accepting Dr. Whedon's statement—and cite this as an illustration of the enlargement of the missionary vision of the Church in interpreting Scripture within the last 150 years. "For a witness unto all nations" means simply "that testimony may be borne before all nations."

19. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:

20. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen.

However, we do not agree, that on this verse or on any other can be based a prophecy that the end of the world is near, or is not near. "Of that day and that hour knoweth no man;" and we believe the Scriptures seek to leave us in a state of constant expectancy of Christ's coming, which would forbid our being able to say he will not come to-day or to-morrow, for the conditions are not yet fulfilled. Were such interpretation true, none need have looked for him heretofore, as men might have known that he would not have come as yet. Nothing is more unprofitable and unscriptural than fixing the time of Christ's coming, and nothing is more wise than to watch, ready also, with lamps trimmed and burning.

The remaining portion of the text is the familiar Great Commission, so familiar that I fear its majestic sweep and greatness we often fail to grasp. All power (or authority) is given unto me in heaven and in earth. What marvellous words, asserting what infinity of dignity and power! and falling from human lips, they attest the utterer as divine or as wildly dreaming. "Go ye therefore and teach"—better, disciple, make disciples of all nations. Whatever might be the possible limitations of the first verse there can be no doubt about the all-inclusiveness of this. "Baptizing them in the name of the Father; and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." See his emphasis upon obedience. The first teaching all nations seems to refer to the Gospel message of pardon and peace to the penitent, but here it is teaching them thereafter to observe and do. "And, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." We see here why he said above "all power is given unto me," for his presence with us means the transmission of that power to us, that we may have courage and strength to conquer. And conquer we shall by his grace. Already what wonders have been wrought in all nations.

"The kingdom is coming, O tell ye the story."

God's banner exalted shall be! The earth shall be full of his knowledge and glory.

As waters that cover the sea."

In conclusion, we give a concise statement of the motives for foreign mission work which should actuate us.

"Our true motives for foreign missionary work are, as I see them, these:

1. A desire to obey our Savior's command to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature.

2. A desire to furnish to all men the present blessings of the Gospel.

3. A purpose to keep the Church at home so filled with the militant temper of foreign missions as to render all her members unselfish and aggressive.

4. A purpose to keep before the mind of the entire Church the size of the plan of redemption.

5. A purpose to begin to realize the idea of a universal human brotherhood in Jesus Christ.

6. A purpose to hasten under all possible Christian pressure the salvation of men, and thus to prepare them for the largest service and the largest destiny in the final kingdom of our Lord."—(Dr. Olin A. Curtis, in "The Christian Faith.") Indianola, Miss.

Hot Sun—Dusty Roads

By the time you reach town and light you'll be hot and tired and your throat dry with dust and dirt. Hunt up a soda fountain and treat yourself to a Glass or a Bottle of

Coca-Cola

Just as cooling as the bottom step in the spring house. You'll find it relieves fatigue too, and washes away all the dust and thirst as nothing else will. It touches the spot.

Delicious • Refreshing • Wholesome
5c Everywhere

Our Free Booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola" tells all about Coca-Cola—what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial. It gives analyses made by scientists and chemists from coast to coast, proving its purity and wholesomeness. Your name and address on a postal will bring you this interesting booklet.

The Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga. 3-P.

When ever you see an arrow think of Coca-Cola

Don't stop
Just short
Of the best. It won't take long to raise a few dollars more.

If you have the money; if you're raising it, or only planning—write for helpful suggestions.

ESTEY, Brattleboro, Vt.

WANTED Morphine, Whiskey and Tobacco Addictions to cure in ten days by our Painless Method. Fee can be kept in possession of patients until cure is effected. Sanitarium of thirty rooms equipped with all latest conveniences. Patients who cannot visit Sanitarium can be cured privately at home. References: Any Banker, Minister or Physician of Lebanon. Booklet of particulars sent free.

CEDARCROFT SANITARIUM, Box 735, Lebanon, Tenn

BLMYER BELL CHURCH BELLS
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT
TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.
His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.
THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection; beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.
J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

A REAL BLESSING

What a blessing is perfect health! What enjoyment there is in feeling well! Life is all pleasure, and work is but play. But if one is continually ailing, life seems scarcely worth living.

Thousands of women suffer, continually or periodically, from the ills or weakness peculiar to their sex. Pain kills pleasure, hinders the performance of their daily duties and makes them most wretched.

Countless women, suffering such ills, have found relief or cure in that old, reliable medicine, especially prepared for women,—Wine of Cardui. Thousands of these grateful ladies write to tell what Cardui has done for them.

We recently had this letter from Mrs. Annie Vaughan, of Raleigh, N. C.: "I cannot find words to express my deep gratitude for what your wonderful medicine, Cardui, did for me, for I sincerely believe it saved my life. I was sick and worn out, almost unto death. My sister finally persuaded me to take Cardui. Before I had taken 5 bottles I was well and strong."

Cardui is a pure, vegetable remedy, which acts gently and naturally on the womanly system. If you are nervous, weak or sick, try Cardui. Get it at once. It will help you.
At all druggists in $1.00 bottles.

I WAS DEAF
25 YEARS. NOW I HEAR WHISPERS with my artificial Ear Drums in my ears. I never feel them—they are so perfectly comfortable—and no one sees them. I will tell you the true story of how I got deaf, and how I made myself hear. Address your letter to me personally—at 8 Adelaide St. This is important, as letters sent to other addresses often do not reach me. I stand back of every claim made Medicated Ear Drum for my drums. GEO. P. WAY, Pat. July 15, 1906
8 Adelaide Street, Detroit, Mich.

Progress Self-Tramping COTTON PRESS
3 Horse Power Mill Operate. Capacity 25 bales. Write for prices.
Manufactured by
C. J. HYDE, MERIDIAN, MISS.

Summer Tours
VIA
SOUTHERN PACIFIC
California, Colorado, Utah, Mexico, AND ALL THE WEST.
NEW YORK
And ALL EASTERN and NORTHERN RESORTS
See Your Local Agent for full Particulars, or Write
J. H. R. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt. New Orleans, La.
C. W. MURPHEY, City Pass. Agt. New Orleans, La.

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McCord, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."

C. G. Butler, Argenta, Ark., wrote: "Used 4 bottles and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per cent better."

Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever Tonic Co.
Savannah, Georgia.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage.

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
16 PAGE
INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO
TORONTO - CANADA

Bowlden BELL'S CHURCH & SCHOOL Catalog Free. AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN. Special discount to readers of this publication.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

"GRAND CIRCLE TOUR"

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED
100 HOURS AT SEA
THE MOST DELIGHTFUL AND RATIONAL TRIP EVER CONCEIVED.
STOPS EN ROUTE AT

NEW ORLEANS, JACKSON, MEMPHIS, PADUCAH, LOUISVILLE, CINCINNATI, WASHINGTON, PHILADELPHIA, ATLANTIC CITY, NEW YORK, thence by SEA (100 hours) to NEW ORLEANS, making complete circle. SIGHT-SEEING TRIUMPH at interesting places. Strictly first-class, all expenses paid; the trip of a lifetime. For illustrated booklet and all information call on or address

A. J. McDOUGALL, D. P. A.
141 St. Charles Street.
Phone: Main 3618.

"RANGER" BICYCLES

Have imported roller chains, sprockets and pedals. New Departure, coaster brakes and Hays' Patent Proof Tires, highest grade equipment and many advanced features possible with other wheels. Guaranteed 500 miles.

Others ask for cheap wheels. Other reliable models from $12 up. A few good second-hand machines $3 to $8.

10 DAYS' FREE TRIAL. We ship on approval. Freight prepaid, anywhere in U.S. without a cent in advance. DONORBY.

A bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price until you get our big new catalog and special prices and a marvelous new offer. A postal brings everything. Write it now.

Coaster Brake Rear Wheels, lamps, parts, and sundries half usual prices. Rider Agents everywhere are giving away our bicycles, tires and sundries. Write today.

MEAD-CYCLE CO., Dept. M295 CHICAGO

Epworth League

By Rev. H. B. Watkins.

TOPIC FOR JULY 10, 1910.

THE CHRISTIAN'S RESOURCES.

(References: I. Cor. iii, 21-23. Eph. iii, 20.)
The title of to-day's lesson is most attractive to me. We, in these exercises, have said a great deal about a Christian's obligations. It is comforting to us to realize that the Christian's resources are entirely adequate to his responsibilities. One stands upon life's threshold and really trembles at the responsibilities lying before him and hanging above him but he is reassured as he feels with the great apostle, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." The early apostles doubtless felt much of this fear as they listened to Jesus saying, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations," but surely their hearts were lifted up as he continued "And lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Let us examine the records this morning and find what are the Christian's resources. May we not ask first, however, what are the records of the resources of God's children? where are written, if written they are, the riches of God's child? I answer that so far as they can be written, so far as the infinite can be described we find them upon the pages of God's Word. The entire Bible is but one continuous effort on God's part to make men see "what is the breadth and length and depth and height and to know the love of Christ that passeth knowledge." Read here Second Timothy, chapter iii, 14 to 17, to see that the Holy Bible is the record of the resources of God's child. That these resources can never be adequately described creeps out ever and again in such Scriptures as Ephesians iii, 20, and I Corinthians ii, 9-10. However, as far as the human mind can comprehend they are recorded here and no man has a right to limit the power and joy of his life and that of the lives of others while the Bible is fairly bulging with promises and assurances of infinite resources. No man has the right to say my task is impossible while the Book declares "all things are possible with God." No man has the right to say I can't help but sin while the record says "And he will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able." Our lives have been dwarfed from the fact that we have tried to read our resources in the dwarfed lives of others instead of reading them in the sacred record God has furnished for us. The Bible itself is one of our resources only in the fact that it is the great inspired record of our riches in Christ.

What are our resources? They are the spiritual joys and powers which God has in his hands for us. That passage in II Corinthians ii, 9-10, is too often used as a funeral text describing the Christian's riches in a world to come. It is misused as such. The apostle is attempting to tell the infinite privileges of riches of God's child here and the emphasis should be placed upon the statement, "But God hath revealed them unto us by his Spirit." They are spiritual privileges to be known and enjoyed now. "The peace of God that passeth all understanding," "righteousness, peace and joy in the Holy Ghost," "the love of God shed abroad in our hearts," "the love of Christ that passeth knowledge," are just a few of those expressions that point to our riches in Christ. Then, as if he despaired of making us see it all the apostle exclaims, "Now unto him that is able to do exceedingly abundantly above all that we ask or think according to the power that worketh in us!" It is an impossible task to itemize the kingdom of God. Peter attempts it in II Peter i, 3-5. Paul tried it in Galatians v, 22-23, and again in I Corinthians vi, 11. But neither would have claimed that he had exhausted it at all. God the Father holds these things in his hands, for us. Christ Jesus died to purchase them for us. The Holy Spirit is in the world to convey them to our hearts. Paul and Apollos and Cephas are ours to proclaim these to our eager ears. Life is ours in which to enjoy them, life now, life to come. There is indeed but one life. The world lies before us, ours, reminding us by physical means of what God can do for us. Death is ours as a gateway through which God shall lead us into a more intimate knowledge of him. The present is ours to use our riches. The great future ours too, but not so great as ever to exhaust the riches of God's child. Prayer is ours, an attitude of heart wherein God blesses us. The Church is ours that we use our riches aright, all are ours and we are Christ's and Christ is God's.

"I'm the child of a king."

The child of a king.

With Jesus, my Savior, the child of a king."

SEASHORE ASSEMBLY.

Following is the program of the Seashore Assembly, which will be held at Seashore Campground July 21-31:

Class work: Class in Old Testament, Rev. F. S. Parker, D.D., Editor Epworth Era; Class in New Testament, Prof. Frank Seay, Southwestern University, Georgetown, Tex.; Class in Foreign Missions, "Korea in Transition," text book, Dr. Rawlings, Educational Secretary, Board of Missions; Class in Home Missions, "The Frontier," as text book, Miss Mabel Head, Secretary Woman's Board; Class with the Juniors, Mrs. S. Stuart Brame; Class in League Methods, Mr. E. P. Peabody, Waycross, Ga.; Class in Sunday school work, Mr. J. B. Green, Opelika, Ala. and Mr. T. V. Ellzey, New Orleans, La.; Class in Missionary Society Methods, Miss Head, Mrs. Brame and Mrs. Watkins.

Afternoons given over entirely to recreation in charge of a special committee: bathing, fishing, sailing, tennis, etc.

Meals may be had for $5.00 per week and rooms in Epworth Lodge for $2.50 for the tent days, two to the room. For further information address, J. Bruce Airey, President, Fort Deposit, Ala.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL-TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form for grown people and children, 50c.

DON'T BE WITHOUT WATER.

There is no need of the property holders of this city being any longer without water and sewer connections. This has been the one great distress of our city, not being able to have modern improvements in our homes. But now there is no need of any more complaints along this line, as the city is perfectly willing to connect free any property with the water main, carrying the pipes to the property holders line, without any cost whatever to them.

The popular firm of C. C. Hartwell & Co., on Baronne Street, are making a liberal proposition to connect the sewer pipes free of charge. They also go farther, and agree to do all plumbing and laying of pipes necessary to connect the house with the sewer and water on monthly payments. This enables the property holder to not only put the property occupied by him but any property he has for rent in modern shape, with practically no outlay of ready cash. People interested in this proposition should consult C. C. Hartwell & Co., for a detailed explanation.

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.

1300-1302

DRYADES STREET.

PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

VISIT

MINERAL WELLS

FOR HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND
WEST TEXAS

For
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS.
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,

General Passenger Agent,

DALLAS - - - - - TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a. m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p. m.

FOR

NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW ON SALE.

Obituaries

(Continued from Page Eleven.)

LOLA LUVIGY, infant daughter of Henry and Lone Whitehead, was born July 14, 1909, died March 23, 1910. This precious treasure stayed with her parents just long enough for their affections to get well twined about her life. Oh! how hard it is, that these ties should be so suddenly broken. We are inclined to think our loved ones should remain longer with us. But God knows best. The Lord gave, and the Lord hath taken away, Joh. 1:21. In this early translation, little Lola has escaped many heartaches and sorrows that are common to us in this world. Jesus said: "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven," Mat. 19:14. He said again, "Where I am there ye may be also," John 14:3.

"The light of smiles, shall fill again.
The lids that overflow with tears:
And weary hours of woe and pain
Are promises of happier years.

"Methinks I see a thousand charms
Spread o'er thy lovely face,
While infants in thy tender arms
Receive the smiling grace.

"I take these little lambs' said he,
And lay them in my breast.
Protection they shall find in me,
The family above."

E. C. SULLIVAN, P. C.

Mr. M. V. VAUGHAN was born in Marengo County, Ala., June 13, 1820. He moved to Louisiana in early life and settled in Caldwell Parish. He joined the M. E. Church, South, in early manhood, but didn't profess conversion for sometime. At a meeting held at Old Bethel Church, in Jackson Parish, in the early fifties, he was happily converted, and he ever after adorned the gospel by a consistent, upright walk and a pure, manifested love for the glorious work. In his four year's service in the Confederate Army, surrounded by the environments of camp life, he frequently said that he had done nothing that he was ashamed of; he went into the conflict a Christian, and came out one. He was devoted to his Church and was always found, when weather conditions would permit, in his accustomed place. He had been a subscriber and constant reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for more than fifty years. He was married three times, and was the father of twenty children; but only six, with his faithful wife, remain to mourn his death. In 1880 he moved to Ouachita Parish, where he lived until his death, a devoted Christian, a kind neighbor, an excellent citizen, one who was ever ready with a free heart and willing hand, to assist the needy and relieve the distressed. He was remarkable for wise Christian counsel. When there was any misunderstanding between the members of his church or among the neighbors, "Uncle Vaughan," as he was called, was the one we consulted first to get to serve as peace-maker, and he usually accomplished the desired results. He was always ready to speak a word of comfort to any who were in distress. His life and Christian character was a continued light to all in the home and church and neighborhood. As far as his name was known, it was the synonym of integrity, purity and uprightness. But he is gone; and "how we will miss him" is on every tongue. He died May 7, 1910, at his home near Eros, La. Our loss is his gain. His last words to his weeping wife as she sat day and night by his bedside and administered to his needs, were, "Weep not for me, I am ready." May God bless the bereaved ones.

W. B. INABNET.

We all need to be on our guard against what may be called hot fits and cold fits, against waves of mere emotion or enthusiasm, which pass quickly over the soul and recede, leaving it dry and bare.—Selected.

FAITH IN PRAYER.

While everybody prays, few really believe in prayer. It is as natural for men to speak to God as it is for them to speak to each other, but the prayer instinct in the majority of cases remains a mere instinct and is not lifted up into the region of reason and made the intelligent utterance of the whole man. Like the fabled lady who prayed for the removal of mountains and then opened her eyes expecting to see them still standing in the old place, so Christians use words without meaning. There is a prayer that is answered and there is a prayer that is not answered. The determining factor is faith. The prayer of faith is a chief gauge of the reality of religious experiences. A praying man is a strong man, and a praying church is an aggressive, strenuous, triumphant church. It ought to be as natural and inevitable for Christians to pray as it is for children to talk with their parents. Unless prayer is a reality, both as an expression of experience on the part of the believer and as a moving force in the realm of God's moral government, there is no reality in spiritual religion. The prayer of faith is the prayer that is answered. Such prayer has a foundation in experience and in reason.

"Therefore I say unto you, what things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them."

"If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you."

"Likewise the Spirit also helpeth our infirmities, for we know not what we should pray for as we ought, but the Spirit itself maketh intercession for us with groanings which cannot be uttered. And he that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because he maketh intercession for the saints according to the will of God."

"The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much."

"And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us. And if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desired of him."—From "The Old Evangel and the New Evangelism."

CHURCH DIRECTORY.

New Orleans District, Rev. F. N. Parker, D.D., presiding elder; residence, 241 Olivier Street.

First Methodist Church, St. Charles Ave., near Callopo St.; Dr. S. H. Werlein, pastor; residence, 5630 Prytanis St.; phone, Uptown 329.

Rayne Memorial Church, St. Charles Ave. and General Taylor St.; Dr. John A. Rice, pastor; residence, 1421 Constantinople St.

Second Methodist Church, 2531 Burgundy, near Lafayette Ave.; Rev. A. I. Townsley, pastor; residence, 2728 N. Rampart St.; office hours, 9 to 11 a. m.; phone, Hemlock 978.

Parker Memorial, corner Nashville Ave. and Perrier St.; Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor; residence, 734 Nashville Ave.

Louisiana Avenue, cor. Louisiana Ave. and Magazine St.; Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor; residence, 1614 Fern St.; phone, Walnut 402.

Felicity Street Church, cor. Felicity and Chestnut Sts.; Rev. Albert S. Lutz, pastor; residence, 1323 St. Andrew St.; phone, Jackson 968-L.

Carrollton Avenue Church, cor. Carrollton Ave. and Elm St.; Rev. Henry T. Carley, pastor; residence, 1125 Fern St.; phone, Uptown 1238.

Algiers, Lavergne Street, cor. Delaronde; Rev. J. F. Foster, pastor; residence, 214 Seguin.

McDonoghville and Mary Werlein, Rev. H. Whitehead, pastor; residence, 1619 St. Mary St.; phone, Jackson 144.

Epworth Church, cor. Banks and Scott Sts.; Rev. L. A. Sims, pastor; residence, 232 South Pierce St.

Rev. John L. Sutton, Superintendent Orphan Boy's Asylum; residence, 5220 St. Charles Ave.; phone, Uptown 128.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, Superintendent St. Mark's Hall, 619-21 Esplanade; Residence, 721 Henry Clay Avenue; phones: Residence, Uptown 2739; St. Mark's Hall, Hemlock 1458.

Rev. John T. Sawyer, D.D., residence, 2330 Yalence St.; phone, Uptown 579.

R. F. Harrell, Secretary Y. M. C. A., 815 St. Charles St.

Rev. R. A. Meek, Editor New Orleans Christian Advocate; residence, 724 Nashville Ave.; phone, uptown 679.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

makes a dessert of purity, quality and endless possibilities.
Dainty, Wholesome, Economical.
Each package of Crystal Gelatine bears the above Trade Mark

Each package is guaranteed to make two quarts of jelly.

If your grocer does not keep it send to us for Free Sample Package.

CRYSTAL GELATINE COMPANY

121A Beverly Street Boston, Mass.

Methodist Benevolent Association

Ministers and Laymen of Southern Methodist Church. Benefits at Death, or Old Age, or Disability. Over $50,000 paid to Widows, Orphans, Disabled. Insurance at cost. If in good health, write for rates and other information.

CARE METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE

NASHVILLE TENN.

POLISHES - QUICK AS LIGHTNING

METAL POLISH

SILVER PASTE

Qckwork is something new. It's so quick you'll hardly believe your own eyes. It makes polishing a pleasure. No acid—no grit. For automobiles, yachts, brass, copper, tin, enamel, silver, everything that shines.

In 25c Tins Everywhere.

Qckwork Silver Paste brings a quick and lasting lustre to silver, gold, cut glass, etc. It can not injure. Adds years of wear to silver.

In 25c Jars Everywhere.

USE THE L. & A. RAILWAY.

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 57—No. 28.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2840.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JULY 14, 1910.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Editorial

"If some people could get one good look into the inside of the minister's heart struggles, they would cease their criticism."

It is said that the Bible is meant to teach only moral and spiritual truth. Would it not, then, be a good idea for those expounding it to adhere to the primary purpose of the great Book, and let vagaries and speculation alone?

The Master praised "the Israelite in whom there is no guile." Cunning may be admired in animals, but not in men. Stating half-truths is only a skillful way of lying. Concealments which mislead are incompatible with a high Christian character. No dignity of office can take the place of kingliness of soul, and no craftiness can hide wrong intent from the all-seeing eye that searches the depths of the heart.

Does the witness of the Spirit come only through the medium of the senses? That depends upon the classification which you make of consciousness. If that be considered one of the senses, the question may be answered in the affirmative; but otherwise, not. John Wesley said, "By the testimony of the Spirit, I mean an inward impression on the soul, whereby the Spirit of God immediately and directly witnesses to my spirit, that I am a child of God." To say that the great Infinite Spirit can communicate with the human spirit only through the intervention of a physical medium, is both unmethodistic and unscriptural.

Tact is a rare quality which ever acts wisely and discreetly. It is courteous and refined, and embodies many virtues. It is, from every point of view, a very desirable acquirement. It disarms prejudice and jealousy. With it, the politician can soothe the ruffled feelings of his opponent. In home life, it possesses a charm of manner which captivates all hearts—by it breaches are healed, the jagged edges of friction become smoothed, words of anger become words of love, and where discord reigned there is harmony, peace and happiness. Its power and influence are boundless, and many owe much of their success in life to this graceful and conciliating gift.—Henry Lee.

There is a "playing to the galleries" that is proper. Not performing to win the applause of earth, but bestowing one's self to command the approval of the onlooking hosts of heaven. There is mighty inspiration in the thought that the holy angels, the ascended saints, and our Lord himself may be gazing upon us as we press forward in the course of life. It was to this sentiment that Paul appealed when in writing to the Hebrews he made the ringing exhortation: "Wherefore, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith."

"A BURNING AND A SHINING LIGHT."

This was the Master's characterization of his great forerunner, John the Baptist. The literal translation is, "He was the lamp burning (or lighted) and shining." No more beautiful eulogy was ever pronounced upon mortal man. And coming from him whose estimates were unerring and whose holy lips were never polluted with flattery, this unique description is doubly significant and impressive.

"A burning light." This refers to John's own inward experience. His soul was aglow with spiritual life and fervor. The fire of holy love, divinely kindled, blazed upon the altar of his heart, and informed and irradiated his whole being. Regnant in his consciousness, his religion was a reality. It gripped him, it dominated him, it was his consuming passion. Of it were born his vehemence, his courage, his fidelity, his self-effacement, and all of the other elements that made him great. And so it must ever be. The seat, the throne, of true religion is within the soul. It is "not meat and drink," but righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost. Of this inner life theology is the philosophy, as botany might be said to be of living, growing flowers. Christian character is the disposition of the individual as developed under its transforming influence, and piety and proper conduct is but its outward flow. Hence, Methodism has been right in putting emphasis upon a conscious salvation. True discipleship must begin in experience, in a spiritual quickening, in regeneration. Men talk of the psychology of conversion, but it is not likely that we shall ever understand it on earth. The Master said, "The wind bloweth where it pleaseth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: so is everyone that is born of the Spirit." But the comprehension of the process is unimportant; it is the recognition of the fact that is essential. Many things about his meeting with Jesus on his way to Damascus, Paul never understood, but he never doubted that he met him, and that as a result of that contact, he became a new and different man. Our insistence upon the absolute necessity of the "new birth" cannot possibly be too strong. For nothing about it—its supernaturalness, its suddenness, its mysteriousness—need we apologize. It stood the test of the centuries gone, and it will stand the test of those to come. It is the Gibraltar of our holy faith—the stronghold from which we can never be driven. Uncertainty on this point will mark the beginning of the decadence of Methodism. Her health and safety and future are assured so long as her people can truly sing.

"We who in Christ believe
That he for us hath died,
We all his unknown peace receive,
And feel his blood applied.
Exalts our rising soul,
Disburdened of her load,
And swells unutterably full
Of glory, and of God?"

"A shining light." This has reference to John's outward acts and influence. The radiance within was diffusive. It flashed forth and others could see it. The "burning light" must ever shine. It is its nature to shine. The unconscious influence of a true disciple, that goes forth without effort upon his part, is considerable. A quiet, modest life, devoted to the service of the Master, appeals powerfully to all who observe it. There is a winsomeness in genuine piety that wonderfully charms and attracts. Its gentleness, its serenity, its trustful, happy spirit, its charitableness, its helpfulness, and its buoyant optimism, cannot but impress those whose hearts are burdened and anxious, and make them desire to possess it. The bearing of the Moravians in the storm at sea made John Wesley feel the need of a closer approach to God. The light that shone in Fletcher's face drew foreigners to hear him preach, though they could not understand the language that he spoke. Men have found fault with the teaching of our Lord, but his character and conduct have commanded universal tribute. Let no disciple, however humble, who wears in his heart the image of Christ and faithfully reflects it, imagine that he is living in vain. Such lives are the incontrovertible proof of our glorious Christianity, and will ever put its enemies to confusion and flight.

But John's radiance was not merely that which emanates from the good man, who is true and upright, but lacks aggressiveness. He was a force for righteousness—a flame of fire. He sought to light the pathway of his fellowmen. No reed shaken by the wind, no compromiser, was he. Courageous and trumpet-tongued, he showed to vice no quarter. Not even wickedness, robed in royal purple and high-seated upon a throne, would he spare. Popularity had for him no charm—for self he cared nothing. How beautiful the words with which he faced coming obscurity! "He must increase, but I must decrease." And what a prodigious toiler was this herald of the coming King! With an engrossing earnestness that knew no abatement, he went forth preaching and baptizing. Thousands flocked to hear him—his clarion voice thrilled and stirred the nation. No ignoble truce with the forces of darkness would he accept; not even to save his head would he lower the standard of righteousness. A martyr to truth and duty, he poured out his blood; but the luster of his spirit and deeds yet illuminates the centuries. Such was the man whom Jesus characterized as a "burning and a shining light." Oh, how we need such men to-day, both in State and Church—men of convictions, of devotion to principle, true and sincere, of flaming zeal, who are capable of feeling moral indignation at wrong doing, who cringe at nothing, and who stand, like blazing beacons, to light the way of humanity to higher and better things! Shall we not each in his sphere, obscure though it may be, aspire to be a lighted and burning lamp, so shining that we may constrain some to glorify our Father who is in heaven?

From the time when at my mother's feet or my father's knee, I first learned to lispen verses from the Sacred Writings, they have been my daily study and vigilant contemplation. If there be anything in my style or thoughts to be commended, the credit is due to my parents in instilling into my mind an early love for the Scriptures.—Daniel Webster.

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS.

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

A SAMPLE OF SUNDRIES.

By Rev. C. W. Carter, D.D.

Now, Mr. Editor, you may realize what your temerity in commending my "Little Journey" has done, and it may make you a little more wary with your commendations. It has infected me again with a disease from which I thought myself immune for all the remaining days of my natural life. This disease is a very old one. It carries on its ravages outside of the sphere of the operations of the medical profession. There are three well-known types of this old disease. I believe the Roman poet, Horace, has the honor of being the first writer to give it a definite name. In his "Ars Poetica" he tells his friends, the Pisos, that some people in his day were afflicted with what he named "cacothetes scribendi." Dr. Luke in his "Acts of the Apostles" mentions the fact that in his day the Athenians had two types of it, both differing from that mentioned by Horace. These two types are called "cacothetes loquendi" and "cacothetes audiendi." See Acts 17:21. There is positive evidence that one form of this disease existed as far back as the time of Job. A young man called Elihu seems to have been afflicted with a virulent case of "cacothetes loquendi." This disease differs from all other diseases in the fact that it causes less suffering to the patient than it does to other people. The "audiendi" form is the least harmful of the three types. The "loquendi" form shows an advanced stage of harmfulness. The "scribendi" form is the worst of all. You can endure with some patience the man of "itching ears." You can deliberately refuse to listen to the rapid inanities of a "rattling tongue." But who can escape the harassment caused by one of these "ready writers" who sprawls himself all over the public prints every day and week and month in the year? Now, Mr. Editor, I am afflicted with the type, "cacothetes scribendi," and in spite of the self-control which I have been cultivating so long I find myself unable to keep it under. Sometimes it breaks over all barriers and pours itself out, as in this instance. But, as an encouragement to your readers, let me say that in the nature of things it cannot continue very long, for I am now in the neighborhood of four-score years, and the end of all earthly things is near.

Early in the year it was my good fortune to receive an invitation from Brother Harbin, the leader of the Laymen's Missionary Movement on the Haynesville Circuit, to attend a missionary rally at Colquit, July 3rd, and preach a missionary sermon. So, on Saturday, July 2d, I hied me up to Haynesville on the far-famed Beardsley train, which trundles along between Natchitoches and McNeil, Ark. Sunday morning, after an early and bountiful breakfast, in company with Brother Woodward, in a comfortable huggy, drawn by a patient, responsive mustang, I made the twelve miles to Colquit in ample time for the morning service. I suppose there were present about 250 people, and to a houseful of worshipers I tried to tell the immense meaning of the Great Commission. The hearers heard with "the hearing ear" and I trust with "the understanding heart." I never had better attention and I never had better voice than on that day. The pastor, announced that everybody was invited to stay to dinner, and when we were called to the table these old superannuated eyes saw a sight which made them gleam with a satisfaction supreme. Such a dinner! Ah, ye dwellers in cities, who think you know what a good dinner is, if you could have eaten of that dinner you would have been convinced that you were not acquainted with even the rudiments of the great subject. If I were to attempt to itemize the things on that table it would read something like this: roast beef and baked chicken, beef-steak and fried chicken, home-cured ham and broiled chicken, hash and chicken pie—and sprinkled from one end to the other, bread and pies and pickles and cakes galore. And the abundance of it! After the crowd had all eaten there seemed to be enough left to feed as many more. For a luscious, succulent, infilling, satisfying dinner, I commend the reader to the good sisters of Colquit.

The program for the afternoon was an address of welcome by one of the young men of the church, responded to by a young man from a different part of the circuit, and both ringing with a call as clear as a clarion. Then came the pastor's address on "The Aim and Purpose of the Laymen's Movement." It was clear-cut, as if done by a Damascus blade, and stimulating as the waters of Helicon. Then came Brother Breithaupt, the French Missionary, with his simple narrative of the needs of the people in south Louisiana, a narrative which by its earnest simplicity won all to a deep-felt sympathy with his noble work among that gospel-needy people. Then Brother Harbin gave a graphic account of what his band had done and how they had done it. The gist of it is this: They have already in cash and reliable subscriptions all the collections, with a substantial reserve in the treasury to be applied to "emergency cases." The leader claims that Haynesville Circuit is the banner circuit of the Conference in the line of the Laymen's Movement, and I know nothing to the contrary. Thus ended a day delightful and instructive and stimulating to all present.

In the days of my editorship, whose never-ceasing grind ingrained itself upon the tablets of memory in ineffaceable characters, Bishop Keener would come up occasionally and talk. He was a most interesting and a very instructive talker, and he could talk interestingly and instructively on almost every subject, and nearly all his conversation was spiced with a very delicate and healthy humor. On one occasion he turned the conversation to "Poets and Poetry." I listened with fascinated pleasure as with a keen-edged criticism he spoke on those subjects. But to my astonishment he ended his monologue by declaring that "all persons who write poetry are crazy during the writing." What heightened my astonishment was the fact that the Bishop himself was given to writing poetry. He saw my astonishment and said: "The best piece of poetry I ever wrote was composed while crossing the Rocky Mountains and suffering with a headache whose tortures racked my brain with craziness." That conversation occurred about twenty-one years ago. I have often thought of the Bishop's dictum on this subject and imagined I could detect grounds for its truth in a good deal of the poetry of our day. Not long ago I was reading some book notices in the June number of the Review of Reviews. The title of the book noticed was, "The Inspiration of Poetry," by Prof. Woodberry. The first utterance of the reviewer was this: "It may be said that the great majority of Americans are firmly convinced that poetic genius bears a distinct pathological relation to insanity." When I read that I was immediately reminded of what the Bishop had said to me twenty years before. This shows how near the Bishop's thought was to the conviction of a "great majority of Americans" to-day. It is true that "Prof. Woodberry contends that poetic genius is characterized not by an unbalanced or diseased reason or by any temporary aberration, but by a suspension of reason in favor of spiritual emotion." I fail to see any difference between craziness and "a suspension of reason in favor of spiritual emotion." It seems to me that they mean about the same. If a "suspended reason" is not craziness, what is it? No matter what it is—whether craziness or "suspended reason"—a goodly number of newspapers are afflicted by it, and even our Advocates sometimes show alarming symptoms. Several years ago the editor of one of our great magazines was so sorely tried that on an occasion of declining a poem he sent the following lines to the poet:

"The trouble is that in this land sublime
Too many citizens know how to rhyme;
In fact, some ten or twenty thousand
Write verses that correctly mate and scan,
And several hundred sometimes even reach
To no small aptitude of measured speech;
Thus are our desks so full of pretty verses
We can more so, prithee, spare your curses."

Now, haec fabula docet; if you will try to write poetry, "the great majority of Americans are firmly convinced that your poetic genius bears a distinct pathological relation to insanity." So, I say don't do it. Preserve your sanity before "the great majority of Americans."

Natchitoches, La

ST. LOUIS LETTER.

By an Old Timer.

The Word South.

I read with interest, approval and pleasure the editorial in the New Orleans Christian Advocate on page 8, June 2d. I can say the same of Bishop Candler's interview with a representative of the Atlanta Journal, copied into the same number of the Advocate. The subject is the same: "The Name of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." I write from St. Louis, Mo., the largest city in Southern Methodism. In no city of the United States are the two branches of white Episcopal Methodism so largely represented as they are in St. Louis. Our city directory of last year gives the names of Methodist Episcopal, and Southern Methodist congregations, whose members are white people. In the M. E. Church (North) there are twelve congregations called "American" whose religious services are conducted in the English language. There are eight congregations whose services are in the German language, and one the Swedish tongue, making a total of twenty-one white congregations. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has seventeen American congregations, and no other. The M. E. Church, South, congregations are not wholly composed of Southern people.

Centenary Church.

I cannot speak definitely of but one church. That is "Centenary," in which I have had membership as a local elder more than thirty years. The church building is a large and imposing stone structure with abundant provision for all church services. It is the "down-town church" of Methodism, but is sixteen squares from the Mississippi river, being at the corner of Sixteenth and Pine streets. It is adjacent to large and small business houses and to homes of many African and foreign born citizens, with few of its two thousand members living near it. Numerous street car lines of the city, by a transfer system, enable people from every section to go to or within one, two or three squares of the front entrance to the church, for five cents each way. It is an attractive place to many people living remote from it. Dr. John Mathews, who was Centenary's pastor first and last nine years, estimated that two-thirds of the people under his care at one time were Northern people, and so expressed himself to me. Yet in all my thirty years in that church, I have never heard from any member dissatisfaction expressed concerning the word "South," connected with our church name, till since the question was up in our late General Conference, then from a lady who has been in the church since its dedication in 1871.

Therefore, I conclude that so far as our Centenary Church in this border city is concerned, there is no necessity for dropping the word "South" or substituting the word "America" for South.

In all of my years here, I never have heard of a contention between one of our presiding elders, pastors, or congregations and a presiding elder, pastor or congregation of our sister Methodist Episcopal Church.

Methodist Club.

There has been for a number of years in St. Louis an association of preachers and laymen of the two Episcopal Methodist Churches, with an occasional banquet. "Methodist Club" is its name. One night about three years ago "The Club" had a public meeting in the Sunday school room of Centenary Church, open to all.

One feature of the meeting was the reading by one of our pastors of a paper advocating "Organic Union" between the two great Methodist denominations. That was followed by another paper of like character read by a prominent member of Centenary Church. I never heard of either paper after that night from any person, and have heard nothing about "organic union" from any one since then. At our District Conference just before our late General Conference, not a word was spoken or read about changing the name of our Church.

Fraternal Element.

In no city is there a larger mixture of Northern and Southern English-speaking people than in St. Louis; and the Northern element is the larger.

The state of Missouri is bounded on the south by Arkansas, on the east, north and west by Illinois, Iowa and Kansas. Three-fourths of our border-state surroundings are Northern, and it may be supposed that three-fourths of the English-speaking emigrants to St. Louis are from the East and North and come from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and New England, while not one-fourth of the migratory Carolinians, Georgians and Tennesseans have reached St. Louis. They have gone to Arkansas and Texas.

Our Centenary Church, since I have known it, has received a reasonable portion of incoming Methodists from Northern States who have not troubled themselves or us about the meaning of the last word in our Church name. J. W. CUNNINGHAM.
St. Louis, Mo.

AN APPEAL FROM BISHOP HOSS.

About two years ago I asked the Church through the Christian Advocate for four thousand dollars to complete paying for two much-needed houses of worship in Brazil. In one way or another I have received nearly $3000 of that amount. The balance of $1100, principal and interest, is still due and pressing. My word is pledged for it and I must get it or pay it. Will the friends of missions help me? Any contributions, great or small, will be thankfully received. As I shall be soon sailing for the Orient, all checks or money orders should be sent directly to Mr. J. D. Hamilton, treasurer, Nashville, Tenn. The cause is worthy and urgent. E. E. HOSS.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

GOSPEL HINDRANCE.

Rev. Robt. B. Downer.

Until Satan is relegated to the confines of the bottomless pit, the gospel will meet with hindrance, commensurate with the adversary's hatred of the holiness of God; yet we need not give this undue concern, since "the gospel is the power, i. e., the omnipotence, of God unto salvation."

The Lord of Hosts is acquainted with the metes, bounds and resources of the arch enemy of souls—and if there is a perfect service rendered by God's chosen friends, "a nation can be born in a day."

The gospel hindrance that gives God concern arises from within, not without the fold. The propagation of the gospel by workers whose hearts are not in attunement with the holiness of God (because of ignorance of the necessity of such attunement), can never accomplish results commensurate with the zeal and labor expended; but what an awful condemnation awaits the soul of the worker in the Lord's vineyard—who wears the livery of heaven—who has the care of souls, and yet is a stranger to the touch of the live coal from the altar of God; whose sermons (faultless in style, redolent with poetry, history, science, politics, entrancing to hear) yet, strange to say, never extort the penitent wall, "Lord have mercy upon my soul!" "What must I do to be saved?"

In I Cor. ix, 12, Paul records his discovery, that an insincerity for ministerial rights in the matter of bodily support from the Church members whom he served, while divinely lawful, could hinder the gospel of Christ. He, therefore, welcomed personal suffering, rather than give occasion to impair the influences of heaven's remedy to restore lost souls to sonship with God. "Who is sufficient for these things?" Yet, we read of "wire-pulling" to obtain ecclesiastical positions of authority and pay by ministers of the gospel, who feel competent and perfectly willing to assume all the responsibilities of office, but who give little, if any, thought about any gospel hindrance in the transaction. They seem to be "in the priest's office for a piece of bread."

When we know that a slip of paper, wrongly placed, can neutralize an electric current, how important it is for a minister of the gospel to be void of offense even in what one may consider a non-essential, or a personal privilege. As long as our Methodist General Rules keep the rule on dress in the Discipline, Methodist ministers will do themselves no harm to avoid all display of love for gold, pings, rings, charms, etc., in personal ornamentation. "Ah! But they are my lodge insignia." Yes, but even love for your lodge may be questionable, if you have ever taken the vow—"All for Christ." I am sure that lovers of the "weed" would practice total abstinence, if its use in this twentieth century of enlightenment indicated that the gospel was being hindered, and that requests from mothers to the Bishop were on file asking for pastors who thought more of Christ than of claiming a personal right.

The late General Conference vote on the tobacco question, as presented in the minority report, "134 for," "137 against," shows that the impression is gaining ground that the use of tobacco by ministers of the gospel may be hurtful.

It is to be hoped that upon the tobacco question the seven new Bishops will prove themselves ensamples unto the flock by their abstinence.

Flowers? Who fails to admire fragrant, beautiful flowers? Yet I have seen the gospel hindered by an ornate display of flower decorations, especially on and about the pulpit. I have seen ministers who most reluctantly have felt compelled to move them from before their eyes; and from about their feet, lest they be hindered from a faithful delivery of the gospel message.

Who is keeping the record of gospel hinderers who enter the church house after service has commenced, or who fail to come at all? Who, while at service, learn more about prevailing dress fashions than the text and sermon? Choirs and janitors can help or hinder the gospel.

The gospel must have free course. At times large rivers bear upon their bosoms leaves, twigs, trash, prostrate trees, gathered from adjacent banks. This accumulation of foreign matter is moved by the forceful undercurrents, yet with abated velocity. Now, rid the Church of Christ of all self-seekers, grumblers, drones, fanatics, covetous, heady, ayowed friends, and the gospel will move on without friction. Sanctified, intelligent architects are needed to construct auditoriums that give heat, light, air and perfect acoustic adjuncts, helpful—not hindering the gospel's propagation.

Ministers and workers are needed altogether sanctified—not holy in spots.

The fact of the matter is the gospel is hindered by every ayowed friend that has any taint of disloyalty, impurity of soul, or unwillingness of spirit abiding in him. We must "walk in the light, as he is in the light;" we must have "fellowship, one with the other;" the blood of Jesus Christ His Son, must "cleanse us from"—not some—but "all sin," for God to be glorified, the gospel not hindered, and souls quickly redeemed.

Now, brother, sister, look into the gospel mirror and see yourself—a helper, or a hinderer. Which is it?

WORLD MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

By Rev. N. E. Joyner.

The first day of the World Missionary Conference was devoted to a consideration of the report submitted by Commission I, and quite properly so, since the question assigned to that Commission was, "Carrying the gospel to all the non-Christian world." Mr. John R. Mott, whom we shall now have to call Doctor, presented the report, discussing at length its various features. The Commission has also prepared a chart of Christian missions, including even the work of the Greek and Roman Catholic missions.

Only seven minutes each were allowed those who wished to discuss the report, or to give additional information concerning the non-Christian world. Perhaps never before has there been such a setting forth of world need for the gospel of Jesus Christ the Lord. Missionaries and personal representatives of the native churches voiced the bitter cry of heathendom and men listened with bated breath. More than one hundred (100,000,000) millions of people are to be found within the territory occupied by our missionaries who have not yet heard the gospel. It reminds one of "the bread line" in New York City, where the destitute stand, each waiting for a piece of bread to satisfy a gnawing hunger. The heathen, a hundred million, stand "in line" waiting and yet not hearing the gospel that means so much to them. Beyond these stands a yet larger multitude, the vast populations of territory wholly untouched by any missionary. In central Africa there are seventy (70,000,000) millions, in Asia forty-two (42,000,000) millions and in Arabia and Syria, the Siniatic Peninsula, and other portions of the world there are other peoples that make an aggregate of more than one hundred and thirteen (113,000,000) millions. It is not strange that one speaker said the reading of the report brought him to his knees. It should startle the whole Church that, twenty centuries after Jesus died for the redemption of men, so many have not yet heard the old, old story of love so great.

But over against this appalling picture I would put the confident enthusiasm of those who have gone forth to the harvest. Not a missionary has uttered a word of despondency or of doubt. Their tones were triumphant. And with the missionaries stood the men of the native church, men of great ability and apostolic faith, the first fruits of the Church of God in China, in Korea, in Japan, in India.

At one of the evening services over which Lord Balfour presided the speakers were the Archbishop of York, Mr. Seth Low of New York and President Harada, of Japan. The address of the Japanese in no way suffered by comparison with those of the noted Church of England dignitary and of the prominent laymen.

There have been a number of denominational gatherings. Our own Miss Belle Bennett entertained the Southern Methodists at the Caledonian Hotel, some forty in number. After a delicious tea had been served, an hour was given to impressions of the Conference. The Wesleyans invited all Methodists of every race and color to meet at the large mission hall on Wednesday afternoon.

The people of Edinburgh are showing the delegates many courtesies, most of the delegates being entertained in homes. Notwithstanding the almost continuous sessions of the Conference, the attendance never decreases. Sight-seeing and social functions give place to the Conference work. The meetings held in other churches are also attracting great audiences, many persons being unable to get into the building at all.

It is already evident that many permanent results will follow the Conference, and I shall try to sum them up in another article.

Edinburgh, Scotland, June 21, 1910.

THE VANDERBILT MATTER.

The following letter from Bishop Hendrix is in reply to one addressed him by Dr. J. W. Boswell, and is published by his permission:

Kansas City, Mo., June 24, 1910.

Dear Brother Boswell: I am glad to hear from you by yours of the 22d.

My first article on the Vanderbilt, written during these five years of strife, will appear in the Nashville (Christian Advocate) next week; and it will probably be my last.

After addressing the General Conference on the subject, assuring them of the sole hindrance felt by the Vanderbilt Board of Trust in accepting in all particulars the report of the Commission, being its lack of conformity to Tennessee laws, I had hoped to see an end of the controversy. We could not violate the laws under which we were incorporated. Judge O'Rear wrote me, as chairman of the board (see Daily Advocate), "the present method of filling vacancies followed since the Baltimore General Conference, of the Board of Trust electing and the Board of Education confirming, is wise and legal and should be continued."

Had that been done there would have been no more trouble. But when the General Conference, acting under his advice, reversed all that by making elections contrary to our charter, we faced a grave condition, namely, of being brought to account for breach of trust as a Board of Trust in not asserting our rights. Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt, who alone has given $400,000 to the university, and, with other large benefactions in mind and in his will, called a halt on the Board of Trust, which we could not ignore. Three years before he had Judge Bradford, of Nashville, furnish him a careful legal opinion as to the report of the Commission, which showed that it was not compatible with the laws of Tennessee. This has been confirmed by other legal opinions rendered to individual trustees who employed able counsel, which opinions were placed before seven able lawyers of the board, who, with a single exception, brought back the same opinion—that we would be violating our charter by permitting anyone else to interfere with "the right of perpetual succession" granted in the charter.

Now, should the board expose themselves to the charge of a breach of trust and so the loss of the Vanderbilt to the Church, whose trustees they were, holding and administering the property for the Church?

Our course was clear as to our duty to the Church herself, despite our liability to be misunderstood.

It was the opinion of Col. Harris, one of the trustees elected by the General Conference, that the question involved was a legal one and could only be settled by a competent civil court, and we sought together with the General Conference trustees present and participating, some effectual method of securing such a decision in the most friendly way. At one time we hoped by simply postponing action on the credentials of Col. Harris and others until we could get a legal decision, to avoid further trouble, and this was entirely agreeable to all parties could it have been carried out. But we were advised that under Tennessee practice no moot or academic case would be decided, but that an issue must be joined and brought before the court if we hoped for a decision. Otherwise, it would be time wasted and the question remain unsettled, and more discussion would crowd the press. We were legally advised at every step, and honestly sought the best and only way out of a prolonged controversy.

When the report was adopted after full discussion all were urged that, if a suit at law followed, the board do its best to make it a friendly suit as far as such a thing is possible.

Pending legal proceedings, which seemed necessary, it was deemed unwise to discuss questions of Church loyalty, and, while the Board of Trust is unanimous in the conviction that the Vanderbilt belongs to the whole Church and we are the trustees with "right of perpetual succession" under the charter, who hold the property, the board declined to entertain a motion asserting the Church's ownership after asking that it be withdrawn in the interest of a wise and unprejudiced settlement. The motion was, therefore, laid on the table without discussion and not voted down, as stated in the papers.

At the proper time the board will both assert the Church's true ownership and seek the Church's endorsement as heretofore through the Board of Education confirming the trustees, as by sacred agreement at Baltimore in 1893.

Let the laws of Tennessee be legally interpreted and all be governed by them for the protection alike of Vanderbilt University and the Church, and above all, "Let us have peace."

You can publish this in the New Orleans Advocate. Yours cordially,

E. R. HENDRIX.

IMPROVEMENTS AT MANSFIELD COLLEGE.

Dear Brother Meek: Please allow me space in the Advocate to say to the friends of Mansfield College, that through the individual efforts of a few men and good women, the main building will be recovered and thoroughly repaired. The water works and sewerage system will also be greatly improved. In fact, everything possible will be done to make the life of the students pleasant as well as profitable.

Our new catalogue will be published as soon as Dr. Weber reaches Mansfield, which he expects to do about the middle of July. Cordially,

J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

"The garment of humility is for you, the mantle of charity is to cover your neighbor. Don't get them mixed"—Selected.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?
GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH
LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 525.

SPEARING & CO.,

(Established 1817.)

SAIL MAKERS

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS and TENTS.

CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOUAS STREETS
Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

THE SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Seashore District Conference convened in the town of Wiggins on June the 16th, 1910, with the presiding elder, Rev. W. B. Jones, in the chair, with this writer, assisted by Rev. E. G. Mohler, as Secretary.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. J. T. Ahney on Wednesday night. There was preaching each day at 11 a.m. and 8 p.m. The following brethren did the preaching for us: Rob't Selby, W. T. Griffin, T. W. Adams, and M. L. Burton. At the conclusion of the last sermon the beautiful church was dedicated by the presiding elder.

All the pastors in the District were present except E. W. Lipscomb, L. A. Darsey, C. M. Martin, and David Ulmer. There were also a goodly number of laymen present and nine local preachers.

After the organization of the conference the first line of work taken up was the reports of the pastors on the spiritual interests of the church, a summary of which showed that 330 members had been received this year, 153 being on profession of faith; 53 adults baptized and 193 infants; family altars, 200, and 385 church papers taken.

The afternoon session was devoted to the Sunday school interest. Miss Daisy Magee of Columbia, Rev. E. G. Mohler, and Rev. B. F. Lewis spoke earnestly in behalf of more efficient work in our Sunday schools.

At this point communications were read from Bishop W. B. Murrah and Rev. R. B. Downer, expressing their regrets at not being able to attend the conference—other pressing duties keeping the Bishop away, and bodily affliction keeping Brother Downer away.

During the afternoon Rev. R. Selby spoke in the interest of the educational work of the conference; M. M. Black in behalf of the Missionary interest; W. W. Moore in behalf of the Montrose Methodist Training School.

The morning of the second day of the conference was taken up in hearing the reports of the pastors who were not present at the morning session of the first day; and also in hearing the reports and passing the characters of the local preachers in the district. The following local preachers had their licenses renewed: M. J. Marhle, E. M. Allen, Lewis Fayard, Paul Daniel, J. R. Cruthirds, R. G. Williams, M. F. Adams, W. C. Bibron, S. E. Flurry, James King, David Ulmer, W. W. Broom, J. M. Alexander, J. W. Broom, S. C. Moody, J. H. Havens, J. W. Roberts, A. P. Williams, J. A. Flurry, A. A. Phillips, and M. W. David.

The characters of the following local deacons were passed: L. R. Roberts, H. B. Cottrell, J. L. Jordan, Irvin Roberts, and C. J. Phillips.

Local Elders as follows were passed in character: D. L. Mitchell, Michael Cox, and A. P. Cox. Evidently the day of the local preacher is not yet passed in the Seashore District.

Rev. M. L. Burton, Secretary of the District Parsonage Building Committee, read his report, which showed that they had purchased a splendid property on the Beach, in the eastern limits of Long Beach, for the sum of $5,000.00. The report was adopted and an assessment equal to fifty per cent of the presiding elder's salary was ordered placed upon the several pastoral charges to meet the payments as they came due.

The report of the District Board of Trustees relative to the property bought by the Building Committee was read and adopted.

Rev. J. M. Morse, the arbitrator elected to represent this district in the division of the district parsonage property in Hattiesburg formerly belonging to the Seashore District, read a report, in which he stated that he had been unable to get the arbitrator for the Hattiesburg District to agree upon a third man, and therefore presented his resignation as arbitrator. His report and resignation were accepted, and Hon. T. M. Evans was elected arbitrator in his stead.

J. E. Flurry was granted license to preach by a unanimous vote of the conference. The election of the lay delegates to the Annual Conference was then taken up and resulted as follows: Hon. T. M. Evans, C. W. Wood, W. E. Lampton, and D. C. Camp, with R. B. Bellew, J. H. Holder, and A. S. Weston, alternates. Hon. C. H. Woods was elected district lay leader.

The selection of the place for holding the next District Conference was taken up. Lumberton, Bay St. Louis and Long Beach asked for it. The Conference voted for Long Beach. Dr. W. T. Bolton and W. E. Lampton were elected to fill vacancies on the Board of Trustees of the Seashore Camp Grounds.

The following Licensing Committee was elected: Revs. G. A. Gulice, L. E. Alford, J. M. Morse, W. T. Griffin, E. W. Lipscomb and J. T. Ahney.

The special committee consisting of Revs. T. W. Adams, J. M. Morse, and G. A. Gulice, appointed to draft some resolutions relative to the death of Sister W. H. Huntley, reported as follows: "Whereas Almighty God, in his wise providence, has seen fit to remove from our midst Sister W. H. Huntley, wife of our well beloved and much esteemed Rev. W. H. Huntley, and whereas Sister Huntley has been for a long time one of the leaders among Methodist women in the Home Mission Society, and all other church work in the district, therefore, be it

Resolved, That in the death of Sister Huntley the church has lost one of her most valuable and strongest workers among the women of our church; and that Brother Huntley has lost a helpmeet that was a helpmeet indeed, and one who was his strongest stay and help in his work for the Master in this world.

Resolved, second, That the prayers for strength and comfort and the deep sympathies of this District Conference are hereby tendered Brother Huntley and his motherless children in this dark hour.

Resolved, third, that a copy of these resolutions be sent to Brother Huntley and also to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The remainder of the second day was taken up in hearing and receiving the reports of the committees appointed to look into the several lines of work the church is pursuing.

The work of the Missionary Institute was taken up in the morning of the third and last day of the conference. Rev. E. D. Phillips delivered a stirring address on "The Home Missionary." R. P. Fikes on "Why we are Missionary." T. W. Adams made an instructive talk on the American Bible Society.

G. A. Gulice spoke very forcibly on the duty of giving at least one-tenth to the Lord's work. The Conference requested him to commit his speech to writing and have it published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Rev. B. F. Lewis spoke very interestingly of the great work that could be done through the Epworth League in behalf of Missions. He was followed by a short address from the Secretary of the Conference on "Church Extension and Missions."

Before the close of the conference, resolutions were adopted commending the editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate for his able work in the editorial and general management of the paper. Also commending the Woman's Home Mission Societies of the District for the purchase of the furniture for the district parsonage, and urging them to continue their good work until it is all paid for.

Mrs. Favoret, of Gulfport, District Secretary of the W. F. M. S., was present and spoke of her work in that line. Miss Drago, the deaconess in charge of the Wesley House in Biloxi, was also present and spoke of the work they were doing there. Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Orphans' Home, was with us and spoke to the delight of all relative to the progress they were making in that institution.

The following resolution was adopted by the conference:

Resolved, That we rejoice with Rev. R. S. Gale, the pastor of the church in which we meet, in the phenomenal success of his work. Resolved further, that we deeply sympathize with him in the affliction of his wife, and earnestly pray that the tender mercies of our Heavenly Father may be upon these faithful servants of His.

This was indeed one of the most spiritual, harmonious and pleasant district conferences that this scribe has ever attended. And I am sure I never attended a conference where the people of the town in which we were entertained appreciated the conference any more than the people of Wiggins.

L. E. ALFORD, Secretary.

Long Beach, Miss.

SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Sardis District Conference held at Senatobia, Miss., June 23-26, was a most delightful and profitable occasion. All of the preachers were present except three who were absent on account of sickness. There was a goodly number of laymen present, and all entered heartily into all the proceedings of the conference. H. I. Gill was elected secretary, and accurately recorded the minutes. Bishop McCoy presided to the delight of all. The sermons he preached Saturday and Sunday were messages filled with information and inspiration. The Holy Ghost came upon us, and there was great rejoicing. By his evident consecration and affable disposition he soon won his way into the hearts of all. The reports of the preachers were the best I have heard at any conference; every note sounded was optimistic. Brothers Countiss, Williams, Neblett and Clements, represented Grenada College, the Orphans' Home, Sunday School Board and hospital work, respectively. Each delighted the Conference with their "speeches." A most remarkable report was made by the committee on Quarterly Conference records; they reported "all records examined and found neatly and correctly kept, not a criticism to be made." I have never heard a like report. The preaching throughout the conference was done by Brothers Duncan, Clements, Wendel and O'Bryant. Mr. J. R. Pepper was present one evening and in his own unique and forceful way delivered a splendid address on the laymen's movement. Brother Curtis, the same evening, spoke on Church Extension, and a great address it was. R. G. A. Carlisle, W. J. Echols and A. Standifer Raper were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. J. A. Chambley was licensed to preach. P. T. Callicott, N. E. Wilrog, Dr. C. L. Maples and Hebert Holmes were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

Real French Drip Coffee can not be made unless the coffee itself is prepared, blended and roasted according to the famous French method. Use

LUZIANNE COFFEE

For French Drip Coffee

For all around family use

THE REILY TAYLOR CO.
NEW ORLEANS, U.S.A.

with H. I. Gill and T. T. O'Bryant alternates. All of the interests of the Church were carefully considered in the committees. Too much praise can not be given to the presiding elder for the splendid method he adopted of getting the necessary information before the conference. He appointed committees in advance of the Conference, and they, by correspondence, gathered definite facts and figures from the preachers, and as the reports were made the presiding elder asked for pointed facts and they were tabulated. Thus the conference knew in a moment just what was the condition of each charge in the district.

At the close of the love feast Sunday afternoon, conducted by Brother R. W. Evans, many said "It gets better and better." Truly, it was a great conference—great in that God was honored; the preachers and laymen attending were stimulated to greater love and devotion to the church, and the local congregation and pastor who so royally entertained us, and the well-organized choir and orchestra, who so faithfully furnished the choicest music for the conference, realized that a great blessing and benediction remained with them. The next conference will be held in Hernando, with a people noted for their religious zeal and large hospitality.

We were glad to have Brother Bachman throughout the conference, selling books, pointing out our way when we were in doubt and contributing no little to the conference in many ways. No more faithful itinerant can be found than Brother Bachman.

Mr. J. D. Barbee, Jr., that wide-awake layman from Greenville District, was among us one day and manifested great interest in the work of the conference. Such laymen are a great factor in Methodism.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt was a welcome visitor. He always adds dignity and profit to a conference. He has a hearty invitation to visit our district in the interest of his training school at any time.

H. S. Gunn of Como was re-elected lay leader for the district. Brother Gunn is putting his all into this work, and God is blessing his labors. The outlook is very encouraging.

A contribution of $112.50 was made to help a young preacher through Mississippi College next session. Also about $75.00 was contributed to one of the pastors who had lost his horse and was otherwise in need. We were blessed in thus practicing what we preach.

Rev. E. B. Ramsey of the Memphis Conference (but we will never turn him loose) made a short visit to the conference.

Rev. J. T. Murrah, recently pastor at Senatobia, and deservedly popular, made his old parishioners and the conference glad when they saw him come down the aisle. Though gone from us he still feels a keen interest in Sardis District.

Wednesday was Woman's Day, and greatly enjoyed by all. Both the Foreign and Home Mission work was intelligently represented. I suppose that some lady connected with the work will send the Advocate a detailed report. It deserves large space.

S. A. BROWN.

WANTED—FOR SEPTEMBER.

A position as matron—in College or Hospital—by an experienced, energetic woman. Would like to take charge of old couple, and keep house during the winter. Address Mrs. E. Pennell, box 177, Monteagle, Tenn.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

Church News

The eighteenth International Convention of the Baptist Young People's Union assembled in Saratoga, N. Y., on the 8th inst.

The First Methodist Church at Columbus, Miss., will support a missionary in Brazil. His name is Paul E. Dwyer, and he has already sailed.

Church services are conducted in America in 41 languages. Through the enterprise of the American Bible Society the Word of God has been translated into all of these tongues.

Permission has been given the Epworth Leaguers of the Methodist Episcopal Church in China to become "Epworth Leaguers of Christian Endeavor." Rather a long name, but perhaps it is well enough if it will make for increased fraternity among the young Christians of the Orient.

A beautiful memorial window to Ira D. Sankey will soon be placed in the First Methodist Episcopal Church at New Castle, Penn., the church which he joined in his boyhood. The design is varied and appropriate and inscribed upon it are the lines and music of the great singer's favorite hymn, "The Ninety and Nine."

Dr. S. A. Steel will publish this fall a book on "The Holy Spirit." Rev. H. A. Wood, of Clinton, Mo., to whom he read a part of his manuscript, pronounces it an exceptionally strong and inspiring discussion. Dr. Steel's host of friends throughout the Church will await this new message from his brilliant pen with eagerness and expectancy.

Another minister's son is to the forefront in the "Tarheel State." Mr. Charles W. Tillett, a brother of Dean Tillett of Vanderbilt University, has been elected president of the North Carolina Bar Association. His father was the Rev. John Tillett, a Methodist preacher of the old school. The Raleigh Christian Advocate says that no better selection could have been made.

Rev. James Marvin Culbreth, of Smithfield, N. C., has been chosen Assistant Secretary of the Epworth League, which means also that he will be the Assistant Editor of the Epworth Era. He is a graduate of Trinity College, a B.D. of Vanderbilt University, and was formerly connected with the Correspondence School of the Church. He is considered splendidly qualified for the new position to which he has been called.

Institutional work is going vigorously on at the First Methodist Church in New Orleans. The enrollment in the Industrial School is now 85, and it was recently announced that two additional rooms would be constructed to afford adequate facilities for the clinic, which is to be regularly maintained. Dr. Werlein is proving himself to be quite resourceful in carrying forward the various enterprises which he has projected.

Dr. M. B. Chapman died at his home in Saint Joseph, Mo., on July 2. He was a native of Louisiana, and began preaching when he was sixteen years old. He was at one time Editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, and was a man of scholarship and eloquence. He traveled widely and wrote accounts of his journeyings, which were published in book form and were widely read and admired. He was a Confederate Soldier, and was with Lee at Appomattox. He was 64 years of age.

The statistics of the Methodist Protestant Church, just published by the secretary of their General Conference, show that they have in the United States 188,437 members. In Mississippi they have two Annual Conferences; the Mississippi and North Mississippi; the former having a membership of 3,189, and the latter 589. Their communicants in Louisiana number 3,556. In all, they have 740 parsonages, 2,422 churches, and the total value of all their property is $8,732,761.

Mr. John R. Pepper, banker, merchant, and one of the most widely known and useful laymen in Southern Methodism, has recently given to the public a highly interesting volume, entitled "Thirty Years at the Superintendent's Desk." Fleming H. Revell, of New York, is the publisher, and it is an admirable treatise on Sunday school methods and work. Mr. Pepper is the foremost man in the South in this field of service, and in it has achieved an international reputation. His book deserves a wide circulation.

The Baptists in Italy are also in the very bad graces of the Roman Catholic authorities. The Roman Catholic Bishop of the province of Avellino, in which the recent earthquake took place, declares that the presence of Baptist missionaries in a Catholic country is an intolerable outrage. The Baptists have been in Italy about half a century, and naturally do not see the matter in the same light.

The Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers

MEETS AT SEASHORE CAMP GROUND JULY 21-31.

The Tabernacle at Seashore Camp Ground.

Epworth Lodge, Seashore Camp Ground.

Following is the program of the Seashore Assembly, which will be held at Seashore Campground July 21-31:

Class work: Class in Old Testament, Rev. F. S. Parker, D.D., Editor Epworth Era; Class in New Testament, Prof. Frank Seay, Southwestern University, Georgetown, Tex.; Class in Foreign Missions, "Korea in Transition," text book, Dr. Rawlings, Educational Secretary, Board of Missions; Class in Home Missions, "The Frontier," as text book, Miss Mabel Head, Secretary Woman's Board; Class with the Juniors, Mrs. S. Stuart Brame; Class in League Methods,

Mr. E. P. Peabody, Waycross, Ga.; Class in Sunday school work, Mr. J. B. Green, Opelika, Ala., and Mr. T. V. Ellzey, New Orleans, La.; Class in Missionary Society Methods, Miss Head, Mrs. Brame and Mrs. Watkins.

Afternoons given over entirely to recreation, in charge of a special committee; bathing, fishing, sailing, tennis, etc.

Meals may be had for $5.00 per week and rooms in Epworth Lodge for $2.50 for the ten days; two to the room. For further information, address, J. Bruce Airey, President, Fort Deposit, Ala.

It appears to have been directly due to the inspiration of the priests that the people were roused to the conviction that the earthquake was due to the anger of God toward the people for allowing the Protestant missionary to live among them.—The Christian Guardian.

A LOAN FUND FOR YOUNG MEN AND YOUNG WOMEN WHO WANT TO GO TO MILLSAPS OR GRENADA.

At the Epworth League Conference which was held in Kosciusko in June, a Loan Fund of several hundred dollars was established to help young men through college who are preparing for the ministry and young women who are offering themselves for missionaries or deaconesses. The young men to attend Millsaps, the young women to attend Grenada. Any young men or women who are interested in getting help will please correspond with us at once. The matter is left in the hands of the executive committee. If any individual who reads this wants a part in this noble work by giving, send your amount to Victor Stephenson, Booneville, Miss. The Leagues of the Conference have pledged several hundred dollars. We will have half of the amount in hand by the time the colleges open in September, the other half by February. Any young man who is preparing for the ministry will please write us giving name of his pastor or presiding elder, or any young woman who expects to be a missionary or deaconess and wants help will do likewise.

Signed by Robt. A. Clark, Okolona, Miss.; J. H. Holder, Booneville, Miss.; Walter Boswell, Kosciusko, Miss.; W. E. Kennedy, Columbus, Miss.; Executive Committee of Epworth League work in North Mississippi.

MID-YEAR MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The mid-year meeting of the Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference will be held at Hazlehurst, Miss., July 31 to Aug. 2. Bishop E. D. Mouzon has kindly consented to be present, and deliver two or three addresses. All the presiding elders are earnestly requested to meet with the Board at said date, and every pastor and lay leader in our Conference is cordially invited to attend this important missionary meeting, which we feel sure will prove to be an edifying and inspiring occasion. The pastors and laymen who expect to attend are requested to please notify Brother W. L. Linfield in advance, of their intention to come. W. G. FORSYTHE, President.

M. M. BLACK, Sec'y Board of Missions, Mississippi Conference.

FOR SALE.

The Bicker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location. Includes furniture. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure.

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McClosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec.-Treas.
Geo. A. Hero

Secular News and Comment

It is not expected that any of the postal savings banks provided for by Congress will be opened this year. Uncle Sam generally proceeds with deliberation, as those who have seen him construct a public building will testify.

The tax rolls submitted to the aldermen in New York City on July 5 showed the assessed valuation of realty to be $7,044,192,764, an increase of $237,012,970 over 1909. The personal assessments showed a decrease of $70,076,030.

It has been announced from Washington that the complete figures will probably show that during the twelve months prior to July 1, a million immigrants landed in the United States. The last million year previous to this was in 1907.

The people of Panama are said to favor New Orleans as the place for the exposition celebrating the construction of the canal in 1915. At a recent public meeting of business men held there, a resolution to this effect was adopted by a large majority.

The Hon. J. M. Dickinson, Secretary of War, in an address delivered at Honolulu on July 4, declared it to be the purpose of the United States Government to extend the fortifications of that city and increase considerably the military force maintained there.

The population of the Russian Empire is now computed to be 160,095,200. This is an increase of more than 33,000,000 since 1897. Of the people, 65.5 per cent are Russian, and 86.5 are engaged in agriculture. The urban population amounts only to 13.5 per cent.

The cotton industry continues to develop in East India. The total acreage there is now 20,227,000 acres, which is a gain over last year of 228,000 acres. The yield was 4,502,000 bales, an increase of 911,000 bales. The area which they devote to cotton growing is about 68 per cent of that of the United States, which is now estimated at 33,196,000 acres.

Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, superintendent of the Chicago Public Schools, who a short time since was made a Doctor of Laws by the University of Illinois, has again been highly honored. In Boston on July 7 she was elected president of the National Educational Association, defeating Prof. Z. X. Snyder, of Colorado (who had been recommended by the nominating committee, by a vote of 617 to 336.

A great strike of the garment and cloak makers of New York City began on July 7. Fifty thousand of them, of whom 8,000 were women, quit work on the afternoon of that day. Their demand is that they be required to work only eight hours daily, that they be given better wages, and that the payment of them shall be made more certain. There are in the great American metropolis 1,100 garment factories, which keep busy 100,000 employees, about half of whom belong to labor organizations. The strikers hope, however, through sympathy to secure the co-operation of the non-union workers.

A London Associated Press dispatch bearing date of the 7th inst. says: "Many Americans resident or visiting in London journeyed to Northamptonshire to-day and attended the unveiling of the Benjamin Franklin memorial erected in Ecton Church. Lord Althorp presided at the exercises, which consisted chiefly of historical addresses relating to the life and services of Benjamin Franklin and his English ancestry in Northamptonshire. The whole cost of the memorial was defrayed by Americans, and the principal speech on their behalf was made by Mr. John L. Griffiths, the American consul general in London."

Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller of the United States Supreme Court died at his summer home at Sorrento, Me., at 6 o'clock a.m., July 4. His death, which was due to heart failure, was sudden and unexpected. He attended church, as was his custom, the day preceding, and retired apparently in his usual health the night before. He was in the seventy-sixth year of his age, and had been at the head of the nation's highest court for twenty-two years. He leaves five daughters and no sons. Mrs. Fuller died of heart failure at the same cottage in August of last year. Justice Fuller was an Episcopalian in faith and a Democrat in politics. His long and distinguished career on the bench was a vindication of the judgment of Grover Cleveland, who appointed him when he was little thought of for the place by the general public.

The Hon. Jared Young Sanders, Governor of Louisiana, was elected United States Senator to succeed the late Samuel D. McEnery on July 5th by a practically unanimous vote. He will not, however, resign his office as chief executive of the State until next fall. He is in the forty-second year of his age, having been born near Morgan City, St. Mary Parish, Jan. 29, 1869. He is a self-made man: when he was twelve years old his father died, leaving him at the head of a family of eight brothers and sisters and a widowed mother. He was first a clerk in a store; then he became connected with a printing office, and step by step forged his way upward. In politics he has been uniformly successful, and though his methods have not escaped criticism, he is perhaps to-day one of the strongest men in the State before the people. It is rather a striking coincidence that both he and Senator Murphy J. Foster are from the same parish and town.

The House of Commons by a vote of 383 to 42 passed the measure changing the inaugural oath of the British sovereign. It yet remains to be acted upon by the House of Lords. As amended, the new oath is as follows: "I do solemnly and sincerely, and in the presence of God, profess, testify and declare that I am a faithful member of the Protestant Church as by law established in England, and I shall, according to the true intent of the enactments which secured the Protestant succession to the throne of my realm, uphold and maintain the said enactments to the best of my powers and according to the law." The old form which this is designed to supplant went much more into details: "I do solemnly and sincerely, and in the presence of God, profess, testify and declare that I do believe that in the Sacrament of our Lord's Supper there is not any transubstantiation of the elements of bread and wine into the body and blood of Christ at or after the consecration thereof by any person whatsoever, and any invocation or adoration of the Virgin Mary or any other saint and the Sacrifice of Mass, as they are now used in the Church of Rome, are superstitious and idolatrous."

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By H. P. Lewis, Sr.

CHAPTER XVIII.

In December, 1892, Conference met in Brookhaven, with Bishop Hendrix to preside. At the close of the session I was read out for Caseyville circuit, in Brookhaven District. My presiding elder was R. S. Woodward. It was Monday night when we received our appointments. A brother said to me: "One of your stewards is round here by the organ and wishes to see you." We were introduced, and as he grasped my hand he said: "Brother Lewis, I am so glad you are to be our preacher; let us go to work and have a good time." It was Horace Godbold. I assured him that that was my purpose. He handed me $10, saying: "Do you need this to move?" Before reaching my new work, Uncle Dave McRee gave me $10, and another brother handed me $2.50. Thus I received money from three of my stewards before reaching my work.

I hastened home, got things ready, and in due time had my family snugly fixed in a nice, new $2000 parsonage. I soon found we were among good people. Early in January I met for the first time Dr. Grafton, of the Presbyterian Church. I had preached at Union Church, his home, and he at Caseyville, my home. We met in Homochitto swamp, about midway between Caseyville and Union Church. Somehow, we were looking for or expecting to meet each other. When within about thirty feet of each other, he lifted his hat, and I lifted mine. "Brother Lewis," he said: "Brother Grafton," I responded. "What was your subject to-day?" he said, "Courageousness," was my reply. "An appropriate subject; your people need to be courageous," was his comment. Brother Grafton proved a good friend, and was helpful in many ways. His people called me Brother Lewis, but called him Mr. Grafton.

During my ministry I have been called by "various and sundry" titles. The Jews call me "Reverend;" the negroes call me "Elder;" the Presbyterians, generally, call me "Mister," while the Methodists and Baptists call me "Brother." There are some people who don't know any better, and others because of my age and long standing in the ministry, who call me "Doctor." The profoundly ignorant sometimes call me "Parson," or "Passon," so you see, I am known by many titles.

When we reached the parsonage on Caseyville Circuit, quite a company of people were there to bid us welcome. A nice supper had been prepared for us. After supper, we read some Scripture and had a song and prayer service, after which the crowd disappeared. Upon looking around we found that these good people had left us enough provisions to last for several days.

Early in the year Uncle Dave McRee and some others bought a nice buggy and presented it to the new preacher. A similar noble deed had been done by the good people of the Benton charge. How it helps a preacher for his people to look after his comforts and conveniences!

We stayed two years at Caseyville; had good revivals at each of my four appointments. While in a meeting at Bethesda, on one occasion, some thoughtless young men from the railroad, together with some thoughtless young women, gave us some trouble. Day after day they would take their seats directly in front of the preacher, watch him very closely, listen apparently to what he was saying, watch the effect the preaching was having upon the unsaved, but all in a way that convinced me that they were there to make light and interfere. I endured it the best I could till the morning of the third day. I prayed the good Lord to help me throw a "bomb" among them and run them off. I read the parable of the Sower, and told how the devil used some people to assist in his dirty work among the "wayside hearers." I noticed that Uncle Blue and Brother Horace Godbold were apparently very restless and uneasy. They took in the situation, saw what I was after, and were afraid of the consequences. Horace Godbold said to me afterwards: "I saw the Lord wanted to use you in his own way, while you kept pulling back; till finally you surrendered, was hung up on the wall, while the Holy Spirit was given the right of way." Suffice it to say, the sermon had the desired effect. The disturbers left and never returned. After their departure, we had a good meeting.

It was while we were engaged in this meeting that Sister Horace Godbold received a great blessing. The service had been dismissed for dinner. Brother G. took his dinner box to the table in the church yard and stood there waiting for his wife to come and spread the dinner. I saw that she was too happy to look after the dinner; so I told Brother G. that his wife was in the church too happy to look after the dinner provided for the physical man. In a little while he was in the church rejoicing with his good wife. How delightful it is to see husband and wife, parents and children together, happy in the love of God.

On one occasion, a member of Bethesda Church lost count of the day of the week. On Sunday morning, after breakfast, his wife went about her household duties, while he got his horse and went to his field to work. A neighbor called and found Mrs. E. at work. "Where is your husband?" said the neighbor. "Plowing," was her reply as she went on about her work. The neighbor remarked: "I can work as much on week days as I want to without stealing the Lord's time." The poor woman looked troubled, laid aside her work, sent in great haste to the field and had her husband called in. When I met the brother afterwards, he looked troubled, and said some of his neighbors were talking about churching him for working on the Sabbath day. I assured him he would not be churched, as it was purely accidental.

While at Caseyville, I found some of the laymen of the church so thoroughly interested in the work of the Lord over the whole charge, that they would make their arrangements to attend all the revival services possible all over the work. To have such laymen is a source of great encouragement to the pastor. Laymen who will follow up their pastor with prayers and support him, with their presence in all his efforts to advance the kingdom of God, pray with him and for him in the work he is doing, and back it up with their testimony and personal work, are a blessing in the work of the ministry to be highly appreciated. Among such I found Uncle Blue Godbold, Ben Garret and Horace Godbold, who were ever ready to do all they could to help in every meeting in the charge.

I spent many delightful hours in the homes of the faithful and helpful men of God while I served them as pastor. I shall never forget one visit to the home of Brother Ben Garret, near Union Church, in May, 1895. My wife was with me on that trip, and Brother Horace Godbold was also there. The next morning, Brother Garret handed me the Bible to conduct family worship. I passed it on to Brother Godbold, and he passed it on to Mrs. Lewis. She read a lesson; we sang a hymn; she led in prayer. What a prayer! It seemed to bring us all to the very gates of heaven. After the prayer, it was at least an hour before we could eat breakfast; the power of God was so great among us. This incident happened after I had moved from the charge, but was on a visit back among these good people.

The day of death is better than the day of birth, because death is a higher and nobler birth.—Hugh Macmillan.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER.

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co
INCORPORATED.

The Home Circle

JOHN'S LOT.

John's blue eyes stared out the back window of the long room where he spent the greater part of his life. Beside the boy, propped against the window, was a pair of crutches which told why John lived in the large room. But there was nothing sad in the blue eyes, only a great eagerness, and a rush of red blood surged into the little cripple's pinched face. John was looking at his lot.

"It's my very own. I can do what I please with it and mother won't mind," he said. Then crossing the room with the help of crutches he picked up a bell on the table and rang it, as he always did when he happened to be left alone and wanted something, and he did want something right away.

His nurse, Mary Ann, answered the bell. "Well, and what do you want this morning?" she asked.

"I want to talk to mother," said John. "Will you please ask her to come up as soon as she has time?"

When John's mother appeared, she kissed her boy and sat down beside him—such a beautiful, strong young mother. Then they had an earnest talk, and John told her that a boy friend had said that the idea of a playground for the school children had been abandoned because of insufficient funds. Then he and his mother had a delightful secret. "You'll send word to Fielder to come and bring some others, enough to form a committee," said John, his eyes shining. "I want to see them as soon as possible after school. Let him know it's business, mother." After his mother had gone from the room, back to the window went the little fellow as quickly as his crutches would take him, and that was faster than many boys could run.

A quarter of an hour after school time Fielder and four other boys came into John's room.

"Well, Buster, what's up?" asked Fielder.

John shook hands all around. "It's something fine," he said, answering Fielder's question. "You know I have a lot."

"You old millionaire, you!" said Fielder.

"Come all of you and look at it," said John. He shook his small fist playfully at his friend for calling him a millionaire. "What do you think it'll make?" Before anybody answered, the little cripple cried out: "A playground for the school children, that's what I think, and mother says it's all right. You're to be the committee."

You should have seen the committee, big boys, too, jumping for joy. You should have heard the happy shout that echoed through John's room!

"You're to look after everything and I'm to foot the bills. Mother says it's all right, and nobody else is to know anything about it until it's finished."

The committee went to work with a will, you may be sure. John watched operations from the window. All sorts of arrangements for sport were to be in that playground. John's parents were interested, and the committee was bidden to go ahead and not to spare expense.

Then one day when all was finished the little cripple watched the opening exercises of the playground. The school trustees, many people of the town and all the school children were present.

"I'll never get lonesome any more, mother," he said, his blue eyes turning from the crowd below and resting on his strong, young mother's face. "I wish every cripple boy in the world owned a lot such as mine and could turn it into a playground."

Suddenly two hands were clasped over the blue eyes. "You millionaire, you, who are?"

It was Fielder, of course. With him were the other four boys.

"The committee," said Fielder, "has come to carry the president of the playground all around his lot, my turn is first," and the next minute John was on a broad shoulder, descending the stairs in a hurry.

The young mother kept her place at the window. She heard the wild hurrahs that greeted her boy and followed him all about his lot, and she thought, with happy tears, "God might have given me a stronger son, but He has given me a boy who thinks of others as well as of himself, and I am proud of the good times he has planned for his friends and school-mates."

Three rousing cheers came up to the window; they were for the president of the playground, seated on a strong boy's shoulder.—Louise R. Baker, in the Morning Star.

THE HOME OF "LITTLE WOMEN."

"Well, well, what is the trouble, little sister?" and with deep concern Will Franklin sat down on the divan and tried to gather his weeping sister into his arms.

"Oh, nothing, Billy dear," came the sobbing answer from the pillows, "only I am reading 'Little Women,' and am just where Bert dies and, and—oh, it is so sad, I guess you would cry, too," and up came Virginia's tear-stained face.

"Yes, but I did not invite you to visit me in order that you might waste such a beautiful day as this with a weepy book. How would you like to go see the house where the 'Little Women' lived?"

"What? Did they really live in a house? And can I really see it?" cried Virginia, in astonishment.

"Well, well, which question shall I answer first?" laughed her brother. "Of course, they lived in a house, and right out here, in Concord. That is, the Alcott family lived there, and you know 'Little Women' is the story of their lives. Now as Margaret has taken the children out for a walk, suppose you put on your hat and coat and we will take the trolley out to Concord and be back to tea."

"Oh, that will be splendid!" And down went the book, while Virginia fairly danced off to get ready.

It was a great treat to be able to go somewhere with Brother Billy alone, for he seldom came home until late, and usually on Saturday or half-holidays his children claimed him, so that Virginia looked forward to this little outing with keen enjoyment.

"What a delightful ride it was!" The weather was perfect, and as the car whizzed along, Virginia kept her eyes open to see all there was to be seen.

After various changes and waits, through Arlington and Lexington, the peaceful little town of Concord was finally reached and they left the car at the center of the town.

"We will come again some day," declared Billy, "and then you can see the sights one should, but to-day we have only time to walk to the Alcott house."

As Virginia walked along the path, she could easily imagine Jo and Meg passing the same way, perhaps on their way to school, or making those formal calls which Jo so detested. Or again, as the sound of wheels was heard, Virginia turned her head half expecting to see the old stage drive up and Jo alight with the lobsters under her arm.

"Here you are," said Billy, but it needed no words to tell Virginia that this was the dear little brown house so loved by 'Little Women.' There was the walk leading up to it that Jo used to shovel. There was the old apple tree at the side which did service for many a prancing steed. There, in the rear, stood the old barn where so many tragedies and dramas were enacted before most appreciative, if limited audiences.

But there were no girls now playing 'Pilgrim's Progress' from cellar to attic. No Laurie now came whistling across the garden. All was silent, but the sleepy-looking, dingy house seemed to say, "I hold many secrets within my walls, but I shall always keep them."

"It looks quite deserted now, does it not?" And the two visitors were surprised to find themselves spoken to by still another sightseer—only in this case it was a woman with gray hair.

"Is this your first visit here?" she further inquired, encouraged by Virginia's smile.

"Yes," replied Virginia, "is it yours, too?"

"Oh, dear no," the stranger answered. "I used to go to school in that house whose roof you can just see through the trees. Amy of 'Little Women' used to teach us drawing and painting, and even Jo herself used to come to the school occasionally, but we knew and loved the mother best of all. Many and many a day did we girls slip away from the school and steal over here to the back door where Mrs. Alcott, or Mrs. Marsh, if you prefer, would greet us with a plate of cookies and a pitcher of milk. It was to her that we always came when we were in scrapes, or for comfort when we were homesick, and she was just as dear as a mother to us all as she is to her four girls in her book."

Then came other stories about Meg and Beth and Laurie to which Virginia listened in fascinated wonder.

"Dear me, there come my friends back again, so I must say good-by. Read 'Little Women' over again, my dear, and see how much more you find in it this time. Girls can't read too many of Miss Alcott's books, nor read them too often, either. And with a smile of farewell their delightful acquaintance drove away."

"I do think that this has been just about the best day I ever had," declared Virginia, when they finally went out again at the gate, and she turned for a last look at the house. Think of actually meeting some one who really knew the 'Little Women'! I shall begin the book over again this very night!"

"All right," answered her brother, but please leave out the teary part this time."

And then the conductor called out, "All aboard," and Concord was soon left behind—Mary Richard Berry, in the Comrade.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

Brookhaven, Miss.

OUR SUMMER ANNOUNCEMENT.

Session 1910-11 will begin September 8, 1910. Students will leave home Wednesday, September 7. Our session is divided into three financial terms of twelve weeks each; one-third of session's expenses must be paid at the beginning of each term. Should payments be made one week after the beginning of each financial term, to students rooming in the Johnson Home the charge will be $190 for board, literary tuition, laundry, medical fee, library fee, and lecture fee; and to those students rooming in the Margaret Hall the charge will be $205 for board, literary tuition, laundry, library fee, medical fee, and lecture fee. Unless payments are made within one week at the beginning of each term, eight per cent will be added to the bill. No discount will be allowed to any one in any term unless payments are made in advance. Daughters of ministers will have free literary tuition, and ten per cent discount on board and extras, if payments are made within a week after the beginning of each financial term. Each student will obligate herself on entering to remain the entire nine months, except in case of sickness; she obligates herself to pay the remaining tuition fees. The President at his own expense will have all the buildings put in first-class condition during the summer, spending from two to three thousand dollars. It is very necessary to engage rooms at once, as we have never in the past eight years had so many applications for rooms. Only a few industrial places are vacant. The college throughout a long and worthy history has never had a better faculty than has been secured for session 1910-11. The president takes special pride in announcing the following faculty:

L. W. Cooper, A.M., President.

A. B. Peters, A.B., Vice-president and superintendent of Normal and Preparatory departments.

Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, A.M., Dean of college classes, and professor of Mathematics.

Miss Janie H. Drake, A.M., English.

Miss Claribel Drake, A.B., Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Latin and the modern languages. Professor Claude Bennet, Mississippi College, History.

Miss Bessie Cooper, A.B., Whitworth and Wesleyan Colleges, Science.

Miss Jessie Mounzer, A.B., Whitworth College, Preparatory Department.

Miss Courtney Rouch, A.B., Whitworth College, Tutor.

Art Department—Mrs. Maxie T. Sisk, teachers' certificate Art Academy of Cincinnati, Colarossi and Julian Academies, Paris. Pupil in miniature painting of Mme. Debillement-Chardon, Paris.

Department of Expression—Miss Dubois Elder, A.B., graduate of Curry School of Expression, Boston.

Music Department—Musical Directress and teacher of piano, theory, and musical history, Miss Elizabeth McVoy, graduate of Mrs. Harding from the New England Conservatory of Music, and pupil of Theodore Bohlman of Cincinnati.

Miss Lois Cooper, A.B., Whitworth College, B.M., under Theodore Bohlman of Cincinnati, teacher of piano and theory.

Miss Margaret Kyle, graduate of the New England Conservatory of Music in piano and violin, also teacher at the conservatory for two years; Piano and Violin.

Voice Department—Miss Lucy Shannon, one of the leading Voice Teachers.

Commercial Department and Control of Margaret Hall—Mrs. Jessie Ray Williams.

Monitress, Miss Sophie Cameron.

Housekeeper and Matron of Johnson Home, Miss Willie Williams.

Laundry and Hospital, Mrs. Suddie Burdine in charge.

College Physician, Dr. J. T. Butler.

DOCTOR
Tichenor's
Antiseptic
UNDER A STRAIN

The muscles always become sore and stiff. Delightful and lasting relief is immediately had by applying

Dr. Tichenor's
Antiseptic

Its healing effect is truly wonderful. You can't well be without it. Take a bottle home today.

All druggists 25 and 50 cts.

ASK ANY ONE WHO HAS EVER USED IT

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulter, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murray, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

AN EXPLANATORY LETTER WHICH DOES NOT EXPLAIN.

We publish in this issue of the Advocate a letter from Bishop Hendrix to Doctor Boswell, which to us is a most remarkable communication. But though we radically disagree with the sentiments therein expressed, it is with the utmost reluctance that we undertake the task of commenting upon it. Two things disincline us to do so: a strong aversion to criticising the utterances and actions of a chief-pastor of the Church, and also the fact that we have hitherto cherished an especial regard for its distinguished author. In extenuation of what we shall have to say, we put forward first the plea of self-defense. We were a member of the Committee on Education of the last General Conference, which is blamed for precipitating the present unhappy situation; hence, in our own behalf we claim the right to be heard. And also a sense of duty impels us to express candidly our view of the points raised in the Bishop's letter. Three of the original eight Conferences that founded Vanderbilt University constitute our patronizing territory. As we see it, their rights in that institution are seriously imperiled, and we conceive it to be our duty as far as we can to protect them. And this, until the unfortunate controversy is settled, it shall be our endeavor to do without fear or favor. Where principles so important and interests so sacred are involved, it would be nothing short of treasonable to be controlled by personal considerations.

The Bishop begins his letter by claiming credit for having written nothing bearing on the Vanderbilt question during the past five years of contention. That very silence is one of the things for which we find fault with him and those upon the Board of Trust who share his views. To be sure, there is such a thing as suffering nobly in silence for a good cause, but we fail to see an exhibition of it in the present instance. The Church has desired and earnestly sought to know the views of the controlling element of the body of which the Bishop is president ever since the strife began. She felt that this was her privilege and right, and that in view of the rumors abroad, it was proper and necessary; but nothing definite would these gentlemen give out. Why, for instance, did the Bishop say at Asheville in his letter to Judge O'Rear, concerning the Vanderbilt Commission, "The Board intended both in good faith to accept and be bound by that report, and will doubtless reassert its position in even stronger language at its next meeting; the only point sought to be safeguarded is that the Board keep fully within their rights and duties under the laws of Tennessee"—when since that time, he has stood for the repudiation of the findings of that Commission in every essential particular? Why did he not have the candor to say at the General Conference what he has since said when evasion was possible no longer—that the Board of Trust is a self-perpetuating body—that the confirmatory power which has always been exercised by the Church was without legal basis and subject to repeal, and that if the Trustees were elected, in his judgment, the law would not allow them to be seated? Why did he not then and there openly state that Mr. Vanderbilt had called a halt upon the Trustees, and that they could not without violating the charter accede to the demands which the Church was making upon them? Why did Chancellor Kirkland, with soft and persuasive voice, state in substance in his address before the Committee on Education (when no action had been taken) that he presumed the Board of Trust would likely be disposed to accept the recommendations of the General Conference; that personally he would be inclined to favor so doing—when he has since done everything in his power to thwart the expressed will of the great law-making body of Methodism? No, no; the reticence of these gentlemen is not something of which to boast; it has all along been regarded as ominous, and late developments show that its significance was not misunderstood.

But the Bishop thinks it strange that his assurance that the sole hindrance to accepting in full the findings of the Vanderbilt Commission, was their lack of conformity to the laws of Tennessee, did not end the controversy. We fail to find in the Daily Advocate where he made a statement of precisely that import; but let it go at that. Does he not know that if the representatives of the Church had accepted as satisfactory an assurance so vague as that, it would have left every controverted point wide open and unsettled? Does he not know that we had some idea, vague though it was, of the views of influential members of the Board of Trust as to the legal aspects of the case and of what would result from the dominance of them? Moreover, had we adopted that course, who would have interpreted the meaning of "the laws of Tennessee?" The Bishop in his letter states that "no moot or academic" decision by the courts is possible. Did he expect us by our inaction, virtually to declare for having the findings of the able lawyers on the Commission as to the rights of the Church, supplanted by the constructions of a coterie of private counselors at Nashville? The General Conference may have been lacking in wisdom, but it had more sense than to do that.

But the Bishop says: "We could not violate the laws under which we were incorporated." Certainly not; no one would have him do that. But he admits himself that the law has not yet been determined. Why then should he set the authority of the Church at defiance upon the advice of private attorneys, when the learned jurists of the Commission and other lawyers equally able differ from them? It seems to us, however, that in the execution of such a trust the equity, the moral obligation involved, should outweigh mere legal technicalities. And surely there can be no doubt of the moral and equitable right of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to exercise a controlling influence in the affairs of Vanderbilt University. If there are legal obstructions in the way of this, why have not the Bishop and his associates made an effort to remove them? Are they not now trying to get similar obstacles out of the way that they may be able to segregate the Theological Department? If the attempt can be made in the one case, why not in the other?

Bishop Hendrix quotes Judge O'Rear as saying: "The present method of filling vacancies on the Board of Trust is wise and legal and should be continued." Certainly it was legal, and why? Because the General Conference had authorized and approved it. The decision of the Commission was that the General Conference may either exercise the right of electing the trustees or delegate it. Judge O'Rear called that arrangement "wise" because he thinks as a mere matter of policy it is best not to have a popular body, such as a Conference, to elect the curators of an educational institution.

The statement that Mr. Vanderbilt called a halt on the Board of Trust is a brand new piece of information so far as the public is concerned. It would be interesting to know if his interference was on his own initiative. If we mistake not, Mr. Bradford, the lawyer who gave him information, was one of Chancellor Kirkland's attorneys before the Commission. Mr. Vanderbilt's appearance upon the scene is fixed at three years ago, soon after the adjournment of that body. If he is responsible for what the Board of Trust has done since that time, it would be interesting to know who was the inspirer of their strange actions before.

Col. Harris is represented as saying that the points at issue could only be determined by going to law. Of course, now they cannot. The rebellion of the Board has made that inevitable; that is what Col. Harris meant. But no one thinks more strongly than he that the course of these gentlemen is utterly without justification.

The irenic statement, "We sought together with the General Conference trustees present and participating, some effectual method of securing a decision in the most friendly way," little accords with other representations of the Board meetings. The truth is, if they may be believed, the General Conference trustees were overruled on every point, the discussions were quite spirited, and they left with a feeling akin to indignation at what they had seen and heard. Can it be that Bishop Hendrix has so soon forgotten the great speech of the grand old man of Southern Methodism, Bishop A. W. Wilson? Was there anything peaceful and placid in the ringing protest and challenge which he sounded in their ears?

The Bishop speaks of having "a friendly suit, as far as such a thing is possible." The last words are most properly added. It is not at all possible, as he is already beginning to find out.

His explanation of tabling the Bradfield resolution is wholly unsatisfactory. If ever a resolution was timely, that was. The trustees elected by the General Conference had just been rejected, and the confirmatory power of the General Board of Education—a right which had been exercised in some form by the Church ever since the foundation of the institution—had been repealed. The Board had cut practically every tie that bound it to the Church. The adoption of that resolution would have done more to quiet agitation and make peaceable litigation possible than anything else that could have been done after what had gone before. But it was rejected. The attempted discrimination between "tabling" and "voting down" is a mere splitting of hairs. Let it also be observed that no reason at all is assigned for the revocation of the by-law allowing the confirmation of newly-elected trustees by the Board of Education. The Bishop fights shy of that action.

The expression, "the right of perpetual succession," should deceive no one. It simply guarantees the succession, the permanency, of the Board—that if one set of trustees should die or resign, the powers vested in them would pass to others. There is not a syllable in the charter giving the members of the Board the right to elect their own successors.

But it is said to be the unanimous opinion of the Board that the University is "owned by the whole Church." Chancellor Kirkland took a different position from that before the Commission, and stated "that the owners of the institution are the generation for which they (the Board) have to work, the public at large." We are reliably informed that one of the attorneys of the Board at its recent session "went so far as to hold that the Church never had any interest in Vanderbilt—that the Central University of the M. E. Church, South, had failed entirely, and that Mr. Vanderbilt's donation constituted the foundation of the University bearing his name;" and that their other two lawyers held that the Tennessee Act of 1895, which gives the Church its chief grip upon the institution, is unconstitutional. It should be observed that Bishop Hendrix himself refers to Commodore Vanderbilt as the founder of the University. This does not look to us as if the ownership of the Church in any true sense is left unchallenged.

The Bishop says: "At the proper time the Board will both assert the Church's true ownership and seek the Church's endorsement." Most astounding is this statement! Why destroy the ownership of the Church, if in any essential sense it is to be restored? In what way will they restore it, and when? Will it be when they have established the independence of the Board and have accomplished what they desire? Will it be when, by repudiating the Church, they have obtained vast sums of money from the North, and are on the Carnegie Foundation? Will they then presume to come with some poor crumb of gratuitous concession and ask the Church to continue its support and patronage? Is some such program as this what the gentlemen have in contemplation?

But finally the Bishop says: "Above all, let us have peace." Napoleon, with the most of Europe beneath his flag and the rightful possessions of the surrounding nations in his grasp, wanted "peace." But the Allied Powers gave him the sword. So the Vanderbilt Board of Trust, having repudiated every vestige of church authority, having the institution which Southern Methodism has largely built absolutely in their hands, and moving on to do their own sweet will, plead for "peace." But by the invasion of prerogatives not their own, they have made conflict inevitable. The "peace" which they offer, as John C. Calhoun said of that proffered by the National Government to South Carolina, is "the peace which the kite gives to the dove, which Russia gave to Poland, or death gives to its victim." If the gentlemen want "peace," let them give back to the Church her rights, which through legal technicalities they are endeavoring to usurp, and every war cloud will immediately begin to vanish, and the beautiful rainbow of peace will bend in blessing above our territory from the Potomac to the Rio Grande, and from the surf-beat of the Atlantic to where the western ocean breaks against the Golden Gate.

A GREAT LECTURER.

At the recent session of the Seashore Divinity School, Dr. Gross Alexander delivered a scholarly and inspiring series of lectures on the Gospels of Matthew and John. This was his second course before this body, the other having been delivered last summer, and he won the admiration and praise of all who heard him. A thorough master of the Greek tongue, and perfectly familiar with current philosophical and theological thought, he yet holds to the teachings of Methodism and rings true upon every essential doctrine of Christianity. We trust that Dr. Alexander will find it possible to give Bible studies in many places in the connection. As he conducts them, they are most refreshing, and tend to incite our young ministers to a devout and deeper study of God's Word.

THE OUTLOOK FOR MANSFIELD.

We were pleased when the trustees of Mansfield College did not beat a retreat in the face of the difficulties which confronted them at the close of the last session. Their determination to go aggressively forward under the conditions then existing is worthy of high praise, and a challenge to the Methodists of Louisiana, to which they will surely not fail to generously respond. In the person of Dr. Weber, this institution has a president who ranks with the foremost educators of the South. Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, the field agent, is proving himself to be the right man in the right place. Already provision has been made for overhauling the buildings and improving and beautifying the campus. The outlook for a full attendance of pupils is also said to be most encouraging. The Methodists of the State will find no safer, better place to educate their daughters. Let us, one and all, rally to the support of Mansfield College, and speed it forward upon a career of larger usefulness and prosperity.

THE SEASHORE ASSEMBLY FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

This notable gathering will assemble at the Seashore Campground for a ten days' session on Thursday, July 21. An admirable program has been arranged, and every indication is that the occasion will be one of unusual interest. A list of the distinguished faculty is given elsewhere in this issue, as also other necessary information. We urge all of our young people who possibly can, to attend this school of methods. The surroundings are delightful, and those who feel the need of an invigorating outing will do well to go. It is a rare opportunity for Leaguers, Sunday school workers, and all persons who desire to become more efficient in the Master's service. Let our pastors call attention to this assembly from their pulpits next Sunday, and use their influence to get their young people to take advantage of it. Every one they send will return a more capable laborer in the vineyard of our Lord.

PERSONAL.

The College of Bishops met in Nashville, Tuesday of this week. Their action concerning the Vanderbilt matter we have not at this writing learned.

Rev. S. A. Brown will begin protracted services in the Methodist Church at Como on the third Sunday, July 17. The preaching will be done by Rev. J. H. Mitchell, of Water Valley.

The Haynesville Charge (Louisiana) is making an exceptionally fine record this year. All of the confessional claims have been provided for, and much of the money has already been sent in.

Rev. O. G. Halliburton, of Bogie Chitto, Miss., left last week for British Columbia to wind up the business affairs of his son, who recently died out there. He will probably be gone for some weeks.

Dr. A. J. Lamar, of the Publishing House, and his family are spending the hot season at the Seashore Campground. Genial, affable, and brotherly, Dr. Lamar is a great favorite with the preachers of this section.

The new Dean of the Seashore Divinity School is Dr. F. N. Parker. Rev. H. M. Ellis was elected Book Editor, and Rev. Robert Selby continues to be Chancellor. Wiser selections than these could not have been made.

Report reaches us that Dr. C. W. Carter preached a great sermon a few days since at a missionary rally held at Colquitt. He was in the habit of doing that in the days ago, and we are pleased to know that his "bow yet abides" in strength.

Echoes of the fine work being done by the Rev. E. Nash Broyles at Coffeeville, Miss., continue to reach our office. He is one of the choice young men of the North Mississippi Conference, and we are pleased to hear of the success attending his labors.

Dr. John M. Moore, the new Missionary Secretary for the Home Department, will spend the next six weeks in the West studying conditions along the Pacific Coast. That he may be able to do something to give impetus to the halting work in that difficult field, we earnestly hope.

The Epworth League Union, of New Orleans, met in the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church on Tuesday evening of this week. After the business session a classic concert was given by Prof. and Mrs. Fallberg, of Stockholm, Sweden, which was greatly enjoyed by all in attendance.

Rev. J. M. Carpenter, the new pastor at Mathiston, calls attention to the fact that we were in error last week in stating that he had conducted the singing in revivals held by Rev. W. G. Harbin. He accompanied Brother Harbin as a personal worker, not as a chorister. We were misled by the press dispatches.

We had a delightful visit from our honored brother, the Rev. George Jackson, a superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, on Monday of this week. He is untiring in his efforts in behalf of the Advocate, and is fully authorized to solicit and collect for it. Brother Jackson will attend the Seashore Camp Meeting.

Mr. H. S. Gunn, of Como, Miss., lay leader for the Sardis District, delivered a stirring address on the Laymen's Movement at Holly Springs on Wednesday evening, July 6. Brother Gunn is a hardware drummer, who does not neglect business, but who, as he goes about, is ever intent on doing something to extend the Master's kingdom.

Prof. W. H. Smith, of Durant, Miss., formerly superintendent of the public schools of Holmes County, has entered upon his new duties as supervisor of the elementary rural schools of Mississippi, a work entrusted by the Peabody trustees of that State. Mr. Smith is not only an educator of distinction, but also an exemplary Christian gentleman and a good Methodist.

We greatly appreciate the valuable service rendered the Advocate by Dr. B. F. Jones, of Shubuta, in securing renewals and subscriptions in his charge. Our esteemed brother not only knows how to preach with force and impressiveness, but also how to look after the various interests of the Church in the field under his supervision. We wish there were more like him.

It is our opinion that the discussions of the Epworth League and Sunday school lessons which appear in the Advocate easily rank with the best to be found anywhere. Brothers Coleman, Watkins, and Lipscomb are entitled to much gratitude and praise for the superior service which they are thus gratuitously rendering. They may be assured that their work is appreciated.

Bishop E. E. Hoss is expected to sail for the Orient in a few days. That he will wisely administer the affairs of the Church in those distant fields, needs not to be said. But he will be greatly missed in the home land while he is away. May the great Head of the Church grant journeying mercies to this unselfish, faithful servant, and watch over him with that tender care that never sleeps.

President J. R. Countiss of Grenada College spent Sunday, July the 3d, at Carrollton, Miss., preaching both in the morning and evening. The Carrollton Conservative speaks of his discourses in terms of the highest appreciation. Mr. Countiss is making a fine impression throughout North Mississippi, and the college of which he is the capable head bids fair to have the best opening in its history next September.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, of Haynesville, La., writing a few days since, says: "Our District Conference (Ruston District) was a fine body of men, and seemed to be in the best of spirits. The reports showed progress in all parts of the field. The beloved appears to be in favor with all the brethren. Bishop Murrah was with us throughout the entire session, and gave eminent satisfaction as a presiding officer. As a preacher, he met the expectation of all."

In our issue of last week we stated that the registration at the Seashore Divinity School was above eighty. Those figures were given us over the phone some days before the session ended. The final accounting showed that over a hundred ministers had been in attendance. This is a great showing. We have in hand an interesting report of the work done from the gifted pen of Rev. A. I. Townsley, which we were reluctantly forced for the want of space to carry over until next week.

Bishop Hoss' discussion of the action of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust in last week's Nashville Advocate was all that could be desired. Its tone and spirit are above criticism, and its argument is complete and overwhelming. "It is a crusher, an extingisher, an annihilator." If a single fortification of the enemy is left standing, our field glass fails to disclose it. Those who want to fight that way may assail the Bishop's motive, but it would be more becoming either to meet him in the arena of decorous debate or keep silent.

The Monroe District Conference, which recently met at Lake Providence, is reported to have been an occasion of much interest. Bishop W. B. Murrah, who was expected to be present, was unable to come, being called to Nashville by the meeting of the General Board of Education. The presidency of Dr. S. S. Keener, however, gave great satisfaction, and the business was transacted with thoroughness and dispatch. That section is said to be recovering somewhat from the influence of the boll weevil, and, along with other things, the churches are sharing in the returning tide of prosperity.

We acknowledge the reception of a copy of the minutes of the Nineteenth Annual Session of the Home Mission Society of the North Mississippi Conference, which was held at Columbus, April 2-6. It is a neat pamphlet of 68 pages, and besides an account of the proceedings of the recent meeting, contains a history of the Society since its organization. The address of the president, Mrs. W. W. Scales, Jr., is admirable in every respect. The figures show the work to be in a highly prosperous condition. A more capable band of leaders than those who direct its affairs would be difficult to find anywhere.

A dispatch from Sherman, Miss., to the Commercial Appeal on the 6th inst., says: "Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, closed at this place last night a ten days' revival. The meeting has been one of the most beneficial Sherman ever had. The entire community has been uplifted spiritually. All the denominations manifested much interest during the entire time. The services were held under a tent on the college campus. At the close of the meeting a Methodist Church was organized with forty members. Subscriptions were taken to build a house and steps will be taken to erect a $1,200 frame building at once."

Dr. J. A. Rice was in Asheville, N. C., last Sunday, where he went to address the Young People's Missionary Conference, now in session at that place. In his absence, the pulpit of Rayne Memorial Church was filled at 11 o'clock by Rev. R. W. Vaughan, manager of the Louisiana Orphans' Home, and by the editor of the Advocate at the evening hour.

The Seashore Camp Meeting began Wednesday of this week. Dr. S. H. Werlein, of New Orleans, is in immediate charge of the services. Dr. F. N. Parker and some of the other preachers of the city are in attendance, and lending valuable assistance. Many of the Mississippi Conference pastors are present to aid in the great work. We hope to hear of many souls being born into the kingdom on those historic grounds ere the meeting shall close.

Dr. Alexander Sutherland, the great Canadian Missionary Secretary, is dead. He had been critically ill for weeks, but was reported to be conscious and cheerful up to within a few days of the end. He was well known among the Methodists of the South, and was greatly admired by them. No more eloquent fraternal message was ever listened to by our General Conference than the one which he delivered in Memphis in 1894, to which the lamented Charles B. Galloway made a brilliant and characteristic response. Doubtless these two illustrious leaders have now met again where loftier ministries in wider fields await them.

Rev. R. P. Neblett, of Columbus, Miss., has kindly sent us a list of the Epworth League officers of the North Mississippi Conference, with their addresses. They are as follows: President, Walter T. Boswell, Kosciusko; first vice-president, Miss Nora Evans, Olive Branch; second vice-president, Miss E. Hall, New Albany; third vice-president, Miss May D. Williams, Columbus; fourth vice-president, Victor Stephenson, Booneville; Junior superintendent, Mrs. Theresa Cavin, Okolona; secretary-treasurer, W. E. Kennedy, Columbus; press reporter, Rev. R. P. Neblett, Columbus; Era agent, Miss Joanna Martin, New Albany. District secretaries: Aberdeen, Miss Sylvia Harbour, Okolona; Columbus, Miss Mary L. Green, West Point; Corinth, K. P. Foust, Corinth; Durant, Miss Loyie Clark, Kosciusko; Greenville, Miss Nellie Dunn, Greenville; Oxford, Roy Sissell, Water Valley; Sardis, Miss Maud Atkinson, Olive Branch; Winona, Miss Clara Graves, Ita Bena.

CONCERNING SABBATH OBSERVANCE.

The following resolution was adopted by the Winona District Conference at its recent session at Moorhead, Miss.:

Whereas, the Sabbath is of divine institution and gift, ordained and set apart in the very beginning of time for holy and sacred uses; and whereas, it is one of the organic and chief agencies of the Christian Church, furnishing the only adequate occasion and means for the evangelization and religious culture of the laboring masses of our people; and whereas, the Sabbath is being desecrated by our railroad corporations in the running of extra passenger trains on the holy day and in offering to the traveling public reduced rates, inducing hundreds of people to travel on that day, many of whom might otherwise be induced to stay at home with their families and attend the services of God's Church, and in using many more employees in train service than would otherwise be necessary, depriving them of the rest and pleasant associations of home and Church; be it therefore, resolved

First—That we, the members and visitors of the Winona District Conference, North Mississippi Conference, memorialize the North Mississippi and the Mississippi Conferences to memorialize the State Legislature to investigate its constitutional rights in the premises, and if within its legislative prerogatives to enact such laws as may be necessary to prohibit the running of extra passenger trains and the offering of reduced rates to the traveling public on the holy Sabbath day within the geographical boundaries of our State.

Second—That we request all other religious denominations to join us in this memorial.

Third—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and that all other religious and secular papers throughout the State be requested to give them space and to aid us in any other legitimate way they can to secure such legislation.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND

of FURNITURE that

—Lasts a LIFETIME—

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

Sunday School.

Lesson III. July 17, 1910.

PETER'S CONFESSION.

Matt. 16:13-28.

Golden Text: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Matt. 16:16.

Our lesson takes us to the autumn in the last half of the third year of Jesus' ministry. He and the disciples had come into the "coasts," or environs, of Caesarea Philippi, a picturesque region twenty-five miles from the storied Sea of Galilee, where so many of the Master's most beautiful teachings were given. It was about six months before the crucifixion, and Jesus led the disciples across the Jordan and up its eastern border into "retreat" in the quiet and fertile country at the foot of Mount Lebanon, where he might prepare them for the great crisis at hand, which was to test them as gold is tested.

Jesus' General Questions

"Who do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" The world has had to face that question for eighteen hundred years, and each individual must answer it to his own conscience whether he will or not. There is no one but does homage to Jesus as the perfect man; but that is not enough, according to the lesson. The perfect man claimed more than mere humanity. To the world each individual gives the answer to this question by his life; it is reading your heart-attitude to Jesus as freely as if it were written upon your forehead.

The Answer.

"Some say." Men are seriously and honestly talking about Jesus as never before. This "age of incredulity" has brought the Greatest Thinker and Master Mind into the laboratory of criticism, but the fires of the crucible of investigation have not blackened or harmed his regal quality, and the next age will not be incredulous or faithless. Investigation cannot harm truth. "Some say John the Baptist, some say Elijah, and others Jeremiah." Great names these! Yet they were not great enough to title the majesty of Jesus. Doctor Jowett in "The Quiet Hour" says: "I am impressed with the severity of the popular judgment of Christ. Some thought he was John the Baptist, and others Elijah, and others Jeremiah; and these were all severe men, yet Jesus recalled them by his life and teaching. Is it possible that my conception of the Lord may be too soft and too effeminate? Has my Lord no sword? Has he only smiles and caresses; or has he anger and the whip of small cords? Is he only the Comforter, or is he also the Judge?" This is a wise and keen discrimination made by Doctor Jowett; yet there is one point of just criticism. The Baptist and Elijah were severe men, but not Jeremiah. He was a man of tears. The Jews of Christ's day were inclined, some of them to think of him as the Suffering Servant described in Isaiah 53. In fact, the two greatest human ideals of the Messiah are expressed in this answer. Yet neither of them is sufficient. Jesus not only fulfills but eclipses his prophetic prototypes.

Jesus' Personal Question.

"Who say ye that I am?" The question to the world is one of intellect, the question to the individual is one of heart. It is the individual question that is the important one. Cold intellect alone has never burned away any great wrong; intellect must be vivified by an emotive energy before it can kindle. The heart of the individual is the torch which can set the world aflame. No one can know Jesus and not answer this question; it will not be ignored.

Peter's Answer.

Had the disciples talked this question over before, and was Peter merely expressing the conclusion of all as usual? Or did the quick, responsive nature of Peter give him pre-eminent ability to see new truth? John was the beloved and loving disciple, and if he had not grasped this new conception of Jesus first he later saw its deepest meanings and sweetest possibilities as no other disciple did. Tradition, custom, education had no part in Peter's conclusion. It is not a creed received at second-hand; it did not come from without. His own flesh and blood was against rather than acquiescent in his confession. There is an old saying, "No man is great to his valet," and one who hungered and ate, who became weary and slept, who was the daily companion, was great indeed to impress his followers with his divine nature. It was a "blessed" inward revelation from God.

The Rock on Which the Church is Built.

This eighteenth verse is pre-eminent in Bible literature as a wall of separation between two great churches. The Roman Catholics teach that the "rock" upon which the church was founded was Peter, the man, who was thus designated to be chief among the apostles forever. The Protestant explanation opposed to this explains the "rock" upon which the church is built as being either Christ himself—he being supposed to indicate himself by a gesture when he says "this rock"—or the other equally popular Protestant explanation that the confession, "Thou art the Christ," is the rock upon which the church is to be built. None of these explanations are wholly satisfactory. No Protestant could accept the Catholic view—which is directly opposed to the other Scriptures, where the church is built upon twelve stones, not upon one, Christ being the "chief corner-stone"—but the Protestant view is almost equally unsatisfactory. To make the crucial meaning of a declaration such as this to depend upon a gesture which is not mentioned in the Bible, is to build an argument upon imagination. On the other hand, to build the church upon a confession is opposed to psychology, and is also opposed to the words of Jesus. It is Peter, not Peter's words which is the "rock," as the Greek clearly shows. This writer's view, then, briefly stated, is this: Jesus announces that Peter the confessor is a rock upon which he will build his church; not the only rock, as is seen later, when he includes all the apostles, and later all true Christians; but a rock to be specially honored because the first to appear. Peter was the first to declare from personal experience of Christ's power, that he was the "Son of the Living God." The multitude had called him "Messiah," and the "Christ," and perhaps even "Son of God," on second-hand, external evidence; but Peter here declares his Messiahship and acknowledges his Deity, not because of others' testimony, or because of any reasoning from the prophets; but because of his personal knowledge that Jesus Christ could save as only Jehovah could do. Jesus affirms that this is the foundation of his future church. It is to be built upon persons who have an inner you'll be wanting during your stay a real good drink. Something to quench your thirst to stay quenched.

(Continued on Last Page.)

Next Time You Drive Into Town

Drink

Coca-Cola

No matter how thirsty you are, or how tired you are or how particular you are, you'll like Coca-Cola because it hits that dry spot—relieves fatigue and tickles the palate all the way down.

DELICIOUS-REFRESHING WHOLESOME

Send for Our Free Booklet

"The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells all about Coca-Cola, what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial.

THE COCA-COLA CO.,

Atlanta, Ga.

1-R

Whenever you see an Arrow think of Coca-Cola

The Biggs Treatment

The most successful and best-known method in the South for the cure of chronic ailments. No drugs. If you are afflicted with Paralysis, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Nervous Debility, or some other disease that medicine has failed to cure, write for our free book which tells about all this new and better way.

Ideal climate, home-like conditions, complete sanitarium equipment, low charges, liberal guarantee of satisfaction.

Write to-day for the book and diagnosis blank—both free.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM,
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

"Daddy says Crystal Gelatine is great for kids!"

Makes a perfect dessert for the children. At parties and lawn fetes Crystal jellies are a great favorite with the little folks. They could eat nothing purer or more healthful.

Crystal Gelatine is very economical, one package making two full quarts. Tasteless and odorless—assimilates perfectly with milk or cream. You don't know how tender a jelly can be until you try Crystal Gelatine.

Ask your grocer. If he does not keep it, send us his name and we will send you a free sample package.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.

121A Beverly St.,
BOSTON, MASS.

THE VOTAN LINE

comprises a tea and coffee, each supreme in its respective field, each characterized by exquisite quality, distinctive flavor, palate-delighting tang and dainty packing.

VOTAN COFFEE is a special importation from Central America and Southern Mexico, where the world's highest grade coffees are now produced, straight to New Orleans, one of the world's greatest coffee importing ports—a city long famous for its good coffee. And there, in one of the most modern, sanitary and perfectly equipped establishments of the kind in the country, Votan Coffee is sorted, selected, cleansed, blended, roasted and packed with all the care, skill and science known to human experience.

We offer the VOTAN LINE to the consumer as embodying the very ultimate degree of coffee and tea perfection; and our guarantee of money refunded if it fails to please, stands back of every can and cannister.

VOTAN TEA, like Votan Coffee, is the best to be had. It is a skillful blend of the most superior and satisfying teas grown. Its very appearance is an indication of its quality,—leaves full, clean and free of dust. When brewed it is of crystal-like clearness, handsome to look upon. Its taste and mildly stimulating properties are all that the most fastidious can desire.

There is an exclusive agent in your town (if not, write to us).

The Votan Tea & Coffee Co.
NEW ORLEANS, U. S. A.

SOUTHERN SEATING
and
CABINET COMPANY
Manufacturers
HIGH GRADE CHURCH FURNITURE

Largest and Oldest Makers of Church Furniture in the South
Jackson, Tennessee.

BLUMYER BELL
CHURCH BELLS
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE.
OUR FREE CATALOGUE TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

Obituaries.

Sister ANN ELIZABETH ELLIS was born near Somerville, Ala., Jan. 30, 1827, and died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Ramsey in Corinth, Miss., May 18, 1910. Her maiden name was Ann Elizabeth Surratt. She was married to the Rev. W. E. Ellis, a member of the North Mississippi Conference, Oct. 13, 1847. She leaves three daughters, Mrs. W. H. Ramsey and Mrs. R. P. Boggs of Corinth, and Mrs. Nellie Johnson, wife of Rev. Eugene Johnson, of Eupora, Miss. She professed religion and joined the Methodist Church early in life and has been a useful and consistent member of the same all these years. She was a devout Christian in the home and in society as well as in the church. She had been a sufferer for a lengthy period, but she bore her sufferings as only a true Christian could. She was a good woman and mother. She was always ready and willing to render assistance to the sick and sorrowing, and her many kind deeds will be remembered here around Rienzi, where the greater portion of her life was spent and where she administered to so many persons. The writer of this has known Sister Ellis all of his life. When he was an infant and his mother was on her death bed, it was Sister Ellis who waited on her and looked after the babe, giving him nourishment from her own breast. She has always felt like a mother to me, and I loved her for her kindness to my own mother and for her love for me and the interest she has always taken in me. She was a good woman and has gone to her reward. She was laid to rest by the side of her husband in the Rienzi cemetery, May 18, there to await the resurrection. Weep not, dear relatives and friends. She is not dead, but sleepeth, and some sweet day we will see her again. "Blessed are they that die in the Lord."

HARDY W. REES.

HARDY DUNCAN, MCKENZIE was born near Cayuga, Hinds County, Miss., July 23, 1877, and died in a sanitarium at Vicksburg, Dec. 14, 1910. For a number of years young McKenzie was the efficient manager of the McKenzie Mercantile Company, of Roosevelt, La. Strict integrity was the character which most attracted and held his friends and companions to him. He joined the Methodist Church when a mere boy. As a member of the church, he had profound respect for his vows. A gentleman who knew him, speaking to the writer of this, said that in the midst of prevailing vice, the young man was noted for high morality and most honorable conduct; and that he knew of few whose lives were as clean and blameless. One writing to his mother, says, "The shock which has brought an overpowering weight of sadness to your aged life, calls out my own and many friends' sympathy." To all whose good fortune it was to know him, this world was better for his kindly presence. In my own life, I shall in vain seek for the comforting joy of a like acquaintance. Far beyond your circle, the sympathy of legions of friends extends. The charm of his earnest character and steadfastness of his personality won the respect and esteem of all whose life he touched. The mother and friends of such a young man will "not sorrow as they who have no hope." And so, in the dawn of the eternal day, they "pressing the dewdrops from heaven's heather," shall meet him with the foremost. Our sympathy to the mother and loved ones and with it a prayer for the infinite grace of God, to them all.

G. H. GALLOWAY.

AGENTS WANTED.

WANTED—Good men and women agents at once for "Roosevelt's Famous Hunt for Big Game," also for "Traffic in Girls." Immense sellers. Price, $1.50, 50 per cent commission. Outfit free. Send 15c for mailing. Both outfits 25c. Also district managers for easy payment installment plan. Permanent work. $2,000 to $5,000 per year profits. Particulars free. Address, A. B. Kuhlman Company, Chicago, Ill. 7616.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US
WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street,

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

J. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Richl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd.,
JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. NEW ORLEANS
D. C. Godfrey Optician.

Here Is Power You Can Depend On

KEEP ahead of your work and get things done more rapidly, easily and at less cost by using an I H C gasoline engine. Until you install one of these engines you are not getting all the profit you deserve from your farming operations. It solves the "help" problem. It is the most economical worker on the farm. At any hour of any day or night it is ready to operate the cream separator, the pump, the grinder, the saw, fanning mill, shellér, huller, grindstone, washing machine, lighting system,—any one of many such jobs.

Thousands of farmers have come to depend on this most reliable of helpers, an

I H C Gasoline Engine

Made in Different Styles and Sizes to Suit Every Man's Needs

The I H C line of engines is the most popular on the farm because they are so simple in construction. No previous experience is needed to operate them with complete success. Besides, they develop the greatest power possible from every gallon of gasoline.

Equip a power house at low cost. It will be the biggest paying investment you ever made. Or get a portable engine mounted on trucks or skids.

A pumping engine will solve the wind and water problem; a spraying outfit will enable you to protect your fruit from disease, worms and blight; a sawing outfit will lighten your labor, and a plowing outfit will save your time and horses. Get one, and learn its labor-saving qualities.

There are many styles and sizes, from 1 to 25-horse power—an engine for every section and every problem. Vertical and horizontal (both stationary and portable.) Also gasoline tractors—first-prize-gold-medal winners—the best all-round farm tractors.

Call and take up the matter with our local agent in your town, or write direct for catalogue and further information.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY OF AMERICA

(INCORPORATED)
CHICAGO U S A

THE
I-H-C LINE

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also. COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.
1300-1302
DRYADES STREET.
PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

VISIT MINERAL WELLS
—FOR—HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND
WEST TEXAS
—For—
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS.
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,
General Passenger Agent.

DALLAS ——— TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a.m.
Instead of at 9:20 a. m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p. m.

FOR
NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW ON SALE.

A CORRECTION.

I notice in the secretary's report of the Shreveport District Conference that I am represented as the financial agent of Mansfield College. This is erroneous. I am financial agent only in the sense that I have assumed the financial responsibility of tearing down the three-story portico and erecting a new one in its place. This I did on my faith in God, and my friends in Louisiana. And so, if any of my friends desire to aid me in meeting this obligation, I am in a state of receptivity, and a check or postal order will reach me at Mansfield, La. Cordially, J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

Marriages

May 29, 1910, in Rolling Fork, Miss., by Rev. E. H. Mounger, D.D., Mr. J. R. WEISINGER and Miss DOROTHY PATTERSON.

June 6, 1910, in Rolling Fork, Miss., by Rev. E. H. Mounger, D.D., Mr. GREEN M. BAGGETT and Miss GEORGIA UNDERHILL.

June 19, 1910, at the home of the bride's parents, near Golden, Miss., by Rev. E. C. Sullivan, Mr. H. O. STON, L. GILLESPIE and Miss OLAR A. EPPS, both of Tishomingo County, Miss.

IMPORTANT ADVANCE IN MEDICAL EDUCATION.

Probably the most important event of the past decade in medical circles is the union of two of the largest and most important Southern Medical colleges—the University of Nashville, and the University of Tennessee, at Nashville, Tenn. The former was established away back in 1850, and the latter in 1876. The combined school has nearly 8,000 graduates. The new institution numbers fifty-one teachers in its faculty, offers twelve practical laboratory courses, and affords its students practical hospital work to the amount of approximately 1,055 hours for each student.

Students from all parts of America and from foreign countries but especially from the South, are in attendance. Diseases most common to the South are especially emphasized in the course of study, and the advanced students (third and fourth years) spend approximately three hours each day, for two whole sessions, in the hospitals and dispensary examining patients, making diagnoses, watching the effect of treatments and operations. A very attractive feature of the training given the students is that each student must serve a term as interne in the hospital during his last year in college. This hospital training is of inestimable value to the student in after years. It gives him a practical familiarity with diseases, diagnosis and medical and surgical methods of treatment that cannot otherwise be obtained.

Students and parents may obtain catalogue and bulletins giving full information as to expenses and the educational requirements necessary for entrance by addressing E. F. Turner, Registrar, 632 Second Avenue South, Nashville, Tenn.

The Late Henry W. Grady and the Constitution.

Every Southerner knows the high standing of the Atlanta Constitution, the leading paper in the South. And the late editor of it, Henry W. Grady, was one of the South's noblest sons. Mr. Grady was renowned for his frankness in stating facts and he was just as severe in condemning that which was wrong as he was in praising what was right. As a resident of Atlanta, he naturally heard of the work being done in that city by Dr. Woolley for the cure of persons addicted to the use of whiskey and opium. Mr. Grady investigated and when he had satisfied himself that Dr. Woolley's cure was a genuine one, he came out in an article in the Constitution and said, so, Dr. Woolley's Book on "Opium and Whiskey Habits and their Cure" contains this endorsement. If you address Dr. Woolley, No. 21 E. The Victor Sanitarium, Atlanta, Ga., you may have a copy free.

The Mississippi Conference Training School MONTROSE, MISS.

This School has the largest and most competent Faculty in its history. Our pupils are prepared for Sophomore Class in high-grade Colleges. Our Musical Directress is in a Northern Conservatory, adding to her already splendid equipment for Piano and Voice Culture. We will build a Mission Hall on the School Campus, and have added the subject of Missions to our Curriculum. Our rates for board and tuition are reasonable.

Write for catalogue to

Rev. WALDO W. MOORE, A. M., President.

ALABAMA POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE.

Only School of Technology in Alabama. 64 Professors and Instructors. 20 Well Equipped Laboratories.

CHAS. C. THACH, M.A., LL.D., President
AUBURN, ALA.

Session begins Wednesday, September 7th, 1910. Location high and healthful, 526 feet above sea level. Attendance 751 students from twelve States and three foreign countries.

COURSES OF INSTRUCTION:

Nine four-year degree courses: MINES, ENGINEERING, CHEMISTRY, (1) Mining, (2) Civil, (3) Electrical, (4) Mechanical, (5) Architecture, (6) Chemistry and Metallurgy, (7) Pharmacy. Forty-one professors and instructors. New machines and equipment in all laboratories. Students hold leading technical positions in Birmingham District and throughout the South. First course of Architecture established in the South. (8) HISTORY, LATIN AND MODERN LANGUAGE COURSE, English (4 years), Latin, History, French, German, Mathematics, Physics and Astronomy, Political Economy, Social Psychology. Thirty-seven professors and instructors. (9) AGRICULTURE, HORTICULTURE, AND FORESTRY. Fifty-three professors and instructors. (10) 3-year course in Pharmaceutical Chemistry, Ph. C. (2) 2-year course in Pharmacy, Ph. G. (3) 2-year course in Veterinary Medicine, D.V.M. (4) New Dining Hall, also board in private families. (5) New Engineering Hall in course of construction. (6) New Library Building. (7) New Agricultural Hall. (8) Water Works and Electric lights. For catalogue and further information address the President.

SOUTHEASTERN DENTAL COLLEGE

This school offers the advantage excelled by no other school. Excellent building, superb equipment and strong faculty. Individual instruction given each pupil. Session opens Oct. 3rd. For catalogue, address

DE. C. L. STOCKS, Dean, 427-8 Austell Bldg. Atlanta, Ga.

The Woman's College of Shreveport.

A high-grade College for Girls and Young Ladies. Ideal location. Steam heat. Modern improvements. Non-sectarian. Faculty of specialists. College and Preparatory Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Session begins Wednesday, September 21, 1910. Write for catalogue. GEORGE L. HARRELL, President, Shreveport, La.

Furniture for School Rooms, made in the South, of Southern wood, by Southern people, with Southern capital. New factory—one of the best equipped in America, employing skilled labor only.

Lowest Prices—Advantageous Freight Rates. We make Desks, Seats, Teachers' Desks, Book Cases, Library Tables, Magazine Racks, etc. Write for illustrated catalog and price list. Address W. A. PRICH & SON, West Jackson, Miss.

CHAMBERLAIN-HUNT ACADEMY Port Gibson, Miss.

Reduced Rates—$180.00 pays all Expenses

This includes board, tuition, light, fuel and all fees—NO EXTRAS. Port Gibson is located among the highest hills of the State—exceptionally healthy and free from malaria. Military features added. Competent experienced instructors in every department. Modern up-to-date equipment. Splendid discipline. Beautiful campus, athletic fields and gymnasium for physical development. Here, the boy is thoroughly instructed, morally, mentally and physically.

Catalog giving detailed information will be sent upon request—it tells you things you ought to know before sending your boy off to school. CHAMBERLAIN-HUNT ACADEMY, Box 900, PORT GIBSON, MISS.

Ward Seminary Nashville, Tennessee

FOR GIRLS AND YOUNG WOMEN

46th year. Seminary and Special Courses. Conservatory of Music—Emil Winkler, Director. Signor Campobello, Voice; Fritz Schmitz, Violin. 175 Boarding Pupils. Complete appointments. City advantages. Beautiful campus for outdoor sports. For catalogue address J. D. BLANTON, President.

VACATION DAYS!

CERULEAN SPRINGS, - CERULEAN, KY.

The ideal place to spend your vacation any time in the year. The one fascinating place that turns "Vacation Dreams" into "Delightful Realities."

Skating, fishing, trap and target shooting, bowling, riding and driving. Modern, up-to-date hotel, surrounded by a beautiful forty-acre park. High, healthy and cool. Malaria and mosquitoes unknown. Seasonable vegetables fresh from our own gardens. Water strongly impregnated with sulphur, chloride of lime, soda, bi-carbonate of lime and free sulphuretted hydrogen, rendering its curative powers most effective, creating a hearty appetite and benefiting the entire system.

SEND FOR CATALOG AND RATES.

CERULEAN SPRINGS HOTEL COMPANY.

Cerulean, Ky.

EDUCATIONAL.

Port Gibson Female College,

PORT GIBSON, MISS.

First session opens Sept. 14th. Literature, music, art, elocution, stenography, bookkeeping, sewing. Physical culture and chorus work free. Special attention given health and morals. Confers degree of A.B. Preparatory department. Students can reduce expenses by taking duties. For catalogue, address
REV. H. G. HAWKINS, A. B., Pres.

Whitworth College.

Twenty carefully selected teachers and officers. More than two hundred students last session. A most excellent literary course leading to the degrees of L.B. and A.B. Departments of Music, (including piano, violin and voice culture), expression, art, commerce.

Next Session begins Sept. 8, 1910.

For Catalogue, address,

WHITWORTH COLLEGE
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

RANDOLPH-MACON ACADEMY

For Boys and Young Men. Fits for college, scientific schools of business. Work endorsed by over 30 colleges and universities. Beautiful and healthful location. Athletic grounds, gymnasium. Terms only $230. No extras. For catalogue, address E. SUMTER SMITH, Principal, Bedford City, Va.

Campbell-Hagerman College

Resident school for girls and young women. Board and tuition, $300. New buildings. Every convenience. English College Preparatory, Junior College Courses. Music, Art, Expression. Physical Culture. Students the past year from 16 states. For year book apply to.
G. P. SIMMONS, Associate President.
LEXINGTON, KY., 437 West Second St.

The Randolph-Macon System

Endowed Colleges

Correlated Schools

Educates men and women, boys and girls not together but in five separate institutions under one management. The combination enables us to offer the best advantages and do

Save Time and Money

For particulars, address, stating age and sex of student.
Chancellor WM. W. SMITH, A. M., LL. D.
College Park, Lynchburg, Va.

Vanderbilt University

NASHVILLE, TENN.

1007 STUDENTS 100 TEACHERS
CAMPUS OF 80 ACRES

New College Hall and Chemical Laboratory Just Completed

Expenses low. Literary courses for graduates and undergraduates. Professional courses in Engineering, Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, Theology. Send for catalogue, naming department.
J. E. HART, Secretary.

Belmont College

For Young Women, Nashville, Tenn.
IRA LINDRITH, D. D., LL. D., President
MISS HOOD and MISS HERON, Principals
College and Preparatory Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Modern Languages, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Matchless location. Athletics, Horseback Riding. Register now. For catalogue, address placed anywhere, attracts and kills all flies. Neat, clean, ornamental, convenient, cheap. Lasts all season. Can't spill or tip over, will not soil or injure anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers or sent prepaid for 20c.
BELMONT COLLEGE, Box 7.

DAISY FLY KILLER

HAROLD SOMERS
150 De Kalb Ave.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

CALENDAR

Seashore Camp Meeting, Seashore Camp Ground, July 13-20.

Seashore Assembly for Christian Workers, Seashore Campground, July 21-31.

Gulf States School of Methods for Sunday School Workers, Seashore Campground, Biloxi, Miss., Aug. 11-14.

Palmer Creek Campmeeting, near Wortham, Miss., Sept. 23-Oct. 3.

Hattiesburg District, Lucedale, Miss., July 14-17.

Crystal Springs Camp Meeting, Crystal Springs, Miss., Aug. 5.

CRYSTAL SPRINGS CAMP MEETING.

This camp meeting begins Aug. 5 and continues eight days. The preachers of the Brookhaven District and of the Conference are invited to come and help make it a great occasion.
JAS. G. GALLOWAY, P. C.

Baton Rouge Dist.—Third Round.

Wilson, at Pine Grove, July 16, 17
Clinton, at Clinton, July 17, 18
Amite, July 19
Kehwood, July 20
Mr. Hermon, July 21, 22
Franklington, at Angie, July 23, 24
Bogalusa, July 24, 25
St. Francisville, at Tunica, July 30, 31
Ponchatoula, Aug. 6, 7
Baker, at Deertford, Aug. 13, 14
Zachary, at Ethel, Aug. 20, 21
Baton Rouge, Second Ch., Aug. 21, 22
E. Feliciana, at C. G., Aug. 26
Pine Grove, at C. G., Aug. 26
Tickfaw, at Red Oak, Sept. 3, 4
Baton Rouge, First Ch., Sept. 5
Pt. Vincent, at Huffs Ch., Sept. 10, 11
Pon. Sps., at Palmetto, Sept. 17, 18
Hammond, Sept. 18, 19
New Roads, Sept. 24, 25
C. C. MILLER, P. E.

Brookhaven District—Third Round.

Summit, at E. McComb, July 16, 17
La Branch and Fernwood, at La Branch, July 17
Monticello, at Bahala, July 23, 24
Hazlehurst, July 31
Gallman, at Old Crystal Springs, Aug. 6, 7
Crystal Springs, Aug. 9
Topisaw, at Topisaw, Aug. 13, 14
Silver Creek, at S. C., Aug. 20, 21
Wesson, at W., Aug. 28, 29
Bogue Chitto and Norfield, at Bogue Chitto, Sept. 3, 4
Prentiss, at Santee, Sept. 10, 11
Buford, at Sandy Hook, Sept. 16
Tylertown, at Tylertown, Sept. 17, 18
Pearlhaven, at Pleas Grove, Sept. 25, 26
Brookhaven, Sept. 25, 26
J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

IT'S THE LITTLE THINGS THAT COUNT.

A cut, bruise, pimple, or slight eruption of the skin, very often develops into a serious case of blood poison. It is a very risky thing to allow a sore of any kind to go unattended, but care must be taken to see that the cure is no worse than the disease. In the year 1820 a discovery was made by Dr. W. F. Gray, of Raleigh, N. C., an able and studious physician, of a preparation that counteracted all diseases of the skin. This preparation was perfected and named after its originator—Gray's Ointment—and it is considered to-day by thousands of eminent physicians in this and foreign countries to be the safest and most effective cure for boils, bruises, burns, cuts, carbuncles, felon, poison oak, blood-poison, rheumatism, or sores of any nature. Gray's Ointment can be had at your druggist's for 25c per box, and to prove its merits, we will send a sample box free of cost upon request. Address: F. W. Gray & Co., 509 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn.

You reap what you sow, not something else, but that. An act of love makes the soul more loving. A deed of humbleness deepens humbleness. The thing reaped is the very thing sown—multiplied a hundred-fold. You have sown the seed of life, you reap life everlasting.—F. W. Robertson.

Produces Strength for Work—Horsford's Acid Phosphate

It perfects digestion, builds up the strength of the nerves and builds up the general health.

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.

Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Courses. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE.

THE OLDEST COLLEGE FOR WOMEN IN AMERICA—THE RECOGNIZED STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE FOR THE WHOLE SOUTH—NOTABLE PROGRESS AMONG SOUTHERN INSTITUTIONS.

Splendid plant—worth $350,000—with all modern comforts, on an eminence in the best residential district in Macon. $200,000 now being raised for improvements and endowment.

One of less than a half dozen colleges for women in the South on a full fourteen units basis. Courses leading to A. B. and B. S. degrees. Faculty of thirty-nine officers and teachers. Nearly 3,000 alumnae throughout the Nation. The Wesleyan diploma is the highest academic honor open to a woman in the South.

THE CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, employing fourteen officers and teachers, is the Mecca of artists and those preparing to teach. Schools of Art and Expression at the same high standard. Diplomas and teachers' certificates are conferred.

The moral and physical health of Wesleyan young ladies is safeguarded at every point. The discipline and training are non-sectarian, but Christian to the core. Wesley's high aim is to send out young women of genuine Christian culture. Health is not without a parallel. Serious sickness has been rare, and no fatal case has occurred at the college in many years.

Not within reach of all. The College is not conducted for money making, but to bless the world. Apply for catalogue and information in detail to REV. W. N. AINSWORTH, D. D., President, Macon, Ga.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jackson, Tenn.

Next School Year begins Wednesday September 14. Every facility offered for a thorough education for girls and young women. All departments taught, including besides regular Classical and Literary Courses—Music, Art, Expression, Stenography, Typewriting, Business course, Etc. Charges reasonable. For catalogues, etc., apply to

REV. A. B. JONES, Jackson, Tenn.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute is one of the oldest female colleges in the South having been chartered in 1843. The college has 250 attendants and 125 of them are boarding pupils.

Parents desiring to send their daughters to school should write for a catalog of

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Which has a record of high grade work for half a century, maintaining a faculty of specialists in the schools of literature, Mathematics, Science, Languages, Music, Art, and Expression. Beautiful location in most healthful town in State of Virginia. For full information write REV. S. D. LONG, President, Ashington, Va.

THE TEXAS DENTAL COLLEGE

HOUSTON, TEXAS

THE SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION BEGINS OCTOBER 4th, 1910.

Offers to the prospective dental students unsurpassed clinical advantages and being facilities for the study of the most modern and up-to-date dentistry. Ideal winter climate. Reasonable living expenses, and the most wholesome surroundings.

For full information and catalogue, address the secretary, CHAS. H. EDGE.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

A home school for girls, 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful hill country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue.

Address, Pres. H. E. BROWLEE,

CLINTON, LA.

Irrigated Land

In the Best Fruit and Alfalfa Valley in America

Is now open for settlement at Fort Stockton, Tex. Richest soil in Pecos Valley. Limestone formation, (no gyp) natural flow of pure spring water exceeding 55,000,000 gallons per day for irrigation and domestic use. Irrigation system completed and in full operation. No more waiting for water. Assured profits of $100 to $1,000 per acre, no drought, no crop failures; finest all year round climate in the United States; altitude 3,050 feet above sea level.

Natural Location for Largest City of Southwest Texas

Fort Stockton is county seat of Pecos County and important division point on the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railway, now building into Fort Stockton. Has 36,000 acres of the finest irrigated land (the same as on) adjacent to town. Population now 1,000, will soon be a city of from 10,000 to 15,000. Greater opportunities for home-seekers and investors than were offered in the older irrigated districts, where orchards are valued at from $2,000 to $5,000 per acre. Those who have investigated irrigated districts of New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, etc., say this is the finest body of irrigated land they ever saw.

This is one irrigation project where the water supply has not varied in 50 years; where every drop of water used for irrigation is good to drink and where there is water in abundance for every acre of land that is irrigable. Choice locations open to those who investigate now. You cannot afford to buy land anywhere without seeing Fort Stockton. Low rate excursions the first and third Tuesdays of each month. Write for full particulars today.

REFERENCES: First National Bank, Kansas City, Mo.; 1st State Bank, Fort Stockton, Tex. Prospectus, map and illustrated folder describing these lands mailed free to all who address

Fort Stockton Irrigated Land Company
651 Fidelity Trust Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.

WANTED Morphine, Whiskey and Tobacco Addictions to cure in ten days by our Painless Method. Fee can be kept in possession of patients until cure is effected. Sanitarium of thirty rooms equipped with all latest conveniences. Patients who cannot visit Sanitarium can be cured privately at home. References: Any Banker, Minister or Physician of Lebanon. Booklet of particulars sent free.

CEDARCREFT SANITARIUM, Box 735, Lebanon, Tenn.

BABY SAVED HER

"I was sick for three years," writes Mrs. Nollie Jones, of Russellville, Tenn. "I had a doctor and took medicine regularly, but grew worse, until last spring I was past going out and was just skin and bones.

"One day I noticed my baby playing with one of your Ladies Birthday Almanacs. I picked it up and from it learned of your Wine of Cardui.

"I have taken 4 bottles of Cardui and am well and hearty. Weigh 145 pounds. I believe Cardui saved my life and I hope all women who suffer as I did will try it."

Cardui is a pure, vegetable medicine for women. It has been found to relieve or cure nervousness, headache, backache, pain in the side and other female ailments.

If you are suffering, try Cardui at once. Thousands of letters come to us, from grateful women who have found relief in Cardui. If it has done so much for them, it surely will help you—just one more. Try it.

All reliable druggists sell Cardui, with full directions for use inside wrapper.

N. B. We will be glad to send you one of our Ladies Birthday Almanacs, if you will send postal card, asking for it. Address: Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

Rider Agents Wanted

In each town to ride and exhibit sample 1910 bicycle. Write for Special Offer. Finest Guaranteed $10 to $27 with Coaster Brake and Puncture Proof tires. 1912-1913 Models $7 to $12 all of best makes. 100 Second Hand Wheels All makes and models. $3 to $8 good as new. Great FACTORY CLEARING SALE We ship on approval without a cent deposit, pay the freight and allow TEN DAYS' FREE TRIAL. Tires, coaster brake rear wheels, lamps, sundries, half usual prices. Do not buy till you get our catalog and offer. Write now. MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. M. 26, Chicago.

Tidings from the Field

Okolona, Miss.:

Dear Brother Meek: The Okolona Circuit is in fairly good shape. We have five Sunday schools, two prayer meetings, one Woman's Home and one Foreign Mission Society, all doing good work. Our District Conference was quite a success. Bishop McCoy's presence was an inspiration to the brethren. We were delighted to have him with us.—M. A. Burns, P. C.

Branch, La.:

Much interest was taken in the "Children's Day" which was observed in Branch, La., at the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Sunday morning, June 12. A large crowd was present and the program which had been gotten up by Miss Hester, one of the teachers, was very much enjoyed. The children, who had been perfectly drilled, performed their parts without a break. After the program had been gone through with, Dr. A. B. Childs, of Church Point, gave a very interesting talk on the benefits of a Sunday school. Before dismissing the school, Rev. H. B. Vandenburg arose and thanked the teachers who had worked so earnestly and the children who had so perfectly performed their parts, and told them how the performance had been enjoyed.—G. C.

Booneville Circuit, North Miss. Conf.:

Dear Brother Meek: Children's Day was observed at Blackland Methodist Church, June 12. The program was very good for the length of time the children had to practice in. The committee was composed of Sunday School, Mission, and Epworth League ladies. Brother Shearer, our pastor, is moving things. We have a good Sunday school, missionary society and Epworth League at Blackland. We also had with us Brother Frank Ray, our district lay leader, who delivered us an excellent address on missions. If our membership would all take the Advocate and read other good literature on missions, Tom Watson's doctrine would be as sounding brass. In the afternoon, Miss Mattie Reynolds made a very fine talk on the work of the missionary societies. Among many true things she said, one was that in every Sunday school lesson is taught the spirit of missions. How can anybody oppose missions?—L. T. Carpenter.

Buford, Miss.:

We have just closed a seven days' revival at Sandy Hook, Miss., it being the first one that we have held on the Buford circuit. Brother J. M. Alford, of Bogalusa, La., did the preaching, coming to us on Monday, June 20, and staying till Sunday night, June 26, when the meeting closed. Brother Alford is a man worthy of the high calling of God. He preached with great power and the Holy Spirit was with us during the entire meeting. We believe that every member of our church received a great blessing out of the meeting. Ten members were added to our faithful little band, nine on profession of faith, and one by certificate. The good Baptists were exceedingly faithful to us all during the meeting, and they, too, received a great blessing. My people believe in bringing the little children to Christ that he might bless them; fourteen babies were christened. Our church at Sandy Hook is now only about fifteen months old, being organized last year through the efforts of the pastor. Our people have lately purchased an organ for the church and are going to paint the church building in a few weeks. Brethren, I have six more revivals to hold on the Buford Circuit; pray for me, and that our revivals may be what God would have them be. I realize as the days go by the great responsibility that rests on me as a weak servant of the Most High.—Jasper L. Smith.

Think what it means to you and your family to have in your home the

Edison Amberola

Compare the external beauty of the Amberola with that of the highest grade piano, and you will find it even more charmingly designed and just as beautifully finished. Consider the lifetime of study required to become a proficient piano player. You need no musical training whatever to enjoy the Amberola.

Now compare the Amberola with a player-piano. Anyone can operate a player-piano, but when all is said and done, it gives you nothing but piano music. The Amberola gives you all the best music of all kinds—Grand Opera, Orchestra, Band, Sacred Music, Songs and Ballads, Rag Time and Dances.

The Amberola, $200

It is the limitless entertainer

Compare the Amberola with any other sound-reproducing instrument of the cabinet type. Consider the sapphire reproducing unit that does not scratch or wear out the Records, and lasts forever.

Other types of Edison Phonographs: $12.50 to $125.00
Edison Grand Opera Records: 75c to $2.00
Edison Standard Records: 35c
Edison Amberol Records (play twice as long): 50c

Does your Phonograph play Amberol Records? If not, ask your dealer about our money-saving combination offer on Amberol Records and the attachment to play them. Get complete catalogs of Edison Phonographs from your dealer or from us.

NATIONAL PHONOGRAPH COMPANY
149 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

We are Headquarters for Edison's Phonographs, Records and Supplies

—CASH OR INSTALLMENT—

We pay transportation charges on purchase of one dozen records or more.

NATIONAL AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM CO., OF LA.
614 GRAVIER STREET . . . NEW ORLEANS.

Polishes in a "Jiffy"

QKWORK METAL POLISH is something new, something different, something quicker than you ever dreamed of. Simply rub on—then rub off. A bright polish in a few seconds. Nothing injurious in it—no acid—no grit. Fine for polishing all metals.

In 25c Tins Everywhere.

QKWORK SILVER PASTE relieves household drudgery. It gives silverware a quick, lasting polish. Makes old pieces look new. Free from acid. Fine for gold and cut glass. Insist on Qekwork.

In 25c Jars Everywhere.

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McCord, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."

C. G. Butler, Argenta, Ark., wrote: "I used 4 bottles and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per cent better."

Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever Tonic Co.
Savannah, Georgia.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage.

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
LE PAGE
INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO
TORONTO - CANADA

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

"GRAND CIRCLE TOUR"

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED

100 HOURS AT SEA

THE MOST DELIGHTFUL AND RATIONAL TRIP EVER CONCEIVED. STOPS EN ROUTE AT

NEW ORLEANS, JACKSON, MEMPHIS, PADUCAH, LOUISVILLE, CINCINNATI, WASHINGTON, PHILADELPHIA, ATLANTIC CITY, NEW YORK, thence by SEA (100 hours), to NEW ORLEANS, making complete circle. SIGHT-SEEING TRIUS at interesting places. Strictly first-class, all expenses paid; the trip of a lifetime. For illustrated booklet and all information call on or address

A. J. McDOUGALL, D. R. A.

141 St. Charles Street.

Phone Main 3618.

RHEUMATISM

A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the Spring of 1893 I was attacked by muscular and inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as those who have it know, for over three years, and tried almost everything. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and it has not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial, I will send it free. Address:

Mark H. Jackson, No. 525 James Street, Syracuse, N. Y.
Mr. Jackson is responsible. Above statement true—Pub.

GALL STONES or LIVER or Stomach Ailment Cured. AVOID AN OPERATION

Have you Pain or Distress in Pit of Stomach. Pains 2 hours after meals. Right-side pains or Backache. Spells of Indigestion. Sick Headache. Biliousness. Yellow Jaundice. Blues. Constipation. Bile. Sourness. Fullness or Oppression over Liver or Stomach. If you have any of these symptoms you need the "SECO-SOLV-TONE" Treatment. Write for FREE Booklet. CALLSTONE REMEDY CO., Sole U. S. Agts., Dept. 44, 225 Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Obituaries

Miss LYDIA E. GARDNER died at Gardner, near Red Banks, Miss., on the morning of May 30, after a protracted illness of great suffering. She was converted early in life at a camp meeting near Bynalia, Miss., and united soon after with the M. E. Church. Her life was a fine exemplification of Christian duty; a beautiful blending of the faith and works required of the true Christian, which manifested itself clearly in all the relations of life. In the home, as daughter and sister, she was always considerate and helpful. It is there that her love of the beautiful is still shown in the lovely decorations fashioned by her ingenious fingers; the beautiful flowers which still bear testimony to her skill and industry; the warmly grateful recollections of those living in her vicinity of her kindly ministrations in sickness and distress, and on other occasions when counsel and assistance asked for were always freely given; all these fully demonstrate that her life was one of rare efficiency and usefulness. Only a strong character could have overcome as she did obstacles which would have appeared insurmountable to a less resolute personality. Why she should have been visited with such fearful suffering, we shall know when the mists have rolled away. We now see through the darkness. "Whom the Lord loveth, he chasteneth." The prayers she was heard to utter were doubtless answered in God's own time and way. In the last weeks of her life, when reduced to helplessness, she was most tenderly cared for by some of those to whom she had ministered in other days. We who knew her well, confidently believe she has entered into that rest which remains for the people of God.

A FRIEND.

On Nov. 13, 1909, the death angel came and bore the spirit of WILLIE BULLOCK from a suffering body to its eternal home. Had this young man lived until the following May, he would have been nineteen years of age, but somehow our loving Father saw fit to call him home ere he had fully reached young manhood. He was laid to rest in the Monterey cemetery, near his beloved home, on Nov. 20, 1909, his funeral services being conducted by Rev. W. A. Terry, of Bolton. Brother Terry had received him into the church several years prior to his death. Willie, as he was familiarly called, was sick several months before his death, and through all his sufferings, not a murmur escaped his lips. When he realized that skilled physicians and nurses could not prolong nor save his earthly life, he called his anxious, sorrowing mother to his side, and assured her that he was not afraid to die. He talked freely of his death, and sent messages of cheer and hope to absent friends and loved ones, urging them specially to meet him in heaven. He was a sober, industrious boy, and had so conducted himself as to win the esteem and love of a large circle of friends. Of all the saddened hearts of his loved ones, the mother's heart is most sad, for she is bereft of one of her precious jewels, a manly son. God's ways are often past our understanding, so in the dark hours, when we are called on to go through the valleys and shadows, we can only put our hands in his and say, "Lead thou me on. The way is dark, and I am far from home. Lead thou me on." May the weary hands of the loving mother feel the pressure of the Father's hand, as she is lead on through sunshine and shadows to meet the spirit of those loved ones gone on before.

L. H. PURCELL.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVES TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle. Show us its simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

Every Druggist

Knows and thousands of users know that

MINARD'S
"KING OF PAIN" LINIMENT

is the great family Remedy For Bodily Pain

resulting from rheumatism or neuralgia, stiff joints, strained or lame muscles, sprains, tired, aching feet, sore hands, and all sorts of bruises; also for painful chest or tubes, heavy colds, sore throat and hoarseness; as well as for scores of every-day emergencies and accidents that happen in every family. MINARD'S LINIMENT is a safe and reliable standby, and should be on every medicine shelf.

MINARD'S LINIMENT is a smooth, aromatic cream, clean to use, powerful, penetrating and soothing, and absolutely free from anything poisonous or harmful. When rubbed into the skin it stops inflammation, easing the pain and soreness at once.

If you are not one of the thousands who are already familiar with its merits, we want you to

TRY MINARD'S LINIMENT AT OUR RISK

Buy it from your druggist or dealer, use as directed, and if not found exactly as represented, we will refund your money. Prices: Small 25c., Medium 50c., Large $1.00.

MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO. SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS.

Free to Saw Mill Men.

It is fresh from the press and the largest, most complete and best-illustrated book of its kind in existence. Printed on enameled paper of a very fine quality, this catalog is brimful of information; such as everybody who is interested in the latest saw mill machinery and supplies should have.

The illustrations show the mechanisms perfectly, and are supplemented with accurate descriptions including the principal specifications. Write for this useful catalog. We will send it free and postpaid.

Wheland Machine Works, 2700 Sydney St., Chattanooga, Tenn.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection: beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders especially. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Progress Self-Tramping

COTTON PRESS

3 Horse Power M. H. Operator. Capacity 25 bales. Write for prices.

Manufactured by
C. J. HYDE, MERIDIAN, MISS.

Opium Morphine and Liquor

addictions cured in TEN DAYS by our new PAIN-LESS method. Money can be placed in bank until cure is effected. References: Any Banker, Minister or Citizen of Lebanon. Large Booklet sent FREE. Address, Cumberland Sanitarium, Dept. 12, Lebanon, Tenn.

ESTABLISHED 1858.
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

Bowden Bells

AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

Epworth League

By Rev. Wm. H. Coleman.

TOPIC FOR JULY 17, 1910.

THE CHRISTIAN'S REWARDS HERE.

(Matt. 19:27-30; Ps. 37:1-11.)

I. The Conditions of Reward:

As stated by the Psalmist, the conditions are that we trust in the Lord and do good.

As stated by Christ, the conditions are that we forsake all and follow him. Not only is this clearly taught in our present New Testament reference and in Mark 10:30 and Luke 18:29-30, but it is definitely stated in Luke 9:23-24.

Neither is there any paradox in forsaking all and receiving a hundred fold. The requirement is reasonable and necessary as a means of precluding any selfish or mercenary spirit in entering the service of our Lord. There must be a higher incentive than that of seeking the loaves and fishes that actuated the multitude in attempting to make Christ their king after he had miraculously fed them. The individual must come to where he feels the need of Christ to the extent of being willing to give up everything for him. He must be so drawn by the constraining love of Christ as to be willing to devote his life to his service. In coming to him the attitude of the sincere soul is,

"Just as I am without one plea,
But that thy blood was shed for me,
And that thou bidst me come to thee,
O, Lamb of God, I come, I come."

Then the truly converted soul will have such a desire to serve him as to say,

"All to Jesus I surrender,
All to him I freely give;
I will ever love and trust him:
In his service daily live."

Having thus met the requirements, then there come to us the consolations of the promised rewards and the rewards themselves.

II. Our Assurance of Rewards.

In these promises we may be confident.

In the first place because "He is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think.—(Eph. 3:20.)"

In the second place because he is not only able, but he knows our needs. "For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust." (Ps. 103:14; also John 3:24-25.)

In the third place because he is beneficent: is a kind Heavenly Father who careth for us.

Furthermore he hath always fulfilled his promises to all who have faithfully met the conditions. He hath, in many instances, verified them to us as we have come close to him in consecration, trust, and obedience.

III. True Significance of these Promises:

The Psalmist states that all who will meet the conditions shall dwell in the earth and shall be fed.

St. Paul, in his Epistle to the Philippians, states, "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."—(Phil. 4:19.)

Our blessed Lord himself states, as recorded in the New Testament reference for to-day, that the reward shall be one hundredfold in this life.

Shall all who have met the afore-said conditions of consecration, faith and obedience really receive a hundredfold in this life? Yes, not necessarily in quantity of material possessions, but actually in degree of real possessions: in the real riches of life. "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things that he possesseth." Things alone cannot make an individual rich, a life contented, or a soul happy. Nothing but the riches of grace in Christ Jesus our Lord can. "Godliness with contentment is great gain." "A little that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked."

The young man whose life is clean, whose character is pure, who is a consecrated Christian, though he may be receiving only a small salary, is a hundredfold richer in mind and heart and life than the corrupt or godless young man, though he may be receiving an unlimited allowance from a wealthy father.

It is the internal state of the soul and not external possessions that makes one rich.

Moreover it is true that the one who begins early to live true to God, and continues to be true to him, is the one who is also richest in physical and mental strength and vitality; is thereby capacitated to enjoy most of the material blessings of God; is more capable in business, and therefore, as a rule, more successful and prosperous. But even when sore afflictions come to the true child of God he still has the true riches of grace, and the peace of God that passeth all understanding still keeps his heart and mind through Christ Jesus.

Sunday School

(Concluded from Tenth Page.)

knowledge of his divine power to save. Christ built, not on a creed, not on a doctrine abstractly considered; he built his church on men—men who because of an inner experience could have confessors of his divine nature and power.

The Keys:

This is a rabbinic figure constantly used. When the disciples of the rabbi graduated it is said that each of them was given a key. Certainly these graduates are spoken of in rabbinic literature as having "the keys" by which they could authoritatively unlock the teaching of their Master to others. The key was a symbol of authority in civic life as well. In days of old when cities were walled with high defenses, the keys of the gates were the token of the ruler's authority. The disciples had the keys with which to admit the world to the teaching of their Master; they had the keys to the great new city of salvation. Each Christian teacher holds the key to another's knowledge of Christ. In their hands is now intrusted the key to the city of God.

The Astounding Revelation.

Jesus had just been claiming to be Deity, but how startled and confused the apostles must have been when he began to prepare them for his death. A God to die! The giver of life to forego life! What a price of fear and mental struggle the disciples had to pay for their greatness in the kingdom of God. Pre-eminence and immortal fame do not come to any one without its full price. How slow the fishermen were to learn is seen in the fact that after Christ died they despaired of his resurrection, although the teaching in this lesson seems so plain to us now. How much Christ taught that even his disciples did not comprehend! The brotherhood of men must have been merely a group of words to them. Men are just awaking to the glory and wonder of Christ's vision. They see the greatness of his provision as they grow toward his ideal. There are things in the Bible even yet to which the world must grow before it can understand them. That is the greatness of the Son of God, that is the eternal youth of the Book.

The Cross.

The way of the cross is the path to all high achievement. Self-denial is the basis of all character. It is a continual choice in life between eating and sleeping and the easy shallow pleasure of the senses, or the harder deprivation of the flesh for the noble and lasting achievements of mind and spirit. The daily cross is present in all great living. What dominates your life—an appetite or an ideal? The appetite decays, the ideal is immortal.—Dr. C. R. Coburn, in Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

VANDERBILT TRAINING SCHOOL

ELKTON, KENTUCKY.

Next Term Begins September 7, 1910.

One of the best equipped preparatory schools in the South.

Accurate scholarship, high ideals and noble purposes are the ends of the training school.

Competent corps of teachers.

Six Southern States represented last year.

Buildings equipped with electric lights, steam heat, and all modern conveniences.

New dormitory recently added.

Location healthful and free from city distractions.

Moral surroundings excellent.

$3,000.00 spent in improvements this summer.

Well Endowed Library, Museum, Gymnasium, Y. M. C. A. Hall.

Full Classical and Scientific Courses. Special Attention to Literary Society Work. Write for Catalogue.

W. B. MATHENEY, B. A., and W. O. BATTS, B. A., Principals, - ELKTON, KENTUCKY

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 57—No. 29.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2841.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JULY 21, 1910.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ACTION OF THE BISHOPS CONCERNING VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY.

The College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in the Methodist Publishing House at Nashville, Tenn., on Tuesday, July 12, at 10 o'clock a.m. to consider the action of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust at their meeting in June, and to take whatever steps they might deem necessary to protect the rights and interests of the Church in the University. Twelve Bishops were present, as follows: A. W. Wilson, E. R. Hendrix, O. P. Fitzgerald, W. A. Candler, H. C. Morrison, E. E. Hoss, James Atkins, Collins Denny, W. B. Murrain, R. G. Waterhouse, J. H. McCoy, and E. D. Monzon. Bishops Key, Kilgo and Lambuth were absent. The following attorneys were on hand by invitation to counsel with the chief pastors of the Church: Chief Justice E. C. O'Rear of Kentucky, Hon. A. W. Biggs, of Memphis, and Col. N. E. Harris of Macon, Ga. The session was executive, and exactly what transpired was not made known to the public, but the Nashville papers report that the Bishops were all in perfect accord except Bishop Hendrix, who dissented from the proposed course of action. A committee of five was appointed to examine certain records and report to a subsequent meeting at 3 p.m. The attendance of the afternoon session, which was also executive, was the same as at the one held in the morning, except that Bishop Hendrix did not make his appearance. All matters concerning the relation of the University to the Church were gone fully into, and the following resolution, which was first communicated to the Board of Trust and was not made public until Wednesday, was unanimously adopted:

"In view of the action of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University in refusing to allow three trustees elected by the General Conference to take their seats in the Board, and in view of the further action of said Board in assuming to fill the vacancies in the Board without confirmation by the Board of Education, as ordered by the General Conference, therefore be it resolved,

"1. That the General Conference has the legal right to elect the trustees of the Vanderbilt University, or to determine how they shall be chosen.
"2. That the trustees duly elected by the General Conference are entitled to their seats in the Board.
"3. That the eight persons whom the Board of Trust assumed to elect to membership in the Board at its meeting in June last, not having been chosen as the General Conference directed, are not trustees, and cannot lawfully exercise the functions of trustees.

"4. That as the Board of Trust assumed to put into the membership of the Board eight persons who are not legally elected trustees, the Board of Trust as thus constituted is not a lawfully constituted body, and its attempted control and direction of the affairs of the university brings into that body an alien influence, inconsistent with the lawful discharge of the duties of the Board.

"Therefore, the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, acting as a Board of Visitors and as representatives of the General Conference of the Church, refuse to approve the action of the Board of Trustees, and declare it null and void."

A committee consisting of Bishop Collins Denny, Chairman; Bishop E. E. Hoss, Bishop W. A. Candler, and Bishop W. B. Murrain, was appointed to carry out the instructions of the Episcopal College, and empowered to take such action from time to time as they may consider necessary in adjudicating the points at issue between the Church and the Vanderbilt Board of Trust. The three attorneys above mentioned are ex-officio members of this committee. The Bishops would give out none of the details of their proceedings. Bishop Denny said, "Whatever other action was taken by the College of Bishops beyond the resolution vetoing the action of the Board of Trust will not be made public at this time." Bishop Hoss, after the adjournment of the afternoon session, said, "There will be no compromise."

In part, the reporter of the Nashville American says in that paper's issue of Thursday, the 14th: "The Methodist College of Bishops has vetoed the action of the Board of Trust, the Board of Trust has acknowledged the receipt of the resolution in which the Bishops expressed their sentiments, and matters are not any further advanced than they were before. These were the developments yesterday in the Vanderbilt University controversy. Both sides seem to expect a lawsuit. The Trustees say openly that they do, and the Bishops practically say so, as they refuse to answer the question as to whether they do or not. Since the two factions are already so far apart that the action of one is in no way held to be authoritative by the other, it is thought in most quarters that the resolution adopted Tuesday was a feint on the part of the Bishops to draw a lead from the Board of Trust, and see exactly how firm the latter would stand. The Board of Trust has done nothing, so far as is known, except acknowledge the receipt of the resolution in a formal manner. None of the members of the Board that the Bishops have sought to nullify have as yet resigned, but they are all sitting still and waiting for the fireworks to begin."

The Tennessean of the same date says:

"A reporter for the Tennessean has had from a high Church authority some direct information bearing on the Vanderbilt case and he is authorized to state that the report which has gained currency to the effect that certain compromise measures were considered by the Board of Bishops is not grounded in fact. This authority gives it as his opinion that the Bishops could not compromise this case, or any features of it, on conditions short of an absolute acceptance by the Board of Trust of the directions given by the last General Conference.

"The Bishops are under orders of the General Conference to maintain, by process of law if necessary, the claims of the General Conference and the finding of the now-famous Vanderbilt Commission. These claims specifically include the right of the Church to name and remove members of the Board of Trust of the university, to exercise all the powers of a corporation of ownership, and to direct the policy of the university.

"It is authoritatively stated that no Bishop made any speech in favor of any compromise matter whatever and the report that such speech or speeches were made is misinformation. This authority further states that inasmuch as the Board of Trust of the university has not conferred with the Bishops, or given them any information up to this time, that the plans for the legal movement are naturally not yet matters for public statement of comment. It is well known, however, that a committee with power to act and to take the necessary legal proceedings has been appointed.

"It is also a matter of information open to the public that Chief Justice O'Rear, of Kentucky; Hon. N. E. Harris, of Georgia, and Mr. Biggs, of Memphis, are counsel for the Church, and their services are now at the disposal of the Church's representatives. It is also freely communicated that these attorneys favor a public statement of the whole case to be laid before the Church public at an early date, and that this in all likelihood will be done so soon as they have matured plans of a definite course of legal action has been settled upon.

From the last paragraph quoted, it would seem that those who are anxious to keep the public in ignorance of what is going on and to have a sort of secret lawsuit, are doomed to disappointment. We think it is eminently proper that an official statement, reviewing the entire case from the beginning, should be given to the Church.

The Bishops were entertained at dinner on the evening of July the 12th, at the home of the Hon. Percy D. Maddin. Bishop Hoss left that night for the Pacific Coast, whence he will sail for the Orient, to be gone three months or more. The semi-annual meeting of the College of Bishops is scheduled to be held in New Orleans, Oct. 20, but it is said that if necessary the time of that assembling will be changed to an earlier date.

AS DR. IVEY SEES IT.

The Nashville Christian Advocate of last week contained the following editorial concerning the Vanderbilt situation, every sentiment of which we most heartily endorse:

"As the forms are being made up for the press, the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are assembling in Nashville. They are coming on a mission, which is sad and unusual—that of making provision for the vindication of the right of the Church to control the institution which she owns morally and legally and has thus owned for nearly forty years. This vindication is also the vindication of the ecclesiastical sovereignty of the Church whose will was uttered so clearly and authoritatively less than two months ago in those memorable six resolutions adopted almost unanimously by the General Conference at Asheville. For the Church to stop short of a movement to enforce her will so emphatically and deliberately expressed would be a calamity far greater than that of failing to secure and enjoy her own property. The Church, shorn of her right to own and control Vanderbilt University can survive and march forward on her victorious journey; the Church, shorn of her ecclesiastical authority, cannot look forward to any bright tomorrow.

"We know not what forces now hidden may change the circumstances, but, as matters now stand, it is impossible for us to see how there can be any other action on the part of the Bishops than that of appealing to that civil law which exists for the protection of individual and corporate rights. The necessity of such a course is very regrettable. It is especially regrettable at this juncture, when the clarion call for an evangelistic quadrennium is still ringing in the air.

"It is the Church against the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University, because, as we believe, the Board of Trust arrayed itself one month ago against the voice and will of the Church. May the spirit and wisdom of him who has pledged perpetuity and final victory to his Church fill the mind and heart not only of the leading actors in this sad drama, but of the many thousands of Methodists who, we trust, are prayerfully awaiting the outcome."

THE SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

The Seashore Camp Meeting which has been in progress for about a week has been well attended, and has steadily increased in interest from the first day. Earnest, spiritual, and evangelical preaching throughout has been of a high order, and has produced a profound impression. Under it, not a few were seized with a deep conviction for sin, and many were inspired with aspirations for a higher and holier life. Some of the services were marked by a high tide of spiritual power, and will not soon be forgotten. We greatly rejoice in the success of this series of revival efforts, and pray that the fruits of them may long abide. We hope to have a more detailed account of the meeting by some one who has been in continued attendance and is prepared to give full and accurate information.

The General Conference of the Canadian Methodist Church will assemble in Victoria in August. The fraternal messenger from our Church is Dr. H. M. DuBose. He is one of the most brilliant platform men in Southern Methodism, and that he will worthily represent us, needs not to be said.

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS.

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

THE WORLD MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

By Rev. N. E. Joyner.

In estimating the results of such a notable gathering as was the World Missionary Conference, it is desirable that one give the internal and immediate resultant: 1. name, two things—the harmony in movement and its unity in purpose. From the opening salutation of the Archbishop of Canterbury, "My Fellow Workers," to the closing benediction, there was neither dissent nor friction. In the first discussion of missionary activities and policies, there was not heard a single discordant note. In purpose there was no divergence. The subject of the opening address, "The Central Place of Missions in the Life of the Church," struck the key note of the Conference. The one desire of the delegates of 100 denominations was that the kingdoms of this world become the kingdom of our Lord. Never before has the Church of God spoken with such unanimity, declaring its adherence to the one great commission.

The effect of the Conference upon Edinburgh was marked. The butcher, the baker, the candlestick maker, talked about it and marveled. Your Scotsman knows what it is to fight for his faith, but to have everybody agree—truly, it was something new under the sun, and even the delicious frugidity of a Scotch midsummer was not able to stay the thaw. The daily press gave not only column after column to the proceedings, but many highly commendatory editorials. The last day of my stay in Edinburgh my host said to me, as he picked up the morning paper, "I regret that our fine newspaper, the Scotsman, is not specially concerned with things religious." But to his surprise, he found editorial discussed in a most sympathetic vein "The World Missionary Conference." Since arriving in the city of Manchester, England, I have seen in one of the morning papers a letter from a contributor thanking the editor for the excellent reports of the Missionary Conference which he had given his readers, and suggesting that the laymen of Manchester follow the example of the American laymen and rally to the support of missions. At an open air service I was requested to "talk about the Edinburgh Conference." In Great Britain, at least, the Conference has made a remarkable impression.

The Conference has made a splendid contribution to the literature of missions, if indeed it has not really given us a science of missions. This will be of permanent value to the whole world, for even the critics of Christian missions may take the nine volumes comprising the reports of the eight commissions, and the minutes of the daily proceedings as an authoritative and comprehensive statement of the question. And what a source of information, of inspiration these volumes will be to the Church! These reports were carefully prepared by expert men after a prodigious amount of research and correspondence. One chairman, in presenting the report of his commission, said that the three or four large tables in front of him, pointing to the tables provided for the secretaries of the Conference, would not be sufficient to hold the letters which the commission had received and considered. During the discussions these reports were carefully scrutinized by men intimately acquainted both with the field and the problem of missions, and the published volumes will have the corrections and the additions made by these men. Never before has the missionary had so fine an opportunity to tell what he knows, nor has the Church ever had so good a chance to learn what it ought to know.

The Conference has brought together the great Protestant bodies of the Christian Church. They have come to know each other better. Differences were only mentioned as things that no one cared to discuss. The things about which they could heartily agree, seemed quite large enough. A speaker told of an incident in India. The Anglican missionaries proposed to the Presbyterians that they unite in publishing a catechism. The things about which the two churches agreed were in the main body of the catechism and their differences were frankly stated in the appendix. To the surprise of all, when the book was published, the body of the catechism was unexpectedly large, and the appendix astonishingly small. The speaker suggested that the two churches follow the teachings of the apostle, and in the next addition "cut out the appendix." This better understanding between the churches will mean much for the advancement of the kingdom. At home it will bring about less friction, and in the foreign field it will result in more united and a consequent saving of men and money. When Christians agree on the lordship of Jesus Christ, and begin to work side by side to tell the world about him, their differences begin to shrink. It is not easy to cheer up or stop one's words as I think about what this means to the cause of Christ. A far brighter day has dawned, and every sluggish one must wake up. The Conference did not adjourn without leaving this better understanding of permanent value. By unanimous vote a "Continuation Committee" was appointed to carry on the work begun by the Conference, to act as an advisory body in all problems that may arise and to arrange for another world conference when they deem such action expedient. On this committee there are 10 men from America, 10 from Great Britain, 10 from the Continent, and 1 each from India, China, Japan, Africa, and Australia. Bishop Lambuth represents South-Western Methodism.

While the contribution to our knowledge of missions is marvelous, appalling us on the one hand with the vast hordes, more than two hundred and twenty-five millions, who have not yet heard of Christ, but are wholly outside of the fields now occupied, and on the other hand, causing us to exult at what God has wrought by our hands, yet to my mind the great result of this Conference will be its definite and large contribution to the life of the Church. And here is the final test of any religious convocation: What spiritual forces were generated in the hall hours given each day to united intercession? Were but expressions of the spirit of earnest, intimate prayer pervading the entire Conference? Discussion gave place to prayer, not "a talk on prayer," but intense, eager supplication, led by men taught of God, acquainted with Jesus Christ, as Bishop Moule or Dr. Finley of the Wesleyans. These half hours in the lives of the men gathered there and in the lives of the thousands who shall hear them, are going to multiply themselves into days and months, and years. Never before have I seen the ministry of intercession so emphasized. The Lord prayed that they all may be one, and these as one prayed, "may the whole world know that He is Lord."

The photographers were unable to make pictures of the Conference in session and so made three pictures. To me these will always be the one great group of men. Even though they have scattered to their far-away homes, lost in the islands of the sea, or hid away in vast heathen countries, to me they are one body still, for they are all one in Christ Jesus.

Manchester, England, June 30, 1910.

THE LAW OF TITHING.

By Rev. G. A. Guice.

(Published by request of the Seashore District Conference, Wiggins, June, 1910.)

There is much difference of opinion as to whether this law is still in force. Why did God give to the world the law of tithing? The answer is, being a God of cosmos, and not a God of chaos, he must establish a fixed and permanent rule by which the needs of his Church and its ministry may be provided for. He could not leave it to the feeling or fancy of men; if so, selfishness might enter in and destroy the very means which we had provided for the saving of the world. If one might choose the minimum of his offering at his own will, he might make it so small as to make it insignificant.

Again, since the tithe was intended to provide for the church and its ministry, it seems necessarily to follow that if one would pay his tithe he must pay it through the channels of the church of which he is a part, for if one would have the right to take one dollar of his tithe and use that as he might choose, he would have the same right to use the whole of it at the direction of his own will, and if one had that right every other one would have the same right, and thus would come confusion instead of system and the church be greatly weakened, or possibly destroyed, by lack of the needed means to do its work.

Under the wicked reign of Ahab the tithes and offerings were withheld by Israel and offered in sacrifice unto idols, the temple worship abandoned, the temple closed, and the priests and Levites compelled to work for their own sustenance. And this same thing might occur at any time if one be permitted to use his tithe as he might choose.

But is the law of tithing still in force? Wherever there is authority to establish a law, and when that authority has acted and the law has been once put in operation, it must remain effective and in force until it is repealed by the same authority which first established it. This is true both of the law of God and the laws of nations.

That God did have authority and that he did establish the law of tithing there can be no dispute; that he has never repealed it is equally sure, hence it must be still in force.

But, says one, "Paul says, 'I have laid by in store as God has prospered us,' and we owe all we have and are to God." The law of tithing no way interferes with this rule. The law of the tithe was never intended to be the maximum, but the minimum of one's obligation. But one cannot give the maximum must needs fulfill the minimum, for the less must always be included in the more.

Again, the world has had many two dispensations, that of law and of love. There is no dispute but that under the dispensation of law the law was obligatory. Can one do less who lives under the higher dispensation than he would be required to do if he lived under the lower? Surely not. The law of the law will continue to provide the necessities of life for his family, but under the higher law, the law of love, he will lavish upon them his best gifts. The time is but the necessity of God's Church.

God in his Word has never regarded the tenth as the maximum of obligation, but always as the minimum. In Lev. xvi. 10, 17, "Thou shalt give it to the Lord thy God, in the place which he shall choose, and they shall not appear before the Lord empty-handed, for he shall give as he will." So God has always made ability the limit of obligation; the tithe for the security and perpetuity of his Church and ministry, our liberality, our bounty, supplying every other need of his cause in the world.

Saucier, Miss.

THE JULY QUARTERLY REVIEW.

By Rev. J. W. Honnold.

Dear Brother McKee: I have just read with no little interest our Quarterly Review for July, and fully agree with you in your notice of these articles, with a few exceptions. I could not do it, you had included in your list of valuable articles. "The Problem of Devil Possession" or the one of the Book of Job. To my mind it borders on blasphemy to say that Jesus Christ, who knew man's every thought, "and needed not that any should teach him, what was in man," who even knew the time and circumstances of his own death and resurrection, was not able to distinguish between epilepsy and "seven devils," and thought that lunacy was a legion of devils which he sent into a gang of hogs and caused them to drown themselves in the sea. They came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon, and yet a greater than Solomon was there. I must be excused from classing my Master with the ignorant doctors of China or India of to-day. And I would suggest to my young brethren that before they surrender the precious promise contained in Job 19 and 25, they read Dr. Whiston's learned comment on this chapter, and Dr. Adam Clark's, and bear in mind that these learned commentators and the learned translators of 1611 were perhaps as well qualified to give us the true meaning of these precious texts as Dr. Jackson. The doctrine of the future life was not understood when this book was written as it was in the days of Daniel. While the doctrine of the resurrection was not professedly taught in the Old Testament chapters, it was taken for granted, and the whole book was written upon the presumption of the resurrection of the body and future immortality.

Take away this idea and the Bible would be an unmeaning book. I cannot understand what good these brethren expect to accomplish by raising such questions and putting their judgment against nine-tenths and more of all the great scholars of the last thousand years. They should be very careful and know they are right before they teach that which cannot do any good and may do great harm.

Tunica, Miss.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL, BILOXI, MISS.

(Reported for the Advocate.)

The second session of the Seashore Divinity School was a most phenomenal success. The attendance was more than one hundred and fifty per cent larger than it was last year (being 40 last year and 105 this year). The speakers and lecturers were the very best equipped men in the country. Being such distinguished scholars and leaders as:

Prof. Shailer Mathews, S. T. D., Dean of the Divinity School of Chicago.

Prof. Henry F. Cope, Ph. D., general secretary of the Religious Education Association of America.

Rev. C. M. Bishop, D.D., pastor of the Methodist Church, Mexico, Mo.

Rev. Gross Alexander, S. T. D., Book Editor of the Methodist Church.

Rev. John A. Rice, M.A., D.D., pastor of the Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans.

Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D., pastor of the Main Street Church, Hattiesburg, Miss.

Rev. H. H. McNeil, D.D., pastor of St. Francis Street Church, Mobile, Ala.

To mention each course of study and tell something of its helpfulness and inspiration, is very tempting, but space will not allow me this privilege, so I must content myself by calling attention briefly to some of them. A course of lectures on "Church History" was given by Dr. H. H. McNeil. Dr. A. F. Watkins gave a series on "Homiletics." On account of other pressing engagements Bishop W. B. Murrah could not be present to give his lectures on "Biblical Theology." One of the most popular and helpful series of the Divinity School was given by Dr. J. A. Rice, on the "Doctrine of the Prophets." He knows how to vitalize the old Testament Scriptures in a most masterful manner. His method is thoroughly modern and scientific. Great fields of thought are opened to the mind's eye as he expounds the Scriptures to you. At the close of his lectures resolutions were adopted asking that he put in permanent form the course of lectures.

Mr. Henry F. Cope, captured the ministers by his illuminating lectures on Psychology. He is an adept in presenting abstract truth in the most attractive and fascinating manner. There was no more popular course of lectures given than those on Psychology by Prof. Cope.

Prof. Shaller Mathews, who proved to be such a favorite among the ministers last year, was equally as popular this year. His series of studies on "Gospels," "The Theology of John," and "Paulinism" were popular, scholarly and illuminating. More than any other man we know, Prof. Mathews has a unique manner of making the Scriptures real, living messages to you. His broad and painstaking scholarship, his familiarity with Orientalism and delicate humor, all conspire to make his utterances grip the mind and heart.

Rev. C. M. Bishop, D.D., gave the Cole Lectures (1909). Many of the ministers had looked forward with a keen appetite to the time when they might read these lectures, but they were agreeably surprised and delighted when they heard them delivered from the eloquent lips of the author. In these lectures Dr. Bishop shows that he has mastered the field of literature on this subject: "Jesus—The Worker." His well-wrought out sentences and polished periods the told us of the Man of Galilee. In my opinion, there is no better equipped man in our connection than this brilliant and tireless scholar. Dr. Bishop has taught us that the busy pastor may find time for research and systematic study if he will properly use his time. Resolutions of appreciation were adopted, thanking him for his course of lectures. We are looking forward to the time when we may have these lectures a permanent acquisition to our library.

Rev. Gross Alexander, S.T.D., just as last year, came last on the programme—some said that "the best wine was saved for the last of the feast." He gave three lectures on the Gospel according to Matthew and three on the Gospel according to John. Last year the ministers were profoundly impressed and greatly benefited by his lectures, and we are glad to say that he did not disappoint them this year. Dr. Alexander has a style unique and original. He knows how to reach the heart and conscience with his message. His lectures showed that he was conversant with a large field of Biblical literature and that he had reached some conclusions on the fundamentals. Moreover he has firm convictions that are real refreshing for the young minister to hear.

One of the most gratifying items about the school was the large attendance of the under-graduates. They were earnest, studious and devout. It is encouraging to know that our young ministers are taking advantage of these summer schools to prepare their Conference courses of study. Every young man owes to himself and to his Master to prepare himself by every opportunity that is offered. Almost every member of the faculty of the course for the under-graduates was present and prepared to do his work in most refreshing manner.

The following were elected as the Board of Directors for the ensuing year: Rev. Robt. Selby, president; Rev. R. R. Ellison, secretary; Rev. W. W. Holmes, treasurer; Rev. J. A. Rice, Rev. J. C. Park, Rev. R. H. Wynn, Rev. J. E. Cunningham, Rev. C. W. Crisler, Rev. J. E. Northcutt, Rev. L. M. Broyles, Rev. H. H. McNeil, Rev. H. M. Ellis, Rev. Dr. F. N. Parker was elected Dean.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

Chapter XIX.

"You may go to setting your hens, Sister Lewis," said the presiding elder to my wife just before Conference met in Hazlehurst, December, 1892. "I mean by that," he continued, "you will not be moved." Though the devil's fall had been twisted, and he had given a hideous howl, yet everything had quieted down, and a desire to have us returned for the third year to Cassville had been made known to my presiding elder.

I was quite sick during Conference, but was able to be in the Conference room on Monday, the last day. At the close of the morning session, Brother Woodward, my presiding elder, took me by the arm and said, "Let us take a walk." We went some distance before anything was said. I saw something was weighing on his mind very heavily. One who has never had experience along this line has no idea what a visit to the office by the cashier, who said to the amount of agony, perplexity and worry Bishops, and presiding elders have to endure at times. A preacher ought to be moved, so the stewards and presiding elders asked for, and that without interest. The president of the bank was an Episcopalian, the cashier a Presbyterian—both clever men. I was sorely pressed financially many times, while "How," said Brother Woodward, "would Summit with our boys, and for a time our youngest daughter. It had not been for a good friend of mine, who had been in New Orleans, who had charged me no interest for the money I asked for, and charged me no interest for the use of it, I don't see how we would have ever made it so our boys could finish college. We can hold such friends in high esteem. God bless them." The appointment was made, and in a short time we were snugly fixed in the preacher's home.

For the first time in several years, we were content to a good school, so we soon had five of our children in school. An old friend of mine, one who was converted and joined the church under my ministry twenty years before, Miss Gussie Lamkin, was principal of the school. While I was her pastor in Summit, she was married to the sheriff of Pike County, Capt. Alf. Boyd, a fine man.

The second year I was there, the assessor failed to call on me for an assessment of my property. Late in the summer I mentioned the matter to the sheriff. He took down my name, list of taxable property and said he would report to the Board of Supervisors. At the proper time in November, I called on him to settle my tax. "I have nothing against you," said the captain. A short while ago, I saw something from a layman about preachers neglecting to pay their tax. Poll-tax is nearly all most preachers have to pay. Some few have a horse, buggy and watch, and that is about all. I hate to see, as is so sometimes, the name of a preacher among delinquent tax payers. Others besides preachers notice it. Another thing I dislike is to follow a man who has left a bad record behind him, caused by refusing to pay debts he has made.

We had been in Summit but a short time, when a milk man stopped in front of our gate and called for two pitchers, one for sweet and the other for sour milk. He proposed to furnish us milk free of charge. I went out and thanked him for his kind offer. "Not at all," he said, "it is a debt I owe." He had had a son of old Brother Levin Lake who was introduced to our Conference at Jackson in December, 1907. Some weeks afterwards I saw in some paper this: "What would Paul have thought of Timothy if my hands, he had seen a milk wagon standing in front of his gate some Sunday morning?" I sat still in profound silence a moment, then read it again. I called my wife and read it to her. I then said: "I am going to ask Brother Lake to pass us by after this on Sunday." "It might make him mad," said my good wife. "Well," I said, "I would rather do without milk all the time than in any way to encourage Sunday traffic." So the following Saturday I said to the milk man: "Brother Lake, you need not stop here to-morrow morning." He looked at me as though he did not know what I meant. I then said: "We have some conscientious scruples about this Sunday traffic." He then said: "I wish everybody had."

A preacher once said to a railroad conductor: "Why do you all run the train on Sunday?" "To accommodate you preachers," was his reply.

When we reached Summit, we found our people worshipping in the Jewish Synagogue. Our Israelitish brethren had kindly tendered us the use of their place of worship after our church had been torn down, till we could build again. I noticed in the congregation the first time I preached in Summit, a few I had known when I was a boy. He knew me long before I became a preacher. He was a friend of my uncle, Rev. W. B. Lewis, who died in 1857. After this, he was often in my congregation, and would sometimes weep while I was preaching.

The Jews were very kind to us while we were in Summit. One of them, a merchant, asked me if I did not have a book called "The Man of Galilee." I loaned him the book, and with it another, "The Drummer-Boy." He read them both, and when he returned them, said he liked "The Drummer-Boy" the best.

One of my stewards asked a Jew if he would not help them pay the preacher's salary. "Yes," was his reply. Then he added: "Why don't you assess me like you assess the other members?" I sometimes fear we are not paying the attention we should to our Israelitish brethren.

While we were in Summit, Brother Peter James, late of Yazoo City, proposed to pay the way of one boy one year through Millsaps College, to be selected by the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference. There were sixteen applicants for the place. My son, Henry, being strongly recommended by Brother W. L. Burton, was selected to be the beneficiary. As Brother James was to pay Henry's way, I decided to strain a point and send his older brother, John, too. But I had no money, and it takes money to put a boy through college. I went to an old friend, Clinton Atkinson, who had known me from childhood—knew my father before me—and told him I wanted some money. "How much do you want?" he said. My reply was that I needed $30 or $40. He said: "Go to the bank and get all you want." He was president of the bank. So I went, was in-

NOTES FROM GRENADA COLLEGE.

Dear Doctor Miles: Many of your readers will rejoice with me in the bright prospect that opens for Grenada College. I have made the rounds of our Disfranchisement Conference and have on all hands been accorded every courtesy. The preachers are rendering valuable aid, and the former pupils are enthusiastic for the school, and many new students have already spoken for rooms. Unless we have a full school at our opening, I shall be very much disappointed. I am making the best canvass I can with other matters pressing for attention at the college. I shall not be able to cover the entire territory before our opening, and much can be done by our friends who may be kind enough to send names of prospective students.

The last session was probably the best the college has had. After carefully and patiently closing out all the business of the year, and giving me every possible help in getting a clear understanding of the situation, Mr. Clifton has turned everything into his hands. He has wrought well. Under his administration, the buildings have been raised to a much higher standard, the buildings have been greatly improved, the library and equipment have received large additions, the chapel and dormitories have been finished throughout, all at an outlay of more than $25,000. The school is prepared for a forward movement that has not hitherto been practicable. Nothing but indifference on the part of our people can prevent us from filling our halls. When this is done, we shall be able to add to our plant till Grenada College will easily stand in "Class A." We can do it and we will.

Most of the former faculty have been retained. They are worthy of it. Miss Mason, who takes the Chair of Mathematics, is a graduate of Vanderbilt and later took her M.A. in residuum work there. Miss Richardson, of the Chair of English, is a graduate of Randolph-Macon Woman's College, with graduate work at Tulane University. Both are fine Methodist women and we count their quite an acquisition to our faculty. The Music Department is in good hands, headed by Miss Spaulding of the New England Conservatory, with graduate assistants who have done graduate work. The first year with the Department of Domestic Economy was a great hit, many young women taking the opportunity to learn sewing, art needle work, and cooking. With a trained nurse to look after the health of our girls and give simple remedies, we have escaped serious illness among our pupils. I count this of the greatest value to girls away from their mothers.

The buildings are being thoroughly renovated, fresh paint applied, and everything made ready for a select body of aspiring young women for the fifty-ninth session of Grenada College.

J. R. COUNTISS.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH

LEON IRWIN & CO.

FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 545.

SPEARING & CO.,

(Established 1817.)

SAIL MAKERS

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS and TENTS.

CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOU LAS STREETS

Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

Church News

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is holding its annual conference at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

NEW ORLEANS NOTES

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

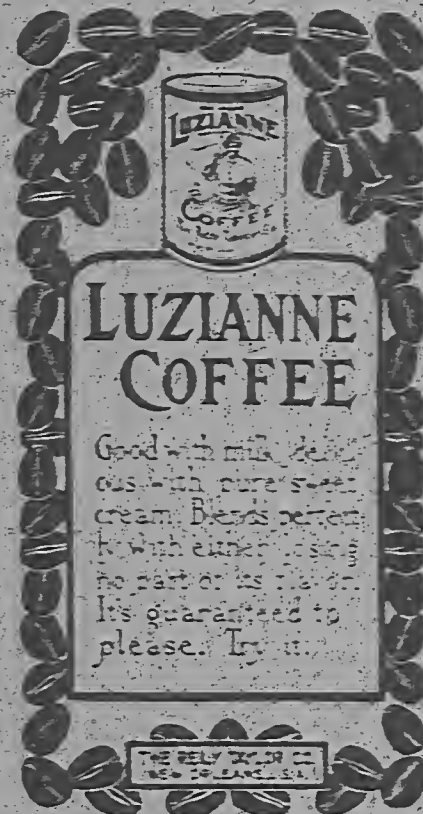

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

THE LAFAYETTE DISTRICT CONFERENCE AND ELSE

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

LUZIANNE COFFEE

Good with milk, delicious with pure sugar cream. Blends perfectly with either, using no part of its true flavor. It's guaranteed to please. Try it.

THE BELY DUN CO. NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

BROTHER MCKEOWN IN ERROR

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

CONCERNING VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY

The annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is held at the New Orleans Convention Center.

Secular News and Comment

The elaborate funeral of the late King Edward cost the British nation $202,500.

The estate left by the late Chief Justice Melville Weston Fuller is estimated to be worth $1,000,000. His five daughters will share equally in the division of it.

The State Senate of Georgia on the 12th inst. adopted a resolution approving the idea of having a Panama Exposition and declaring in favor of New Orleans as the city in which to hold it.

The last session of Congress, by formal enactment, conferred upon Mrs. Frances Folsom Cleveland and Mrs. Mary Lord Harrison, the widows of former presidents of the United States, the privilege of franking their correspondence.

The United States Mint in New Orleans has been closed for an indefinite period. The Government has ceased coining silver dollars entirely, and only small subsidiary coins are now being issued. This work is not sufficient to keep the various mints of the country busy.

By a compromise effected in the District Supreme Court in Washington, the American Catholic University will receive $350,000 from the bankrupt estate of Thomas E. Waggaman, the former treasurer of the institution. The amount he owed it is $900,000.

Dr. and Mrs. Arthur T. Pierson recently celebrated at Northfield, Mass., the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. Mr. W. R. Moody, a son of the great evangelist, started on that happy occasion a movement to raise the funds necessary to send Dr. Pierson on a missionary tour of the world.

The New Orleans Public Library is doing a great work of popular instruction. It has four branches: The Royal, Algiers, Napoleon, and Central. The number of visitors during the month of June was 6,354, and the number of works of fiction taken out was 22,776 and of non-fiction 6,739.

Of all the towns in the United States whose population had been computed up to July 13, Kentwood, La., showed the largest percentage of increase. In 1900 its population was 1,313; now it is 3,609, a gain of 175 per cent. Thirty-seven out of the 248 counties in Texas show an increased enumeration of 202,000, and it is estimated that that commonwealth will be entitled to from three to five new congressmen.

During the last six months the University of Wisconsin has developed the first municipal reference bureau established by a State university for the benefit of the cities of the commonwealth, and it is now one of the most active departments in the university extension work. The aim is to collect information on all subjects of city organization and administration and to furnish it at once to any city or any civic official who desires it.

It is reported that the new seal of the State of Washington will be adorned by the picture of a woodpecker instead of that of the bald eagle. This is said to be in recognition of the woodpecker's service as an insect destroyer. It may also be regarded as a victory of the practical over the sentimental. There are said to be eight species and eighteen subspecies of this industrious bird in the commonwealth which has concluded to do him honor.

The annual convention of the Associated Bill Posters of the United States met in Chicago on the 11th inst. They declared strongly against the public display of racy and improper pictures, such as American theatrical managers have hitherto been exhibiting, and announced that they would seek to procure legislation requiring a careful inspection of all outdoor advertising matter. This is an urgently needed reform, and should be vigorously pushed.

Tulane University is making an effort to extend the influence and usefulness of its Teachers' College. Hon. J. N. Powers, the State superintendent of education in Mississippi, has had placed in his hands by the University authorities three scholarships to be given teachers or the graduates of a high school desiring to become teachers. These scholarships carry exemption from the annual tuition fee of $85, and will be conferred by competitive examination. Persons desiring them should make application at once.

The Fourth Pan-American Conference assembled in Buenos Ayres on July 12, and will probably remain in session five or six weeks. The American delegation numbers twelve, and is headed by Henry White, former American Ambassador to France, and includes Lamar C. Quintero, the well known lawyer and journalist, of New Orleans. Senior Antonio Berjemo, of the Argentine Republic, was elected president, and Philander C. Knox and Dr. V. de la Plaza, the Argentine Foreign Minister, were named as honorary presidents. It is expected that the Conference will do much to strengthen the ties of friendship among the nations of the Western Hemisphere.

Dr. William Osler, formerly a medical professor in Johns Hopkins University, but now regius professor of medicine at Oxford University, Eng., recently celebrated his 81st birthday. It was he who some years ago startled the American public by announcing that a man is useless after he has reached his three-score years and ought to be retired from work. It was reported at the time that he said that all men past sixty should be chloroformed, but this was afterwards denied. There is no record of Dr. Osler having yet made any movement toward having himself placed on the shelf. It is frequently the case that one is disposed to except himself from the application of a rule which he would apply to others.

Theodore Roosevelt will make a Southern tour early in October. On the 17th of that month he will be the guest of the Berry School for Mountain boys, at Rome, Ga., to which institution he has been a contributor for some time past. The day following he will attend a meeting of the Uncle Remus Memorial Association in Atlanta. From there he will go to Little Rock, where at the latter place several Southern governors, including those of Louisiana and Mississippi, have been invited to meet him. In an editorial in The Outlook last week, Mr. Roosevelt, while commending boxing as a physical exercise, expressed the hope that there will never be another prize fight in the United States and that the crusade against exhibiting pictures of the recent contest at Reno will be effective.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Aberdeen District Conference of the North Mississippi Conference convened in Pontotoc Tuesday morning, June 21. The opening sermon was preached Monday night by Bishop J. H. McCoy, of Birmingham. The sermon was a great one and Bishop McCoy won the hearts of all from the beginning.

The opening of the conference Tuesday morning was a sad one, because the remains of Rev. L. D. Worsham were carried to Pontotoc on the same train from Mathiston that a great many of the preachers went on, so the opening of the conference was delayed until 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

At 8:30 o'clock in the church a memorial service to Brother Worsham was held, the services being conducted by Bishop McCoy. (The formal funeral service was conducted at Mathiston, where he was pastor, by Rev. J. E. Thomas, his presiding elder.) The burial was in the cemetery at Pontotoc after the memorial service.

The District Conference was largely attended, there being near a hundred delegates and visitors. Bishop McCoy presided at most of the sessions, leaving in time to visit the Sardis District Conference.

Bishop McCoy preached again Wednesday night from the text, "For we are saved by hope," and, if anything, the sermon was a stronger one than the first. The other preaching during the Conference was done by Rev. B. P. Jacob, presiding elder of the Corinth District; Rev. J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada College, and Rev. R. A. Clark, of Okolona.

The reports of the pastors showed the district to be in fine shape. All of the preachers of the district were present, with the exception of two. The presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Felts, presided with great ease and enthusiasm after the Bishop left. Two young men were licensed to preach, James Bernard Conner and Henry M. Cockrum.

The delegates to the Annual Conference are P. W. Shell, W. T. Reaves, F. J. McDonnell, Jr., and W. A. Boone. Alternates, J. H. Ramsey and Dr. J. C. Gathins.

Among the visitors were Rev. J. E. Thomas, presiding elder of Columbus District; Rev. B. P. Jacob, presiding elder of Corinth District; Rev. W. M. Williams, manager Orphans' Home; Rev. R. P. Neblett, agent Sunday School Board; Rev. A. W. Langley, Rev. W. L. Broom, Rev. W. W. Jones, Rev. G. W. McLain and Hon. G. L. Jones, Conference lay leader.

John A. Lowe, of Nettleton, was re-elected lay leader for the district.

The work of the W. F. M. S. was presented by Mrs. P. W. Shell, of Houston; that of the Home Mission Society by Miss Sallie Purvine, of Pontotoc. Mrs. Mollie Irving, of Columbus, also spoke helpful words regarding the work of the women in their home and foreign work.

The licensing committee elected by the conference is composed of W. L. Duren, Roht. A. Clark, R. O. Brown and J. T. Murrah.

The next District Conference goes to Calhoun City.

Special attention was given to the New Orleans Advocate, several speeches being made for a wider circulation of same.

The following resolution was adopted:

"We rejoice in the marked success that has come to Rev. R. A. Meek, D.D., as editor of our Conference organ. We recommend the paper to our people, believing that it is the best edited paper in the connection, and urge that it go in every Methodist home in our district.

"We recommend that our laymen join the various pastors in seeking to increase the circulation of the paper, and hereby pledge our active and untiring support to Dr. Meek, the brilliant editor."

"Further, we pledge ourselves as pastors to send postcard reports at least once a month to the paper."

A tract committee consisting of J. H. Felts, presiding elder, W. L. Duren, and R. A. Clark, was appointed to prepare suitable tracts on the distinctive doctrines of our Church, to be distributed throughout the district.

The Committee on Education presented the following report:

"Your Committee on Education points with pride to the records of the two great educational institutions of North Mississippi Conference:

"The growth of Millsaps College and the high literary and religious standing it has maintained under the management of our own beloved Bishop Murrah, has been a source of gratification to every Methodist in the State. It stands now in the very forefront in the educational field."

"The progress and high standards of Grenada College have been hardly less gratifying, and we feel assured that the excellent work done by this institution in the past will, under the leadership of Bro. Jno. R. Countiss, not only be continued, but carried forward to a greater degree of perfection and usefulness. We especially urge that our pastors be diligent in their efforts in behalf of this institution and commend it at all times to our people as well worthy of their patronage. Like Millsaps, it is distinguished for the high standard of Christian character cultivated in the student body."

"At this time both Millsaps and Grenada colleges are undergoing changes of government. Brother D. C. Hull has just been elected to the presidency of Millsaps, and the guidance of the affairs of Grenada College have been committed to the hands of our own Brother Jno. R. Countiss."

"In making changes in the administration of these two colleges, no matter how worthy and how capable the leaders may be to whom this great trust is committed, a feeling of uncertainty regarding the future of the institutions is liable to take hold of our people. It, therefore, behooves the pastors of our district, and laymen as well, to give more loyal support than ever before to these two colleges. We are confident of their success and worthiness. Let us, therefore, take every opportunity to commend them, and be diligent in urging our people to patronize them, for the prosperity which they have enjoyed in the past is but a promise of greater things in the future."

The presence of Bishop McCoy through most of the conference was a great inspiration to us, and it has already been said Bishop McCoy won the hearts of all by his strong sermons, his consecration and happy, congenial disposition. We are glad to have him preside over us at Sardis.

All in all, the District Conference was a great one, not a dull moment from beginning to end.

Pontotoc entertained the Conference royally.
ROBT. A. CLARK, Sec'y.

REV. W. B. LEWIS.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted by the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College at their recent meeting in Jackson, Miss.:

Whereas, in the providence of the Great Head of the Church, one of our most honored and beloved brothers has been removed from us, therefore, be it resolved,

First—That in the death of Rev. W. B. Lewis, who for many years was a member of this Board, we have lost one of our wisest counselors and most faithful members.

Second—That this expression of our esteem be spread upon the minutes of this body and a copy sent to the New Orleans Advocate, and also to his family.

P. S.—Will some friend please give me the address of Brother Lewis' family?
J. B. S.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location. Includes furniture. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Malson Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure.

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McLosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec. Treas.
Geo. A. Here

W. F. M. S.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The session held in Tupelo was one of our best. The hospitality of the people of this city was a welcome. The word and deed of delegates were a source of inspiration through the following days, even to the last day when the word was spoken.

Rev. W. L. Duren, called by someone from his pastorate in many a service. Brother Duren proved a model host. Perhaps he realized the uplifting influence of his efficient aids, the ladies who composed the committee of arrangements.

Rev. J. R. Gougeon kindly consented to supply the place of Rev. Mr. Hall, who was detained by illness. This he did in his own inimitable style and to the satisfaction of a large congregation.

We were highly privileged in having with us Mrs. J. B. Cobb, one of the secretaries of the Foreign Department of the Board of Missions, and Miss Janie Watkins, now on her first vacation since her appointment to China. We had also Miss Hyde, a B. W. C. A. secretary, who represented the Scarritt Bible and Training School and who has wrought well for the Master in the I. L. and C. C. Columns.

Mrs. Cobb's Bible readings each day, her evening public talks and her wise counsel during business sessions were extremely helpful. Our Conference will always hail her coming with delight. Miss Watkins presented her work in an unusually attractive manner, giving such insight to its varied phases that interest in all China was largely increased. It was only natural for Miss Watkins to dwell at greater length on Soochow and Laura Haygood Memorial.

Our president's message brought helpful suggestions, which, carried out, will mark progress by greater deeds "in his name."

Reports from conference corresponding secretary, treasurer and auxiliaries showed a forward movement, proving that "where there's a will, there's a way." Gladly we see that our women are being aroused to seek the way which means better equipment for larger service. Here a systematic course of study comes aptly in.

Many helpful discussions characterized this meeting, adding zest and attractiveness to business sessions which have lacked those features with visitors and younger delegates.

Evenings were filled by specially prepared programs in which sweet music by the choir held a conspicuous part. All too speedily the happy days passed by, although accepting Tupelo's kind invitation, our time was lengthened. Long will loving remembrance of friendly intercourse abide with members of our body. Pleasant indeed the reflections of those women met to transact the business of their King and to reaffirm their allegiance.

Conference officers remain the same with the addition of a second vice-president and a superintendent of press work. Secretaries of two districts felt constrained to retire, making those changes necessary.

Our work was ended. We wended our divers ways, joyfully singing in our hearts, "All hail the power of Jesus' name," looking hopefully toward that time when the world shall crown him Lord of all."

MRS. J. F. EVANS

W. H. M. S.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Sisters: We are glad to send you a message of encouragement and appreciation at the close of our first quarter's work. Through your faithful efforts, we have been enabled to cancel an appropriation of $300 to our parsonage with sufficient balance in the treasury to cover the printing of our Conference Minutes and to meet other necessary expenses. Again, we thank God and take courage, and again, with a full heart, we say: God bless the true-hearted, faithful women of our Conference Society.

A great opportunity for Christian workers and the promotion of missionary effort will be afforded those attending the "Seashore Assembly" at the Camp Ground, July 21-21. Miss Mabel Head will conduct a class in Home Missions, taking "The Frontier" as text book, also a class in "Missionary Methods." Many other well known speakers are on the program and we hope a large number of our women will take advantage of this opportunity to refresh both body and mind with a feast of good things.

A recent letter from Mrs. F. M. Williams, president of Little Rock Conference W. H. M. Society, speaks the interest of the Louisiana Home Mission Society in the sale of her little book, "The Morning Glory." She is anxious to create a deaconess scholarship with the proceeds and the cause is most worthy. The book presents a word picture of a beautiful young life: a story of the life work of Miss Mae McKenzie, deaconess in the small lumber town of Crossett, Ark. The price of the book is 75 cents, and may be ordered from Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn. We most cordially recommend it to our home mission workers, and also "The Days of June," a companion sketch from far off China.

We trust the Minutes of our eighteenth annual meeting are now in your hands. We find them well arranged and full of information and suggest a careful reading of same by each member of each auxiliary. "We do it heartily as to the Lord, and not to men." Lovingly yours,

MRS. F. R. KENNEDY

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

Report of treasurer of the Board of Missions, Mississippi Conference, for the quarter ending June 30, 1910.

Broadhaven District—	Foreign	Domestic
Magnolia	$ 20.00
South McComb	42.50	41.00
Wesson	30.00	30.00
Bogue Chitto	41.00
Hazlehurst	34.25	30.00
Monticello	10.00	15.00
Buiford		4.15
Oxyda		48.00
Crystal Springs		10.00

Total	$ 177.75	$ 178.15
Total to date, 1910	369.25	323.15
Total to date, 1909	235.50	251.00

Hastingsburg District—	Foreign	Domestic
New Augusta	$ 15.00	$ 15.00
Leakesville	20.35	45.00
Court Street	25.00
Broad Street	7.50	10.00
Sumrall	10.00	10.00
Pachuta	10.00
Moxie	12.00	14.00
Magee	10.00	15.00
Mt. Olive		42.00

Total	$ 109.85	$ 151.00
Total to date, 1910	186.85	186.00
Total to date, 1909	195.00	187.50

Jackson District—	Foreign	Domestic
Beasonville	$ 10.00
Harrisville	10.00	20.00
Brandon	40.00	40.00
Thomasville	5.00	4.50
Sharon	5.00	5.00
Florence		25.00
Fannin		5.00
Flora		25.00
Yazoo City		80.00
Capitol Street		150.00
First Church		125.00

Total	$ 70.00	$ 479.50
Total to date, 1910	209.00	529.50
Total to date, 1909	167.50	202.30

Meridian District—	Foreign	Domestic
Central	$ 71.87
Seventh Avenue	6.00	4.89
Shuluta	30.00	30.60
North Kemper	10.00	13.85
South Side	25.00	25.00
Fifth Street	50.00	50.00
Waynesboro		70.00
Wayne		5.00
Vinville		5.00

Total	$ 192.87	$ 204.34
Total to date, 1910	202.87	230.87
Total to date, 1909	263.75	118.04

Natchez District—	Foreign	Domestic
Pearl Street	$ 9.00	$ 9.00
Fayette	6.00	5.00
Jefferson Street	22.61
Liberty	10.00	10.00

Total	$ 47.61	$ 24.00
Total to date, 1910	73.11	59.50
Total to date, 1909	79.84	49.55

Newton District—	Foreign	Domestic
Rose Hill	$ 5.00	$ 5.00
Shiloh	5.00	5.00
Decatur	5.00	5.00
Morton and Pelahatchie	15.00	15.00
Bay Springs		10.00
Sixth Street		5.00
Kingson		20.00
Carthage		25.00

Total	$ 30.00	$ 90.00
Total to date, 1910	148.00	231.50
Total to date, 1909	257.00	244.25

Seashore District—	Foreign	Domestic
Biloxi, Mahi St.	$ 12.00	$ 20.00
McHenry and W.	30.00	30.00
Coalville	13.50	15.00
Bay St. Louis	5.00	20.00
Pearlington	46.00	30.00
Columbia	25.00	90.00
Ocean Springs	20.00	35.00
Vaucherve	11.45	28.50
Memphis		15.00
Miss Point		89.50
Howison and S.		40.00
Handsboro and M. C.		8.00

Total	$ 162.95	$ 421.00
Total to date, 1910	439.95	425.00
Total to date, 1909	394.88	438.50

Vicksburg District—

Albany	$ 5.00	$ 5.00
Silver City		12.00
Rocky Springs		41.00
Satartia		10.00
Washington Street		12.50
Hermanville		10.00

Total	$ 90.50	$ 90.50
Total to date, 1910	17.50	17.50
Total to date, 1909	187.00	187.00

Grand total to date, 1910	$1,644.02	$2,164.02
Grand total to date, 1909	1,673.14	1,673.14

W. L. Duren, Treasurer.

THE LATEST UTTERANCE OF THE SUPREME COURT OF MISSISSIPPI ON PROHIBITION.

The statute prohibiting the sale of all beverages known as alcoholic beverages has been fully sustained by the Supreme Court in its interpretation of the law. This crushes out the traffic in "near beer," malt and all other intoxicating liquors within the State of Mississippi. After the decision of Judge Anderson in the case of Fuller vs. City of Jackson, the "near beer" case, that if a liquor or beverage of any character contained a small amount of alcohol, and that the drinking of such liquor or beverage to excess would not produce intoxication, then the liquor or beverage in question would not fall within the statute prohibiting the sale of liquors in the State, it was felt that the law had not been properly interpreted. When this decision was made public, the liquor men commenced immediately "near beer" stands in the city of Jackson and in other large towns in the State. The prohibitionists publicly declared that the decision of Judge Anderson had thrown down the bars for the sale of "near beer" and all kinds of liquor, including under that name. It will be remembered that Justice Smith dissented from Judge Anderson's decision and that while Chief Justice Mays concurred, his concurring opinion was modified by declaring that if alcohol was the dominant ingredient in the beverage, or if the alcohol in the liquor was the thing which caused it to be sought as a beverage, it fell within the statute and was prohibited. By the court has reviewed its decision in the case of Fuller vs. City of Jackson, and Hon. S. S. Hudson, the attorney-general of the State, has issued a letter to all the newly-appointed county attorneys, numbering seventy-five, notifying them that the court has reversed itself in the Fuller case. He says the court, reviewing the Fuller case, holds that any beverage containing one-half of one percent of alcohol is an alcoholic drink within the meaning of the statute. He also holds that it is a violation of the law to sell such an alcoholic drink or to sell vinous, or spirituous, or malt liquor, regardless of whether the same would produce intoxication if drunk to excess. He says the court will prevent the sale of what is known as "near beer" if the proof shows it to be malt liquor, or that it contains one-half of one percent of alcohol.

The report is being freely circulated that the governor has demanded of the county attorneys throughout the State a rigid enforcement of the prohibitory amendment. It seemed at first that the Mississippi prohibitionists were face to face with a very grave issue, but this last utterance of the court in reviewing its own decision, and reversing its attitude toward the prohibitory statute will greatly strengthen our cause. But will the law be rigidly enforced? It certainly will if properly dealt with. The Constitution of Mississippi requires of the governor that he shall see that all the laws of the State are properly executed and enforced. The Legislature has strengthened the hands of the governor by the creation of the office of county attorney. The appointing power is lodged with the governor and these men therefore become the governor's agents throughout the State for the enforcement of all laws. The governor is a strong prohibitionist and a Christian, and if he is apprised of the fact that any of his appointees fail to enforce the law against the sale of alcoholic beverages he will proceed to put a little "high life" on the offending official and immediately something will be doing. With this last utterance of the court and the existence in every county of the State's prosecuting attorney under the governor's direction, the outlook for the rigid enforcement of the law is the brightest the State has ever known. Let the preachers all wake up and on with the battle.

NOLAN B. HARMON.

Philadelphia, Miss.

The mission of a mission is to save the lost and bring in the kingdom of God.—Selected.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd
Manufacturer of Lumber
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Home Circle

HOME.

Home is a place to lay one's head,
A quiet room and a simple bed,
And the God of Comfort overhead;

A place of peace and a place of rest,
With cozy corner for friend or guest,
And love and hope in the human breast.

For, be it palace, or be it cot,
That is not home where love is not,
And where God's mercies are forgot.

The patient's heart a home will find Where'er it dwells among mankind,
Remembering, too, the ties that bind;

More dear, perchance, for absent hours
The tender thought of vines and flowers
That bloom and twine in homestead bowers.

O world, how lonely wouldst thou be,
But for the gentle ministry
Of sweet home hearts that dwell in thee;

Sweet hearts, that take the stranger in,
That pity those in want and sin,
And strive for good their world to win.

Some day the universe will be
A glorious home for all who see
The Lord in love's eternity.

—Bessie Bland.

THE KING'S LAST WORDS.

The last words uttered by King Edward were, "I think I have done my duty." What greater consolation can one have when the shadows of life are closing about him than to feel that he has bravely borne the responsibilities of life and conscientiously performed his duty?

The mother looks back over a long life of service, recalls the infancy of her children and their growth into manhood and womanhood, remembers how she has labored to develop character as well as brain power, and feels that she has done her duty, even if her children have not measured up to her hopes and expectations.

The father, too, finds consolation in the consciousness that he has done his duty, even though wayward sons have brought his gray hairs down in sorrow to the grave, if he has set an example worthy of imitation, and by wise counsel done all within his power to guide his children aright.

And the citizen, also, must rest for comfort in the closing hours upon the conviction that he has lived up to the obligations imposed upon him by citizenship—has been true to every public trust and has not shirked the voter's duty.

The pathos of death reaches its maximum when one enters the unknown world, distracted by the mocking memory of fleeting pleasure purchased by sin; even those who find that they have done their duty can approach the grave like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him and lies down to pleasant dreams. —Baltimore Southern Methodist.

THE LOST LAKE.

"Why, George William Washburne! Aren't you ashamed of yourself?" cried Harriet, in surprise. "You know very well there isn't any lake on Uncle Andrew's farm!"

"There is, too!" said George, raising his voice. "James and I waded in it the last time I was out there, clear up to here." George measured off the depth just below his chin.

Maybe the little boys and girls who read this never get angry and say harsh words to each other, but George and Harriet had a quarrel about the lake then and there. They ended by saying a lot of unkind things to each other, and both declared they never would play in the same yard together again.

"My mamma doesn't want me to play with a boy who tells stories, if he is my own cousin," said Harriet, as the gate between the two homes banged shut very hard.

"I won't play with you! So, there!" called back George.

Mrs. Washburne had heard the whole thing, but she did not say a word about it. The next day she called Harriet to see the large pan of water she set out on the roof of the shed, and the little girl wondered why she did it. George was watching, but he did not say a word, because he was sulking still at his cousin.

"I'll lock the gate so no one can get in to upset the pan," said Mrs. Washburne, "and to-night I will take it down."

"I wonder why Auntie did that, mamma?" said Harriet, when she had told her mother about the big shallow pan on the roof. But Mrs. Foster did not reply, because she was busy counting stitches; so Harriet soon forgot all about it.

"Why, the pan is empty!" said Mrs. Washburne that evening. "What became of the water?"

"I know! I know!" cried Bessie, who was ten, and had been a scholar longer than the others. "The sun drank it up. That isn't the word our teacher used, but that's what it means," she said.

"Yes, that is the way children understand it," said her mother. "Once there were two foolish little children who had a quarrel about a lake and they said they never would speak to each other again; but if they had only asked some one they might have found out that sometimes there is a lake and sometimes it is only a pasture field."

"I'm sorry," said George; and "So am I," said Harriet.

So they named the big shallow lake on the farm "Lost Lake," because in rainy weather they could find it easily, and when it was dry it was lost entirely. And now, when they disagree about anything one or the other says, "Lost lake!" and peace is restored. —Hilda Richmond, in Western Christian Advocate.

HER POINT OF VIEW.

I overheard a remark some weeks ago which pleased me. The person who made it was a young woman clerk in the postoffice. Her salary was five hundred a year. Her hours were from eight until eight each day. Laborious work and not much pay, some might think. But this is what I heard her say to a friend: "Are you not glad that you are living in this country and at this time? I can not be thankful enough when I read of conditions in foreign countries, that I was born in America. And this century is the best age of the world for people who must earn their way, and for women especially. When my grandmother was a girl, there were only two ways open for girls who were not wealthy. One was to marry; the other, to become a servant in some one's kitchen. It did not matter what one's natural abilities or inclinations were, she was compelled to go either one of these two roads. She paused a moment, and then added with a thrill of enthusiasm: "I am more thankful every day that I was born in America and at this age of the world."

There was much to be thankful for, because of those two great advantages, yet I doubt if every American girl looks upon it in that light.

This young woman gave no thought to the long hours and successive days spent in the routine work of a city postoffice. She forgot the petty little details that must of necessity be a part of every business. She was big-hearted enough to recognize her advantages and blessings, and was thankful for the opportunity of providing for herself. —Jean K. Baird, in Epworth Era.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE.

This world-famous woman recently celebrated her eightieth birthday at her home in London, receiving many congratulatory letters and telegrams from all parts of the world. No words are needed to tell of her devotion to the soldiers in the Crimean War, when by sheer force of will she revolutionized the hospitals in Scutari and saved many lives of the soldiers, who idolized her, even kissing her shadow as it fell on the pillow. She was educated in nursing by the Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul in Paris and at the Kaiserworth Institution on the Rhine. She went out to the Crimea, reaching there November 4, 1854, the day before the battle of Inkermann.

At the conclusion of the war she was presented with a testimonial fund of fifty thousand pounds, which she gave to the founding of the Nightingale Home of St. Thomas Hospital for the training of nurses. Her advice is still sought by the members of the nursing profession all over the world.

At her advanced age her faculties are still bright, only her eyesight having failed, but she is still interested in following the progress of her work.

She was the first woman to receive the insignia of the Order of Merit, established by King Edward VII at his coronation, and has also been given the freedom of the City of London. She has a collection of letters addressed to her by various monarchs, and among them highly values one from Queen Victoria. —Selected.

SIR GALAHAD.

Many of you have seen the picture of Sir Galahad, one of the Knights of King Arthur's Round Table, in which he is represented as standing by the head of his horse. Like other knights, he was strong, brave and ever ready to battle with sword or spear; but above most of them was he famous for his noble spirit and pure life. Tennyson puts into his lips these words in the poem bearing the knight's name:

"My strength is as the strength of ten Because my heart is pure."

It is a splendid experience to be strong, and purity helps make us strong. This is true of the body. Great athletes are very careful about bathing. They can not do their best unless they keep clean. Of course, in work and play, dust and dirt will get on our hodies, but if left on they will take away some of our strength.

The same is true of character. You will not have so strong a nature if you look at impure pictures, listen to impure stories, speak impure words, and indulge in impure acts. No temptations come to schoolboys and girls more dangerous than those which try to interest them in what is not nice and clean.

Remember Sir Galahad. The next time anybody starts to show you a bad picture or tell an unclean story, turn away, saying to yourself, "Sir Galahad." When an unclean temptation appeals to you, or an evil thought comes into your heart, drive it away. Like Sir Galahad, be strong and pure; be pure and you will be strong. —Rev. E. H. Byington, in the Congregationalist.

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; it is the best and most natural way of living; should we not fear and reverence the God that made us, that preserves us and provides all things for us? —Selected.

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

A series of five sermons on the work of the Holy Spirit.

By REV. WALTER G. HARBIN.

Price, 75 cents.

Send to CHAS. O. CHALMERS, 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER,

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co
INCORPORATED.

A SICK MULE

Needs Dr. Tichenor's Anti-septic.

It relieves and cures COLIC and BOTS promptly and permanently.

At all Druggists.
25 and 50 Cents

Also in quart bottles.

Dr. Tichenor's
Antiseptic

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 5112 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulner, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

A HEARTENING FAITH.

One of the great needs of the Church to-day is a re-awakening of faith in the power and efficiency of the gospel. In the absence of a lack of visible spiritual results in our services, not a few seem disposed to grow despondent and to affirm by implication, if not openly, that the Word of God does not now thrill and stir the hearts of men as in former days. They declare that the old methods of evangelism are effete, and that only new statements of truth and new forms of propagandism can enable the Church to continue to be a potent factor and force in the world.

That there are many discouraging features in the existing religious situation; we have not the slightest disposition to deny. In many communities the minds of the people seem little inclined to spiritual things; and the services of the sanctuary are poorly attended. The thought of individual responsibility to God and of man's relation to the great future apparently are little considered. A blighting materialism is widespread, and much skepticism exists both inside and outside of the Church, boldly assailing what have hitherto been regarded as the most precious and essential doctrines of Christianity.

But that the safety of Zion is in reality imperiled, we do not for the moment believe. There have been far darker hours than this in the history of the Church—times when the hold of religion upon the masses seemed much weaker and the ascendancy of the forces of evil was far more complete. But a reaction came, and we entertain no sort of doubt that it will come again. The hungry human soul cannot be satisfied with the empty husks of infidelity. God is its necessary correlate, and he only can meet its deepest needs and hush its orphan cry. Weary of other things, it will sooner or later in its despair turn to him who only can give it peace and rest.

When tempted to pessimism and despondency, let us remember the infinite resources of the Church. We do not refer to its human resources, though they are considerable and steadily growing larger; but to the divine resources that stand back of it and are pledged to the promotion of its success. The Master did not send his disciples forth until he had first said, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach the nations; and lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world." God has not abandoned us in the stupendous struggle for human redemption. The Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are still engaged in the execution of that marvelous and mighty scheme. Though invisible to the physical eye, they are none the less truly battling with us. The servant of Elisha at Dothan trembled when he saw in front of him and his master the serried ranks of the enemy, threatening their safety. But the man of God, who had a vision of the supernatural and divine, said, "Fear not; for they that be with us are more than they that be with them." And he prayed that the eyes of the young man might be opened, and they were opened; and he saw that the encircling "mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire." It was because he "wholly followed the Lord" and knew that he was with them, that when the other spies, who had returned from the promised land, were talking of the giants that inhabited it and the impossibility of taking it, Caleb stilled the people before Moses; and said, "Let us go up at once, and possess it; for we are well able to overcome it."

The faith that gives a perception of the invisible is the only thing that can hearten and inspire the Church. It discloses, standing behind the gospel and working through it, forces that are omnipotent and invincible. It shows at the head of Christianity's advancing columns the risen and living Christ, leading and directing. It enrolls before the enraptured vision the glorious fruits of coming victory.

a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness" and above that great multitude before the throne of all nations, and hundreds and peoples and tongues, which no man can number. Are we hesitant and disheartened? Let us on bended knee seek a new vision of the mighty powers that are fighting with us. No new man-made device do we need to enable us to triumph. By bearing aloft the cross of Calvary we alone can conquer. Writing of Satan vanquished and how his overthrow was accomplished, the Seer of Patmos, says, "They overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony."

A RESPECTFUL NON-CONCURRENCE

Dr. E. B. G. Mann, of the Central Christian Advocate of Kentucky, states that in view of their prior position and the action of the General Conference, the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University, have done only what they were expected to do. For Dr. Mann personally and also for his views upon any question, we entertain great respect; but we cannot quite concur in this statement. If the Board of Trust had refused to seat the trustees elected by the General Conference and stopped with that, their action would simply have been what many anticipated; but when they ventured to repeal the confirmatory power of the General Board of Education—a right exercised in some form by the Church ever since the foundation of the institution and never before openly challenged—and, in addition to that, tabled the Bradford resolution, we think they went quite a bow-shot beyond what was warranted by their antecedent claims, or what might logically have been looked for. In these particulars, we confess that their high-handedness and audacity considerably over-reached the bounds of our expectation, developed and expanded as it was by the strange procedure of these gentlemen at Asheville.

We also think that Dr. Mann is rather too severe in his strictures upon the secular press. It is true that they frequently get church matters considerably mixed, but they are generally trying to give the news faithfully and accurately. We doubt if there is a religious weekly in the land that does not depend largely upon them for information. His reaction upon the Commercial Appeal is, in our judgment, wholly undeserved. We read a number of papers, and we do not hesitate to say that, in our opinion, that great daily compares favorably in point of respectability and reliability with any of its contemporaries in the South. Mr. Mooney, the editor of it, is a man of high character, who is not only contributing much to the industrial development of the section contiguous to Memphis, but is also making a brave and manly fight to uphold the supremacy and procure the enforcement of the law throughout our Southern territory.

We do not deny that the Commercial Appeal erred in representing that there was a possibility of an investigating committee being appointed to enquire into the case of Bishop Hendrix; but we dare say that some one supposed to speak with a dependable knowledge of the situation misled the reporter and was responsible for the mistake. At any rate, this error was not surprising in view of the lamentable lack of knowledge of Methodist law both among outsiders and our own people.

Moreover, the fact should not be overlooked that many of our best-informed men think that Bishop Hendrix has committed a very grave offense in setting at defiance the authority of the Church. A number of our leading church papers—among them the St. Louis and the Texas Advocates and the Midland Methodist—have declared that he is in contempt of the General Conference, and that he is liable to be taken to task for the course which he has pursued. And our General organ, edited by a man of rare judgment and soundness of mind, affirms that "the vindication of the ecclesiastical sovereignty of the Church" is at stake, and that this is a matter of far greater moment than even the ownership and control of Vanderbilt University. True, there is no provision in the Discipline whereby the Bishop may be immediately reached; but is Dr. Mann willing to guarantee that the Committee on Episcopacy at the next General Conference will have nothing to say on the subject? We doubt very much if he would be willing to underwrite for that. Let us be fair and just to the secular papers. They are usually sincere, courteous and obliging, and though they may not always measure up to the highest ethical standard, they are doing not a little to give the news of the churches, to repress crime and vice, and to aid in ushering in the Master's coming kingdom.

STILL MAINTAINING THEIR INDEPENDENCE

Randolph-Macon College was for many years thought to be a Methodist institution, under the patronage and control of the Baltimore and Virginia Annual Conferences. But the glamor of Mr. Carnegie's gold awakened in the minds of the members of the Board of Trust some years ago a dream of independence and larger things, and they began to battle to throw off church authority. Lately, friends have been trying to effect some sort of a compromise between the Board and the Conference, but it would seem from the resolutions published below, that these efforts have been unavailing. Some of the brethren think it is almost wicked to surrender the loyalty of the Methodists now on the Vanderbilt Board of Trust who have assumed a position of open rebellion against the authority of the Church, but they should remember that Methodists quite as prominently as they have taken advantage of legal technicalities to alienate property from the Church in the Old Dominion, and that the same plea was made in their behalf when they were carrying on their work of spoliation. The Northern Methodist Church has lost institutions in the same way, and the Congregationalists have had ten colleges to lower the denominational flag and to run up in their stead "non-sectarian" banners. In the light of this history, it is strange that Southern Methodists should feel considerable apprehension over the extraordinary situation existing at Nashville. On the contrary, it seems to us that such feelings of uneasiness and distrust is wholly unjustifiable.

The last action of the Randolph-Macon Trustees, to which we have referred, is as follows: "Whereas, the Board of Trustees of Randolph-Macon College at their annual meeting in June, 1909, in response to the request of the Virginia and Baltimore Conferences and in order to their acceptance of the same, did adopt a resolution providing for the future election of Trustees on said Board, and

Whereas, the offer of said plan to the said Conferences, was intended as a compromise, and in full and final settlement of the matter as between the said Board and said Conferences, and

Whereas, the action taken by the said Conferences upon the said compromise, and plan proposed insists upon further action to be taken by the Board seeking a change of its charter, which change the Board has specifically declared to be in its judgment, inexpedient if not impossible to obtain.

Therefore, be it resolved, That it is impossible to consider the action taken by the Conferences as an acceptance of the compromise offered by the Board according to the intent and meaning of the same, and that therefore, the said action of the Conferences failed to put the said plan for the election of trustees into actual operation and effect."

AN URGENT MATTER.

We are now issuing weekly slightly more than eight thousand copies of the Advocate. That we should keep our circulation above the eight-thousand mark is to us a matter of very great importance. To say nothing of the wider reach of influence and larger revenue from subscriptions it gives the paper, it enables us to command a better price for our advertising work, and thus materially contributes to our income from that source. Shall we be able to continue upon our present scale of operations or fall back? That depends upon whether we can secure the renewal of the subscriptions upon our lists which have expired. Fifty or hundred or two thousand names will have to be grouped within the next two or three months unless the persons can be induced to renew. Practically our only hope of getting them to do this is through the pastors. Dear brethren, will you not assist us? This is a most urgent call—we are face to face with conditions which must shortly determine the future policy of the Advocate. It is your paper. Administrations may come and go, but it will abide. It is the only Methodist organ that circulates largely in Louisiana and Mississippi; can we afford to let it dwindle and speak for our cause in weakened tones? Some of the delinquents referred to are in your charge. Will you not kindly endeavor to reach them at once? We do not desire to lose a single name. Help us, dear friends, and we shall endeavor still more faithfully to help you in return. Renewals are what we want now!

BISHOP MOUZON IN MISSISSIPPI.

Bishop E. D. Mouzon held the Hattiesburg District Conference at Lucedale, Miss., last week, and dedicated the Methodist Church at that place on Sunday, the 17th inst. The brethren were greatly delighted with his presidency and public ministrations. His bearing was also genial and brotherly, and completely won all who came in contact with him. The Bishop is scheduled to attend the Mid-Year Meeting of the Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference at Hazlehurst, July 21 to August 2, and make two or three addresses. We cordially welcome this distinguished servant of the Church to the Magnolia State, and pray that his leadership may be a blessing and inspiration to the Methodist host of that great commonwealth.

OF LITTLE REAL VALUE.

When King Edward died it was an imposing and dazzling pageant that bore him to the tomb. Strains of martial music, the tramp of soldiery, and the voices of mourners innumerable were heard. Nine kings and long retinues of nobles followed him to his last resting place. But this blaze of splendor could not make him in reality one whit different from all the countless millions of the dead. The petty titles and distinctions of earth weigh little with him who sits upon the eternal throne. In their general relations, all men are equal before God, who is "no respecter of persons." His voice is ever the voice of democracy. It speaks in the realm of nature, and the same laws that govern the peasant, govern the prince. It speaks in the realm of Providence, and the same malady that invades the hovel, invades the palace. It speaks in the realm of grace, and the proud ruler must bow as low to enter into the divine kingdom, as his meanest subject. It speaks in the dark domain of death, and the head that wore the royal crown must lie as low in the dust, as that which was bronzed by the burning heat of toil.

The boast of heraldry, the pomp of power,
All that beauty, all that wealth e'er gave,
Await alike th' inevitable hour;
The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

PERSONAL.

The congregation of Rayne Memorial Church have given their accomplished pastor, Dr. John A. Rice, a month's vacation.

Rev. E. K. Means, of Minden, La., recently encouraged us with eleven renewals from his charge. Thank you, brother.

Send in your renewal to the Advocate. You cannot afford to be without your church paper. Under the law, the names of delinquents will soon have to be dropped.

Rev. J. H. Rogers, of Coahoma, Miss., writes that his work is progressing well. We are indebted to him for looking after the interests of the Advocate in his charge.

We were favored Monday of this week by an appreciated call from Mr. J. K. Hopkins, of Macon, Miss. He spoke in terms of high appreciation of his pastor, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney.

Rev. W. W. Holmes is assisting Rev. W. H. Coleman in a meeting at Homer, La. In his absence, the editor of the Advocate occupied the pulpit of Louisiana Avenue Church last Sunday at 11 o'clock.

We were delighted to have Rev. P. Howard, of Holmesville, an honored superannuate of the Mississippi Conference, drop into our sanctuary a few days since. Mrs. Howard accompanied him to the city, seeking medical advice.

Bishop John C. Kilgo and family will be away from their home at Durham, N. C., for the next few weeks. Before returning they will visit New York, Norfolk, Baltimore, Schenectady, and other points. The Bishop is in great demand for pulpit and platform work.

We were cheered a few days since by a kindly letter from Mr. N. F. Glaze, a loyal Methodist layman of Beulah, Miss., whom we have highly esteemed for some years. He had commendatory things to say of both his pastor and presiding elder.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb commenced a protracted meeting at Indianola, Miss., last Sunday. He has with him to do the preaching Rev. T. B. Clifford, of Yazoo City, whose evangelistic gifts are of a superior order. We wish these faithful laborers much success.

A nursery has been provided at the Second Methodist Church of this city, where mothers may leave their children while attending services. A more progressive pastor than Brother Townsley would be difficult to find. He is quick to discover and adopt any new method calculated to give impetus to his work.

Rev. S. E. Tull, formerly pastor of Baptist congregations at Kosciusko and Greenwood, Miss., but now in charge of the First Baptist Church of Pine Bluff, Ark., is having great success in his work. He recently had 800 present at Sunday school, and his Baraca Class is one of the best in the State in which he now labors.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, the aggressive presiding elder of the Winona District, has organized a District Church Extension Board. We acknowledge the reception of a leader enumerating a list of the most needy places in his territory and appealing for public assistance. This is a timely movement, and doubtless will accomplish much good.

Rev. J. H. Holloway, of Newburn, Ala., has been spending his vacation at the Seashore Camp Meeting. Brother Holloway came to New Orleans and preached for Rev. H. T. Carley at the 11 o'clock hour last Sunday to the delight and edification of the Carrollton Avenue congregation. Mr. Holloway was at one time pastor of this church.

A letter from Rev. W. L. Duren, the pastor, brings the sad intelligence that Mr. John M. Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Clark, of Tupelo, Miss., is critically ill at the home of his parents in that city. We deeply sympathize with these friends in their anxiety, and pray that God may sustain them in this hour of solicitude and trial.

We thank Prof. J. H. Woodard, the efficient superintendent of the Aberdeen Public School, for kind and encouraging words. He reports that Rev. J. T. Murrah has been well received in that important pastorate, though Rev. J. R. Countiss was given up reluctantly. Brother Murrah has a way of speedily winning all hearts wherever he goes.

The Mobile Register, of July the 11th, contains a two-column synopsis of a sermon delivered in St. Stephen Church in that city by Rev. E. P. Craddock on "The Royal Battle." Brother Craddock seems to be giving a good account of himself in his present responsible field.

We omitted to state in our issue of last week that Rev. J. J. Kelly, who for several weeks has been critically ill at the New Orleans Sanitarium, recently returned home cheerful and somewhat improved physically. Let prayer continue to be made for this faithful and uncomplaining servant of the Master.

The failure of the secretary's reports of the Aberdeen District Conference to appear earlier has been due to no fault of his, but to the fact that we have been overwhelmed with matter. We beg to assure our friends and contributors that we are doing the best we can with the space at our disposal, and we trust that they will be patient with us.

Dr. W. L. Weber is expected to reach Mansfield to assume his duties as president of our college there this week. His father, Dr. S. A. Weber, states in the Southern Christian Advocate that his health has immensely improved and that he has promise of a complete recovery in the near future. The Methodists of Louisiana will give Dr. Weber an enthusiastic greeting.

Mrs. S. A. Montgomery and her daughter, Miss Margaret, and nephew, little Paul Harding, left the city on Thursday night, the 14th, for Hearne, Texas, where they will visit the family of Dr. Hatch W. Cumming, the brother of Mrs. Montgomery. Later they will visit relatives at Fort Worth and other points in the Lone Star State, and will be away the remainder of the summer.

Rev. J. Loyd Deceh, of Osyka, Miss., under date of the 15th inst. writes: "Rev. J. C. Ellis, of Gallman, closed yesterday at Muddy Springs one of the most successful revivals that they have had in years. He is a great and good man. Brother D. E. Kelley will begin a meeting here Thursday which will continue for ten days. We would appreciate the remembrance of Osyka at the throne of grace."

Rev. R. A. Clark, of Okolona, is assisting Rev. J. D. Hudgins in a series of revival services at Duncanville, Texas, where one of his sisters resides. His pulpit will be filled on the fourth Sunday by Rev. J. A. Lowe, lay leader for the Aberdeen District, at 11 o'clock, and by the presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Felts, at night. President Hull, of Millsaps College, will preach for him both in the morning and evening on the fifth Sunday.

Through the courtesy of the pastor, Rev. H. R. Singleton, we have received a copy of the Year-Book of the First Methodist Church of Alexandria, La., for 1910. It is well arranged and edited, and is quite an attractive pamphlet. The assessment for the pastor is $2,000; for presiding elder, $300, and for the connectional claims, $648. The handsome new church cost $38,597. All departments of the work seem to be in a flourishing condition.

We have in hand an account of the recent meeting of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust, by Dr. W. D. Bradford, of Dallas, Texas, a distinguished member of that body, which will appear in our issue of next week. If any think we have been too severe in our characterization of the course of the Vanderbilt Trustees, we ask them to wait until they hear this well-known minister who has been behind the curtain and saw and heard all that was done and said.

The concrete foundation of the new Methodist Church in West Jackson (Miss.) has been laid, and the work will now go vigorously forward. The structure when completed will cost $40,000, and the auditorium will be the largest of any church edifice in the city. We congratulate Brother Crisler and his worthy congregation upon this advance movement. Much credit for this commendable enterprise is due that noble Methodist layman, Mr. I. C. Enoch.

The Carrollton Conservative (Mississippi) of July 16th, says: "Rev. J. H. Ingram, of Glenn Allan, has been assisting Rev. T. E. Gregory in a meeting at North Carrollton. His sermons have been richly enjoyed. The real eloquence in which Mr. Ingram expresses impressive thoughts, and the oratorical fervor with which he delivers his sermons, add to the effectiveness and charm of his ministry. He has won an abiding place in the affection of many in both towns."

The Church House, which has been conducted successfully by the congregation of Rayne Memorial Church at 4622 Laurel street, will be closed Aug. 1, and then opened again on the 1st of October elsewhere. The owner of the house wishes to live in it himself, and it cannot be had at any price. The work, however, that the Church House has been doing is too valuable to be stopped, and when a new location is sought it will be to get a roomier dwelling, where it can expand. During the closing of the house in Laurel street the deaconesses who have been living there will stay at St. Mark's Hall.

Bishop Murrah, after ten days of work in Texas, returned to his home in Jackson the latter part of last week. Speaking of his trip to a reporter for the Daily News, of that city, the Bishop said: "I was deeply impressed with the great work being planned by the Methodists in Texas. The magnitude of the plans formed for church extension and the zeal and energy being manifested by church leaders, inspire and thrill a visitor. Texas is a great State, and her citizens always do things on a large scale, but I was profoundly surprised at the magnitude of the work being carried on by our denomination in that commonwealth."

Rev. E. B. Ramsey, of Memphis, recently conducted a union revival at Nettleton, Miss. The singing was conducted by Rev. L. R. Simpson, pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Pontotoc, and the choir was composed of seventy-five persons selected from the several congregations of the town. The Methodist, the Presbyterian, and the Christian Church of this community have agreed to unite in a meeting annually for four years, each in succession selecting a preacher to conduct the services, which, on account of its size, will be held in the Methodist house of worship. In our judgment, this is an admirable arrangement for villages and small towns.

A dispatch to the Commercial Appeal from Jackson, Miss., bearing date of the 13th inst. says: "President David C. Hull, the new head of Millsaps College, is making an energetic summer campaign in the interest of that institution, and the prospects for the 1910-11 term are most auspicious. According to Dr. J. E. Walmsley, secretary of the faculty, the requests for catalogues are double the number that had been received up to the same time last year, and this of itself is an indication of continued interest on the part of the public. Bishop Murrah is also taking an active interest in the affairs of the college, and his efficient aid is highly appreciated."

From the Commercial Appeal, of July 16th, we clip the following: "Bishop E. E. Hoss will reach San Francisco on Monday, and on Tuesday will sail on the Pacific mail steamship Tchoyu Maru for Yokohama. He will be absent from this country until sometime in October, and while away will hold the Methodist Mission Conferences in Japan, China and Korea. During his absence the Vanderbilt University controversy will be in the hands of the committee appointed by the College of Bishops, composed of Bishop Denny, chairman, and Bishops Murrah and Candler, together with Bishop Hoss. Bishop Denny was for some years a member of the Baltimore bar, where he achieved some distinction in the practice of law before entering the ministry, and is unusually well qualified to lead in this movement to conserve the rights of the Church."

Mrs. Russell Sage, sympathizing with the poor of New York City, has decided to establish several loan offices where money may be obtained on chattel mortgages at the legal rate of interest. This, it would seem, is a practical and wise method of doing good. There is no fouler blot upon our civilization than the way in which the needy in our towns and cities are fleeced by conscienceless Shylocks, who take advantage of their situation to lend them money at exorbitant rates. Solomon never made a truer statement than when he said, "The curse of the poor is their poverty."

Take your life day by day and hour by hour. Do not look too far ahead. If you are suffering, you have only to suffer that day. If you have an anxiety, God undertakes to see you through it, but only day by day. One of the great secrets of a happy, calm, and strong life is to pray day by day, and trust day by day.—Bishop of London.

The Centenary College of Louisiana.

Fall Term will
open Sept. 14, 1910.

For Catalogues or other information write to

FELIX R. HILL, President,

JOHN S. JOHNSTON, Dean,
SHREVEPORT, LA.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that
— Lasts a LIFETIME —

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

You can't get away from the heat, but you can keep it from hurting. "When it's hot, drink Coca-Cola."

Coca-Cola

It refreshes mentally and physically, invigorates, fortifies and quickens the system. When you are the patient, agent and host, drink Coca-Cola.

Delicious—Refreshing—Wholesome.
Send for our free booklet "The Coca-Cola Company." This booklet contains the story of the Coca-Cola story and why it is so delicious. Write to the nearest distributor or to THE COCA-COLA COMPANY, Atlanta, Ga.

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.
1300-1302
DRYADES STREET.

PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

VISIT MINERAL WELLS

—FOR—
HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND

WEST TEXAS

—For—
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS.
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,

General Passenger Agent,
DALLAS - - - - - TEXAS

Tidings from the Field

Hernando, Miss.

Our meeting began at Hernando on the second Sunday in June. The pastor preached at the morning service and the Rev. M. Cunningham at the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., at the evening hour. The Monday morning service was a kind of council between the pastor and the laymen of the church. We decided that each layman was responsible for his part of the meeting and that each layman had a specific work to perform in a series of revival services. Rev. E. B. Ramsey, of the Mississippi Avenue M. E. Church, South Memphis, Tenn., came to us and preached at the night service on "The results of a genuine revival." He won the people at the first service. He is plain, practical and very spiritual. He preaches to the church concerning the great cardinal doctrines of our beloved Methodism. The church was considerably aroused. We hope to see the fruits of the meeting in all of the departments of church work. There were eight accessions: two on profession, and six by letter. This is the third meeting Brother Ramsey has held in Hernando, and the people love him more than ever. His genial humor and plain speech will always attract attention and produce conviction. We are expecting during the remaining months of the Conference year to see a healthy growth in spiritual things. W. D. WENDEL.

Shannon, Miss.

Dear Brother Meek: Will you give me a little space in your paper to say a few words for the Shannon Charge? This is my first year here. I found this a good work, composed of three churches. Shannon is a thriving town on the M. and O. railroad in the midst of a fine farming section of country, with a good mercantile business carried on by progressive business men. A new school building to cost seven thousand dollars is in process of erection, which will add much to the interest of the town. We have a good church here: not a large membership, but in many respects strong and growing. Center Grove is a young church in the country just organized a few years ago; it now has about seventy-five members, and promises in the near future to be a strong church. Pleasant Grove is a good, strong church in the midst of a good people and led by that princely layman, W. M. Morris. The third Quarterly Conference for the present year was held at this church the second day of this month. Our young and brilliant presiding elder, Rev. J. H. Felts, was with us and preached an able sermon. The good women then served a most excellent dinner, after which the Conference was called to order. The regular questions were asked and the pastor made the following report: Three Sunday schools, two Epworth Leagues, also one Home and one Foreign Mission Society; the assessments for missions have been paid in full. Two hundred and fifty-seven pastoral visits have been made, and the work is in good condition. The eighth question was answered with a good report—by far the best of the three, which is a very unusual thing for the third quarter. Sunday morning, notwithstanding the threatening weather, we were met at the church by a good congregation and were edified by another strong sermon, after which the Sacrament was administered, the congregation was dismissed with the benediction, and we went away feeling that it was good to have been there. —J. J. Garner, P. C.

First Church, Columbus:

The "good old summer time" is the low-water season in Columbus. Scores of folks leave. Some go to the country, some to the mountains of North Carolina, some to the North, and a great many to Monticello. But church work goes right on. We had 250 at Sunday school last Sunday. W. H. Carter is easily one of the best superintendents in Southern Methodism. If he had enough good helpers he would have a great Sunday school. W. E. Kennedy is at the head of our Epworth League, and he is great. The League has twenty copies of a book on "South America" which it is studying, with Joe Love as leader. Our special missionary is Rev. Paul E. Buyers. He will be in Brazil by the time this is in type. We had 100 at prayer meeting yesterday. We hold it at 6:10 p. m. Mrs. Edmon came to see us. —T. W. Lewis.

Verona, Miss.

We have had the largest rain today (to noon) of the year. This has been a year of much affliction in our home. Mrs. Babb commenced the year with pneumonia. Three weeks ago she got a fall which has prevented the use of her left arm since; however, she is improving, but suffering much pain. We have managed to keep up our appointments and have had an increase of attendance over last year. Nearly all departments of the church are in good working order. Our second Children's Day service came off last Sunday, with an increased collection over last year of $9.75. (See Brother Noble's.) Our District Conference is just over, which was a feast of good things. Bishop McCoy preached twice to the delight of all. He led us nearer the upper sanctuary. May God grant him a life full of years. One sad incident happened while at the Conference. Our own Brother Worsham had slipped off to the surprise of most of us, we not knowing of his illness before. He was brought to Pontotoc (his native town) and buried by Bishop McCoy. How fast the old guard are passing out—four since Conference—Jones, Lowe, Oats and Worsham. Who next? Some one is just on the border land. Our presiding elder had a program that covered all the ground, and it was covered rapidly, and we came out a day ahead of time. Brother Felts is a great worker, and came as near being everywhere at the same time as any other mortal man. May his strength abide! Now, to our work again. The New Orleans Advocate is in good favor with our people. We have secured a goodly number of new subscribers and nearly all the old ones have renewed, not quite all. But I wish they would. Don't you, Brother Meek? We were pleased with many things the General Conference did, and as much pleased with many things it did not do. It seems to me that the Vanderbilt matter is a menace. Even those who seek an independent Board, as it would seem, claim their object is to secure the property to the M. E. Church, South. May they prove themselves so. Dr. Ivie comes to his new editorship as a man born for the place. He gives assurance by his loyal tones and his spiritual fervor on the pages of the old time-honored Advocate. We are pleased with the name of our Church, and may it exist until the coming of the Son of Man again. The history of our last General Conference shows we still have loyalty enough in our Church to steer the old ship in the current of Methodism mapped out by our Lord, through John Wesley, and providentially developed since. May her doctrines grow into Italics, and her compass ever be turned on Jesus the Prince of Peace.—D. W. Babb.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

Bishop W. B. Murrah will dedicate our church in Ponchatoula, Aug. 7, the first Sunday. All the preachers and especially former pastors, are invited to be with us. Come brethren, and have a good time!

J. P. HANEY.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.
Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

is a favorite wherever used. Tests show highest quality of any gelatine made. Pure and Healthful. Simplest to prepare, yet makes greatest variety of dishes. Hardens quickly and makes the tenderest of all jellies.

EVERY PACKAGE
MAKES TWO QUARTS

We want you to try Crystal Gelatine, now, in your own home.

Ask your grocer. If he does not keep it, send us his name and we will send you a free sample package.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.
121A Beverly Street
BOSTON, MASS.

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McCord, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."

C. G. Butler, Argenta, Ark., wrote: "Used 4 bottles and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per cent better."

Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever
Tonic Co.
Savannah, Georgia.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

IN MEMORIAM

In the cemetery at Hermanville, Miss., the bright sunshine is flooding a newly-made grave. Beneath the sod lies the form of our friend, GUS CHUNN, who only a few days ago was full of life, hope and joy. Those busy, helpful hands are now folded forever over that quiet breast. To him the summons was unexpected. It came like a thunder-clap from a clear sky. The deceased was well known in our little town of Hermanville, and his sudden death was a great shock to our community. Bright, cheerful, and unselfish, it was a pleasure to know him, and he was highly esteemed by all. He leaves a father, mother, one sister, two brothers and a large circle of friends to mourn his sad death. The pious among them are hereby called to increased watchfulness, faithfulness and prayer. To the unconverted, it is an appeal. "Prepare to meet thy God." To all it is a warning. "Be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh."

FRIEND.

On the afternoon of June 30, 1910, while attended by faithful physicians, and while husband, children, neighbors and life long friends, kept a silent watch, the spirit of Mrs. K. C. STEELE quietly and gladly left its tenement of clay to be borne to the mansions of eternal bliss. She was born Sept. 23, 1856, and professed faith in Christ and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1876. For nearly 35 years she had walked faithfully and untiringly with God; and when the time came for earthly ties to be severed, and for her soul to pass out and rise above all that was dear to her on earth, she was willing to walk on with the God she loved. For many years she had suffered much pain, but had borne it all with that fortitude known only to a Christian. She was gentle, kind, devoted, and loving to her husband and children, and strove to make her home a place of rest and joy to her pastors. By the side of her infant son, her body was laid to rest in the Black Hawk cemetery, to await the Master's call. May God bless and comfort her husband, three sons, and two daughters and enable them to prepare to meet her in the bright world above, where they can see and know why God took her from them.

W. L. STORMENT, Pastor.

Rev. GEORGE F. YOUNG was sixty years of age; had been a member of the Methodist Church for many years; had been serving as a local preacher for fifteen or twenty years. He was reared in the old Primitive Baptist faith; his people all belonged or adhered to that faith. Being converted late in life, he seemed to fully realize that what he did had to be done quickly, so he bent all his powers in the direction of doing good. The writer was personally associated with him for seven years and watched very closely his life, and can say truly he was a man of God. I never saw a better man. Brother Young professed sanctification, was a full believer in the perfect life, and one could hardly come in contact with his great life without being impressed with his sincerity. I do not hesitate to say of him: he lived what he professed. He was always on a high plane. It seemed that it would have been almost impossible for him to have done a sinful act. He talked of Christ and his love at all times and to all people. He loved his home and his family, and was loved devotedly by his family. He was highly respected by his neighbors, and always gave them a warm place in his heart. He leaves a wife, five children and many friends to mourn their loss, and his life will certainly be a rich legacy for them.

They can follow him with perfect safety. He has gone home to die no more. He is not dead, but sleepeth. May God bless and console his loved ones, and may they so live as to meet him in heaven! His body now sleeps in the soil of Florida, but his soul is at rest with God.

His friend and former pastor,
J. D. SIMPSON.

MARY LAVINA LEWIS was born Nov. 17, 1850; was married to G. W. Harrison, Jan. 27, 1870; joined the M. E. Church, South, in September, 1870; and on June 17, 1910, while loved ones lingered around the bedside to see the last sweet smile and catch her latest words, her soul went home to wear the crown that was prepared for her and not for her only, but for all that love the appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ. Although this saintly woman was practically an invalid for some time, and suffering intense pain, not a murmur of complaint came from her lips. She bore it all patiently and cheerfully, often speaking of being very near her Lord. May God bless the dear husband and children and help them to live so as to join hands with wife and mother, making one whole family in heaven above where all is love, joy and peace in the Holy Ghost.

W. H. LANE, P. C.

SCHOOL OF METHODS.

To the Pastors and Leaguers of North Mississippi:

There has just come to my desk a skeleton program of the Conference of Epworth League officers and district secretaries of North Mississippi in their "School of Methods," to be held at West Point, Oct. 6-8. No officer can afford to be absent. Begin now to plan how you can arrange to be present. If one of the Conference officers is in your League, make it possible for him to be there. You need that they be there and the Conference work demands that they are there. Did you see your picture in the "Era" of July 14th? If not, it was your fault, for you should have been at Kosciusko. See who your district secretary is and report your League work at once.

R. P. NEBLETT.

Columbus, Miss.

BLUFF CREEK CAMP MEETING.

The twentieth annual camp meeting at Bluff Creek begins Aug. 19, and continues ten days. Religious services are under the direction of the presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District Conference. Preaching under tabernacle four times each day and grove and cottage prayer meetings will be held morning and evening.

All ministers are invited to attend and will be provided board and lodging free. Conveyances meet trains in Clinton and Pine Grove.

The camp ground is situated ten miles south of Clinton, among the hills of East Feliciana Parish.

For further information, address O. E. Townsend, chairman of committee, Olive Branch, La.

CAMP MEETING NOTICE.

The Cleveland (Miss.) Holiness Association will hold their fifth annual Camp Meeting, on the association's grounds, Aug. 11-21. These grounds are located three miles north of Cleveland, Miss. We have for our human leader, Dr. Beverly Carradine, once a member of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, but now a resident of St. Louis, Mo. Prof. Hemp Sewell, of Atlanta, Ga., will lead the host in song. We are expecting great things at the hands of the Lord and sincerely desire the earnest prayers of the Advocate family. A special invitation to all preachers is given to be present and push the battle against sin. For further information write R. J. Collins, P. C., Cleveland, Miss. R. L. Beevers, Secretary, Cleveland, Miss.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

L. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Richl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice Pres

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd.,
JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. . . . NEW ORLEANS
D. C. Godfrey Optician.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets, assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection: beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST. NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Summer Tours

VIA

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

California, Colorado, Utah, Mexico,
AND ALL THE WEST.

NEW YORK

And ALL EASTERN and NORTHERN RESORTS

See Your Local Agent for full Particulars, or Write

J. H. R. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La.

C. W. MURPHEY, City Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA, SHIREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS
ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL,

General Passenger Agent.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing
by hand—no breakage.

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE

LE PAGE

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO
TORONTO - CANADA

WISHED FOR DEATH

Terrible thing to be so sick, that death would come as a welcome relief from suffering!

How much, then, must one be thankful for a medicine that relieves such misery and brings one into a less desperate state of mind.

Cardui, Woman's Relief, has done this for many women, and may be expected to do so for many more.

Thousands of ladies have written to tell about their suffering, and how it was relieved by the use of Cardui.

Among this long list of letters written, stands forth Mattie Campbell, of Ratcliff, Texas, who says: "Two years ago my health was bad. I suffered untold misery. I ached all over. Life was a burden to me. At times I wished for death, to end my suffering.

"At last, I decided to try Cardui. I took one bottle and it helped me. I took 12 bottles more, and now I can say that Cardui has stopped my suffering and made life worth living.

"I would not be placed back where I was—not for this whole world rolled at my feet."

Try Cardui. It contains not one grain of dangerous mineral ingredients, but is purely vegetable, and a safe, reliable remedy for young and old. Sold everywhere.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00
St. Louis, $26.00
Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares

To ALL Principal Points in the United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD,
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 3618.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

Opium Morphine and Lique.
additions cured in TEN DAYS by our new PAIN-LESS method. Money can be placed in bank until cure is effected. References: Any Banker, Minister or Citizen of Lebanon. Large Booklet sent FREE. Address Cumberland Sanitarium, Dept. 12, Lebanon, Tenn.

Marriages

July 8, 1910, at the Methodist Church, Wesson, Miss., by Rev. Paul D. Hardin, Mr. FAIRLY CASE and Miss CARRIE WATSON.

July 12, 1910, at the parsonage, Wesson, Miss., by Rev. Paul D. Hardin, Mr. GEORGE R. GRANBERRY and Miss HATTIE EVIE WILLIAMS.

July 10, 1910, at the Cameron Hotel, Hermanville, Miss., by Rev. W. L. Blackwell, Mr. J. A. NUNNERY, of Rosetta, Miss., to Mrs. LOU S. GOODWIN, of Hermanville, Miss.

BUFORD, MISS.

Here we come again asking for admittance into the columns of the dear old Advocate. We have just closed a most successful revival at Summer's Chapel. We had with us Brother M. L. White, of Prentiss, who did all the preaching. Brother White's sermons were the clearest, the most forceful I have ever heard, and strictly Arminian. He is a most loyal Methodist preacher. His love for the Methodist Church has caused me to have a greater love for our Church. He is very easily understood; his congregations, the very simplest among them, catch his ideas and thoughts at once, his expositions of the Scriptures are so clear. He is a terror to Calvinism. We had twenty-two accessions to the church, about half of this number by baptism and the other by vows. The spiritual condition of our church was greatly built up, almost the entire membership receiving a blessing at the hands of our Lord. Brethren, I feel that God's kingdom is being built up on the Buford Charge. Pray for us.—Jasper L. Smith, P. C.

FOR MEDICAL STUDENTS.

Readers of this paper desiring full information in advance as to the educational requirements for entrance to a medical college may obtain same by addressing E. F. Turner, Registrar, 632 Second Avenue, South, Nashville, Tenn.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Shreveport Dist.—Third Round.

Mansfield	July	24
Oakdale, at Hope Well	July 30,	31
Fullerton, at Murryville	Aug. 3,	4
Shreveport, First Church	Aug.	7
Texas Avenue	Aug.	10
Coushatta, at Holly	Aug. 13,	14
Campiti, at St. Maurice	Aug. 20,	21
Ida, at Munlin's Chp.	Aug. 24,	25
Greenwood	Aug. 27,	28
La Chute, at Taylortown	Sept. 3,	4
Pelican, at Bethel	Sept. 6,	7
Pleasant Hill, at Robeline	Sept. 10,	11
Mooringsport	Sept. 13,	14
Bossier City	Sept.	16
Zwolle, at Bayou Scie.	Sept. 17,	18
Many, at New Hope	Sept.	20
Hornbeck, at Holly	Sept.	22
Leesville	Sept.	23
Bon Ami	Sept. 24,	25
DeRidder	Sept. 25,	26
Langville	Sept. 27,	28
Noel Memorial	Sept.	30

T. J. WARLICK, P. E.

New Orleans Dist.—Third Round.

Plaquemine	July	24
McDonoughville	a. m. July	31
Epworth	p. m. July	31
St. Tammany Ct.	Aug. 6,	7
Covington	Aug. 7,	8
Slidell, at Slidell	Aug.	14
Felicity	a. m. Aug.	21
Algiers	p. m. Aug.	21
Carrollton	Aug.	28
Second Church	Sept.	4
First Church	Sept.	11
Rayne Memorial	Sept.	18

F. N. PARKER, P. E.

Lafayette Dist.—Third Round.

Houma, at Bourg	Aug. 6,	7
Patterson	Aug. 13,	14
Prudhomme, at C. P.	Aug. 20,	21
Rayne	Aug. 27,	28

EDUCATIONAL.

The Mississippi Conference Training School

MONTROSE, MISS.

This School has the largest and most competent Faculty in its history. Our pupils are prepared for Sophomore Class in high-grade Colleges. Our Musical Directress is in a Northern Conservatory, adding to her already splendid equipment for Piano and Voice Culture. We will build a Mission Hall on the School Campus, and have added the subject of Missions to our Curriculum. Our rates for board and tuition are reasonable.

Write for catalogue to

Rev. WALDO W. MOORE, A. M., President.

SOUTHEASTERN DENTAL COLLEGE

This school offers the advantage excelled by no other school. Excellent building, superb equipment and strong faculty. Individual instruction given each pupil. Session opens Oct. 3rd. For catalogue, address

DE. C. L. STOCKS, Dean, 427-8 Austell Bldg, Atlanta, Ga.

The Woman's College of Shreveport.

A high-grade College for Girls and Young Ladies. Ideal location. Steam heat. Modern improvements. Non-sectarian. Faculty of specialists. College and Preparatory Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Session begins Wednesday, September 21, 1910. Write for catalogue. GEORGE L. HARRELL, President, Shreveport, La.

Ward Seminary Nashville, Tennessee

46th year. Seminary and Special Courses. Conservatory of Music—Emil Winkler, Director; Signor Campobello, Voice; Fritz Schmitz, Violin. 175 Boarding Pupils. Complete appointments. City advantages. Beautiful campus for outdoor sports. For catalogue address J. D. BLANTON, President.

Methodist Benevolent Association

Ministers and Laymen of Southern Methodist Church. Benefits at Death, or Old Age, or Disability. Over $20,000 paid to Widows, Orphans, Disabled. Insurance at cost. If in good health, write for rates and other information. CARE METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE NASHVILLE TENN.

USE THE L. and A. RAILWAY.

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

Jennings	Sept. 3, 4	Winnfield	Sept. 4, 5
Lake Charles	Sept. 10, 11	Houghton	11 a. m. Sept. 8
Sulphur, at Sulphur	Sept. 11, 12	Lisbon, at	Sept. 10, 11
Fundee, at L. P.	Sept. 17, 18	Minden	Sept. 17, 18
Bell City, at B. C.	Sept. 24, 25	Cotton Valley, at	11 a. m. Sept. 19
Lake Arthur	Sept. 25, 26	Lanesville, at P. G.	Sept. 24, 25

J. E. DENSON, P. E.

R. W. TUCKER, P. E.

Monroe Dist.—Third Round.

W. Monroe, at Logtown	July 23,	24
Winnboro, at B. Prairie	July 30,	31
Tallulah	Aug. 6,	7
Rayville	Aug. 7,	8
Mangham, at Union	Aug. 13,	14
Downsville, at Willhite	Aug. 20,	21
Waterproof, at Wesley	Aug. 25,	26
Floyd	Aug. 27,	28
Eros, at Indian Village	Aug.	31
Lake Providence	Sept. 3,	4
Merrouge	Sept.	7
Brookland	Sept. 10,	11

S. S. KEENER, P. E.

Ruston Dist.—Third Round.

Plaindealing, at Walker	July 23,	24
Haynesville, at Colquitt	July	30
Haynesville Mis., at W. C.	July	31
Ruston	Aug.	7
Vernon, at New Prospect	Aug. 13,	14
Bienville, at Burk Place	Aug.	18
Bernice, at Summerfield	Aug. 20,	21
Ringsgold, at G. B.	Aug. 27,	28
Gibslard, at O. G. 11 a. m.	Sept.	1
Jonesboro, at Wyatt	Sept. 3,	4

Baton Rouge Dist.—Third Round.

Franklinton, at Angie	July 23,	24
Bogalusa	July 24,	25
St. Francisville, at Tunica	July 30,	31
Ponchatoula	Aug. 6,	7
Baker, at Deerford	Aug. 13,	14
Zachary, at Ethel	Aug. 20,	21
Baton Rouge, Second Ch.	Aug. 21,	22
E. Feliciana, at C. G.	Aug.	26
Pine Grove, at C. G.	Aug.	26
Tickfaw, at Red Oak	Sept. 3,	4
Baton Rouge, First Ch.	Sept.	5
Pt. Vincent, at Huffs Chp.	Sept. 10,	11
Den. Sps., at Palmetto	Sept. 17,	18
Hammond	Sept. 18,	19
New Roads	Sept. 24,	25

C. C. MILLER, P. E.

AGENTS WANTED.

WANTED—Good men and women agents at once for "Roosevelt's Famous Hunt for Big Game," also for "Traffic in Girls." Immense sellers. Price, $1.50; 50 per cent. commission. Outfit free. Send 15c for mailing. Both outfits 25c. Also district managers for easy payment installment plan. Permanent work. $2,000 to $5,000 per year profits. Particulars free. Address: A. B. Kuhlman Company, Chicago, Ill. 7616.

EDUCATIONAL.

Port Gibson Female College,
PORT GIBSON, MISS.

71st session opens Sept. 14th. Literature, music, art, elocution, stenography, bookkeeping, sewing. Physical culture and chorus work free. Special attention given health and morals. Confers degree of A.B. Preparatory department. Students can reduce expenses by taking duties. For catalogue, address
REV. H. G. HAWKINS, A. B., Pres.

Whitworth College.

Twenty carefully selected teachers and officers. More than two hundred students last session. A most excellent literary course leading to the degrees of L.B. and A.B. Departments of Music, (including piano, violin and voice culture) expression, art, commerce.

Next Session begins Sept. 8, 1910.

For Catalogue address,

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

RANDOLPH-MACON ACADEMY. For Boys and Young Men. Fits for college, scientific schools or business. Work endorsed by over 30 colleges and universities. Beautiful and healthful location. Athletic grounds, gymnasium. Terms only $230. No extras. For catalogue, address Z. SUMTER SMITH, Principal, Bedford City, Va.

Vanderbilt University
NASHVILLE, TENN.

1007 STUDENTS 100 TEACHERS
CAMPUS OF 80 ACRES

New College Hall and Chemical
Laboratory Just Completed

Expenses low. Literary courses for graduates and undergraduates. Professional courses in Engineering, Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, Theology. Send for catalogue, naming department.

J. E. HART, Secretary.

Belmont College
For Young Women Nashville, Tenn.
IRA LANDBRITH, D.D., LL.D., President
MISS GOOD and MISS HERON, Principals
College and Preparatory Courses.
Music, Art, Expression, Modern Languages, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Matchless location. Athletics, Horseback Riding. Register now. For catalogue, address
BELMONT COLLEGE, Box 1.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Durant Dist.—Third Round.

Rural Hill, at Macedonia July 23, 24
Chester, at South Union July 25
Louisville, at Flower R. July 27
West, at Hebron July 30, 31
Kosciusko Station, at East Union Aug. 1
Ackerman, at Mt. Airy Aug. 5
McCool, at Liberty Chp. Aug. 6, 7
Kosciusko Ct., at Pierce Aug. 13
Sallis, at Shrock Aug. 14, 15
Black Hawk, at B. H. Aug. 20, 21
Poplar Creek, at Shiloh Aug. 27, 28
N. G. AUGUSTUS, P. E.

Oxford Dist.—Third Round.

Watervalley, at Main St. July 24, 26
Paris, at Bruners July 30, 31
Abbeyville, at Mt. Zion Aug. 6, 7
Holly Springs Ct., at Har-rls Chapel Aug. 13, 14
Waterford, at Laws Hill Aug. 20, 21
Coffeeville, at Goshen July 27, 28
Ashland, at Wesley Sept. 3, 4
Grenada Ct., at Sparta Sept. 10, 11
Charleston, at Oakland Sept. 11, 12
Grenada Sept. 11, 13
Randolph, at Washington Sept. 17, 18
Toccopola, at Tula Sept. 20
Lafayette, at Cambridge Sept. 24, 25
J. E. CUNNINGHAM, P. E.

Columbus District—Third Round.

Macon June 26, 27
Columbus, First Church July 2, 3
Columbus, Second Church July 3, 4
Shuqualak, at Salem July 10, 11

Brooksville, at Prairie July 17, 18
Sturgis July 22
Starkville Ct., at Lebanon July 23, 24
Winstonville July 30, 31
Mathiston Aug. 4
Cedar Bluff, at Bills Aug. 5
Mayhew, at Kilgore Aug. 13, 14
Hebron, at Prairie Chapel Aug. 20, 21
Columbus Ct. Aug. 27, 28
J. E. THOMAS, P. E.

Corinth Dist.—Third Round.

Ripley and B. M., at Falkner July 21, 25
Belden Ct., at Bethel July 29
New Albany Ct., at Ecru July 30
New Albany Sta., at N. A. July 30, 31
Jonesboro Ct., at Ebenezer Aug. 6, 7
Dumas Ct., at Dumas Aug. 13, 14
Dry Run Miss., at Mt. Zion Aug. 13, 14
Tishomingo Ct. Aug. 20, 21
Mooreville Ct. Aug. 25
Mantachie Ct. Aug. 26
Marietta Ct. Aug. 27, 28
Pastors will please see that answers are furnished to questions 17, 20 and 22.
BEN P. JACO, P. E.

Aberdeen Dist.—Third Round.

Verona, at Plantersville July 23, 24
Okolona July 24, 25
Okolona Ct., No. 2 July 30, 31
Tupelo July 31, Aug. 1
Pittsborough, at Big Cr. Aug. 6, 7
V. and C. C., at Vardaman Aug. 7, 8
Nettleton Ct., at N. Chapel Aug. 13, 14
Amory and Nettleton, at N. Aug. 14, 15
Smithville, at Paine Memo. Aug. 20, 21
Greenwood Springs, at Soule's Chapel Aug. 21, 22
Fulton Ct., at Van Buren Aug. 27, 28
Tremont Ct., at Mt. Pleasant Aug. 28, 29
Buena Vista Sept. 3, 4
Prairie Sept. 4, 5
Houlka, at Asbury Sept. 10, 11
Dermis, at Hurricane Sept. 11, 12
JAMES H. FELTS, P. E.

Sardis Dist.—Third Round.

Byhalia, at Fountain Head July 23, 24
Pleasant Hill, at Baker's Chapel July 30, 31
Tyro, at Emory Aug. 3
Mt. Pleasant, at New Salem Aug. 6, 7
Eureka, at Mt. Olivet Aug. 13, 14
Olive Branch, at Oak G. Aug. 20, 21
Hernando and H., at Hinds Chapel Aug. 23
Coldwater, at Coldwater Aug. 27, 28
Tong Town, at Sees Chp. Aug. 31
Crenshaw, at Mastodon Sept. 8, 9
Senatobia, at Mal Misson Sept. 8
Cockrum, at Cockrum Sept. 8
Batesville Sept. 10, 11
Courtland Sept. 15
Enid Sept. 17, 18
Arkabutla, at Harmony Sept. 24, 25
W. M. YOUNG, P. E.

Winona Dist.—Third Round.

Winona Ct., at Salem July 23, 24
Webb, at Dublin July 26
Schlater July 31
Mars Hill, at Chapel Hill Aug. 4
Carrollton, at Coila Aug. 6
Indianola Aug. 7, 8
Minter City Aug. 13, 14
Inverness, at Coila Aug. 18
Ryleville, at Ryleville Aug. 19
North Carrollton, at Longview Aug. 20, 21
Moorhead, at Sunflower Aug. 27, 28
Lambert, at Sandy Bayou Sept. 2
Twiliter, at Marks Sept. 3, 4
Slate Springs, at Bently Sept. 9
Eupora, at Eupora Sept. 11, 12
E. S. LEWIS, P. E.

Greenville Dist.—Third Round.

Jonestown July 24, 25
District Mission July 27
Clarksdale July 30, 31
Gunnison, at Malvina Aug. 6, 7
Rosedale, at Beulah Aug. 9
Glen Allen, at Winterville Aug. 11
Tunica, at Robinsonville Aug. 13, 14
Cleveland Circuit, at Shipman Church Aug. 16
Hillhouse, at Deeson Aug. 18
Lake Cormorant, at Eudora Aug. 20, 21
Leland, at Tribbett Aug. 23
Shaw Aug. 27, 28
Friars Point Sept. 4, 5

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.

Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Course. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE.

THE OLDEST COLLEGE FOR WOMEN IN AMERICA—THE RECOGNIZED STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE FOR THE WHOLE SOUTH—NOTABLE PROGRESS AMONG SOUTHERN INSTITUTIONS.

Splendid plant—worth $350,000—with all modern comforts, on an eminence in the best residential district in Macon. $200,000 now being raised for improvements and endowment.

One of less than a half dozen colleges for women in the South, on a full academic basis. Courses leading to A. B. and B. S. degrees. Faculty of experienced officers and teachers. Nearly 3,000 alumnae throughout the Nation. The Wesleyan diploma is the highest academic honor open to a woman in the South.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, employing fourteen officers and teachers, is the Mecca of artists and those preparing to teach. Schools of Art and Expression at the same high standard. Diplomas and teachers' certificates are conferred.

The moral and physical health of Wesleyan young ladies is safeguarded at every point. The discipline and training are non-sectarian, but Christian to the core. Wesleyan's high aim is to send out young women of genuine Christian culture. Health record without a parallel. Serious sickness has been rare, and not a single death has occurred at the college in many years.

Rates within reach of all. The College is not conducted for money-making, but to bless the world. Apply for catalogue and information in detail to
REV. W. H. AINSWORTH, D.D., President, Macon, Ga.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jackson, Tenn.

Next School Year begins Wednesday, September 14. Every facility offered for a thorough education for girls and young women. All departments taught, including besides regular Classical and Literary Courses, Music, Art, Expression, Stenography, Typewriting, Business course, Etc. Charges reasonable. For catalogues, etc., apply to

REV. A. B. JONES, Jackson, Tenn.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute is one of the oldest female colleges in the South, having been chartered in 1843. The college has 250 attendants and 125 of them are boarding pupils.

Parents desiring to send their daughters to school should write for a catalog of

MARTHA WASHINGTON COLLEGE

Which has a record of high grade work for half a century, maintaining a faculty of specialists in the schools of Literature, Mathematics, Science, Languages, Music, Art, and Expression. Beautiful location in most healthful town in State of Virginia. For full information write

REV. S. D. LONG, President, Abingdon, Va.

THE TEXAS DENTAL COLLEGE
HOUSTON, TEXAS

THE SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION BEGINS OCTOBER 4th, 1910.

Offers to the prospective dental students unsurpassed clinical advantages and teaching facilities for the study of the most modern and up-to-date dentistry. Ideal winter climate; Reasonable living expenses, and the most wholesome moral influences.

For full information and catalogue, address the secretary. CHAS. H. EDGE.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

A home school for girls, 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful hill country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue.

Address, Pres. E. L. BROWNLEE,

CLINTON, LA.

Epworth League

By R. H. B. Watkins

TOPIC FOR JULY 24, 1910

THE CHRISTIAN'S REWARDS
HEREAFTER.

Readings: Ps. lxxiii, 21-24; 1 Peter i, 3-4; 1 Tim. iv, 8.

It is not an infrequent thing to hear the intimation that the Old Testament Scriptures do not teach the doctrine of the immortality of the soul—or of eternal reward. We readily admit that the teaching there is by no means so explicit as in the New Testament; that one of the great truths clearly developed by our Lord is the doctrine of eternal life and reward. But a study of the Old Testament with reference to these truths will possibly surprise those who have imagined they were not taught there. In a general way we may say first, that correctly read there is nothing to discourage or contradict those great doctrines; secondly, that they are everywhere presumed; and thirdly, that in many places they are stated so pointedly and so clearly by some mere glimpse as to leave no doubt of the confidence of these writers in the life and rewards of the hereafter. One of these latter we have to-day as our first reference, the seventy-third psalm, where this truth is so pointedly brought out in the twenty-fourth verse. The glimpse here is of the culmination of a kindly and continuous providence which has so faithfully followed us through the experiences of this life, receiving us into eternal glory. 'Tis but a picture, but what a vivid one! Given here it is another ally stated in connection with another great truth, but none the less clearly. Let me add to this reference Psalm xlii, 6, where the doctrine is taught in very much the same manner, and in a manner to be very misleading if the writer had not intended to teach it. Also 1 Sam. xii, 23, where David finds his comfort in the loss of his child in eternal reunion in a land beyond. Reading as we do the Old in the light of the New, it is fairly luminous with such expressions which, whatever they signified to the people of that day, are very clear to us as laying the foundation for our Lord's further revelations, so that when he came he taught not a new truth, but developed an old one when he said, "In my Father's house are many mansions." I go to prepare a place for you. . . . that where I am, there ye may be also" (John xiv, 1-3). Abraham's life was one long disappointment were it not for the assurance given us in Hebrews xi, 10, that indicates that, personally, he received a reward in a city of eternal foundations, and indicates that in some way Abraham himself understood this. The same chapter teaches us that Moses got his consent to give up worldly wealth and pleasure because he "had respect unto the recompense of the reward," and "endured as seeing him who is invisible." Now, turn to our second reference, 1 Peter i, 3-4. In this we have the great fact in human history that guarantees our immortality—the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. The Scriptures promise it, the hearts of men expect it, but Jesus by his empty tomb absolutely guarantees it as he stands by the grave of every Christian and exclaims: "I live, and because I live ye shall live also." What great words the apostle uses to describe that inheritance. He had seen so many things perish. He knew faces disappear, riches (earthly) perish, even cities powerful and great fade away. Of the Christian's reward he exclaims

"incorruptible," "undefiled," "fadeth not away." The old soldier, weary, worn out, on the eve of his departure, looks upward and his heart is confident that wherein he has been disappointed here, he shall be abundantly compensated hereafter. Blessings your hearts have craved or lost are reserved in heaven for you. Oh, heavy heart! oh, weary soul! meditate on these things and be glad!

Now, to crown our study to-day, read our last reference, that "swain song" of the great Paul. I have often marvelled at his words: "I am ready to be offered." It must have been because he was so ready to live that he was so ready to die, no matter how. Read Romans i, 15, and learn that he who was ready to preach at Rome was also ready to die at Rome. Let us fight the good fight, finish the course, keep the faith that we may be "ready." Ready to live that we may be ready to die. The reward was comforting to the apostle. No words can describe his suffering. But the prospect abundantly compensates for every pain. "Henceforth, there is laid up for me." Paul wasn't selfish, but he dwelt on his personal reward. "For me a crown of righteousness," which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me. From no one could the apostle so gladly have received this gift as from Jesus. Yes, a crown from Christ for me! But not to me only, but also to all who love his appearing. To all who so wish his coming as to labor for his kingdom. A crown for me and for all!

Let us dwell upon the consistency of the Biblical doctrine of eternal rewards: seen occasionally and comparatively dimly, but still seen in the Old, but becoming brighter and brighter in the New, until at last we just look up and say confidently, "Even so come, Lord Jesus."

Let us comfort the sorrowing with these things. "I can go to him," were David's words. They must be ours also.

Let us bear patiently the disappointments and seeming injustices here assured, that what we hoped for, the cities with foundations, "houses not made with hands," "inheritances incorruptible," are beyond.

Teach men and women not to cling to worldliness and sin, but to give it up, "having respect unto the recompense of the reward."

Let's labor on, however weary, however hard; keep the faith, fight the good fight, be ready to live. There is a crown that the Lord Jesus himself shall give you and give me.

For Dyspepsia.

Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate. Relieves the continued sense of hunger, lack of headache, nausea and sour stomach.

MINISTERIAL RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

North Mississippi Conference. Four of our number have passed over the river. K. A. Jones, J. C. Lowe, Q. A. Oats and L. D. Worsham. Looking at our Association from the standpoint of personal membership, one might think that it is expensive. It has cost each of us $20 already, and now we must send in $5 more to pay the next mortuary fee. Looking at it from the standpoint of a brotherhood, let us think how much real good our money has done. The widows and children of these departed brethren are saved from financial embarrassment, and may be they are able to purchase a little home through the aid we have given them. I hope, therefore, that no brother will withdraw from the Association. Let us increase its membership until every preacher of the Conference belongs to it.

T. W. LEWIS.

METAL POLISH A pure liquid free from acid or grit. Apply it—then rub off. A brilliant and lasting polish in a "jiffy." For brass, copper, zinc, tin, enamel, nickel plate, glass, silver, etc. Fine for automobiles, yachts, carriages.

IN 25c TINS EVERYWHERE.

SILVER Qckwork Silver Paste keeps silver looking brand new. No acid—nothing to injure. Good for gold, cut glass, etc. Insist on Qckwork—the time saver.

IN 25c. JARS EVERYWHERE

"It Turns Your Waste Material Into Dollars."

THREE MACHINES IN ONE.

Shrink Log Saw Mill, Lath and Shingle Machine. Does all kinds of sawing. Just the machine for small saw mills and farmers' use.

It's a Big Money Maker.

Write for circulars and particulars.

Manufactured only by COLUMBIAN IRON WORKS, Chattanooga, Tenn.

That Organ—You Should

Buy It Right

From the maker who makes organs right.

If you have the money, if you're raising it, or only planning—write for helpful suggestions.

ESTEY, Brattleboro, Vt.

10 DAYS FREE TRIAL

We ship on approval without a cash deposit, freight prepaid. DON'T PAY A CENT if you are not satisfied after using the bicycle 10 days. DO NOT BUY a bicycle or a pair of tires from any one at any price until you receive our latest catalog illustrating every kind of bicycle, and have learned our unheard of prices and marvelous new offers.

ONE CENT is all it will cost you to write a postal and everything will be sent you free post paid by return mail. You will get much valuable information. Do not wait, write it now. TIRES, Coaster, Brake rear wheels, lamps, sundries at half usual prices. MEAD CYCLE CO., Dept. M295, CHICAGO

Progress Self-Tramping

COTTON PRESS

3 Horse Power M. I. Operate. Capacity 25 bales. Write for prices.

C. J. HYDE, MERIDIAN, MISS.

ESTABLISHED 1858 CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS

Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57. THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

Bowden BELL

AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN. Special discount to readers of this publication.

BLMYER BELL Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

You Look Prematurely Old

Because of these ugly, grizzly grey hairs. Use "LA CREOLE" HAIR COLOR RESTORER. Price $1.00, retail.

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

THIRD QUARTER. LESSON IV. JULY 24, 1910.

THE TRANSFIGURATION.

Parable Passages: Matthew xvii. 1-8, 14-20; Mark ix. 2-13; Luke ix. 28-36.

After six days Jesus taketh with him James and John his brother, and leadeth them up into a high mountain.

And was transfigured before them: and his face did shine as the sun, and his garments were white as the light.

And there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him.

Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus: Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles: one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

While he spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold, a voice out of the cloud, which said: This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him.

And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face: and were sore afraid.

And Jesus came and touched them, and said: Arise, and be not afraid.

And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.

And when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying: Lord, have mercy on my son: for he is lunatic, and sore vexed: for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

And I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him.

Then Jesus answered and said: O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him hither to me.

And Jesus rebuked the devil: and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour.

Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said: Why could not we cast him out?

And Jesus said unto them: Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place: and it shall remove, and nothing shall be impossible unto you.

And Jesus came and touched them, and said: Arise, and be not afraid.

And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.

And when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying: Lord, have mercy on my son: for he is lunatic, and sore vexed: for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

And I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him.

Then Jesus answered and said: O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him hither to me.

And Jesus rebuked the devil: and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour.

Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said: Why could not we cast him out?

And Jesus said unto them: Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place: and it shall remove, and nothing shall be impossible unto you.

And Jesus came and touched them, and said: Arise, and be not afraid.

And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.

And when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying: Lord, have mercy on my son: for he is lunatic, and sore vexed: for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

And I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him.

Then Jesus answered and said: O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him hither to me.

And Jesus rebuked the devil: and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour.

Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said: Why could not we cast him out?

And Jesus said unto them: Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place: and it shall remove, and nothing shall be impossible unto you.

And Jesus came and touched them, and said: Arise, and be not afraid.

And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.

And when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying: Lord, have mercy on my son: for he is lunatic, and sore vexed: for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

And I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him.

Then Jesus answered and said: O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him hither to me.

And Jesus rebuked the devil: and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour.

Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said: Why could not we cast him out?

And Jesus said unto them: Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place: and it shall remove, and nothing shall be impossible unto you.

And Jesus came and touched them, and said: Arise, and be not afraid.

And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.

And when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying: Lord, have mercy on my son: for he is lunatic, and sore vexed: for oftentimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

And I brought him to thy disciples, and they could not cure him.

Then Jesus answered and said: O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him hither to me.

And Jesus rebuked the devil: and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour.

Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said: Why could not we cast him out?

and attribute our failure to circumstances, while the fault is most probably in ourselves, our lack of faith and courage.

5. From the mountain tops we too must come down into the valleys of service, not neglecting to seek the mountain tops of spiritual vision and exaltation on the one hand, else we will be lifeless and powerless, nor passing by the humblest opportunity for service on the other, else our spiritual blessings will be selfishly misused for our own enjoyment.

6. To illustrate the transfiguration, the story might be told of Peter the Great, who left his throne in Russia, and traveled incognito to Holland, and worked there as a carpenter and ship-builder to learn the trade. Had he some day appeared to his companions in all his robes of state, surrounded by his court, as the great head of the Russian empire, it would have produced an effect and been something like the revelation which Christ here gave to his disciples of who he was and what was his mission among them.

PEABODY COLLEGE FOR TEACHERS.

NASHVILLE, TENN.
Only Teachers' College in South of recognized College Standard.
Three groups of 4-year Degree Courses.
Two-year "Diploma" Course.
Degree or Diploma insures easiest entrance into best positions.
Recent Magnificent Endowment. Tuition $10.00 a quarter.
CHAS. E. LITTLE, Ph. D., Ph. M. of Faculty.

PRENTISS, MISS.

Everything goes well on my circuit. Our District Conference, June 5-10, proved to be one of our best Conferences and was a great blessing to Methodism in our town. Brother Leggett proved equal to the occasion and handled the business of the Conference well. Nearly all the preachers were present and a number of delegates. The preaching was at high-water mark. Every preacher who ministered from the pulpit, excelled himself. Five young men were licensed to preach; these were recommended for admission on trial. The laymen took an active part in the Conference. The laymen of the Brookhaven District are active in the Laymen's Movement. We are having a Laymen's Meeting in all of my churches. At Mt. Zion, on the first Sunday in July, the laymen from all parts of my circuit met and rendered a well-prepared programme on subjects like this: Education, Church Extension, Our Obligation to the Heathen World, Our work is China, etc. On the fifth Sunday in July, they will have a meeting at Bassfield and so on until every church shall have been touched. My laymen are well posted on the doctrine and polity of our Church and the laymen's work. The preacher who fails to grasp this opportunity of organizing and working his laymen, stands in his own light and hinders the progress of the Church. We have a chance to "go up and possess the land now." God grant that we may do it! I have just returned from Buford Mission where I assisted Brother Smith in a meeting of eight days. I rejoiced with those loyal Methodists of Summers' Chapel on the success of the meeting. We had twenty-two accessions to the church and a number converted. The church is on the upgrade. Brother Smith is in high favor with his people and is a very fine fellow to work with. I was especially glad to see the people having their children dedicated to God at Summer Chapel. I am now commencing my revival meetings and am looking for great things. I get great help from the Advocate. It is good, loyal, Methodist. I enjoyed your reply to Mr. Boone. I am sure he is no kin to Daniel Boone, as he would not have written the article replied to.—M. L. White.

No man is ever educated in due form save as being a man; that is a creature related to God, and having all his highest summits of capacity unfolded by the great thoughts and greater sentiments and nobler inspirations of religion.—Horace Bushnell.

Free Homesteads from 40 to 160 acres of land in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi GIVEN AWAY by UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT to successful applicants. Send 25c for information and application form. DIXIE HOME CO., Box A, Princeton, Florida.

Votan, the new Coffee from the South, stands out in bold relief through the Delightful,

Lingering Taste

AND Distinctive,

Characteristic Flavor

that is to be found only in this rare and perfect blend.

Votan is recognized as the world's choicest coffee. It is a natural importation from Central America and Southern Mexico, the world's greatest coffee-growing region, where dwell the ancient Maya Indians, who worshipped Votan as their God. It is said to be the finest and most delicious coffee ever produced.

Coffee
The Votan Line
Tea

Votan, the superlatively aromatic, fragrant tea, is known for its Distinctiveness AND Palate-Delighting After-taste.

There's no other tea in the world just like Votan, because in this famous brand alone, are blended several of the finest and most delicious teas that nature produces. They are specially selected for their own individual goodness.

Particular tea-drinkers should always take Votan, because it is only will they find their favorite flavor. Comes in quarter, half and one pound cans. It's extremely fancy.

There is an Exclusive Agent in your town.

The Votan Tea & Coffee Co. Importers, Roasters and Packers, New Orleans, U. S. A.

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves 8:00 a.m.

at 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a.m. as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves 7:30 p.m.

at 7:30 p.m.

FOR

NEW YORK,

CINCINNATI,

ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW ON SALE

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 57—No. 30.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD"

WHOLE No. 2842.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JULY 28, 1910.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

THE RECENT MEETING OF THE VANDERBILT BOARD OF TRUST.

I was present at all the meetings of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust during the late commencement. And believing as I do that the board is simply an organ of the Church (an opinion which I repeatedly expressed during its recent meetings), I feel that the Church should be apprised of its temper and acts. If any one should question the propriety of discussing these things in public print, I will answer that I am only following the example of its President, Bishop E. R. Hendrix.

The official notice of the meeting of the board came to me early in June. A second letter from Mr. Whiteford Cole, the Secretary, followed a few days later, saying that owing to important matters which were to come before the board, and legal opinions thereon, it was deemed advisable that the board should meet in preliminary session a day or two in advance of the regular annual meeting. A bare majority of the board were present at 10 a. m. on Saturday, June 10, in response to this letter. Bishop Hendrix, after prayer, called upon the Secretary to state the object of the meeting.

The Secretary, in response, stated that Chancellor Kirkland had attended the General Conference in Asheville at the request of the Executive Committee of the board and thought it proper that the Chancellor should be heard. The Chancellor thereupon gave his account of such proceedings of the conference as affected the Vanderbilt controversy. He characterized the action of the conference as "partisan," alleging that it had been dominated by the Chairman of the Committee on Education, Judge E. C. O'Rear. I protested that such statements were a reflection on the conference, and that the men who composed the General Conference were "partisan" followers of no man. The chairmanship of our Committee on Education did give Judge O'Rear a prominent place in the discussions on the floor of the conference, and it must be admitted that he filled his place admirably. As a matter of fact, however, Judge O'Rear was one of the most modest men on our committee, and the report of the committee which the conference so unanimously adopted was written in its essential features by other members of the committee. The desire of our committee, in which our chairman fully concurred, was to avert, if possible, open rupture with the Board of Trust. Paragraph 200 of the Discipline (requiring trustees of all our property to be members of our Church "when proper persons can be had") was amended on recommendation of our committee for the express purpose of relieving an embarrassing situation when the Vanderbilt board had gotten itself into by electing to its membership persons who are not members of our Church. The General Conference in adopting the various items of our committee's report was as respectful and as conciliatory toward the Board of Trust of the Vanderbilt University as it could be without yielding vital points in the controversy between them. Even Bishop Hendrix, chairman of the board, admits in his article in the Nashville of July 1, that "the General Conference had only words of approval for the board." This, I think, sufficiently disposes of the Chancellor's charge of "partisanship" against the conference as a whole or any member thereof.

Following the Chancellor's speech and my reply, the Secretary of the board submitted opinions from three Tennessee lawyers: one from Mr. Chas. Trabue, another from Mr. John Bell Keeble (both esteemed college friends of mine). I rejoice to know that the latter two are now classed among "the most eminent lawyers in Tennessee." The opinion of Mr. Trabue was read in full. He denied every essential point in the findings of our Vanderbilt Commission. I believe my memory serves me aright when I say he denied the Commission's conclusions in toto.

These denials he based, in part, upon his study of the common law prevailing in Tennessee.

Mr. Trabue further based his denials upon his study of the Tennessee statute of 1895, which reads as follows: "Whenever any educational institution has been established, and is being maintained and patronized by any religious body or denomination, or shall hereafter be so established, maintained and patronized, the representative governing body of such society or denomination shall have the power and authority, at its option, to elect its Board of Directors or Trustees, or to fill vacancies occurring therein," etc. This statute, as the Commission pointed out, was held valid by the Supreme Court of the State in 1904 in the case of the Southwestern Presbyterian University et al. vs. the Presbyterian Synods of the State of Tennessee et al.

Mr. Trabue questioned the constitutionality of this statute, and especially its "applicability." How did he do this? Answer: (1) By denying that the Church had "established" the University; (2) by denying that the Church had "maintained" the University; (3) by denying that the Church had "patronized" the University. With these as premises he denied, therefore, that the legislative body of the Church had any right to elect the trustees of the University, or that the Bishops had any visitatorial rights whatsoever. The other opinions submitted (but not read) were said to be of the same tenor. Bishop Hendrix, chairman of the board, spoke of Mr. Trabue's opinion as an "illuminating" opinion. That the other eighteen of the majority agreed with our Bishop, who had refrained from going to Edinburgh and had rather attended the board meeting because of his "supreme desire to save Vanderbilt University to the Church," will be apparent a little further on.

On reading Mr. Trabue's opinion over, it was proposed, either by formal motion or suggestion, that a committee of lawyers take the opinions submitted and present in a concise manner their conclusions at the meeting of the board on the following Monday. Dr. George B. Winton doubted the propriety of such action, and I mustered up courage enough to say that for myself I needed no further light on the question, that I was there as a representative of my Church, that my Church had spoken through the conclusions of an able and painstaking Commission, and that nothing was left for me to do except obey my instructions, or resign my place and go home. I thought my appeal to the commission was unanswerable. Had not the board itself, in a formal resolution, expressed its appreciation "of the ability and fidelity with which the members of the Commission (had) discharged their important duties?" Had not the chairman of the board, Bishop Hendrix, four years ago hastened to express to the Commissioners his thanks for their "able work?" Had he not spoken a month before in his Episcopal address of the "commendable thoroughness" with which the Commission did its work? Dr. E. B. Chappell spoke of the opinions of the three Tennessee lawyers as ex parte opinions. Dr. Jno. H. Dye spoke substantially in the same manner. Bishop Hendrix, in insisting that the proposed committee might do its work without a formal motion, said the board did not propose "to go blindly" into these matters. The solicited opinions of these Tennessee lawyers who deny every claim of the Church, reckless with both law and history, are "illuminating" to follow the "unpurchased" findings of a great Methodist Commission is "to go blindly!" How can Bishop Hendrix speak thus of our Commissioners, Judges E. D. Newman, J. A. Rich, E. C. O'Rear, Creed E. Bates, Jos. A. McCullough and Prof. L. H. Harris, who, as an evidence of their careful work, say:

"The Commission has considered the charter of the Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; the charter of the Vanderbilt University, which is an amendment of the first-named charter; the action of the various conferences relating to the establishment of the University on behalf of certain confederates of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, both antecedent and following its establishment; copies of the proceedings of the Memphis Convention, 1844; January 21, 1872; the report of the General Conference bearing upon the subject; the reports of the Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and of the trustees of the Vanderbilt University. We have also had before us the records of the proceedings had by the Board of Trustees of Central University, and of Vanderbilt University. In addition the Commission has heard oral testimony introduced before us, which has been preserved, having been stenographically taken, and will be filed with the records of the Commission's proceedings. Chancellor Kirkland, of Vanderbilt University, appeared in person, as well as by printed briefs filed before the Commission; certain of the Board of Trustees appeared by legal representation, and some of them in person; Bishops Fitzgerald, Hoss, Tigert and Ward appeared in person, and Bishop Hoss also appeared by counsel; Dr. D. C. Kelly, of the Tennessee Conference, and Dr. Tillett, Dean of the Biblical Department of the Vanderbilt University, appeared in person. All of these parties were heard in oral argument except the members of the Board of Trustees mentioned above, who were represented in oral argument by their counsel alone. From the evidence referred to, and which, in so far as we have deemed it relevant as bearing on the question at issue before us, we have incorporated into a record which will be filed with the General Board of Education and from consideration of the statute laws of Tennessee, which are also compiled, in so far as we deem that they bear upon the question submitted to us, and arranged a part of the record, and from a consideration of the common law prevailing in Tennessee and from the arguments adduced before us—we have reached the following conclusions:

Will any one of the three lawyers giving the opinions referred to say that he has given the time devoted by the Commission to this subject, or had the same opportunities for arriving at the exact truth?

The names of the three trustees, Messrs. Harris, Godbey and Biggs, elected by the General Conference to fill existing vacancies in the Board of Trust, were not called by the Secretary at Monday's session. Later Col. N. E. Harris and Rev. V. A. Godbey, bearing a certificate of their election from the Secretary of the General Conference, appeared and received courteous treatment at the hands of the board. The chairman, Bishop Hendrix, upon motion appointed a committee of five lawyers to whom was referred the credentials mentioned. Two of these were not members of our Church—Messrs. Buffington and Burch. These, recognizing the delicacy of the situation, very graciously begged to be relieved from the duty the chairman was about to impose upon them. What the report of the committee would be was now a foregone conclusion, and these gentlemen, themselves not Methodists, did not relish the idea of denying the claims of a Methodist General Conference. After some discussion the chairman appointed two other lawyers to serve with the committee he had first named, one of whom was Major R. W. Millsaps, of Mississippi. The appointment of Major Millsaps, an after consideration, was fortunate for the Church. Otherwise there would have been a solid report against seating the delegates elected by the General Conference. That the committee might be aided in the discharge of its duties, it was said, the letter of Mr. W. K. Vanderbilt was also referred to it.

On the following day the committee brought in two reports: a majority signed by six members, and a minority report signed by one, Major R. W. Millsaps, of Mississippi. The exact verbiage of the majority report I do not recall. Bishop Hendrix is right, however, in saying that it favored "the board's filling its own vacancies" and "annulling its own by-law to give the right of confirmation to the Board of Education." The Bishop is in error touching the

Mr. Chairman, in the case of the credentials of N. E. Harris, A. W. Biggs and V. A. Godbey, I am in a minority. I am in a minority in the following: Whereas, the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to appoint the trustees of this University being denied by this Board of Trustees, great unrest is likely to follow to the damage of the University and the Church. To allay as much as possible this unrest and to guard as far as possible the interests of the University, this board hereby declares the trust it holds is a trust for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and that Vanderbilt University belongs to said Church.

The introduction of this resolution brought confusion. For the first time during the entire sitting of the board, was there a semblance of confusion. The Secretary, Mr. Whiteford Cole, with a wave of his hand and suppressed feeling, said we were not ready for any such resolution. Calls of withdrawal came from a number of the majority.

Mr. Allen Carter (another classmate of mine) besought me at my chair to withdraw. I steadfastly and emphatically declined. The resolution was then tabled. The subject in the minds of the majority, was not worth discussion. It was summarily tabled. I think our chairman did not vote; otherwise the majority seemed to be about the same as in the previous vote.

There is one other action of the board which I had almost forgotten to mention, namely, that relating to the Biblical Department of the University. Our Committee on Education at the General Conference recommended the "segregation" of funds for the Biblical Department. This was done upon the assurance of Dr. Tillett, Dean of the department, that it did not mean, nor did he desire, a separate board for his department. The special committee at the late Board of Trust meeting, to whom was referred the Biblical Department, embodied in its report to the board a resolution that a legislative committee be appointed looking to the enactment of such legislation as would permit this department of the University to be organized under its own board. I moved to amend the report by striking out this clause of the report. In discussing the advisability of thus separating the Biblical Department, Judge Ratcliffe, of Little Rock, said that in time it might be found advisable to "remove" the Theological Department from the campus. The amendment was defeated by an overwhelming vote and the report of the committee as originally introduced was adopted.

In view of the above actions of the majority of the board, which I have tried impartially and dispassionately to recite, I read with amazement the opening sentence of the article of Bishop Hendrix, chairman of the board, in which he says: "At the late meeting of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust, there was an earnest effort to secure forever all the rights of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Vanderbilt University" (Nashville, July 10). The measures adopted by the majority not only "look to" a denial of the Church's rights, as Bishop Hoss affirms in the Nashville of July 8, but seem to me to be a positive, deliberate and unequivocal denial.

W. D. BRADFIELD.

Dallas, July 14, 1910.

SOME BIBLICAL CRITICISM.

By Rev. W. L. Duren.

The present day interpretation of the Scriptures seems to me to drift more and more toward the method employed by the popular magazine, which approaches the Book as a piece of ancient literature, and nothing more. They seek to console us sometimes by the assurance that there is a distinction to be made between Biblical criticism and systematic theology, but there can be but little comfort in this, if we remember that our systems of theology are at last but the reflections of what we concede to be the true interpretation of the Book. So, I think, there is no question that ought to be of more vital importance to the Church than that of Biblical criticism.

Now, I do not mean to repudiate the conclusions of reverential scholarship, and I do not mean to bring railing accusation against any critic or class of critics; but I do raise question as to the merit of that criticism which depends solely upon the literary or scientific method of investigation. To my mind one of the most certain indications of the vulnerability of such writings is the sensitiveness of the authors, who acknowledge the necessity for defense by hedging introductions. I think, too, that it is usually safe to take an opprobrious anticipation of opposition as notice of caution. But I shall not allow a prejudgment of opposition by distasteful characterization to suppress my dissent.

I object to the method employed in a great deal of what is thrust upon us as Biblical criticism; and I am going to illustrate the method to which I am alluding by reference to two books which I have just finished reading. The first is The Personality of a Personality, by Dr. Morton Prince of Boston. The logic of its method is a denial of revelation. In this book the author is dealing with the case of a woman afflicted with a serious nervous disorder, and by hypnosis as he tells us, he altered her personality after the fashion of the "Madame Hyde." I do not presume to criticize the general method of this book, but upon this almost entirely new method of investigation of truth which proceeds from the outside, he says:

The biographies of saints, like Catherine of Siena, and Francis, the founder of the Franciscan Order, and of leaders of religious thought like George Fox, the Quaker, John Bunyan, and Savonarola, to say nothing of minor lights like Savonarola's follower, Fra Silvestro, are replete with accounts of visions and internal voices which once upon a time were interpreted as visitations or supernatural messages of one kind or another. The researches of recent years in abnormal psychology enable us to understand the genesis of these sensory automatisms, even if we cannot yet explain their exact psychological mechanism. In the light of this knowledge, it becomes clear that they are due to the auto-genetic influence of the subject's own thoughts, conscious or subconscious.

Now I have not the slightest disposition to defend the visions in question, but I think this sort of method of criticism carried but a single step further would reduce Samuel Isaac Jeremiah, Daniel P. Paul, John, and all the rest to the level of ordinary material dreamers—dreamers who were so close with their fanatical thoughts that their very minds and hearts came to be an echo of the devil. Surely there would be great gain to the Church and to the religious life of the world by such a lightning exposure of the cause and significance of profane visions as is indicated here. And what that method can do by way of dissipating the force and authority of prophecy, it can do toward the annihilation of the entire Book. Whatever others may do or think, I want my Bible exempted forever from such questionable deductions; and I want it understood that no beauty of diction nor smartness of terms can compensate for its emasculation.

The second book is Japan: An Interpretation, by Lafcadio Hearn. The conclusions of this book in effect deny the sanity and authority of the Great Commission. In his effort to interpret this heathen civilization his method carries him to the conclusion that the missionary propaganda of the Church is all wrong, unless, like Buddhism, it can accommodate itself to the ancestor cult and to the other heathenish traditions and rites which mark the centuries of Japanese history. In other words, he would reduce the idea of world evangelization to a series of multifarious adaptations which should preserve inviolate the integrity of the heathenish and the false. Surely that method of interpretation would put strange words in the mouth of him who said: "Think not that I am come to send peace on earth; I came not to send peace, but a sword."

But this investigation carries the author further still. He says:

From the sociological point of view the whole missionary system, irrespective of sect and creed, represents the skirmishing force of Western civilization in its general attack upon all civilizations of the ancient type—the first line in the forward movement of the strongest and most highly evolved societies upon the weaker and less evolved. The conscious work of these fighters is that of preachers and teachers; their unconscious work is that of sappers and destroyers. The subjugation of weak races has been aided by their work to a degree little imagined; and by no other conceivable means could it have been accomplished so quickly and so surely. For destruction they labor unknowingly, like a force of nature. Yet Christianity does not appreciably expand. They perish; and they really lay down their lives with more than the courage of soldiers, not as they hope, to assist the spread of that doctrine which the East must still of necessity refuse, but to help industrial enterprise and Occidental aggrandizement.

Couple with this the idea of "auto-genetic" visions and apply the principle to the "Macedonian Cry." See what startling disclosures we shall have regarding the spirit and purpose of the ministry of the great Apostle to the Gentiles! I am unwilling to have the missionary authority of my Bible interpreted by one of those perfectly fair and unbiased critics, the scientific precision of whose method enables him to so analyze the rights and immunities of a heathen civilization as to make of my Lord the misguided forerunner of a spirit of greed and avarice.

Now, I know perfectly well that these books are not primarily attempts at interpretation of Scripture, and I am not citing them as such. But I am using them to illustrate what I think to be a dangerous method of criticism—a method calculated to destroy and not to build up. Yet I am persuaded that this is a method much employed at this time. I do not protest against criticism, but I do insist that the critic have other equipment beside a spy-glass and a tape-line. I want the criticism of no man with a hazy conception of inspiration, and "revelation." I don't want any dissociation of the Bible from the will of the General Conference. When the reading of the majority report by Mr. Sanders and that of the minority by Major Millsaps was finished, by motion the latter was made the substitute for the former. The resolution itself reads: "Resolved, that N. E. Harris, A. W. Biggs and V. A. Godbey be recognized as duly elected trustees of this board, and that they be invited to occupy their seats accordingly." The debate and the vote were now on the substitute. The issue was squarely joined between the General Conference and the Board of Trust. Would the board recognize the authority of the highest body in the Church to elect the trustees composing the board; or would it deny that authority? The debate consumed the rest of Tuesday morning's session and the vote was reached about 5 o'clock in the afternoon session. By motion both Col. Harris and Dr. Godbey were heard. They made admirable speeches. The substance of the masterly speech of Col. Harris is given in his letter to Bishop Hoss (see Nashville Advocate, July 8, page 11). Nearly every member of the board spoke either for or against the report. Dr. Byrd, pastor of West End Church, Nashville, said in voting against the minority report, he recognized that the University "was passing from the Church." Bishop Wilson was never greater. He declared that as a lawyer he had had special occasion to study the question of trusts. He said the majority of the board had no shadow of ground for their contention against the Church. He said if they could do what they were now proposing to do, that there then is nothing in law to prevent them from turning the Vanderbilt campus into a beer garden and every church into a theatre. He said for years he had seen this crisis coming; that the majority need not think they are fooling anybody. He said that if the Church could not control the University, it would build one that it could control. Bishop Hendrix followed Bishop Wilson. He denied that the University had been drifting away from the Church. Rather, by the compact entered into with the General Conference at Baltimore in 1898, it had come closer. He said there was no occasion for this disturbance. He said that the whole controversy began in things trivial and personal. He characterized the recent action of the General Conference unfortunate. Chancellor Kirkland said he did not deny that the Church could run a great university. It could if it would. He said that if the University is drifting, perhaps the Church had better take it under its control. He said the action of the General Conference was revolutionary, and if the board wanted to see themselves displaced by others, to vote for the minority resolution. I could not refrain from expressing amazement at Bishop Hendrix's speech, especially trying to refute his statement that the board had given no occasion for this disturbance. I recited acts of the Board calculated to disturb the mind of the Church: (1) Ejection of Bishops, (2) application for charter in which no mention of the Church could be found, (3) argument of Chancellor Kirkland before the Commission in which he denied the representative character of the trustees, (4) voting down a full and frank acceptance of the report of the Commission and substituting therefor a qualified acceptance, (5) polite refusal to heed the Bishops in the exercise of their visitatorial powers.

We are now ready, after hours of discussion, to vote on the substitute, the minority report, favoring the recognition and the seating of the new trustees "as duly elected trustees of this board." I called for a yeas and nays vote. The vote was as follows: Yeas—Bishop Wilson, Young, Chappell, Millsaps, Pepper, Dye, Browder, Bradfield, Nays—Bishop Hendrix, Cupples, Winton, Byrd, etc. The substitute was declared lost by 19 to 8. The majority report was then adopted by a viva voce vote.

The board by this vote clearly showed itself insubordinate to the will of the General Conference.

and religion such as we have in the declaration that all religion is evolved out of the life of man. For if that be so, Jesus Christ is the broken projection of a shadow that shall become more inexplicable with the passing of every generation of men. If that be so, there is no finality, there is no ultimate of authority, and no voice whispers a word of hope to the "guest among shadows." That condition of matters may be satisfactory to some men; but I want some place to rest upon, and something of which I can say: "This I know." I care for no criticism save that of the man whose heart and life responds to the Book and its message as the heart and life of Obed Edom responded to the Ark that rested in his home.

I am not in sympathy with any dogma that so iron-clads truth as to destroy religious individuality, and I believe in clothing the gospel message, the message of final authority, in the viable forms and expression of modern thought. I am unwilling to believe that the Bible could be God's Book and be impossible to any age or condition of men. But I do not believe that it is necessary to deny, by implication or otherwise, its finality in order that its ethical and spiritual efficacy may be preserved. Hence I am unwilling to see the obliteration of the earmarks of revelation by any effort to adjust it to modern life, and I suggest that it would be eminently more fair to the Book and productive, possibly, of as much good if those critics would exert themselves toward making some adjustments at the other end of the line.

As for me, I never expect to exchange the Bible that was finished amid the glories of the Apocalypse for the nebulous theories of a research-mad generation; and I shall not surrender the authority of its message for any of the more palatable morsels which a superficial criticism may evolve. I am not ready for Homer to sit in the seat of David, for Shakespeare to take the place of Job, or to put a history of the nations in the place of the Acts of the Apostles, nor for any that I know to take the place of John as a revealer of strange things.

Tupelo, Miss.

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

Chapter XX.

While we were at Caseyville, a country show passed through our neighborhood. The man advertising it came a day or two ahead, and placed posters around, stating when and where it was to be, and that ministers and their families would be admitted free of charge. The show was to be on Monday morning. The Sunday morning before, while sitting at my desk preparing for preaching service, I happened to look in the direction of the church and saw a man in front of the church tacking up notices of the show, on trees around the church. I hid down my pen, got my hat and walked up to the church. I said to the man: "My friend, this is the Sabbath-day; no day for you to advertise your business. Besides, this is church ground; no place for you to advertise your business." I had him take down all the notices. He did not like it much, but I could not help that.

You have heard, Mr. Editor, of hush money. Hush money ought to burn the fingers of every one that accepts it. It does burn the conscience so long as a man has any conscience. Some say: "If you just won't condemn my business, I will show you favors." I don't want hush money. I want the privilege of condemning sin of every character when and where I come in contact with it.

A young, fearless, John the Baptist kind of a man went to a new charge. One of the stewards said to him: "Mr. B. is a wholesale and retail whisky dealer. He pays the Church $50 annually for a pew. Please do not say anything against whisky." The noble young man replied: "Take $50 off my salary. I want a straight shot at that pew."

Well, I preached my sermon, paid my respects to the show, then said to my congregation: "You expect to go to this show and take your family. You know as well as I, you are not able to pay your just debts. You know as well as I do, you are not able to educate your children as you ought to. You know as well as I do, you plead poverty when I call upon you for money for the Lord's work. Yet you expect to go to the show. God will hold you responsible for misappropriating his money." One of the showmen was in the church. The day following, not a single white man or woman attended the show. The showmen left the community and said that "little old preacher" run them off. They were advertised to show at other places in the bounds of my work, but they did not go there, and kept out of the bounds of my work so long as I remained in Caseyville.

A preacher who hasn't the courage of Elijah or John the Baptist had better stop and consider a little. It is true, John lost his head for doing his duty. It is better to lose your life here than lose it in the next world. He that saves his life in this world, will lose it in the next. He that loses his life here for Christ's sake, shall find it again. A preacher that refrains from preaching the whole Gospel for fear of offending some old sinner that gives him a little money occasionally, had better halt and consider.

I preached a very plain sermon some years ago, in which I condemned certain sins that were indulged in by many church members. A certain woman remarked about it: "That man preached a mighty good sermon, but I don't want to hear him again." She did not like to be reminded of her iniquity; that was all.

A lady once said to me: "Brother Lewis, who told you about us people here at this church?" I had received information from no one. A good sister standing by said: "The Lord told him. That is where he got his information." And the good Lord will always teach us how and what to preach when we live close to him.

Christ compared some church members to whitened sepulchers, that appear most beautiful on the outside, but within are full of rottenness and dead men's bones. Again he said: "Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?" He was talking to church members.

A rich man was dying. He sent for his pastor to read and comfort him in his dying moments. The preacher, in his haste, read from the 50th chapter of James: "Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you." The dying man stopped him, saying: "You never told me that before." The preacher turned hastily to another place and read: "The rich man also died, and was buried; and in hell—" "Stop!" said the poor, dying man. "You never read that to me before." That preacher had not been faithful to that one of his members, or he would not have been so confused in a moment when he ought to have been perfectly composed.

I don't want the blood of any man on my hands. It is not necessary to get the ill will of people often; but it is better to do that, than fail to do your whole duty in preaching the gospel and condemning sin. Better to tell a man in plain terms that he is on his way to hell, than try to make him believe he is all right, when you know he is all wrong. "All unrighteousness is sin." "He that committeth sin is of the devil." Read thoughtfully and prayerfully I. John, 3d chapter.

Many of our people are hungry, oh, so hungry, for plain, practical, old-time Methodist Gospel sermons. John Wesley said: "Education is a good thing; saving souls is a better thing."

While at Caseyville, I preached a plain, earnest sermon on the judgment. An old man, a hypocrite in the church, sitting in the rear, got scared, jumped up, ran to and knelt at the altar. He was the most restless man I had seen in a long time. I asked Brother Horace Godbold what was the matter with him. "Your sermon got close to him, woke him up, frightened him," was his reply. I heard a preacher say once: "About one in five of my members are religious." "Very good per cent," said I. Another preacher said to me: "Not a man in this congregation knows anything about religion." This was at a $1,500 station. May God wake us preachers up, and give us courage to "cry aloud, spare not, lift up thy voice like a trumpet, and show my people their transgression, and the house of Jacob their sins."

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM.

By Rev. J. W. Campbell.

The seemingly disquieting condition of mind of some of the brethren concerning the proposed change of name of our Church would indicate that they thought a great calamity was about to overtake us. As for myself, I cannot see any reason for losing our equipoise, or of making injurious comparisons, or of dealing in pyrotechnic philosophy because a plain business proposition comes before us.

The claim that the word "South" in our official title is a geographical limitation is well founded. It served a purpose of that kind when the Church divided sixty-five years ago, but is there necessity for such limitation or distinction today? If so, then we should be "honest toward all men" and withdraw from the Western field; but if there is not, then the word has evidently outlived its purpose, and we had better drop it.

It is a well-known fact that the Northern Methodist Church (which, by the way, claims several official titles) laid claim to our Church property when we separated from it, and that we had to appeal to the law of the land for protection; and it is also a fact that during the war between the States the Northern Church took charge of some of our church property, that fell into the hands of the invading army, without any courtesy whatever. And let it not be forgotten that the Northern Methodist Church violated its agreement to recognize our right in the "South" by establishing conferences of its own within our borders; and by sending "missionary money" into this barbaric Southland to foster churches for which there is neither excuse nor justification. Such violations of the solemn compact between the two great branches of American Methodism rendered the whole agreement a nullity and justifies our presence in the Western field; and shall we hesitate to meet the obligations incumbent upon us? Shall we cling to a name that has served us well, for fear the Northern Methodist Church will again undertake to appropriate that which belongs to us? Or shall we lay aside our "limitations" and go into the world as a field as a glorious Church, instead of a "glorious name?"

Suppose under our present name we have wrought gloriously—was it the name or was it men that did the work? Suppose that around the word "South" there clings many sacred memories; shall we keep our Church name for a peg to hang memories on? Surely our rich Methodistism is more than a tradition, more than a ritual adaptation society. It is a branch of the Church of the "First Born," and as such has a right to rise above all things earthly, even its earth-born name.

The question of changing the name of our branch of Methodism does not involve our loyalty to Southern ideals or Southern institutions; nor does it question our integrity in the past nor cast a reflection upon our traditions; but it is a plain question as to whether we can do more efficient service for our Lord in other sections than the "South." Having spent twenty years in the Northwest, I believe I know the peculiarities of thought of the people of that section. However much I may differ from them, yet the fact is clear that a condition—not a theory—is to be met. How shall we meet it? By clinging to our "glorious history" and discouraging upon our "traditions"? Or shall we sacrifice a non-essential if haply we may the more profitably declare the gospel to our fellow-countrymen?

It may sound "economic" to some to talk about the money we have "wasted" in trying to win the West, and about turning to Mexico and Cuba and Brazil with our men and our treasure, but will not alien people resist us more than our fellow-countrymen? No matter what our name. Furthermore, if we leave America to degenerate, how may we expect to successfully preach a gospel of regeneration to an ignorant alien people? What excuse may we give to God for turning away from unconverted Americans in order to Christianize mixed races of heathen? If we cannot win the West to our own ideas, then let us love that field enough to be willing to lay aside, for the sake of Christ, a word that has no magic of saving power in it.

I love the M. E. Church, South, with an ardent love, and I am willing to go where it goes, unless it goes bodily into the Northern branch—then I would have to be excused; but if we can be a stronger factor in the West by surrendering the word "South" in our name, then I am surely willing to surrender that much for Christ's sake.

Fayette, Miss.

DR. WEBER AT MANSFIELD.

Dear Dr. Meek: The many friends of Dr. Weber, president of Mansfield College, will be glad to know that he has reached Mansfield and assumed his duties. The Doctor's friends are very much gratified at his physical condition, and all feel that he is the right man in the right place.

Six busy days with from six to ten workmen have made quite a change in the appearance of the front of the main building. One more day with this force will complete all that is necessary on that part of the building. We hope to have everything in readiness for the opening in September. Let the Methodist people of Louisiana rally to the support of Mansfield College, and her success is assured.

J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

WINONA DISTRICT.

The Parent Board of Missions is sending out 18 new missionaries.

Now is the time for the Laymen's Missionary Movement to "move." Carrollton's Laymen's organization has raised this year $108.96.

Brother Wm. Siddon, of Mars Hill, pays $5 each month, and Brother John Woods, same charge, pays also $1 monthly. If the men of Southern Methodism would do as well instead of the cry of "A million for missions," we would have annually eighteen millions. Will not each leader in every charge get busy now and lend a hand? Please do so, brothers.

E. R. BINGHAM, District Lay Leader.

Jehovah says: "Them that honor me, I will honor; but they that slight me shall be lightly esteemed."—Selected.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH

LEON IRWIN & CO.

FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 535.

SPEARING & CO.,

(Established 1817.)

SAIL MAKERS

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPULINS and TENTS.

CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOU LAS STREETS

Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

Church News

The Pacific Methodist Advocate has developed into a splendid publication. The General Conference The last two sessions have been of exceptional merit both as to the content and the editorial work.

The Presbyterian of Mississippi held their Synodical Sunday school convention on the Chautauque grounds at Clarksburg, last week. The attendance was good, the addresses instructive and much interest in the work was manifested.

Bishop Monzon dedicated the Methodist Church at Poplarville, Miss., on Monday night the 19th inst. This structure is built of pressed brick, is beautifully finished both inside and out, and cost $10,000. The Bishop's sermon is said to have made a profound impression.

Cardinal Gibbons, the eminent Roman Catholic Churchman, celebrated his seventy-sixth birthday on July 23d. He is an author of note, having written "The Faith of our Fathers," "Our Christian Heritage," and "The Ambassador for Christ." His home is in Baltimore.

Wm. Jennings Bryan says: "I am an elder in the Presbyterian Church. My father was a Baptist, and when I was born my mother was a Methodist, but she afterwards turned Baptist. When I was married my wife was a Methodist, but she joined the Presbyterian Church with me. My two youngest children are Methodists, and my eldest daughter is an Episcopalian."

At the recent session of the Parish District Conference (Tennessee) Mr. J. A. Robins, a transplanted Mississippian, was re-elected district lay leader. A special of $600 for missions was pledged. Mr. Robins is a son of Mrs. E. D. Robins, of Tupelo, and a nephew of the Hon. John M. Allen, who for many years was a congressman from Mississippi and a national figure.

A movement is under way in New Orleans to raise $5,000 for the establishment of a school for the teaching of Hebrew. It is said that only those who are able to pay will be charged tuition. A scholarly Jew of the city is quoted as saying, "The language of the Jewish prophets and poets is being forgotten, and our children should be taught this noble tongue."

The Dixie Methodist is the name of a new monthly just projected at Mount Airy, N. C. Mr. D. V. Price is the editor and publisher. The initial number contains much interesting matter, and is quite a creditable issue in every respect. We welcome Brother Price into the already overcrowded field of Methodist journalism and into the fellowship of the new suffering which awaits him.

An earnest effort is being made to induce Dr. J. I. Vance, of Newark, N. J., to return to Nashville to become pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of that city. The ministers of all denominations there recently signed a petition to him to accept this call which has been formally extended. Dr. Vance served this congregation several years ago, achieving an enviable reputation in the Tennessee capital, both as a preacher and as a citizen.

President W. P. Few in the last copy of the Raleigh Christian Advocate has an interesting communication on "The Growing Influence of Trinity College." Among other things he says: "Theodore Roosevelt, just now perhaps the most conspicuous man in the world, at a reception at Stockholm during his recent tour of Europe, is reported to have said while shaking hands with a Trinity man, 'I am delighted to meet you; you are from the best college in the South.'"

If the public subscribes liberally Boston will soon have a statue of the Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale erected in some conspicuous place, probably in Copley Square. The statue proposed has already been prepared in plaster by Bela L. Pratt, of Boston. It represents Dr. Hale as he appeared in daily life in the streets of Washington and Boston, with a soft hat in his left hand and his cane carried in the right. It will be of heroic size, with suitable pedestal and accessories. The inscription for the front reads: "Edward Everett Hale, Man of Letters, Preacher of the Gospel, Prophet of Peace, Patriot, 1822-1909."—The Daily States.

A dispatch to the Times-Democrat from Pascagoula, Miss., on the 19th inst., says: "Quietly and without ostentation a new road, after being formed at South Pascagoula, the substitute, the fishermen of Galilee. The purpose of the road is to keep posted on the current religious problems of the day and to promote and maintain relations between different classes of people. With building public houses of worship in some secluded spot where the members may perform acts of penance and pray. The society wished to adopt the reverse side of the seal of the United States as its emblem, but was refused that privilege by the Acting Secretary of State."

THE RUSTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The recent session of the Ruston District Conference, held in the hospitable and beautiful little city of Arcadia, was a season of gracious uplift to all who participated in it. The Conference was held in the Baptist Church, owing to the fact that our new church, an architectural gem, was not completed. A very characteristic manifestation of the Arcadia spirit was the proffer of both the other churches and the public school building for the Conference sessions. These kindly offers were noted and referred to with expressions of appreciation in the resolutions of courtesy adopted at the close of the Conference.

The attendance on the Conference was larger than last year. Only one of the pastors of the district was absent and the lay brethren were very much in evidence. The local preachers were conspicuous by their absence. Only two local preachers not supplying works were present, and one of them resided in Arcadia.

Quite a number of distinguished visitors from other districts were present, viz.: Rev. T. J. Warlick, presiding elder, Shreveport District; Rev. S. S. Keener, presiding elder, Monroe District; Rev. Tom Randle, Rev. C. B. Carter, Rev. C. V. Bretnaupt, and Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard.

Bishop Murrain was present throughout the Conference and presided during one whole day. His presidency was acceptable to the brethren. In every respect, and expressions of the highest delight at the action of the General Conference in elevating this distinguished minister and schoolman to the Episcopacy were heard on every side. This, together with that charming personality and the splendid social gifts which have always characterized him, and his lofty and soulful preaching, added to the Conference that which made it an occasion long to be remembered by all.

Rev. R. W. Tucker, our genial and accomplished presiding elder, was an able second to Bishop Murrain in the conduct of the affairs of the Conference. The same warm spirituality and earnest advocacy of the highest and best experiences of the Christian life that distinguished his presidency over the Conference of last year were in evidence, and he tightened his hold upon the affections of the ministry and laity of the district.

W. F. Coleman, A. G. Shankle, and C. F. Staples were elected on nomination of the presiding elder as a licensing committee, and A. G. Shankle, E. K. Means, W. J. Porter and R. O. Weir were elected in the same manner to serve on the "ad interim" committee. R. T. McClendon, P. K. Abels, B. F. Roberts and Walter G. Harbin were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. Dr. R. Roberts and R. P. Dawos were elected alternates. Walter G. Harbin was elected district lay leader, and P. K. Abels, who for several years has served efficiently and faithfully in that capacity, was elected secretary of the Laymen's Movement for the district.

Centenary College was represented by Prof. J. S. Johnston, a worthy son of a worthy sire, his father having won his way into the heart of a wide section of Southern Methodism as the Rev. Pinkney Johnston. Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard represented the interests of our promising girls' school at Mansfield, which has had the good fortune to secure the services of that most efficient schoolman, Dr. W. L. Weber. Rev. R. W. Vaughan pleaded the cause of our Orphanage at Ruston, and made our hearts glad by announcing the telegram from Morgan City which assured the clearance of at least one of the notes which hung so heavily over that institution. T. J. Embree and O. L. Tucker passed a creditable examination and were unanimously recommended to the Annual Conference for admission into the traveling connection.

The following resolutions were adopted, and ordered published:

First—That we most heartily appreciate the presence of Bishop Murrain, his careful inquiry into conditions in the district, his strong and inspiring preaching, and his wise and timely counsel, and we most cordially invite him to return to our District Conference whenever he may find it expedient so to do.

Signed, R. O. Wier, R. W. Tucker, Walter G. Harbin.

Resolved, first, That we are gratified that the progress of morality is such that our legislature has passed a bill prohibiting race-track gambling, and that the last legislature refused to change the Locke law.

Second—That we do condemn without equivocation the recent effort to revive this evil in our State. Signed, W. T. Woodward, J. B. Fulton, A. Hoffpauir. Inasmuch as it has pleased Almighty God to remove from our midst Brother W. W. Guthrie (delegate-elect from Ruston to the District Conference) and therefore be it resolved by the Ruston District Conference, assembled at Arcadia, La.:

First—That we greatly deplore his loss. The deceased was about seventy-four years of age. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in his youth, and spent about 57 years of his life as an official in our church—steward, delegate to the Annual Conference, and during the last years of his life recording steward. He was very prompt in all his official duties that devolved upon him. In all his walks of life he exhibited the true example of a

Tis often said
to make a sale

"It's just as good as LUZIANNE
Let no such argument prevail, to wean
you from your time-tried friend, LUZIANNE
COFFEE

THE REILLY TAYLOR CO.
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Christian. He was a devoted husband and father, and a loyal member of his church and his community. In fact, he was that kind of Christian that would do what good he could do for his Master.

Second—That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the District Conference and published in the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed, R. Roberts, M. D., F. E. Marshall, P. K. Abels.

In addition to these resolutions, resolutions were adopted asking Southwestern Railway rates on the V. S. and P. Railway, pledging an effort to raise the equivalent of fifty cents per member in all the charges of the district for the Orphanage at Ruston by the first day of November, and expressing appreciation of the courtesies received at the hands of the pastor and people of Arcadia.

The Bishop preached three times. The preachers at other hours were Rev. R. Randle, Rev. Wm. H. Coleman and others.

By unanimous vote the next session will go to Winnsboro.

WALTER G. HARBIN, Secretary.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Aberdeen District Conference is a matter of history. I suppose the secretary will give you the details of the Conference at some early date. Of one or two matters, only, I write. I thank God for another Bishop that can preach to the masses as well as the "classes." It is sufficient to say that Bishop McCoy is pre-eminently a preacher. The memory of his two sermons will abide. In very particular he gave pleasure—and to all the men present.

We passed no resolutions about the Vanderbilt matter. We supposed that enough would be said and done by others. More than that, the General Conference had given full instructions to the proper parties, and there is no indication that those instructions will not be carried out. We felt that it was a waste of time and energy to pass perfunctory resolutions on any of the leaders of our great Church or on the Vanderbilt question, when the whole matter was probably to be fought out in the courts. Besides, the leaders of the Church have demonstrated their entire ability to take care of themselves. Our hands were full of local matters of vital interest to the Church in these parts.

Reports show that we are a little ahead of this time last year on foreign missions and up to the mark of last year as to domestic missions. All of the money was not in the hands of the treasurer, S. J. High, but is by this time. Nearly one hundred men were present. It was good to be there.

The Advocate was not forgotten. While all was not done that I had hoped, renewals and new subscriptions will follow the discussions and resolutions, and those "post card reports" will be forthcoming. I am representing the Advocate anew, since the District Conference, at the Quarterly Conferences, and with good effect. New life will follow. I am sure.

Thomas Mills is doing well on the Palestine Circuit. The best Conference of the year was held at Troy, following the District Conference. He is in favor with all the people, and the whole work is in advance of any former period since I have known it. At this time of the year, men like M. Seale, J. F. Pope, J. P. Goodwin and J. P. Breast make possible the best things anywhere. There are others on that work who count for the best things.

J. H. FELTS.

Secular News and Comment

The census this year gives Jackson, Miss., a population of 21,262. In 1900 it was 7,816; in 1870 it was 4,234.

The stringent child labor law is still being executed in Louisiana with vim. A New Orleans man has been fined $50 or sixty days for having children on the boards of his theatre.

The troubles in Nicaragua appear to be growing worse, with the de facto Madris party seeming to have a little the best of the situation. Two U. S. cruisers are in the east and one on the west, patrolling the coasts in order to protect Americans and other foreigners and prevent bombardment of unfortified ports.

The Louisiana Anti-Tuberculosis League announce that their cottages and main house near Slidell, La., are finished and are ready for the reception of patients, who will be treated free. Only those in the first stage of the disease will be admitted. Under no circumstances will patients in the second or third stages of consumption be admitted.

The charbon among cattle is working havoc in southwestern Louisiana, especially in the parishes of Cameron and Calcasieu. It usually proves fatal in a short time. Vaccination with some sort of serum is recommended, but this, it seems, is impracticable. The doctors think the disease is due to a germ, fungus in its growth, contained in the vegetation the cattle eat.

Speaker Cannon has been on the stump in Kansas and has returned to Illinois. He made several vigorous speeches out there, flaying his "insurgent" friends who are in Congress with him. He declares the "insurgent" party is a myth. He goes home, he says, to rest some and sharpen his knives for a future foray elsewhere. "Uncle Joe" is 63, and his friends, and some of his enemies, too, give him the great praise of being the ablest and most original man in the Republican Party.

The rice harvest has begun in southern Louisiana with a good yield, though considerable damage has been caused by too much rain. The price, 2 to 5 cents, is considered fair by the growers. The planters are pleased with the results of their advertising campaign last year to bring rice more into notice throughout the country, and are planning to enlarge greatly on the scheme this year. Louisiana raises more rice now than the three or four other rice-growing States combined, and its quality ranks as the best in all the markets.

They come as well as go, now. The steamer Creole brought to New Orleans last week 105 first-cabin passengers, following others who came before. They come South to escape the blistering heat up North. These visitors say, while it is warm enough South, it is as a mild summer resort compared with New York and neighboring States. They go, too. On this boat's return trip on the 23d she took about 150 in the first-class going North. The Creole, the Monnis and the Excelsior, belong to the Southern Pacific System and are magnificent ships. But to travel on them is rather expensive.

President Taft last week made a tour in the State of Maine waters in a yacht, going as far north as the boundary and a little beyond. He said this trip enabled him to say that he had been in the four corners of the country. A large party of Canadians made free to come across the border at Eastport and helped to give the President a noisy welcome. There was some dissatisfaction among the villagers at Bar Harbor because they thought the President paid too much attention to the elite visitors at that summer resort, but a friendly address from him allayed the trouble.

Cotton, as usual, in value, leads in the exports of the United States. Reports from Washington say: "Cotton, copper, illuminating oil, wheat—these articles, in the order named, formed the most important articles exported from the United States during the fiscal year just closed. The value of cotton exported was $150,000,000; of copper $83,500,000; of illuminating oil $82,500,000; and of wheat $47,000,000. Other articles of export ranked in value as follows: Flour, lard, tobacco, lumber, upper leather, corn, bituminous coal and lubricating oil. In nearly all of the articles of natural production there was a marked decline in the exports of 1910 as compared with previous years, while in certain manufactures the figures for the year are larger than for any previous year, and the total will exceed that of any earlier year. The falling off is most marked in corn, wheat, flour and metals, wheat falling from $161,000,000 in 1892, the high year, to $47,000,000; corn from $85,000,000, to $25,500,000; flour from $75,000,000 in 1893, to $16,500,000; lard from $60,000,000 in 1906 to $43,000,000; bacon from $46,000,000 in 1895, to $18,500,000; fresh beef from $32,000,000 in 1901 to $7,750,000; and cattle from $12,000,000 in 1904 to $19,000,000 last year."

THE LOUISIANA METHODIST ORPHANAGE.

In a brief note to the Advocate we stated that money enough had been secured to meet the note for $1,000 that was due July 1st, held by the First National Bank, at Shreveport, against the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage. I feel that our people should know how this money came at so opportune a time.

Realizing that we cannot run such an institution as a home for orphan children with a heavy expense involved, with no endowment and dependent entirely for support on the voluntary aid of the people, with a heavy debt carrying a large rate of interest, simply by renewing such notes from time to time, without paying the principal, knowing that such methods would lead only to more serious and complicated difficulties that must eventually end in our inability to operate our Home, I, as strongly and frankly as possible, laid the situation before our people in an article published in our little paper for the Orphanage, under the head, "Shall we Abandon our Orphanage Work?" Mrs. Albert F. Storm, of Morgan City, a member of the Episcopal Church, but one of the "salt of the earth," who had previously shown her interest in our work by representing our work at Morgan City, and who had sent us several substantial checks before, read that article. She said, "That letter of yours in the Visitor was enough to make a body get out and hustle," which I did. The net result of that "hustling" was $820, of which amount $700 was wired to me on July 1st, the day the note was due. We had enough in the bank to make the amount needed to take up the note, which we did with a heart of thanksgiving and praise to God. I feel like every Methodist in the State should take off their hat to this noble lady of the Episcopal Church who has come to our help at a time of great distress and need. Mrs. Storm's desire was to raise the full $1,000, and she is not through with her effort yet. She has just recently sent in $120 and she feels sure that she will be able to get the rest of the amount very soon. She writes that the work of raising this amount was a real pleasure to add to your good work. Her way of raising the money is Methodist, too. "Mr. D. said he would give me a lot in — 'Addition' if I would raffle it for the Orphanage, but I told him we don't believe in raffles. If I can find a purchaser, though, I'll take it and sell it for the Orphanage." Mr. D. is a Catholic. Mrs. Storm expects no reward in doing this splendid work for the Orphanage. She finds sufficient remuneration in the pleasure it affords her to help in our work. But I feel, and our people feel, that such efforts should have recognition. And we propose dedicating one of the rooms in the building to her, or to some one she may suggest, and in this way retain her name in our institution as long as it is one.

The response to this appeal has been very generous aside from the special effort made by Mrs. Storm. The "Advocate," ever alert to help in our good work, reprinted the article in their paper, and a number of our people sent in good donations. Some of the preachers made vigorous efforts. The good people at Stonewall gave a good check. Opelousas, in response to an effort made by the ladies of our church there sent, $144. A special effort brought fine response from Ruston—$1,275 was soon pledged—and a number of other places promise to do their part. Brother C. J. Hundley, a layman of the Prudhomme Charge, agrees to raise at least fifty cents per member for that charge. He says, "I have this proposition to offer the 139 charges in the Louisiana Conference: I will vouch for fifty cents per member from the Prudhomme Charge if the preachers, or some layman from each charge, will do the same." So with this substantial help, and the aroused interest of our people, we hope that when the next notes fall due, we will have the money in hand to pay these notes.

We now owe twelve thousand dollars in three annual notes of four thousand dollars each. All these notes bear eight per cent interest per annum. That means that out of the money we raise to feed and clothe the homeless children of this State we must take nearly one thousand dollars to pay interest on this loan. Of this amount, eight thousand dollars will be due November the 1st of this year. With our other debts out of the way we hope to raise the amount needed, not only to pay the eight thousand dollars, but the entire debt of twelve thousand dollars. We now have everything out of the way but this one debt. To raise this amount each pastor's charge must do their part. Fifty cents per member will pay off this debt and give us a nice sum besides, that can be used in the care of the Home and the improvements needed about our property. If each and all will do their part, it can be done. If the example given our Methodist people by this good woman of another Church will stir our own people to action, we will have the problem solved. Now, let us all make a strong, vigorous effort. Let our people and membership be thoroughly canvassed. Let the preachers, the laymen, the Woman's Home Mission Society, Ladies' Aid, Epworth Leagues and Sunday schools unite in one effort and it can be done. We can let this effort extend through the summer and end in our "Work Day," which will be in October, this year. One good sister suggests that we have "Tag Day," which has been so successful for other institutions. This might be done wherever practicable. We simply cannot run an institution of this kind with a heavy debt over us. Our people can pay this debt and we feel sure it will be done, but we must all make a united effort and not cease until it is done.

We are now preparing a letter which will be sent to all the pastors, giving them the amount expected for each charge to raise at the fifty cent per capita rate. I trust that interest in our Orphanage is so much on the hearts of our preachers that they will take this matter up with the people and give them a chance to make the canvass a thorough one.

We are now in sight of the realization of our hopes as to the payment of this debt. We have in hand over one thousand dollars that can be applied on the debt. We hope to soon have more, and by the first of November we trust that we can take up the entire indebtedness. What a God-send to our work! And the confidence this achievement will inspire will give us a hold on the hearts of our people that will insure our success for the future. May God lead and help our people in making this effort to place our Orphanage on a strong, substantial foundation.

ROBT. W. VAUGHAN, Superintendent.

DURANT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Durant District Conference met in its annual session in Pickens, Miss., July 6-8. Rev. N. G. Augustus presided, and under his wise direction the sessions were interesting and profitable. About twenty-five laymen and all the pastors except one were present. Reports from the various charges were encouraging; 150 have been received into the church since last Conference; 366 church papers circulate in the district; financial matters are well in hand; pastors' salaries have been increased and in many charges the laymen have entirely relieved the pastor of the Conference assessments; the Sunday school interest is growing, and several Women's Missionary Societies have been recently organized.

The Laymen's Missionary Movement received special attention. Vigorous and timely addresses were made by Mr. T. B. King, of Memphis, Tenn., Mr. W. H. Smith, Mr. Parham Williams and others. Mr. King conducted a round-table discussion of the movement, which revealed the gratifying fact that the laymen are well organized in the district and that the movement has begun to move.

Millsaps College was represented by Rev. D. C. Hull and Dr. J. M. Sullivan, both of whom addressed the Conference, and Grenada College was represented by Rev. J. R. Countiss. In addition, we had as visitors, Rev. W. Fred Long, who addressed the Conference along the line of his work as Secretary of the State Sunday School Association; Rev. J. M. Wyatt, of the University Training School; Rev. W. M. Williams, who made a stirring appeal in the interest of the Orphans' Home; and Rev. G. W. Bachman, our efficient Conference Colporteur.

The preaching by Revs. J. R. Countiss and D. C. Hull was good for mind and spirit. One young man, J. S. Terry, of Kosciusko, was licensed to preach. W. T. Boswell, Parham Williams, E. W. Burton and R. P. Johnson were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference.

The Conference received royal entertainment from the good people of Pickens. It was the honor and pleasure of this scribe to be entertained in the home of the pastor, Rev. S. M. Thames. The many friends of Brother Thames will be glad to know that his health has greatly improved and that he attends to the duties of pastorate and pulpit with his accustomed vigor and earnestness. West was selected as the place for holding the next session of the Conference.

R. A. TUCKER, Secretary.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER,

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion. The number of people aged 65 and over is expected to increase from 250 million to 450 million. The number of people aged 15 and over is expected to increase from 3.5 billion to 4.5 billion. The number of people aged 15 and over is expected to increase from 3.5 billion to 4.5 billion. The number of people aged 15 and over is expected to increase from 3.5 billion to 4.5 billion.

I had the pleasure of an interview with him only a

Dr. J. E. Baker, M.D.

This place is near the town of Lucena, about 150 miles from Manila. It is in the richest part of the island country. All around here are immense groves of the stately trees, and a charming sight they are. They begin to bear at about six years of

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling of her, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits.
Getting better. Live oaks lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd
 Manufacturer
 Exporter of Lumber
 NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Home Circle

"A PETITION."

(For the Advocate.)

In this peaceful castled mansion
Far above the ether blue,
With the saintly host of heaven
Singing song that's ever new;

With the glad hosannas ringing
From that great angelic band,
And the saints in glorious splendor,
In thy beaming presence stand.

As they praise thy holy name in rapture,
In strain unmix'd with woe,
Drink a deep from life's pure fountain
And the waters gently flow.

We, thy earthly wandering children
Who are sick of sin and strife,
And to whom the way seems dreary,
In the upward climb of life.

Ask thee, Lord, in accents humble,
As our tears like dewdrops fall,
To remember us, the wanderers,
On this gloomy mountain wall.

See the way, so dark, so dreary,
Here a pitfall, there a snare;
Savior, be to us a fortress,
Keep us ever in thy care.

Save us from these hidden dangers
As the weary years go by,
Then in mercy look up on us,
As we Abba, Father, cry.

Then we, too, shall sing thy glory
In that land so far away,
Where life's river flows forever,
As the ages pass away.

We shall learn the old-new story
Of the fulness of thy love,
Which for ages has been chanted
In thy heavenly courts above.

THE JOKE PLANT.

"Who watered grandma's plants?" asked Marcia, coming around the house to where the other children were playing with picture-puzzles.

"I did," "Why?" asked Thomas, fitting an arm on his man's body without looking up.

"You broke her fern all down," said Marcia.

"I didn't," cried Thomas. "I was just as careful as could be."

"I guess I saw it," said Marcia. "It was all withered and drooping."

"Why Marcia! Packed!" said Julia. "I saw that fern just a few minutes ago, and it was all right."

"And I saw it," put in Joseph, "and it was all broken, just as Marcia says. I guess I can see as well as anyone."

The children's voices grew louder and louder, until grandma came out to see what was going on. She listened to their story, and then said: "Suppose we go and see the plants. Maybe that will tell."

Julia and Thomas looked very triumphant when the plant was all right and not drooping at all. Marcia could scarcely believe her eyes, and Joseph looked very shame-faced, but just as Julia and Thomas were saying, "What did we tell you?" grandma reached over and touched the delicate fern-like leaves. All at once they drooped and fell, and the plant looked very forlorn standing there all broken and wilted.

"Why? Why? Why?" cried the children, but grandma motioned to them to wait.

One by one the little iron-like leaves began to rise, and in a few minutes were as fine looking as any one could wish. Grandma explained that it was called Sensitive Plant, and the children tried over and over to see the leaves fall and revive, but they never called it Sensitive Plant.

"That isn't a very good name," said Joseph. "I'm going to call it the Joke Plant, because it played such a trick on us." And to this very day the children look for Joke Plants whenever they go to visit their grandmother on the farm, and tell how they once were foolish enough to quarrel about them.—Hilda Richmond.

"DARE TO BE A DANIEL."

"You're afraid, Dan Miller, you're just afraid to do it," taunted Jim Wilson. Dan pressed his lips together to keep the angry words from coming out.

"I'll dare you to smoke a cigarette, Dan Miller," continued his tormentor. Dan's face grew white. Some of the boys laughed and Ned Tenney sang out provokingly: "Dare to be a Daniel, dare to smoke a cig."

Dan's black eyes snapped. He was very proud of the name and greatly admired the old Hebrew hero who had borne it thousands of years ago. Before he could speak the words plainly, Dan's mother had taught him the gospel song, "Dare to be a Daniel," and now, reminded of its words, he turned fiercely upon the boys.

"Keep your dare to yourself, Jim Wilson." My father says no manly boy ever dares anybody. Any way, I wouldn't touch one of your old cigarettes. I want to be in some account when I grow up, and everybody with sense knows that boys who smoke cigarettes make little, two-by-four fellows, with no strength of body or of brains, either. I've got a dare of my own that's a lot bigger than yours, Jim Wilson, and I just will dare to be a Daniel and dare to stand alone, so there. Dan walked away, trying to make believe he didn't care and didn't hear Jim's taunting words. "Good little Danny. Go home with his little dare."

But that wasn't the hardest part of it. For the next week Dan found himself left quite alone by the boys with whom he had been accustomed to play, and he didn't like it. But there was one way he could have a good time by himself, and that was to take his fishing rod and line out to the end of Burton's pier, for Dan was a born fisherman, having lived all his life by the side of Lobster Bay.

He sat on the pier fishing one afternoon a week later, thinking to himself: "I guess Daniel the first must have had a pretty lonesome time of it. I suppose it isn't right, but it seems to me a real live boy is more fun for company than just a purpose, true, like the song says." A minute later he heard a boy's voice on the beach below say sharply:

"Now, you youngsters, stay right here and play and don't you go any nearer the water. Hear me? If you do, you know what'll happen. I've got to go over with the boys to tend to some business."

Leaning over the edge of the pier, Dan could see Jim Wilson's two little brothers playing on the sands, and Jim himself, followed by a crowd of boys, hurrying down the beach.

Hours later, as Dan was on his way home with a fine string of fish for supper, he was stopped by Jim Wilson's mother.

"Have you seen my Jim, Dan?" she asked anxiously. "I left the babies with him, and here it is almost dark and I can't find either the babies or Jim."

"I shouldn't wonder if I could find them, Mrs. Wilson," said Dan. "Just follow me," and throwing his string of fish into the Wilson yard, he hurried down to the bay, Mrs. Wilson following as fast as she could go.

The tide had been coming in for the last hour, and the water had entirely covered the beach where the little ones had been playing. Some distance out was a rock so high that as yet it was not covered. An hour ago it would have been easy enough for the children to have reached it on the dry sand. Dan peered fearfully seaward, and saw crouched upon this bit of rock two little forms. He looked about eagerly for help, but not a man was in sight. A row-boat had been pulled up on the beach just out of reach of the waves, and before Mrs. Wilson had reached the beach, he had pushed it out into the water and was pulling at the oars with all the strength of his arms. Dan never could remember the rest very well: it was much like a dream when he tried to—the two little frightened children on the rock, the angry, boisterous waves that tried to turn his boat about and drive it landward; the noisy, roaring waters that drowned his voice when he called to the babies, the aching arms that seemed ready to snap from the strain of pulling against the tide, the last frantic effort of drawing the little ones into the boat, and then a blank until Dan found himself safe in his own bed, with his mother bending over him. Fisherman Pete told the rest of the story: Aroused by Mrs. Wilson's cry for help, he and his partner had rowed out and rescued Dan and the children. Dan had reached the rock not a minute too soon, for the next wave would have carried the little ones with it.

It was many days before Dan could return to school. The morning he went back, the teacher said: "Children, there is just one piece in our song book I think we ought to sing in honor of one of our number of whom we are very proud. Who can guess what that piece is?"

Jim Wilson was the first one on his feet. "I know, it's No. 25, and it fits him just right."

Then the children sang with smiling faces all turned toward Dan:

"Dare to be a Daniel,

Dare to stand alone,

Dare to have a purpose true,

Dare to make it known."

—Julia F. Deane, in Union Signal.

CAMPAGNING FOR MILLSAPS.

Dear Dr. Meek: Having about finished my work at this place and with several hours to wait for a train to Vidua, where I am to present the claims of Millsaps College to our people to-night, it gives me pleasure to do my best at a wireless chat with you. I am out assisting President Hull in the summer canvass and find the prospect for the college better than usual. Our people are everywhere pleased with the choice made in the selection of a new president, and those who do not know him personally are looking forward to an early acquaintance with him as he moves about through the State. I have been over in the Delta as far as Greenville and met with a most cordial reception by preachers and laymen, a number of whom put themselves to inconvenience to bring me my way to the people with a message about Millsaps College, and to bring me into personal touch with the young men of each community. It seemed natural to stop at Greenville, but your absence was conspicuous, as I have always found you there, and such a help you were. President Commins, knowing the situation there so well, went aside from his own work to introduce me to Brother J. T. Moore, whose son I hope we may yet.

On the trip I was brought under special obligation to Brothers Hall, Sprazius, Graves, McCafferty, Head, Lipscomb, Smith, Augustus, Dorman, Barbee, Bingham, Eason, Pitchford, and others for kindness shown. The way is certainly open to Millsaps representatives, and it is our duty to push a canvass as far as we can.

As I have gone about within the bounds of both of our conferences, I have become convinced that there is a growing desire for the matter of inter-collegiate athletics to be left in the hands of the teachers and faculty. It seems to me, from a long and careful study of the matter, that a wise use and control of this feature of college life would not only increase the number of students, but serve to bring about better results generally.

Your work on the Advocate is giving great satisfaction. I hear many expressions of praise for it, all well deserved.

On my trips this summer I have been impressed with the increasing influence of Millsaps graduates over the State, as more and more of them go out into the various occupations, and they are taking high rank. But I must bring this to a close, lest you consign it to the waste basket in disgust.

It was my purpose to spend August in study at the University of Chicago, having been favored with a scholarship from there, but have about decided to continue my canvass for the college. With best wishes, Fraternally yours,

J. M. SULLIVAN.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location. Includes furniture. Apply, Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

A series of five sermons on the work of the Holy Spirit.

By REV. WALTER G. HARBIN.

Price, 75 cents.

Send to CHAS. O. CHALMERS, 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

DOCTOR TICHENOR'S Antiseptic

Accidents Will Happen

You cannot prevent that—they come when least expected.

A bottle of

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

kept near at hand is your best safeguard—the cheapest Accident Insurance in the world!

It affords immediate and permanent relief from Cuts, Bruises, Burns or Sprains.

Keep a bottle in the house—always.

All Druggists 25 and 50 cents.

ANY ONE WHO HAS USED IT! ASK EVER

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 114 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS

One Copy, one year $1.00. Six months, 70c. To preachers of all denominations, 50c.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Jordan, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Morgan, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murray, Rev. W. W. Woodard, Rev. H. S. Sprague.

Editorial.

MAKING THE WORLD BETTER.

In relation to the vast universe, the earth is but a speck of dust floating in space. It is subject to law, and keeps its orderly place in the scheme of things, but comparatively it is so insignificant as to be almost a negligible quantity.

That is when viewed in relation to the universe. In relation to human life which has its existence upon the earth it ascends in the scale of values, till it becomes all-important. It is the scene of the working out of eternal destinies. It is the battle-ground of tremendous forces. It is the place where everlasting conflict is waged between truth and untruth, right and wrong. It is the place where character is made.

The existence of evil in this world is one of the age-long problems. We know it does exist. We see it all around us. Its effects are stamped upon the faces of the men and women we meet day by day. It shows itself in lives that are very far different from what was contemplated in the divine plan. It affects our own lives and oftentimes poisons the very springs of our own being. We see it in the conditions to which we are surrounded, which make it so hard to bring to full maturity and strength those capabilities which are the heritage of all normal men. Perhaps the plainest thing in the world is its evil.

In spite of all this evil is not the remnant force in the world. Sometimes we may think so. When the fight is hard and the battle seems to go against us, and our spirits begin to faint under the long conflict, we may almost feel that we are fighting against overwhelming odds and be tempted to lay down our arms. But this feeling comes only in the hours of discouragement. In those quiet times when we are competent to estimate forces and weigh issues, we have an invincible conviction that this is God's world, and that better and better things are in store for us. And then we gird ourselves afresh for the conflict and enter with renewed courage upon the great work of making the world better.

And this is the great work of every good man and woman. All else is incidental. Making a living is one of the smaller parts of that work. Making a life, in the narrow sense, is incidental. We are engaged in the infinitely greater thing of making a world what it ought to be. One man may be doing this, and another that, but the common aim of all is the bringing of this "divine event" though it may be far off toward which the whole creation is constantly moving.

The great question is not so much what to do, as how to do it. How can we, as an individual, so direct my own energies and control my own activities, as to aid in accomplishing this great task of making the world better?

The work cannot be done merely by the giving of kindly advice. The stream of life is flowing too swiftly to pause in its course toward the ocean of eternity while a little kindly advice is offered. The issue is too closely joined and the rush of the stream is too impetuous for a little advice to make any difference. God's spirit was a good thing, but a man must do things for himself because they never have said, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant; I will make thee ruler over many things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." We must do things for ourselves, for the sake of the world, and for the sake of the Lord.

The world is to be made better by the quiet, persistent effort to make the little part of it as good as we as individuals live better. The incarnation of the truth in individual lives, lived in limited spheres, is the means by which the standard of righteousness is to be raised and the world constantly made better. The moral status of the world will not be revolutionized over night, and one life will not bring in the millennium. Gradually, and by the work of the many, is this betterment to be brought about.

This makes it possible for everyone to have a part in the greatest of all works. Make your part of the world the very best possible, and you will be doing that much to make the whole world measure up to that standard. It is not necessary for the individual to have a grasp upon the "world situation" in order to better conditions. It is only necessary for him to have a grasp upon the situation with which he is immediately concerned, and to make the very best possible out of that in order that he may do his share toward making the world better. The man in the obscure corner can do as much in his place as the man who stands at the meeting of the ways. Let every man do his best all the time everywhere, and we shall all have a better world in which to live.

A DISTINGUISHED CONTRIBUTOR.

Dr. W. D. Bradfield, who in this issue of the Advocate discusses the course of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust at their meeting in June, is pastor of the First Methodist Church, of Dallas, and one of the most eminent ministers in Texas. He is an alumnus of Vanderbilt University and preached the commencement sermon of that institution two or three years ago. He was a delegate to the last General Conference at Asheville and served on the Committee on Education. So conservative was he in his views, that for several days we were in doubt as to which side of the controversy he was on. We have never known a more judicious and fair-minded man, and his opinion on any subject should carry not a little weight. We trust that all of our subscribers will read carefully this dispassionate statement from the pen of Dr. Bradfield, who was present at all of the recent meetings of the Board and knows whereby he

A TRUE HERO.

The real hero of Methodism—who is he? Not the conspicuous Bishop, gifted and eloquent though he may be, not the pastor in high-steeped church, whose praises the secular papers sound; not the foreign missionary on the frontier, whose salary is guaranteed and whose work is ever in the public eye. No, he is the humble circuit rider who for a bare advance toils in the remote interior, obscure, unrecognized and unknown. Though unpaid, he falters not in duty's path; though sufferings come, with little sympathy without complaint he bears them; on through the years he goes, telling the story of redeeming love, and brightening human hearts and homes. The real builder of Methodism is this man of the saddlebags. The most luminous chapters of our glorious history, he has written. Nor will he fail to receive his reward. In God's good time the brow, untouched by earthly laurel, will be graced

A NEW VARIETY.

A new type of Methodism we are beginning to develop in this latter day. They feel that they have outgrown the Church of the West. Their way is not narrow—they want to raise their standards wider and higher. Their institutions of learning are too small—they want to make them unconfessional and build them larger with money obtained from those who do not and do not wish to give. With such a swindle we have lost a particle of ourselves. No matter who raised the tune of Methodist hymns, we will never stop singing the song. We believe that the blindest thing in this planet is the Methodist Church and that her people live both the means to build colleges and the means to govern them. But even if we felt that she were unequal to the task, we would not be willing to turn our back upon her to obtain resources from any source. We are old-fashioned enough to accept the teaching of the wise man: "Better is a little with right consciousness than great revenues without right."

A DESERVED PROMOTION.

Rev. H. Whitehead has been named Assistant Editor and Business Manager of the Alabama Christian Advocate, and will move to Birmingham and assume the duties of his new position on August 1st. At the same time the Rev. B. C. Chalmers, President of the Alabama Conference, will succeed Rev. S. Chalmers as editor. Brother Whitehead has been connected with the New Orleans Christian Advocate for more than three years, during which time he has rendered most faithful and efficient service, and we give him up with a little reluctance. Genial, friendly and efficient, he has been a good deal with our people here, and will be greatly missed. He understands the local work of a printing office is particularly familiar with the Methodist way of doing things, and has the interest of the Church at heart. Since his residence in New Orleans he has, while working for the Advocate, been active in the "Ladies' Mission," serving a charge each year with marked ability. We heartily commend Brother Whitehead and his estimable family to the Methodists of Birmingham and Alabama, and assure them that they deserve the best possible treatment, which we doubt not will be freely accorded them. We trust that under the new management our worthy contemporary, the Alabama Advocate, will move steadily forward upon a career of growing prosperity and usefulness. It has a great field, and we see no reason why it should not equal in every respect any Conference organ in the connection.

KINDNESS PAYS.

A dispatch from Macon, Ga., to the Times-Democrat of the 19th inst. says: "Shortly before the Klondike gold boom, W. V. Miller, a motorman of this city, then living in Atlanta, Ga., J. F. C. Miller, a minor, stranded and without funds. He took him in, fed him, and gave him money to pay his way as far as Birmingham. That was the last he ever heard of Curley until yesterday, when he received word that the miner had died in Dawson City and left him a fortune estimated at $500,000."

Little did Mr. Miller think that the generous assistance rendered a needy fellowman would field such a large return. Indeed, his motive doubtless was wholly disinterested, and therein lay the beauty and value of it. Though instances so conspicuous as this are rare, nevertheless it is undeniably true that it pays to be gracious and kind and to do good. It brings into the heart of him who thus seeks to bless and brighten the lives of others a peace and joy which can be acquired in no other way, and to one who manifests such a spirit there comes from grateful humanity a like response. It was primarily of the Christian Paul was writing when he declared, "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." And long before the time of Paul, the wise man said, "Cast thy bread upon the waters; for thou shalt find it after many days."

AN EPWORTH WINDOW.

We Methodists have been deficient in appreciation of the value of art and its symbolism as means of producing lasting impressions. Dr. John Mathews is credited with having said that a Methodist ideal of a church building could be summed up in the words, "bigness and a barn." A desirable change is coming over us, however, as many beautiful, churchly structures attest. But we are still deficient in the matter of adornment of our college chapels. A worthy undertaking it is therefore that the editor of the St. Louis Christian Advocate is advocating the placing of a memorial window in the chapel of the Central College for Women, Lexington, Mo. The window is to show the Epworth Rectory, a portrait of the mother of John and Charles Wesley, the old church in which the Wesley children were baptized, and the tomb of Samuel Wesley, from which his great son, excluded from the church, preached to the parishioners. Such a window will prove a better educator than many books of history. League Chapters in and outside Missouri that desire to contribute for this window may send their gifts to Dr. W. B. Palmore, St. Louis, Mo., and they will be acknowledged in the League Department of the St. Louis Christian Advocate.—Epworth Era.

PERSONAL.

Rev. O. P. Armour, of the Buena Vista Charge, is now in a meeting at McCondy. The Epworth Leagues on this charge are doing a great work.

The editor, somewhat run down physically, is resting for a few days with relatives and friends in Mississippi. The present issue has been chiefly brought out with him absent.

The outlook is very hopeful in the Alexandria District, under the aggressive leadership of that versatile presiding elder, Rev. Paul M. Brown, and the battle is being pushed on every side.

Mr. Z. Z. Linton, Mississippi Conference lay leader, and Mr. A. B. Conally, lay leader of the Brookhaven District, conducted a successful Laymen's Rally for the Osyka Charge at Muddy Springs Church, Sunday, July 17.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney writes: "I have just closed a good meeting at Bethel. Brother G. P. White, of New Roads, assisted me. Large congregations attended the services and we believe that much good was accomplished."

Revival services have been held at the Methodist Church, Baker, La. The pastor, Rev. F. N. Sweeney, was assisted by Rev. A. S. Lutz, of New Orleans. There was a large attendance, and the membership was greatly benefited.

From Rev. R. O. Weir we learn that the people of Arcadia were delighted with the work of Bishop Murrah, both as a presiding officer and in the pulpit. The new church will probably be ready for occupancy by next Sunday.

From Dr. E. B. Partin we learn that Rev. W. G. Harbin will help Rev. J. F. McClellan, pastor of Chunkey, Miss., in a meeting at that place, beginning with the fifth Sunday of this month. We hope and pray that there will be a gracious revival. Brother Harbin is a capable evangelist.

Dr. D. C. Hull, president of Millsaps College, preached a sermon in Philadelphia, Miss., a few days since that produced marked attention and commendation. He is steadily demonstrating that the curators made a wise choice in his selection. He is not only a capable educator, but a strong preacher.

A tasteful card announces the arrival in the home of the Rev. and Mrs. E. D. Lewis, of Nashville, Tenn., of Miss Margaret Virginia Lewis, who made her appearance on July 16. We extend hearty congratulations. Brother Lewis was formerly a popular young minister in the North Mississippi Conference.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor of Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans, has returned from Homer, La., where he has been assisting in a revival service. He reports a good meeting and that Brother Coleman stands in high favor with all of his people and is doing a most excellent work.

We acknowledge the reception of a copy of The Revised Ritual of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Quite a number of important changes were made by the last General Conference, and all of these are indicated in this booklet. A copy may be had by sending to the Publishing House. The price is fifteen cents.

There has been a very fruitful revival at Shannon, Miss., with about thirty conversions and eighteen additions to the church. The pastor, Rev. J. J. Garner, was assisted by Rev. W. D. Bass, of Corinth, Miss., a strong gospel preacher and a successful revivalist, and the spirit of harmony prevails in the church.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb writes: "Brother Clifford is with me, and is an able and interesting preacher, especially in wealth of illustration, arising out of his wide experience both in England and America. We have started well, and I hope that he will come home closer, and that the results may be large. We have fine congregations. House full at night."

We have in hand a catalogue of Andrew College, of Cuthbert, Ga., of which Dr. J. W. Malone, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, is the capable president. This well-known institution for the education of young ladies was founded in 1854, and has had a career of large usefulness and honor. But never at any other time has it had so bright an outlook as now. Dr. Malone's many friends in Mississippi will rejoice in his success.

We clip the following from the Jackson Daily News (Mississippi): "Doctor James Elliot Walmsley has been tendered the chair of history at the University of Texas, but does not know just yet whether he will accept it or not. This university is one of the leading institutions of the southwest, and enrolls about three thousand students each year. The friends of Millsaps College are very anxious for him to remain here, as he has rendered such efficient service to the institution since he has been connected with it. He has so revolutionized the history department here until Millsaps now offers the strongest history courses to be had in the State. Doctor Walmsley is recognized by those in a position to judge as one of the leading history teachers in the South."

Bishop E. D. Mouzon, of Texas, addressed a meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society at the Court Street Methodist Church in Hattiesburg, Miss., last Thursday night. A splendid musical program, consisting of vocal and instrumental numbers, was rendered, and a free-will offering for the benefit of missions was taken. This was Bishop Mouzon's first visit to Hattiesburg, and his address was listened to by a large congregation. The Bishop spent last Sunday in Jackson, being the guest of Rev. J. R. Jones, presiding elder of the Jackson District. He preached at the First Methodist Church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, and at the Capitol Street Methodist Church at 7:45 p. m. During the present week Bishop Mouzon will dedicate several new churches in the Jackson District.

A RESOLUTION OF PROTEST.

Resolution by Brookhaven District Conference:

Whereas our attention has been called to the following editorial in The Daily Picayune of recent date:

"Mississippi Fanaticism."

"Under the laws of Mississippi every act which is not absolutely necessary to the maintenance of mere existence, or is not done through charity, is not only unlawful, but is punished with heavy penalties."

"At Scranton, in that State, a party who sold ice cream, and another party who sold soda water on Sunday were tried and convicted by a jury. In instructing the jury the judge said:

"The statute forbids anyone from pursuing his vocation on Sunday, household duties and works of necessity and charity alone excepted. Under the law as it reads, hotels and restaurants must close, the physicians cannot visit the sick, nor a surgeon operate on the wounded, nor a minister preach the gospel, nor a priest celebrate mass unless they show to the satisfaction of the jury that their labor is one of necessity or charity, and what constitutes labor of necessity or charity is a question of fact to be determined from the evidence and not a question of law."

"Such a law belongs to the Dark Ages and the worst period of human superstition."

"The courts are right to enforce it with extreme severity so as to make it as odious as possible. Only people insane with fanaticism and a desire to persecute would enact such laws."

Resolved, That we deplore the fact that Mississippi is afflicted with such ignorance and perverseness in official positions and must be subjected to repeated humiliation by the utterances of such men as misrepresent our sentiment and law.

Resolved, That we regret that a great paper like The Picayune should be deceived by such silliness and misrepresentation and take such occasion to insult a great State and a great people, who are certainly as capable of making their laws as the editor who penned this objectionable article.

Signed by: H. M. Ellis, H. B. Watkins, C. N. Guice.

THE INDEFATIGABLE.

A young preacher was preaching the funeral sermon of a brother minister at Washington, Miss., in the year 1821. It was a tribute to a man only a few years his senior, but who had exercised a great influence over his life. In fact, it was the one of all others who had helped him to come to the decision that he should give his life to the ministry of the Church. The preacher of the day was William Winans, and he was preaching the funeral sermon of Samuel Parmer—an unusual position for a young man to fill. Mr. Winans was born in 1788 in Western Pennsylvania. At an early age his father died, and he was obliged to do much toward the support of the family, and he worked in iron foundries of the section.

When about sixteen years of age he was converted and joined the Church. When twenty he began to preach, and his first appointment was on the famous Limestone Circuit, of which mention has been made in other articles of this series. He was with James King as colleague. He labored only a year in Kentucky, but it is said that "it left a lasting impression on the Church." In 1809 he went to Vincennes. He found there a society of forty-three members, which had been formed by the famous Jesse Walker, and in the year increased it to one hundred and twenty-five. While serving as pastor of his Church he made the acquaintance of General Wm. Henry Harrison, then governor of Indian Territory. He was with General Harrison when the treaty of peace was made with Tecumseh, the famous Indian brave, and it was the coolness of his bearing that helped to bring about the final result.

In 1810 a call for volunteers was made for the work in Mississippi, and he responded. The journey was made on horseback, in the midst of winter, through a trackless wilderness. He was then sent on to New Orleans, where he remained about a year. In 1815 he married and felt obliged to locate, and in the meantime taught school. In 1820 he re-entered the Conference and served three terms as presiding elder, and part of the time was pastor. Then he became an agent for the Methodist Church in New Orleans, having associated with him the notorious John N. Maffitt. After this he served as presiding elder for several years. A friend said of him: "Often have I seen him on his tours of circuit duties scarcely able to sit in the saddle, drawing himself up in the pulpit, preaching for two hours with surpassing power and unction, and then falling down faint and exhausted, his handkerchief stained with blood; and for days thereafter motionless, hovering, as it were, between life and death. Thirty years ago, and at intervals since, he was thought to be in a rapid decline. He was afflicted with hemorrhages, bronchitis, derangement of the vital organs, and general debility; and physicians prohibited the excitement of the pulpit. But he would preach; he felt 'called of God to preach.' He was a member of the General Conference in 1844, and was declared by Abel Stevens to be next to Peter Cartwright—the most unique man of the assembly.—Prof. S. G. Ayres, Librarian of Drew Theological Seminary."

NOTICE.

To the Preachers and Members of the M. E. Church, South, in the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference:

In order to be of as much service as possible to the revival work in the district, I am publishing no schedule of Quarterly Conferences for the third round. Each pastor and official board will be given due notice by private correspondence.

Fraternally,

PAUL M. BROWN, P. E.

MID-YEAR MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

The mid-year meeting of the Board of Missions of the Mississippi Conference will be held at Hazlehurst, Miss., July 31 to Aug. 2. Bishop E. D. Mouzon has kindly consented to be present, and deliver two or three addresses. All the presiding elders are earnestly requested to meet with the Board at said date, and every pastor and lay leader in our Conference is cordially invited to attend this important missionary meeting, which we feel sure will prove to be an edifying and inspiring occasion. The pastors and laymen who expect to attend are requested to please notify Brother W. L. Linfield in advance, of their intention to come.

W. G. FORSYTHE, President.
M. M. BLACK, Sec'y Board of Missions, Mississippi Conference.

W. H. M. S., LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Dear Advocate: Referring to my article in last week's Christian Advocate (July 21), will you kindly make the following correction: "Appropriation of $300 to our parsonage" should be: "Appropriation of $300 to one parsonage." This donation was made to the District Parsonage, located in Hammond, La.

MRS. E. R. KENNEDY.

Wanted by Port Gibson Female College, Port Gibson, Miss., a lady of culture who is a practical seamstress to take charge of a Sewing Department.

The Centenary College of Louisiana.

Fall Term will
open Sept. 14, 1910.

For Catalogues or other information write to

FELIX R. HILL, President,

OR

JOHN S. JOHNSTON, Dean,
SHREVEPORT, LA.

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.
1300-1302
DRYADES STREET.
PHONES—Jackson 1080—1081.

VISIT
MINERAL WELLS
FOR HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND
WEST TEXAS
FOR FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE
DAILY.
Write for Free Booklet.
E. P. TURNER,
General Passenger Agent.
DALLAS — TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves 8:00 a.m.
Instead of at 8:30 a.m. as formerly
22 Hours to Asheville
THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS
WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.
24 Hours to Cincinnati
Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars
Train No. 2 Leaves 7:30 p.m.
FOR
NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.
SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW
ON SALE.

Bowlden
CHURCH & SCHOOL
Catalog Free.
BELLS
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, BOSTON, MASS.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

WIFE LULLA LIPSCOMB WATERS.

Just before the outbreak of our insurrection in Japan, the Japanese government, for the first time, sent a woman and woman's dress to America. Lulla Lipscomb Waters, the first woman to be sent to the first war, was a woman of the first class, and she was the first woman to be sent to the first war.

Dr. C. F. R. Waters is with the following and report of this beautiful and beautiful.

Lulla Lipscomb Waters was born in the city of Columbus, Miss. June 12, 1874. A score of years ago, she was the wife of a man who for a season the hospitality of the time and which she came. It was a typical home of the old regime, in which open hospitality, refinement and Christian fellowship combined to make ideal conditions for the growth and development of young life.

One of this home life was Rev. T. H. Lipscomb of the North Mississippi Conference. Rev. W. E. Lipscomb, of the Mississippi Conference. Prof. Dabney Lipscomb of the Industrial Institute and College of Columbus, and Dr. James Lipscomb, who follows the profession of his father, Dr. W. E. Lipscomb.

Among the daughters of the home were Mrs. Mary Lipscomb Waters, a distinguished member of the family of the Stanton Bible and Training School, and Lulla, whose wedding we laid to rest yesterday under the maples in the beautiful cemetery at Saint Helena, Cal.

Mrs. Waters was a graduate of the Columbus Female College and the Peabody Normal of Nashville, Tenn. In 1907, she was sent to China as a missionary of the Woman's Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was appointed to work at the Anglo-Chinese College, Shanghai. February 25, 1909, she was married to the Rev. B. W. Waters of the Japan Mission, and to the Japanese she gave twenty years of loving ministry. While thus engaged at Nakatsu, her Japanese home, her intensely strong nerves gave way. Early in February she was taken to Kobe and placed under the care of a skilled physician, but in a few weeks it became apparent that she must return to America.

Much was hoped from the sea trip, and for a time she seemed to improve, but just before arriving at San Francisco, a relapse occurred which made it impossible to continue the journey across the continent. In order that she might have every chance to recuperate, she was taken to the St. Helena Sanatorium, where every possible means were used to bring back strength, but all failed.

The disease that sapped her life was pronounced beriberi, and at 10:30 p.m. June 21st she passed from earth, leaving to mourning her loss her husband, three noble sons, her mother, four brothers, two sisters, and a host of friends in three nations.

How poor words seem when we come to tell the story of a character so exalted a life so nearly flawless. Like her Lord, she went about doing good. With lavish measure she poured the richness of her life into the lives of others, and there, as a gracious benediction, it abides and will abide in ever widening circles until the abundant fruitage shall at last appear and be measured before the great white throne.—From the Pacific Methodist Advocate.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVES TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

POLISHES
"QUICK AS A WINK!"

QCKWORK
METAL POLISH SILVER PASTE

At Last! A Quick Polish

Rub on Qckwork—rub off. Perfect. A bright, clean, quick—looking silver. Nothing like this in the Qckwork. For metals of all kinds—gold, silver, brass, iron, steel, watches, automobiles, glass—everything.

In 25c Tins Everywhere.

Try Qckwork Silver Paste. Keeps silverware always new.
Saves hours of valuable time. Can not figure. Fine for gold, cut glass, marble, etc.

In 25c Jars Everywhere.

Whenever you see an Arrow
Think of Coca-Cola

Delicious Refreshing
Thirst Quenching

Hot Walking
Hot Riding

You can't get away from the heat; but you can keep it from hurting. Whenever you're hot, tired or thirsty

DRINK
Coca-Cola

It refreshes mentally and physically—relieves fatigue and quenches the thirst. Wholesome as the purest water and lots nicer to drink. 5c Everywhere.

Delicious---Refreshing---Wholesome

Send for our free booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells all about Coca-Cola, what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial.

THE COCA-COLA CO., Atlanta, Ga.

Tidings from the Field

Grenada Circuit:

I feel that I owe the Advocate an apology for not giving some information as to what has been done with the Grenada Circuit since Brother W. G. Burks has been moved to Guntown. But the reason that I have not made this known is that I have been waiting to get around to all the churches so that I could give true facts as they exist on the work. I have been around now, having visited almost every home in the charge, and I find that the work is made up of the best people I have ever met. They are so given to hospitality that it is going to be hard to return to Millsaps after Conference, because I am persuaded that "grits and gravy" are not so attractive as the "drumsticks" of the good homes on Grenada Circuit. But laying aside all thought of what grief it will bring to leave the work, I want to speak of the things that we want to do while here. There are two things that "weigh" heavily upon my mind at present: first, that we may develop a greater interest in Sunday school work; and second, that we have a series of stirring revivals on the charge this summer, and to this end I ask your prayers.—Jas. D. Wroten, P. C.

Laurel, Sixth Street:

On July 11 we began a series of meetings at Wisner, Miss., at the camp of the Eastman-Gardner Lumber Company here. It was our first experience in a camp, but found it very pleasant. These people are big hearted and know how to entertain a preacher. The Baptists had held a meeting in the same building the week before with good results. The noble-hearted men would work all day and come to church at night. Though a logging camp, we find a number of very fine people there; and the morals and religious atmosphere are more wholesome than is found in many little towns. Through the leadership of the Y. M. C. A. secretary, Mr. W. E. Peters and his good wife, much good is being accomplished—numbers of the people pray in public. The people live in cars or shacks. They have a nice modern Y. M. C. A. building, where preaching is had as often as can be and weekly prayer meetings, young people's union and Sunday school is held. These people turn out to church and are good listeners. We are expecting much good yet to come of the meeting. We closed Thursday evening with twelve accessions to the church, seven by baptism and vows and one other yet to be received.—J. O. Ware, Pastor.

Cleveland, Miss.:

Our congregation is not large for a station, but we have some fine people. The parsonage family have been shown many evidences of thought and consideration. Not many days pass that we are not remembered in a real substantial way. Of course, it always makes a preacher feel good when the people brag on our preaching and give us things. All the people of our town do not go to church, but our congregations are fairly good. Our Sunday school and League are doing substantial work, I think. Mrs. Shipman usually gives special attention to the League work, but her health has not been the best since we have been here, hence this department of our work has suffered some. Our people are liberal in the support of the material interests of the church. Assessed for pastor, $1,320—one hundred and ten per month with lights and water furnished for parsonage. Pay presiding elder one hundred and eighty-nine dollars. We have a pretty new fence around the parsonage yard with new concrete walk from the gate to the steps (78 feet long). My, my, this fine, big, shady yard is a joy forever. Have worked over our church windows and rebuilt our concrete step with a fine concrete walk leading to the sidewalk. Town council ordered concrete walks put down all over town. Of course, our church was about the first to heed this mandate of the city fathers. Have paid our assessments for both foreign and domestic missions and church extension. Sorry many of our people do not take your paper—maybe when they get through digesting all those great slugs of thought you left for them to walk on, they will apply for more through the New Orleans Advocate. We have just closed a very gracious meeting with Revs. J. C. Park and E. R. Stuart. Park did about the best ten days' preaching I have ever had done. He held a meeting for me in Amory three years ago, but I think him a better preacher now than then. This is, of course, as it should be, in a growing man. Brother Smart lead the singing. My! my! those two gentlemen make a fine team. 'Tis only too true I don't know much about singing, but judging from the way the people talked and from the way I felt when Smart would sing, he must be just a little above the top. Brother Woodard has his district well in hand, looking well after every interest. We are always glad to see him at the parsonage.—W. S. Shipman, Cleveland, Miss.

Oakvale, Miss.:

We have just closed a successful revival meeting at Hathorn, Miss. The Rev. E. J. Coker, of Eucutta, Miss., did the preaching, and his preaching was to the point, and with power. And he wrought well with my people. I can safely recommend him as being a good preacher, and a fine revivalist. The Holy Spirit was present during the entire meeting. We have some opposition at Hathorn, but amidst it all we believe that every member of our church received a great blessing out of the meeting. "Glory be to God." May God bless Brother Coker in his field of labor. Our next revival meeting will be at Oakvale, Miss., commencing on Wednesday evening, July 27, where we will open up fire against sin and Satan. We are praying that the Master may open up the windows of heaven and pour out upon us a great blessing. A revival of the old type is needed in these parts. The Rev. M. L. White, of Prentiss, Miss., will be the principal leader, with some helpers, and Clarence Westbrook, of Auburn, Miss., will lead the singing. We are expecting a great meeting. We hope (D. V.) to have our new church ready to hold our revival meeting in Brethren, we need your prayers. Will you pray at least one fervent prayer; that our Father will bless and save souls in our coming revival meeting? I am glad that I can say without a doubt that the Oakvale Circuit is coming to the front along all lines. May God bless the dear old Advocate and all of its readers.—Hillary Westbrook, P. C.

Potts Camp:

I have just returned from a two-weeks' stay on Potts Camp Charge, giving the time to revival work and preaching thirty-four sermons. It was a great time to me in many ways, the kind pastor and people sparing no effort to make my stay among them pleasant. The best of all, however, was that God was with us. Seldom have I seen such demonstrations of power as were manifest at many of these services, the "old-time power" which brought men, in middle life and "case-hardened" in sin, to the altar, where they publicly renounced their sins, and were happily converted. Over fifty joined our church, with others to join other churches. Bro. J. H. Bell, the pastor, is a wide awake and industrious man, as evidenced by these facts. He has raised and expended on churches and parsonage some $800 or $900, received a total of 74 into the church, most of whom came on profession of faith; organized a thriving Epworth League and a well attended mid-week prayer meeting. The Home Mission Societies of Potts Camp and Winburn have taken on new life and are working like beav-

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER. FURNISHED by US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!

NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street., New Orleans, La.
LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

I. Lowengardt, Pres. Geo. W. Riehl, Sec. & Treas. F. L. Armstrong, Vice-Pres.

Lowengardt & Armstrong, Ltd.,
JEWELERS.

122 BARONNE ST. NEW ORLEANS
M. FITZGERALD Optician.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT
TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection: beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

ers. The first of the year found the church at Winburn with a membership of only thirty, and getting only one sermon a month, in the afternoon. They now have over seventy members, and will guarantee to pay for one full Sunday, if not two, next year. I saw many other evidences of progress; and the possibilities of that rich country are indeed great.—E. E. Langford, Brooksville, Miss.

Courtland, Miss.:

We are getting along fairly well on the Courtland Charge. We are kept busy all the time, but cannot do all the work that we see that needs to be done, for "the harvest is plentiful, but the laborers are few, up here as well as elsewhere." We will begin our first protracted meeting next Sunday at Pope. We are praying for a great revival at every church on the circuit. We have had twelve accessions to the church to date. We have paid all of our domestic missions assessment for this year and have about one-third of our foreign mission money in hand. We hope to pay in full all of our assessments, by Annual Conference. We have made some very necessary improvements on the parsonage premises. When we came here last December we found everything about the premises, except the parsonage itself, in a dilapidated condition, but we have replaced the old toppled-down barn and all the other outside buildings with first-class new ones. We have also built 67 rods of good fence, made of the best electric-weld net wire and black locust posts, and it is all paid for. Our Sunday schools are doing good work; but only one of them has observed Children's Day. We have three prayer meetings. We are soon to have three new organs, two of which will be in churches that have not had one before. We are all well pleased with the selection of men for Bishops made by our General Conference. We are in accord with the editor of the New Orleans Advocate and Bishop Hoss on the Vanderbilt question. Bishop McCoy won the hearts of all who met or heard him preach at our District Conference at Senatobia, and on his visit to Sardis. We are delighted with the prospect of having him preside over our next Annual Conference. Our people are all well pleased with the New Orleans Christian Advocate and its editor; we are also well pleased with the new editor of the Nashville Advocate. In conclusion, in justice to myself and the people on the Webb charge, whom I served last year as pastor, I desire to say that there are two errors in the minutes in my report. The minutes read: "Domestic Missions, assessed $15, paid $55; Church Extension, assessed $40, paid $30." It should read: "Domestic Missions, assessed $55, paid $55; Church Extension, assessed $30, paid $30." My duplicate statistical report shows that the Webb Charge paid everything in full, and the stubs in my check book and the returned canceled checks coincide.—T. H. Porter.

For Nervous Disorders
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate
Especially recommended for the relief of nervous headache, exhaustion and insomnia.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS
UNBREAKABLE POINTED
TOP STYLE

Resistant to cracking under the pressure of the heat and wash by hand or by machine
WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
ONE PAGE
INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS
TORONTO, CANADA

TO YOUNG WOMEN

You may be laying up for yourself much future suffering by not treating your ailments promptly. The fact they have a chance to become chronic, with that well-known female remedy, Wine of Cardui—about which you have so often heard.

Look ahead, and plan for a healthy, happy life, by preventing female trouble from getting a foothold.

Try that famous medicine, Cardui, which has helped so many others, will help you.

For young girls just entering into womanhood and young ladies whose life duties have not long begun, Cardui is often of vital importance, giving them strength for daily tasks.

Read what Mrs. Mary Hudson, of Eastman, Miss., says about her young sister: "While staying with me, and going to school, my young sister was in terrible misery. I got her to take a few doses of Cardui and it helped her at once."

"I have taken Cardui myself and believe I would have been under the clay, if it had not been for that wonderful medicine."

"Now I am in better health than in three years."

Try Cardui.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00
St. Louis, $26.00
Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares

To ALL Principal Points in the United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone, Main 2618.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE.
LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLAST-ING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES.
WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS
FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MA-CHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL
IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CAN-AL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSE-HOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

BLMYER
BCHURCH
1011 CANAL STREET
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE SUBSCRIP- TION

All the subscribers to the Endowment Fund of Millsaps College will please note that the books, subscriptions and other of the Mississippi Conference are in the hands of Major
F. W. Millsaps and those of the North Mississippi Conference are in the hands of Mr. J. E. Walmsley and Mr. J. E. Walmsley.
Books from the former Conference should be addressed to him at Jackson, Miss., and those from the latter Conference should be addressed to him at Columbus, Miss. We are trying very hard to complete this work by the last of this year, and I hereby appeal to all our friends to send in their checks as soon as possible.

J. E. WALMSLEY, Secretary, Jackson, Miss.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT.

The third Quarterly Conference at Houston, was the best since I have been on the district. J. W. Can has been a great success in Sabbath observance. He is preaching to large congregations and the message represents as advancing in every way.

A. P. P. never did as good work before. I am sure, as he is doing to the Mississippi Church. He is in favor with his people, all of them, and is happy and hopeful. He is serving as the people of our country state.
The finances there are about up to last year, about they will pay the pastor $100 more than last year. You don't find $100 more everywhere.
I go to the Hospital of the Holy D. W. B. this week. B. A. Clark is holding a meeting in the "Dove Star" State. He will be away for twenty days. President Hall of Millsaps has his picnic on the 15th Sunday.

REV. J. H. FELTS

Effects of the Spoken Word.

Many persons are addicted to the use of opium and other narcotics and are suffering from the results. Some of these persons are in the hands of
B. M. W. and his son, Dr. W. W. W.
They look upon these habits and their effects with a great deal of interest.
They will be sent free of charge to the hospital of the Holy D. W. B. in Houston, Texas. I have no doubt that I express my gratitude for your wonderful cure. I am now in the hospital of the Holy D. W. B. in Houston, Texas, and in July 1909, I was cured of my habit of opium and other narcotics.
I have been in the hospital of the Holy D. W. B. for several years and have been cured of my habit of opium and other narcotics. I have been cured of my habit of opium and other narcotics.
I have been cured of my habit of opium and other narcotics. I have been cured of my habit of opium and other narcotics.

FELDER CAMP MEETING.

The Felder Camp Meeting, Topisaw
Chapel, will begin on Friday night,
Aug. 12, and close on the 16th. All ministers are invited. We insist on all those of the Brookhaven District to join us in this meeting. With all Christians join us in prayer for a great revival. We are anxious for you, Mr. Editor, to attend the meeting. J. B. King, P. C.
McComb, Miss.

CAMP MEETING NOTICE.

The Cleveland, Miss., Holiness Association will hold their fifth annual Camp Meeting on the association's grounds, Aug. 12-16. These grounds are located three miles north of Cleveland, Miss. We have for our human leader, Dr. Beverly Carradine, once a member of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, but now a resident of St. Louis, Mo. Prof. Henry Sewell, of Atlanta, Ga., will lead the host in song. We are expecting great things at the hands of the Lord and sincerely desire the earnest prayers of the Advocate family. For further information write R. J. Collins, P. C., Cleveland, Miss. R. L. Beavers, Secretary, Cleveland, Miss.

FREE DEAFNESS TREATMENT.

A remarkable offer made by one of the leading experts in the world. FREE TRIAL MEDICINES. An earplug at once. How new treatment has cured cases of chronic cases of deafness, various ear troubles and asthma in their early stages. Send for treatment failed to benefit. Send in now. Address G. M.
Branham, M. D., 33 Gumbel Bldg.,
Kansas City, Mo.

EDUCATIONAL.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE JACKSON, MISS.

Rev. David Carlisle Hull, M. S., President.

High School, Normal, and other departments. Extraordinary Academic and Religious Training.

LITERARY AND LAW DEPARTMENTS.

Preparatory to A. B., B. S., A. M., M. A., and Ph. D. Degrees.
NINETEENTH SESSION BEGINS SEPTEMBER 22, 1910.

For Catalogue and other information address:
J. E. WALMSLEY, Secretary, Jackson, Miss.

The Mississippi Conference Training School MONTROSE, MISS.

This School has the largest and most competent Faculty in its history.
Our pupils are prepared for Sophomore Class in High-grade Colleges.
Our Musical Director is in a Northern Conservatory, adding to her already splendid equipment for Piano and Voice Culture.
We will build a Mission Hall on the School Campus, and have added the subject of Missions to our Curriculum.
Our rates for board and tuition are reasonable.

Write for catalogue to:

Rev. WALDO W. MOORE, A. M., President.

MERIDIAN WOMAN'S COLLEGE.

One of the Nation's Leading Schools for Young Ladies and Girls.

Superior Faculty of Christian Teachers
Excellence in the study of the Bible
Special Advantages in Art, Music, and Domestic Science. Training with the Highest Literary Standards.

AN IDEAL UNION OF HOME AND SCHOOL.

A beautiful Farm, School, and Exquisite Board. Special Training for Young Misses and Women.

See full particulars in our beautiful illustrated Catalogue. Write Pres. J. W. BEESON, Dept. D., Meridian, Miss.

SOUTHEASTERN DENTAL COLLEGE.

This school offers the advantage of a high-grade school.
Excellent building, superb equipment and experienced faculty. Individual instruction given each pupil. Session opens Sept. 1st. For catalogue address:
DR. C. L. STOCKS, Dean, 427-8 Austell Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

The Woman's College of Shreveport.

A high-grade College for Girls and Young Ladies. Ideal location. Steam heat. Modern improvements. Non-sectarian. Faculty of specialists. College and Preparatory Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Session begins Wednesday, September 27, 1910.
Write for catalogue. GEORGE L. HARRELL, President, Shreveport, La.

SOUTHERN PHYSIOLOGICAL SCHOOL

For Feeble-Minded

BACKWARD AND NERVOUS CHILDREN

Feeble-minded children are developed into useful and often self-supporting men and women. Send for catalog giving full information.
Articulation and Physical Culture Specialists.
Mrs. CORA BRISTOL NELSON, Murfreesboro, Tenn.

CHAMBERLAIN-HUNT ACADEMY

Port Gibson, Miss.

Reduced Rates—$150.00 per year. Expenses

Catalogue giving detailed information will be sent upon request. It tells you things you ought to know before sending your boy or girl to school.
CHAMBERLAIN-HUNT ACADEMY, Box 900, PORT GIBSON, MISS.

Port Gibson Female College,

PORT GIBSON, MISS.

11st session opens Sept. 14th. Literature, music, art, elocution, stenography, bookkeeping, sewing. Physical culture and chorus work free. Special attention given health and morals. Confers degree of A.B. Preparatory department. Students can reduce expenses by taking duties. For catalogue, address:

REV. H. G. HAWKINS, A. B., Pres.

Whitworth College.

Twenty carefully selected teachers and officers. More than two hundred students last session. A most excellent literary course leading to the degrees of L.B. and A.B. Departments of Music, (including piano, violin and voice culture) expression, art, commerce.

Next Session begins Sept. 8, 1910.

For Catalogue address:

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

Belmont College

For Young Women Nashville, Tenn.
IRA LANDRITH, D.D., LL.D., President
MISS HOOD and MISS HERON, Principals
College and Preparatory Courses.
Music, Art, Expression, Modern Languages, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Matchless location. Athletics. Horseback Riding. Register now. For catalogue, address:
BELMONT COLLEGE, Box T.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Natchez Dist.—Third Round.

Hamburg, at Knoxville Aug. 6, 7
Homochitto, at Mt. Vernon Aug. 13, 14
Adams, at Ebenezer Aug. 20, 21
Centerville Aug. 24
Gloster, at Woodland Aug. 27, 28
Nebo, at Ebenezer Sept. 3, 4
Bayou Pierre, at Sweet Water Sept. 10, 11
Barlow, at Rehoboth Sept. 12
Wilkinson, at Friendship Sept. 17, 18
Scotland, at Galatia Sept. 24, 25
H. WALTER FEATHERSTON, P. E.

Jackson Dist.—Third Round.

Florence, at Wesleyana Aug. 2
Cantoh 8 p.m. Aug. 3
Mendenhall, at Pinola Aug. 13, 14
Lintonia, at Bethany Aug. 20, 21
Tazoo City 8 a.m. Aug. 22
Eden, at Phillips Aug. 27, 28
Benton, at Tranquill Aug. 29
Flora, at Livingston Aug. 31
Harrisville, at Poplar Sp. Sept. 3, 4
Jackson, Capitol St. 7:30 p.m. Sept. 5
Jackson, Galloway Church, 7:30 p.m. Sept. 7
Deasonville, at Doyer Sept. 10, 11
Jackson, First Church, 7:30 Sept. 12
Fanni, Holly Bush Sept. 14
Canton Sept. 18
J. R. JONES, P. E.

Vicksburg Dist.—Third Round.

Bottom, at Raymond Aug. 4
Edwards, at Edwards Aug. 14, 15
Harrison, at Mispah Aug. 21, 22
Sartalia, at Sartalia Aug. 27, 28
Angulla, at Sunflower Aug. 31
Chapel Sept. 3
Hermanville, at Carpenter Sept. 3, 4
G. H. GALLOWAY, P. E.

Meridian Dist.—Third Round.

Waynesboro Aug. 7, 8
Scobba, at Spring Hill Aug. 10
Meridian, Central, 11 a.m. Aug. 21
Meridian, East End, 8 p.m. Aug. 21
Meridian, South Side and Poplar Springs, at S. Side Aug. 24
De Kalb, at De Kalb Aug. 26
N. Kemper, at Mt. Zion Aug. 27, 28
Buckatunna, at Chicora Sept. 1
Enterprise and Stonewall, at Concord Sept. 3, 4
Porterville, at P. Sept. 10, 11
Vimville, at Pleasant Hill Sept. 13
Meridian, 5th St., 11 a.m. Sept. 13
Meridian, 7th Ave., 8 p.m. Sept. 13
W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

Newton Dist.—Third Round.

Walnut Grove, at Good Hope Aug. 5

Carthage, at Conway Aug. 6, 7
Rose Hill, at Hopewell Aug. 13, 14
Laurel, 1st Church Aug. 20, 21
Laurel, Kingston Aug. 20, 21
Laurel, 6th Street Aug. 22
Newton Aug. 23
Homewood, at Gasque Aug. 24
Lake, at Lake Aug. 27, 28
Hillsboro, at Lane's Chapel Sept. 3
Forest, at Coutrel Sept. 3, 4
Montrose Sept. 6
Chunkey, at Lost Gap Sept. 10, 11
Decatur, at Union Sept. 15
Neshoba Sept. 16
Stallo, at Cook's Chapel Sept. 17, 18
Philadelphia Sept. 19
Hickory, at Spring Hill Sept. 24, 25
Indian Mission, at Talla Chulah Sept. 30
Edinburg, at Scotland Oct. 1, 2
T. J. O'NEIL, P. E.

Hattiesburg Dist.—Third Round.

Pachuta, at McGowan's Aug. 2, 3
Hattiesburg, at Main St. Aug. 4
Hattiesburg, at Broad St. Aug. 5
Oloh, at East Columbia Aug. 13, 14
Sumrall Aug. 21, 22
Leakesville, at Adam's M. Aug. 24, 25
New Augusta, at N. A. Sept. 4, 5
Eastabuchle, at E. Sept. 10, 11
Magee, at Rials Sept. 15, 16
Bethel, at Summerland Sept. 17, 18
Seminary, at S. Sept. 19
Lucedale Sept. 21
Collins, at Ora Sept. 24, 25
M. B. SHARBROUGH, P. E.

Seashore Dist.—Third Round.

Hub, at Wesley Chapel Aug. 13, 14
Poplarville Aug. 15
Carriere and McNeill, at Picayune Aug. 16
Columbia Aug. 17
Oakville, at Baxterville Aug. 18
Coalville, at White Plains Aug. 20, 21
Long Beach Aug. 26
Lumberton Aug. 27, 28
Vanceleave, at Red Hill Aug. 31
Wolf River Mission, at Beulah Sept. 1
Moss Point Sept. 2
Americus, at Big Point Sept. 3, 4
Pascagoula Sept. 5
Escatawpa, at Orange Gr. Sept. 6
Gulfport, 25th Avenue Sept. 10, 11
Biloxi Sept. 14
W. B. JONES, P. E.

Brookhaven District—Third Round.

Gallman, at Old Crystal Springs Aug. 6, 7
Crystal Springs Aug. 9
Topisaw, at Topisaw Aug. 13, 14
Silver Creek, at S. C. Aug. 20, 21
Wesson, at W. Aug. 28, 29
Bogue Chitto and Norfield, at Bogue Chitto Sept. 3, 4
Prentiss, at Santee Sept. 10, 11
Buford, at Sandy Hook Sept. 16
Tyertown, at Tyertown Sept. 17, 18
Pearlhaven, at Pleas. Grove Sept. 25, 26
Brookhaven Sept. 25, 26
J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

THE CHURCH AND THE SOCIAL EVIL.

The terrible ravages of the social evil will also challenge the faith and courage of the municipal church. How much of the poverty, the disease, the degeneracy, the crime, the wreckage of homes is due to this cause it were difficult to say. Competent observers tell us that the damage done by the saloons is trivial compared with this. Might not the churches, if they would stand together, do something to meet and check this terrible scourge?—Rev. Washington Gladden's "The Municipal Church," in the August Century.

We talk about eternal rest, but the truest rest is beautiful work. We can not imagine energetic, earnest souls doing nothing.—Selected.

The entire object of true education is to make people not merely do the right things, but enjoy the right things; not merely industrious; not merely learned, but to love knowledge; not merely pure, but to love purity; not merely just, but to hunger and thirst after justice.—John Ruskin.

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.

Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Courses. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE.

THE OLDEST COLLEGE FOR WOMEN IN AMERICA—THE RECOGNIZED STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE FOR THE WHOLE SOUTH—NOTABLE PROGRESS AMONG SOUTHERN INSTITUTIONS.

Splendid plant—worth $350,000—with all modern comforts, on an eminence in the best residential district in Macon. $200,000 now being raised for improvements and endowment.

One of less than a half dozen colleges for women in the South, on a full fourteen units basis. Courses leading to A. B. and B. S. degrees. Faculty of thirty-nine officers and teachers. Nearly 3,000 alumnae throughout the Nation. The Wesleyan diploma is the highest academic honor open to a woman in the South.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, employing fourteen officers and teachers, is the Mecca of artists and those preparing to teach. Schools of Art and Expression at the same high standard. Diplomas and teachers' certificates are conferred.

The moral and physical health of Wesleyan young ladies is safeguarded at every point. The discipline and training are non-sectarian, but Christian to the core. Wesleyan's high aim is to send out young women of genuine Christian culture. Health record without a parallel. Serious sickness has been rare, and not a single death has occurred at the college in many years.

Rates within reach of all. The College is not conducted for money making, but to bless the world. Apply for catalogue and information in detail to REV. W. H. AINSWORTH, D.D., President, Macon, Ga.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jackson, Tenn.

Next School Year begins Wednesday, September 14. Every facility offered for a thorough education for girls and young women. All departments taught, including besides regular Classical and Literary Course, Music, Art, Expression, Stenography, Typewriting, Business course, Etc. Charges reasonable. For catalogues, etc., apply to

REV. A. B. JONES, Jackson, Tenn.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute is one of the oldest Female Colleges in the South, having been chartered in 1843. The college has 250 attendants and 125 of them are boarding pupils.

THE TEXAS DENTAL COLLEGE HOUSTON, TEXAS

THE SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION BEGINS OCTOBER 4th, 1910. Offers to the prospective dental students unsurpassed clinical advantages and teaching facilities for the study of the most modern and up-to-date dentistry. Ideal winter climate; Reasonable living expenses, and the most wholesome moral influences. For full information and catalogue, address the secretary, CHAS. E. EDGE.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE.

A home school for girls. 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful hill country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue. Address, Pres. H. H. BROWLEE, CLINTON, LA.

Ward Seminary Nashville, Tennessee

46th year. Seminary and Special Courses. Conservatory of Music—Emil Winkler, Director; Signor Campobello, Voice; Fritz Schmitz, Violin. 175 Boarding Pupils. Complete appointments. City advantages. Beautiful campus for outdoor sports. For catalogue address J. D. BLANTON, President.

5 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McLeod, Warren, Ark., used 5 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 10 years."

Or S. Butler, Augusta, Ark., wrote: "Used 5 bottles and gained 15 pounds and feel 100 per cent better."

Money says when it fails
The Johnson's Chl. & Fever
Tonic Co.
Savannah, Georgia.

SOUTHERN SEATING
and
CABINET COMPANY
Manufacturers
HIGH GRADE CHURCH
FURNITURE

Largest and Oldest Makers of Church Furniture in the South
Jackson, Tennessee.

RHEUMATISM

A CURE GIVEN BY ONE WHO HAD IT

In the Spring of 1901 I was afflicted by this terrible inflammatory rheumatism. I suffered as those who have it know, for over three years and tried a host of remedies. Finally I found a remedy that cured me completely and I have not returned. I have given it to a number who were terribly afflicted, and it effected a cure in every case. Anyone desiring to give this precious remedy a trial I will send it free. Address:

Mark E. Jackson, No. 225 James Street, Syracuse, N. Y.
Mr. Jackson is responsible for these statements. True—Fals.

GALL STONES OF LIVER

Have you Pain or Discomfort in Part of Stomach? Pain in lower right hand corner of back? Spasms of the stomach? Sick Headache? Bloating? Gases? Acid? Bitter Constipation? Piles? Swollen? Pains in the upper part of the back? If you have any of these symptoms you need the "GALL STONE CURE". Write for FREE BOOK. CALLSTONE REMEDY CO., Box C, E. 4th St., St. Louis, Mo. 63102.

DAISY FLY KILLER

Place anywhere, it traps and kills all flies. Best, clean, economical, convenient. Kills all house flies. Can be used on top of food, will not harm anything. Guaranteed effective. Of all dealers. Or direct from the HAROLD SOYERS, 110 N. 4th Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y.

WE SHIP ON APPROVAL

without a cent deposit, repay the freight and allow 10 DAYS FREE TRIAL. IT ONLY COSTS 1 cent to learn our method of repairing bicycles of any highest grade 1910 model bicycles. Do not buy a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone at any price, until you write for our large catalog and learn our wonderful method of repairing bicycles. We will send you a free sample bicycle to test our method. If you like it, we will sell it to you at a big money saving. We are cheaper than any other factory. TRUES, Counter-Grake rear wheels, lamps, repairs and all supplies at half price. Do not wait until today for our special offer. Read Cycle Co., Dept. M. 74, Chicago.

Progress Self-Tramping

COTTON PRESS

3-Horse Power. Operate. Capacity 25 bales. Write for prices. Manufactured by C. J. HYDE, MERIDIAN, MISS.

ESTABLISHED 1858
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

Marriages

June 17, 1910, at the Sixth Street Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., at 2 o'clock, by Rev. J. O. Ware, Mr. B. M. BRYAN and Miss ADDIE RICE, both of Laurel, Miss.

June 24, 1910, at the residence of the bride's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Scott, at 2 o'clock, by Rev. J. O. Ware, Mr. E. S. WHITE and Miss NENA BRADFORD, daughter of Rev. J. O. Scott.

July 15, 1910, at the Methodist Parsonage, South Side, Meridian, Miss., by Rev. Isaac L. Peoples, Mr. CLEMONS O. SCOTT, of Deerfield, Fla., and Miss TINA MAY WEBB, of Meridian.

June 21, 1910, at the Methodist Church in Bertha, La., by Rev. J. O. Barrett, Mr. JOHN W. MITCHELL to Miss SUE CALDWELL, both of Union Parish, La.

June 22, 1910, at the home of the bride's parents in Dubach, La., by Rev. J. O. Barrett, Mr. JOHN H. WHITE and Miss EVA MAY AUTREY.

AVAILABLE FOR MEETINGS.

Dear Brother Meek: Owing to the disastrous failure of crops in the community last year, the congregation at Montrose, which I have been serving as pastor in connection with the presidency of the Mississippi Conference Training School located there, are unable to furnish sufficient support for my family for the balance of the conference year.

In consequence of this condition confronting me, Bishop Mouzon has released me from the pastorate, allowing me to engage in assisting my brethren in their meetings, whereby to secure sustenance for my family who still occupy the parsonage.

At this writing I am aiding Brother McVey on Waynesboro Circuit and have an engagement to assist Brother Rawls, beginning Aug. 13. Any other brethren desiring my help may address me at Montrose, Miss.

Fraternally, W. A. BETTS.

GOOD BOOKS FOR SALE.

Dear Brother Meek: As my health is so poor, that I can do nothing, and need money more than books, with your kind permission, I will announce these for sale. Viz:

People's Cyclopaedia, 4 vols. bound in Morocco in 1893. Price, $25. My price, $4.25. These are as sound as they ever were.

Shaw on Prophecy, Dan. and Rev. 676 pages. Cloth. Good as new. Price, $1.50. My price, $1.50.

Western Standards, revised by W. P. Harrison, vol. 1, 565 pages. Nice black cloth. $1.

Division by Geo. Smith, F. S. A. Black cloth, new, 502 pages. My price, 75 cents.

Paine's Life of McKendree, 2 vols. Brown cloth. Sound. Price, $2. My price, $1.50. Purchaser to pay postage.

Have been a great sufferer this spring, and the end is not yet.

H. ARMSTRONG.

Olla, La. June 21.

UNEMPLOYMENT VS. THE CHURCH.

Unemployment is an ungainly name for an ugly fact. It is one of the grave misfortunes. If any man deserves a friend it is the man in need who is willing to work. Such a man ought never to be in doubt that there is one great friend to whom he can turn, and that is the Christian Church. A good many of these men do go to the ministers. There is a constant procession of them at the study doors, but it is hardly possible for us to find work for many of them. If the municipal church were properly organized we could have an employment bureau.—Rev. Washington Gladson's, "The Municipal Church," in the August Century.

Memorize this package and ask your grocer for it.

With Crystal Gelatine in the house dessert troubles disappear. Crystal makes the tenderest jellies as well as the greatest variety of dishes.

BOSTON

CRYSTAL GELATINE

is very simple to prepare, "jells" quickly, and each package makes two full quarts. Being nutritious and easy to digest, it is taking the place of heavier desserts. Invaluable for children and invalids. Don't fail to try it on your table.

Ask your grocer. If he does not carry it, send us his name and we will send you a free sample package.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.,
121A Beverly St. BOSTON, MASS.

Why buy a piano and be satisfied with piano music only, when for a small fraction of the cost of a piano you can have bringing music of every instrument into your home, the whole band, orchestra, Grand Opera, the whole vaudeville show.

The EDISON PHONOGRAPH

FOR a good piano you have to pay about $400. (Think!) For one-half that price you can have an Edison—the best estimate of Edison Phonograph made, and just as beautiful, finished as a $1000 Grand Piano. And you can get better types of Edison Phonographs at any price you want to pay, from $12.50 up. Does your Phonograph play Amberol Records? If not, ask your dealer about our money-saving combination offer of Amberol Records and the attachment to play them.

The Amberols $200.

Edison Standard Records. Edison Amberol Records. Edison Grand Opera Records.

These are Edison's greatest records. They are the best of the best. They are the most beautiful. They are the most complete. They are the most complete. They are the most complete.

NATIONAL PHONOGRAPH COMPANY
149 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

The Edison Business Phonograph saves 50 per cent of the typist's actual transcribing time.

Other Styles $12.50 to $125

We are Headquarters for Edison's Phonographs, Records and Supplies

—CASH OR INSTALLMENT—

We pay transportation charges on purchase of one dozen records or more.

NATIONAL AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM CO. OF LA.
614 GRAVIER STREET NEW ORLEANS.

Epworth League

By Rev. Wm. H. Coleman.

TOPIC FOR JULY 31.

THE REMNANT OF THE INHABITANTS OF THE LAND.

(Joshua ix, 16-21; xi, 16-20.)

Read the whole of these chapters from which our references are taken and you have the interesting story of how the Gibeonites made a league with Joshua and the victorious Israelites when they were conquering the land of Canaan and destroying the inhabitants thereof, and how the Gibeonites were thus spared and became "The remnant of the inhabitants of the land."

The one who assigns our topic and selects our text for each week has directed that the application this week be made to the American Indians as the remnant of the inhabitants of our land.

In making this application it is unnecessary for me to recite history to you; for you are already familiar with the known history of this interesting people; of how they were found here more than four centuries ago, the sole inhabitants of this beautiful land; of how they were without a history of their past; without an appreciation of the vast undeveloped resources of their country; without what the world calls civilization; without a true apprehension of God. And yet with many noble traits of undeveloped character and high ideals of life; a high type of uncivilized man.

You also know how they have constantly receded and vanished before the westward march of the white man's supremacy, until to-day, of all the splendid tribes of the red men of the forest, there remain only a few broken fragments. The census of 1900 gives the entire number to be only 266,780.

These live in Oklahoma, Arizona, New Mexico, California, South Dakota, Washington, and Alaska, with a very few scattered through some of the other Western States.

I shall not attempt to discuss the ethics of the vanquishing of the red man of the forest by the white man of business and politics, any more than I have to write their history. But there are certain lessons that we may learn both from the relationship of the Israelites to the Gibeonites, and of the Americans of to-day to this remnant of the Americans of the past.

(a.) In both the conquest of Canaan by the Israelites and the conquest of America by the Anglo-Saxons, we have a national illustration of the loss of the unimproved talent. The man who fails to improve what God gives him shall inevitably lose it. Even so the nation that fails to improve what God gives it shall lose it, and although we to-day feel secure in our national strength, yet our greatest protection is not in our navy or army; not in our system of government; not in our great wealth, but in the piety of our people who love and serve God and who try to do all things to his glory. We may make this nation the mightiest that the world has ever known; one that shall conquer the whole world. Or we may make it a reproach among nations; one that shall fail and fall.

To do the former we must make it a godly nation, and must conquer not with our navies and armies, but with the benign uplifting power of the principles of universal peace, universal brotherhood of man, by the incarnation in the lives of our leaders and our citizens of the principles of the Prince of Peace. And we may thus take the world for Christ, and become the beloved brothers of all men of all nations.

To do the latter of the above-mentioned alternatives we only have to multiply such vile, debasing scenes as the recent Jeffries-Johnson prize fight, such corruption in politics as some that have been brought to light in recent years, such national sins as licensing the liquor traffic for the sake of revenue, such indulgences as those accorded the white slave traffic and its fruits of evil that are allowed to grow unchallenged in every city. With such vices growing until they engulf us we shall fall by the weight of our own corruption, not as the untaught inhabitants of Canaan, not as the simple-minded children of the forest that our ancestors drove from their happy hunting grounds, but as the Roman Empire. Which alternative shall we choose as a nation? Which shall we help to achieve as individuals, for our nation is made up of individuals?

(b.) On the other hand we have in these conquests a lesson of the responsibility of the conquerors to the conquered, or of the strong to the weak. In that early, crude age in which the Gibeonites made peace with the conquering Israelites, the Christian conception of the universal brotherhood of man was unknown, and yet the Israelites spared the lives of the Gibeonites.

In this enlightened Christian age much more is required of us. The policy of our national government toward the Indians seems to be just, in that liberal reservations of land have been made for them, public schools have been established for them, and certain laws enacted for their protection. But, notwithstanding all this, it is sadly true that in many instances they have been cruelly and unjustly dealt with by the white men. Only recently, in our United States Senate, Senator Gore, the blind Senator from Oklahoma, brought accusations against men high up in office and in life of a base scheme to defraud some of the tribes out of millions of dollars in the sale of their lands. These charges are now being investigated by our government.

But it is not enough for us as a government to deal with them in a legal way; even if our policies are strictly just and are honestly carried out. We owe them more than all this. We have not only fallen heir to the beautiful and richly-endowed country of their fathers, but we are also heirs of a civilization that their ancestors knew not to teach them; and better yet, the heirs of the infinite spiritual blessings of our Heavenly Father. All these better things we should share with this remnant of the former inhabitants of our land.

We should remember that God's Word declares that he hath made of one blood all nations to dwell on all the face of the earth (Acts xvii, 26), and that he hath commissioned us to disciple all nations and to teach them to observe all things that he hath commanded. (Matt. xxviii, 19-20).

Therefore, while our hearts, our prayers, our means rightly go across the seas to the remotest pagan lands in our zealous efforts to evangelize the world, we should not forget the brother in our own midst, who is the descendant of the red man of the forest and who to-day is capable of the highest culture and refinement, and who has a responsive heart ready to gratefully receive the love of the Father as it is revealed in the Son by the glorious gospel that he has commissioned us to carry to them.

Rheumatic Pains and stiffness in joints or muscles; neuralgia; backache; tired, painful, aching feet; sore hands; sprains and bruises; sore throat and chest, due to colds or grippe; in fact, all the common aches and pains that occur in any family from day to day, yield almost instantly to a good rubbing with Minard's Liniment.

It does not stain, it is neither sticky nor oily—it is just a delightfully smooth, aromatic cream that feels good on the skin and rubs right in and stops inflammation like magic. Minard's Liniment ought to be on every family medicine shelf, because it is so useful in emergencies and so prompt in giving relief.

We guarantee it to be just as we represent—should you find it otherwise, we will refund your money on request. Sold by all druggists in three sizes, price 25c., 50c. and $1.00.

FREE. If you have never tried it, and wish to test its merit, write us to-day for a free trial bottle. MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO., South Framingham, Mass.

USE THE L. and A. RAILWAY,

EVER ON TIME

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

THE VOTAN LINE

TEST THE SO-CALLED BEST
YOU'LL FIND VOTAN STILL BETTER

A special importation of highest producible grade and quality. Absolutely pure. Perfectly prepared. Daintily and sanitarily packed. Its tang, peculiarly distinctive and satisfying. Its taste, bland, smooth and delightful.

A superior blend perfected after years of study and expense to learn what the great majority of tea-drinkers want but seldom get even at twice the price. Leaves full, clean and free from dust, and quality in every leaf.

IN ONE, TWO AND THREE POUND
CANS.

THERE IS AN EXCLUSIVE AGENT IN YOUR TOWN

IN ONE QUARTER, ONE HALF AND ONE POUND
CANISTERS.

THE VOTAN TEA & COFFEE CO., New Orleans, U.S.A.
Importers Teas and Coffees

THIRD QUARTER LESSON 7. JULY 21, 1924
A LESSON ON FREIGHTS
MAYBE THE

Golden Rule: "If ye forgive men their trespasses, your Heavenly Father will also forgive you." (Matt. 6: 14.)

Петр и Линдзи.

A Step in the Right Direction.

Figures for Forgiveness

the number of times that forgiveness was required. For that matter the number is always definite and is usually small. The trouble with Peter was that he believed it possible to interpret spiritual things in terms of mathematics. Therefore he missed the meaning altogether. The quality of mercy is not strained. There is indeed something of infinity in the least manifestation of an ethical principle.

"490." Severely by seven is only a symbol, but it is a useful aid to the imagination in the crowded hours of the day. When annoyances cluster thickly about, and thoughtless, even unkind, words and deeds compel attention, then the huge size of this sum may well awe the temper into quietness and submission. A leader in a Y. M. C. A. class had cards printed and distributed among the boys. The cards bore the single inscription: "490." It is a pungent suggestion to all of us. It is a lesson in the arithmetic of love. In this arithmetic, even if the figure 490 is reached in practice (and how rarely is even the figure 3 required), then is the sum total still as far from being reached as even. Love is inexhaustible.

A Selfish Question

Peter's question is little more than refined selfishness. It barely moves in the direction of real forgiveness. "How oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him?" He is the injured party, and also the self-appointed judge. Of course, the form of this question is quite natural, and Peter cannot be too harshly censured. Nevertheless, from the point of view of Jesus' intention, the question is altogether wrong. So long as the emphasis is put on the first personal pronoun in a matter of this kind, just so long is genuine friendliness prevented. Love does not calculate the offense. It is concerned wholly with the object of its purring affection.

The Gospel of Forgiveness

DATE OF BIRTH: 1914-11-14
PLACE OF BIRTH: [illegible]

1997

The Prayer of the University Men

"O God, I have sinned against thee many times. I have been often forgetful of thy goodness. Deal with me, O merciful God, O Lord, even as I deal with my neighbor. He hath not offended me one hundredth part as much as I have offended thee, for I cannot forgive him. He has been very ungrateful to me, although not a hundredth part as ungrateful as I have been to thee. Yet I cannot overlook such base ingratitude. Deal with me, O Lord, I beseech thee, as I deal with him. I remember, and treasure up every little word which shows how ill he has behaved to me. Deal with me, O merciful God, O Lord, as I deal with him." Can anything be more shocking than such a prayer? Yet this is just the prayer the transforming power offers up every time he repeats the Lord's Prayer.—REV. E. S. LEWIS, of Western Christian Advocate.

TO FATHERS AND MOTHERS.

This is the property of a person named by the following names: Mr. John N. C.
[illegible] [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

After having traveled in every State in the United States, many foreign countries and having visited many colleges, Mr. Johnson started the first national women's college in 1862. He selected the Methodist Male College and the Methodist Women's College for his institutions, from sending to all eastern colleges and universities.

J. W. BERSON, A. M.
President
Kew-Forest High School
Kew-Forest, N. Y.

AGENTS WANTED.

WANTED—Good men and women agents at once for Roosevelt's Famous Hunt for Big Game. Also for Traffic in Girls. Immense sellers. Price $150. 50 percent commission. Outfit free. Send 10c for mailing. Both outfits also. Also district managers for easy payment installment plan. Permanent work. $1,000 to $5,000 per year profits. Particulars free. Address: A. B. Kuhlman Company, Chicago, Ill. 7618

TULANE
UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA
210 Teachers NEW ORLEANS 2476 Students
EDWIN E. CRAIGHEAD, L.L.D., President
College of Arts and Sciences, College of Technology, Bourgeois College for Young Women, Teachers College, Graduate School, Law School, Medical School, School of Business Administration, School of Journalism and Seminary School.

Vanderbilt University
— NASHVILLE, TENN. —
1007 STUDENTS 100 TEACHERS
CAMPUS OF 50 ACRES

New College Hall and Chemical
Laboratory Just Completed

Expenses low. Literary courses for graduates and undergraduates. Professional courses in Engineering, Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, Theology. Send for catalogue, naming department.

J. E. HART, Secretary.

FANDOLPH-MACON ACADEMY For Boys and Girls, ages 6-18
Principal: E. SUMNER City, Va.

PEABODY COLLEGE FOR TEACHERS
CHAS. E. LITTLE, PR. D. P. M. of Faculty.

...the ...
...the ...
...the ...
...the ...

Tender Skins Need Soothing Soaps

HEISKELL'S
Medicinal Toilet Soap

JOHNSTON, HOLLOWAY & COMPANY,
531 Commerce St., Philadelphia, Pa.

ATHENS COLLEGE
 FOUNDED 1843 ATHENS, ALA. TWENTY YEARS

☞ Governed by Women for Girls and Women. ☞ Merit not Money: Polish not Varnish.
 ☞ Member of Ala. Assn. of Colleges. Preparatory School in connection, students enjoying equal opportunities with college students. Boarding Department enrollment quadrupled in five years. ☞ Excellent advantages in Music, Oratory, Art, Normal Training and Domestic Science for those desiring special courses. Graduate nurse, sterilized drinking water, Chemical fire extinguishers. ☞ Rates, nine months; Board, Laundry, tuition in Regular Course, Physical Culture, Chorus Singing, Medical Fee and Handsome Uniform made to measure by New York tailor) hat and gloves to match, $205. Sixty-eighth session begins Wednesday, September 20, 1910. ☞ For catalog apply to MARY NORMAN MOORE, President.

Furniture for School Rooms, made in the South, of Southern wood, by Southern people, with Southern capital. New factory—one of the best equipped in America, employing skilled labor only.

Lowest Prices—Advantageous Freight Rates
 We make Desks, Seats, Teachers' Desks, Book Cases, Library Tables, Magazine Racks, etc. Write for illustrated catalog and price list. Address
W. A. PRICE & SON, West Jackson, Miss.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 57—No. 31.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2442.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 4, 1910.

CHAS. Q. CHALMERS, Publisher.

Charter and Amended Charter of Vanderbilt University.

(The following is an exact reproduction of a pamphlet which appeared under the above caption some years ago.)

No. 7214. In Chancery, at Nashville, Tennessee. Petition: Filed June 29, 1872; enrolled in Book 2, p. 48. The Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. To the Chancellor, presiding at Nashville, State of Tennessee:

The undersigned petitioners, citizens of Davidson County, Tennessee—To-wit: A. L. P. Green, David C. Kelley, Robert A. Young, and Edward H. East, also Jordan Stokes, of Wilson County, Tennessee; David T. Reynolds, a citizen of Giles County, Tennessee; William C. Johnson, Robert J. Morgan, citizens of Shelby County, Tennessee; Smith W. Moore and Milton Brown, of Madison County, Tennessee; Landon C. Garland and Philip Tuggle, citizens of the State of Mississippi; John M. Steele and James H. McFerrin, citizens of the State of Arkansas; Christian D. Oliver, William Dickens, and Edward Wadsworth, James L. DeYampert, citizens of the State of Alabama; W. M. Byrd, Wm. L. C. Hunnicutt, and Thomas Christian, citizens of the State of Mississippi; Wm. H. Foster, James L. Borden, and Andrew Hunter, citizens of the State of Louisiana, would respectfully petition the court to incorporate them under the name and style of The Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the purpose of soliciting subscriptions, donations, and for the erection and maintenance of an institution of learning of the highest order, containing all the schools belonging to a university of that character, together with all the rights, powers, and privileges which by law may belong to literary institutions chartered by the laws of the State. They pray to this end that the required publication may (be made) and all other necessary and proper steps be taken. And will ever pray.

THOMAS H. MALONE.

Charter of the Central University. Decree entered August 6, 1872; Minute Book 60, p. 267. The Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Ex Parte.

This matter came on this day to be heard before the Hon. Nathaniel Baxter, Judge, etc., of the Circuit Court of Davidson County, sitting by interchange with the Hon. Edward H. East, the Chancellor presiding; but who was incompetent to preside and hear this cause, for the reason that he was interested herein; and the same was heard upon the petition of W. C. Johnson, Robert J. Morgan, Smith W. Moore, and Milton Brown, citizens and residents of the State of Tennessee and representatives of the Memphis Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and Alexander L. P. Green, Jordan Stokes, David C. Kelley, Edward H. East, David T. Reynolds, and Robert A. Young, citizens and residents of Tennessee and representatives of the Tennessee Conference; and Landon C. Garland, a citizen and resident of Mississippi, and Philip Tuggle, a citizen and resident of Tennessee, the two latter representing the North Mississippi Conference; and James H. McFerrin and John M. Steele, citizens of the State of Arkansas and representatives of the White River Conference; and Christopher D. Oliver and William Dickson, citizens of the State of Alabama and representatives of the North Alabama Conference; and Edward Wadsworth and W. M. Byrd, citizens of the State of Alabama and representatives of the Alabama Conference; and W. L. C. Hunnicutt and Thomas Christian, citizens of the State of Mississippi and representatives of the Mississippi Conference; and James L. Borden and William H. Foster, citizens of the State of Louisiana and representatives of the Louisiana Conference; and Andrew Hunter and J. L. DeYampert, citizens of the State of Arkansas and representatives of the Little Rock Conference; and it appearing to the court that said persons, in their said petition, prayed to be incorporated under the name and style of The Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the object and plan of said university having been fully set forth in resolutions passed by the delegates of said conferences at a convention of the same, held in the city of Memphis, on the 24th, 25th, 26th, and 27th of January, 1872, and which resolutions are in words and figures as follows:

"Resolved by the Convention, 1. That measures be adopted looking to the establishment, as speedily as practicable, of an institution of learning of the highest order, and upon the surest basis, where the youth of the church and country may prosecute theological, literary, scientific, and professional studies to an extent as great, and in a manner as thorough, as their wants demand.

"2. That the institution shall be called the Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"3. That it shall consist, at present, of five schools, or departments—viz., a theological school, for the training of our young preachers, who, on application for admission, shall present a recommendation from a quarterly or annual conference and shall have obtained a standard of education equal to that required for admission on trial into an annual conference; and instruction to them shall be free, both in the theological and the literary and scientific departments. Secondly, a literary and scientific school. Thirdly, a normal school. Fourthly, a law school. Fifthly, a medical school.

"4. That the sum of one million of dollars is necessary in order to realize fully the object desired, and not less than five hundred thousand dollars must be secured as a condition precedent to the opening of any department of the university.

"5. That the location of the university shall be left to the decision of the college of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

"6. That the carrying out of this whole scheme is hereby committed to the persons therein named before as petitioners, who shall take immediate steps for securing a suitable charter of incorporation, and shall be a board of trust, with power to solicit and invest funds, appoint an agent or agents, and to do whatever else is necessary for the execution of this scheme.

"7. That seven of the board of trustees, at any meeting regularly called, shall constitute a quorum.

"8. That provision be made in the charter for giving a fair representation in the management of the university to any annual conference hereafter co-operating with us.

"9. That the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, be and are hereby requested to act as a board of supervision of the university or any of its departments, and jointly with the board of trust to elect officers and professors, and prescribe the course of study and the plan of government."

And it further appearing to the court that, upon the filing of said petition, the Clerk and Master of this court caused, by an order at rules, the same to be advertised, in pursuance of the statute in such cases made and prescribed; and it further appearing to the court that no one has appeared and made known any objection to the granting of the prayer of the petition, and the court, upon inspection of the designs and objects of said corporation, finds nothing therein contained to be against public policy or good morals, or in conflict with the constitution and laws of the State or of the United States, is pleased to grant the prayer of the same, and doth hereby order and adjudge and decree that the petitioners be declared a body politic and corporate under the name and style of The Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and in that name may sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, in the courts of this State or of the other States of the Union, or of the United States of America; may have a common seal, which may be used at pleasure, shall have perpetual succession; may solicit and receive subscriptions, donations, legacies, and devises; may hold real estate and personal property in such amounts as the business of the corporation requires, and may receive the same by contract, gift, will, or devise; and shall hold the same for the purpose of said incorporation, with all the lawful conditions imposed by the donor; may appoint such subordinate officers and agents as the business of the corporation requires, prescribe their duties, and fix their compensation; may make by-laws not inconsistent with the laws of the land or this charter, or of the resolutions of the convention at Memphis, as set out heretofore, which resolutions are hereby adopted as a part of this charter, but shall make all by-laws necessary and proper to carry out the objects of said resolutions, as well as for the management of its property and the regulation of its affairs, and may also have power to pass all by-laws necessary to the full of the powers therein given, or which by law may hereafter be conferred; and all said powers, rights, and privileges, together with such others as are not herein specially given and referred to, are hereby conferred upon said corporation in as full, complete, and ample manner as by the laws of the State the same can or might be; and said corporation shall have the power to confer all the degrees of merit and honor usually conferred by universities. It is further decreed that petitioners pay the costs of this proceeding; and that the Clerk and Master issue to them a certified copy of this decree.

NATHANIEL BAXTER, Judge.

No. 7231. Petition: Filed April 23, 1872; enrolled in Book 2, p. 499. The Central University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Ex Parte. To the Hon. W. F. Cooper, Chancellor, etc.

The petition of the Central University of the M. E. Church, South, a corporation chartered heretofore by the Chancery Court at Nashville:

Petitioner would state to your Honor that heretofore, by a decree of record in this court, it was chartered as a university of learning; a certified copy of its charter is here filed marked "Exhibit B," and made a part of this petition. Since it has obtained its charter, its condition is so altered that it now desires to have an amendment to its said charter, which amendments are as follows:

It having been thought politic to limit the number of the Board of Trust to two from each co-operating conference, the names of Jordan Stokes and Robert A. Young be dropped from the list. Some conferences not having co-operated in the purpose of said institution, it is now desirable to omit from the list of trustees the names of the persons heretofore incorporated and who represented said conferences, as follows: viz., Christopher D. Oliver, William Dickson, of the North Alabama Conference; Edward Wadsworth and W. W. Byrd, of the Alabama Conference; W. L. C. Hunnicutt and Thomas Christian, of the Mississippi Conference; and James L. Borden and Wm. H. Foster, of the Louisiana Conference.

A large donation having been made to petitioner by C. Vanderbilt, of New York, of not less than $500,000, as set out in "Exhibit C," herewith filed and made a part of this petition, petitioner prays that its name and style be changed to that of "The Vanderbilt University," and that the terms and conditions of said gift be incorporated as a part of said charter.

Petitioner also prays that the words, for the resolutions of the convention at Memphis set out herein, which resolutions are hereby adopted as a part of this charter, on page 12 of the printed charter here filed, be stricken out and omitted, and that said

Conference meeting at Marble Cliff, Bishop residing. An effort was made on the part two of our preachers to locate a man who, ough known to be a good man, was not successful in his work as some others. The brother had passed from the Conference room, while his character and standing in the mission was being passed up and over. I said to the Bishop, "The other ought to be here to hear what the brethren have to say against him." That is so," said the Bishop, "call him in." I did so. The brother did not know what these brethren had against him. He did not know how to reply. The Bishop told him that the charges or complaints were all made a long time ago, and he was to talk in his defense. The whole Conference was wonderfully interested in the case. The room was taken, and the brother's brother was test by a large majority. The Conference was heartily applauded by the good women.
His sympathies were wonderfully drawn in his others favor. The good women and others presented the brother with a suit of clothes, a new coat. The brother is now a member of the Missouri Conference. He talked me up a good time, and did some good work for me. I can sympathize with him, because he, like myself, had really a very, or very poor work, and he had to do very hard, he could under the circumstances give the boy a chance," said a man who had been somewhat in the way of the boy's success. I gave in giving a brother a good opportunity to let me know what there is in him. If the boy will let him humble, we will keep him poor. Yes, and times, too poor to do. He could have done and did so under more favorable circumstances.
From Sumner we were sent to up to the was a wet winter and spring. The mission team to twelve or eighteen inches deep, and we had the work to the other. Brother Caldwell was there one year. He told the people he had been looking for a "soft place" all his life, "and now," said he, "I have found it." Yes, as Uncle Billie Fortenbury had said about a road near Tylertown during a wet time, "the ground was mighty soft."

I traveled the work a part of the year under difficulties. Brother R. F. Witt had served the work two years, and with good results. The people loved him. We found many good people on the work. Thornton, Weems, Carrs, Gilberts, Welches, J. R. Jones, who is now presiding elder on the Jackson District. Calvin Jones and others.

From Lake we were sent to Carthage, where we stayed two years. From Carthage I was sent to Yazoo Circuit. These were trying years. In order to educate our boys, my wife moved, with our children, to Millsaps College in July, 1898. We rented a house and kept boarders for two years. It took all the board money and all my salary to run the boarding-house and pay $175 rent. We promised to pay $300 a year for house rent. We kept four boys in school till they graduated. The last one got through in 1904. By 1905, I had, by the help of the boys, paid house rent, furniture bills, etc., and got to where we could breathe easy again. I am so glad I can say, "I owe no man anything but to love him." I owe Dr. Cooper a debt of gratitude for helping us in the way he did to make it possible to have our boys educated. I also feel under lasting obligations to Sister Peter James, of Jackson, Miss., for her kindness to me in refusing to accept pay for money I borrowed from Brother James while he lived. God bless the good women of our land. But for the noble women in our country the church would suffer in many places financially. In 1900-1-2, we served the Fannin Circuit. In 1903-4 we served the Gallman Charge. Here we had joy and gladness—sadness and sorrow.

On the 28th of July, 1904, we had a family reunion. It was a great occasion. Nine children, about twenty-five grandchildren—all happy together for the last time on earth. "It is the jolliest crowd I ever saw," said a photographer to me. The following morning at the proper time, we met in the parlor for family worship. It was indeed a time of great rejoicing. All five of our preacher boys, together with Brother Terry, our son-in-law. The service lasted quite awhile. We all got happy, even the children, and rejoiced together. It was the last time. In less than a month one of the granddaughters and the grandmother were called home. It was on Friday, the 26th day of August, 1904, the partner of my bosom, the mother of my nine children, my stay in tribulation; she who had walked with me for more than 44 years, helped me bring up and educate our children, shared my joys and sorrows so patiently, surrounded by all her children, fell asleep in Jesus. She had fought the fight, kept the faith, finished the work. She had done her part well. Her ambition was to live to see all her children grown, saved from sin, and educated. She fully realized the desire of her heart. In less than three months after her last one got his diploma from Millsaps College, she went home to rest.

After the death of my good wife, I asked my presiding elder to release me from my work the balance of the year. My stewards and others did not think it the proper thing for me to do, and they were right. Good people lived in the Gallman Charge. They were good to me before and during my deep sorrow.

I carried up a good report to Conference; finances up in full. But oh, my God, how sad and lonely I was! But for my good children and others, who did all they could to help and comfort me, it would have been worse with me. One brother, who had buried two wives, wrote me, "You will never get over it." Again, "You will never be yourself again." Have I? God knows, I don't. Years ago I heard Aunt Sally Rawls, late of Marion County, say, as she paced the floor back and forth, "One-half of me lies out yonder in the cold and silent grave." Her deceased husband was a local preacher. Thank God for the bright prospects of a reunion of loved ones in the "sweet by and by." A good woman was dying. Her death was most triumphant. Her husband, seeing how happily she was passing away, got happy and shouted, "You will look me up when you come home, will you not?" said his dying wife. "Yes, provided I don't find Jesus first." If I do, I may not see you in a thousand years," was his reply.

WEAKENING CONCESSIONS.

By Rev. L. C. Calhoun.

Erroneous concessions are indeed a very prolific source of weakness, and they are common things among the children of men. The proper estimate should be placed upon things. Intelligence requires this. Things that are valuable should be so considered, and conduct should be shaped accordingly. There is something, whether important or unimportant, that is uppermost in everyone's mind; there is something that is paramount in everyone's affection, that he regards as chief. The highest wisdom requires a person to fix his mind on this actually chief thing, concentrating his interest there and never conceding that it is inferior to anything else. To fail here, is to fail below the true ideal, and then the highest success, to say the least of it, is out of the question.

It is easy to make a serious blunder in respect to the ministry. If a man truly called to the work of the ministry, concedes that his office (in its principles) is inferior to that of some other minister or ministers, he makes a fatal mistake. This reflects on the Lord who has thus chosen him. There is no egotism (in an offensive sense) in properly valuing God's work. It is not an assumption for a minister, however obscure he may be, to "open his mouth boldly to make known the mystery of the gospel." He must recognize the importance of his calling in order to trust, honor the Spirit. There is, of course, a great diversity of gifts among men, all "by the same Spirit." Some have much broader capacities than others do, and any one need not hesitate to concede this. To one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one. That is on the divine side. If the one-talented man concedes or grants that the Lord has failed to duly honor him by giving him only one talent, he should use with fidelity that talent; there all the honor lies. The principle of service, whether with one, two, or five talents, is the same. There are many alienations from the church on account of erroneous concessions. The church, without a doubt, is the greatest of all institutions; Christ, the Lord of all the universe, is its head, and to concede that it is inferior to any other organization is a specially great source of weakness, and impedes progress on all essential lines. For instance, there are those who join some secret order, giving great attention to it and none to the church, and say, "this is good enough religion for me," and in that they rest. Such ought to bear in mind particularly that the church contains the ministry, and the sacraments, and the secret orders do not, then, too, all persons, however pure, are not eligible to membership in a secret order.

Such concessions as I have mentioned here have lowered the tone of many a community and put a religious chill on the people there. The old colored brother expressed himself thus: "De societies just shell off all de corn to de speckled chickens, and giv' de Lawd de cob." There are some things that become popular because of their superficiality—that is, with some people. When the Lord just gets the "cob," to those presenting it, he is a very insignificant being.

The Bishops in their address to the General Conference spoke of the attitude of the children and young people toward the preaching services, particularly about such a large number going away after the Sunday school exercises. This is evidently one of the saddest reflections connected with our religious activities. What is the cause of this? It is certainly "because there is a concession—that in some way, has gotten into the minds of our people—that the Sunday school is separate from the church and takes the place of it, and hence they take an interest in the one and do not in the other, and so to tell, there are some who teach classes, and habitually absent themselves from preaching. Certainly this is a bad example. The preacher does not feel like going up to him and saying, "Sir, it is a courtesy due me that you should stay and hear me preach. Common politeness demands it, it would seem, but there is an infinitely greater reason than that: the preaching is one of God's ordinances, which all church members promised to observe. The people everywhere should have a higher notion of the demands of Christianity."

CHRIST THE CENTRAL ATTRACTION.

By E. B. Partin, M. D.

To the Christian, Jesus is the chief attraction in this life, as well as in the life to come. He said: "I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me." To him the soul is drawn in times of trouble and sorrow. As a bright light that shines in a dark place drives all the darkness away, so when Jesus dwells in the heart, sorrow and sighing flee away. In him we find comfort and strength—yes, every good thing. He satisfies the longing soul and binds up the broken heart. In him we live and move and have our being, and without him can do nothing. But when he is present, "we can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth us."

Mr. Spurgeon, in speaking of what the Christ is in the Christian, said: "In all circumstances and conditions, we look to Jesus only. Are we in wealth? Christ crowns it. Are we in poverty? Christ cheers it. Are we in honor? Christ calms us. Are we in shame? Christ consoles us. Are we in health? He sanctifies it. Are we in sickness? He relieves it. As he is at all times the same in himself, so he is the same to us. To the same Christ we must come and cling under every new circumstance. Our heart must abide faithful to her one only Lord and lovingly sing:

"I'll turn to thee in days of light,
As well as night of care.
Thou brightest amid all that's bright,
Thou fairest of the fair."

The best and most joyous experiences that come to us in this life, are when Jesus is nearest us and reveals himself to us. The evil one presents other attractions to the Christian to try to rival the attractions of the Savior, but like good old Corvoso, the class leader, said, "If we let Christ dwell in the heart he will soon cast into insignificance everything that dares to rival him."

"He justly claims us for his own
Who bought us with a price;
The Christian lives to Christ alone,
To Christ alone he dies.
Jesus' thing own at first receive,
Enfill our hearts' desire,
And let us to thy glory live,
And in thy cause aspire."

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The session of the Divinity School just closed was a great success. The attendance was nearly three times as large as it was last year. The preachers came from the States of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Tennessee. The Alabama Conference had nearly five times as many in attendance as last year. In addition to the Methodist preachers, several Baptist, Episcopalian and Presbyterian ministers were in attendance. We were glad to welcome these brethren. A large number of the preachers brought their families, and they, too, enjoyed the lectures and the recreation that the occasion and the place afforded.

The lectures were all good. Dr. C. M. Bishop, of the Missouri Conference, opened the session on Tuesday night with an eloquent sermon. For the first three days the school enjoyed his Cole Lectures on "Jesus the Man," which he delivered at Vanderbilt last year. In his masterful diction, Dr. Bishop threw new light upon the subject and gave his audience a larger appreciation of Jesus.

Then came Dr. Shailer Mathews, of the University of Chicago, who gave six lectures on "The Theology of Jesus," "The Theology of John," "The Theology of Paul," and "The Interpretation of the Letter of Paul to the Galatians." It is needless to say that Dr. Mathews captured his hearers. Dr. Mathews is a deep thinker and always presents his subject in a striking way.

Dr. Gross Alexander then came in for a course of three lectures on "The First Gospel" and three on "The Fourth Gospel." By a great play, Dr. Alexander is regarded as the foremost scholar in our Church. He has the ability to get to the heart of things. We feel sure that his four Gospels have a deeper and a larger meaning for all who hear his lectures.

Dr. Henry T. Cope, of Chicago, who is the General Secretary of the Religious Education Association, was with us throughout the session. His daily lectures on Psychology were especially fine. He was spirited and attractive. Whenever he spoke he had a message that was worth hearing. I am sure that every preacher who heard them has a better knowledge of himself and of human nature, and will be more capable of leading souls to Christ.

There were also daily classes conducted in the Four-years' Conference Courses, Post Graduate Classes, and a Class for Applicants. The work done in these classes was of a high grade, and the young preachers expressed themselves as being well pleased with this method of taking off their Conference work. At the close of the School written examinations were given by the committees, and sixty per cent was the requisite grade for passing on any subject. The preachers who stood the examinations will not have to stand at the Annual Conference. A certificate, signed by the instructors of the class and the Dean of the School, has been issued to each undergraduate, which will waive any further examination.

It was the general consensus of opinion of all in attendance that we have a great institution established that will prove a blessing to the ministers of the Gulf-Coast States, and through them to the Church at large. The writer heard a number of the younger men declare that they expect to attend every summer, and it was pleasing to hear the older men express no less delight with the work of the school and its progress. One man was heard to remark: "Why, I didn't know you had all this down here. This is one of the biggest things in Southern Methodism." And so it is. We hope that every preacher in the four Conferences will attend next summer.

The Dean of the school, Dr. Murrah, having been elected to the Bishopric, resigned, and Dr. Franklin N. Parker, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, was elected to fill the vacancy. Dr. Parker will have charge of the Faculty and general supervision of the school. He has already thrown himself into the work and will be a strong factor in the success of the institution.

ROBT R. ELLISON, Secretary.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?
GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH
LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.
736 Union Street. Phone, Main 535.

[illegible]

Paul Smith, Jr. has recently enjoyed a life revival in which the Methodist Churches of that city united. The results were the conversions to the participating organizations and a general spiritual quickening of the community. Presiding Elder J. D. Harriott was the chief director of this successful evangelistic campaign.

The next World's Sunday School Convention will be held in Geneva, Switzerland, in 1913. These great gatherings are held every three years, and their influence for good is far-reaching. Especially are they promotive of the spirit of fraternity and good will among the various Protestant denominations.

Dr. J. W. Lee of Atlanta, has gone to Europe where he will remain for some weeks. He has been a considerable traveler for years and has enriched the interests of the Church by his observations abroad. There is talk of Dr. Lee being returned to St. Louis to serve the St. John's congregation again. Southern Methodism has no more popular and successful pastor.

The new president of the British Wesleyan Conference is the Rev. John Hornabrook, who had been secretary of that body since 1903. He is of Cornish stock, though born in a Wesleyan mission in the West Indies. He was for twenty-six years a circuit preacher, chiefly in the provinces and great manufacturing towns. He has greatly distinguished himself as an administrator and money-raiser. Mrs. Hornabrook is the daughter of the late Rev. Luke Wiseman and the sister of the Rev. F. L. Wiseman, the well-known superintendent of the great Birmingham Mission.

It may be of interest to your older Methodist readers to know that William B. Murrah, lately elected one of the Southern Methodist Bishops at Asheville is a son of William Murrah who served the Bennettsville Circuit (then Pee Dee Circuit) in 1829. When I went as junior with Rev. John M. Carlisle to the Bennettsville Circuit in 1873, Brother James Bolton gave me a list of the preachers on the work from 1821. In this list was William Murrah, and the tradition still lingered of his eloquent preaching. I thought the Bishop must be either a direct or collateral descendant, and wrote to ask him. A letter just received from him says: "The William Murrah referred to was my father. I have often heard him speak of Pee Dee Circuit. His last work in South High W. H. Kim of Korea, said at the recent World Student Church Convention at Washington. Twenty-five years ago there was not a Christian in Korea. Twenty-five years ago there was not a Christian in China, but through the few missionaries who came here to us there are a million Christians. Twenty-five years ago there was not a Sunday school in Korea. Today there are 150. Sunday schools were a neglected part of the work. Teaching was not done, and the Bible in Korea was for the few who had it. Now copies scattered over the land, Korea is divided among the denominations. When a Methodist moves into the Presbyterian section he becomes a Presbyterian, into the Baptist section a Baptist. When a Baptist moves into the Methodist or Presbyterian section he becomes a Methodist or Presbyterian, etc. But they all become Christians. Their God is the spirit of unity in Jesus.

The First Methodist Church of Corinth, Miss. claims the proud distinction of having the largest young men's Bible class in America, and the claim is doubtless well founded, for the organization captured the grand prize of the recent session of the World's Sunday School Convention held in the city of Washington. And a remarkable feature of the class is the fact that its teacher and guiding spirit is a woman, Miss Elizabeth Kirkpatrick, a frail, delicate little lady, who, by consecration of purpose, personal appeal, and wonderful magnetism, has organized a class of 150 young men, including within its membership the foremost citizens of the community, practically everyone of whom regularly attends the sessions held at 9:30 o'clock each Sunday morning. A picture of the class, with Miss Kirkpatrick in the center, and a portrait of the Methodist Church at Corinth, was also awarded the capital prize at the World's Sunday School Convention, and another prize was given to the beautiful banner of the organization bearing on its silken folds the great seal of Missions, surrounded by magnolia blossoms.—Jackson Daily News.

Mr. Editor: Recently there fell into my hands a paper which, for the benefit of the older readers of your paper, I copy—a unique list of puns. It is entitled, "A Bird's Eye View of the Methodist Conference," and dated "Jackson, Miss., Nov. 22, 1859," and reads thus:

LUZIANNE COFFEE

Its double strength cuts the coffee bill in two. Its superior quality gives it a value double its price.

THE REILY TAYLOR CO
NEW ORLEANS, U.S.A.

THE CENTENARY COLLEGE OF LOUISIANA.

Life is not a summer holiday nor a dream. It is a struggle, a battle. The worst wounded are the defenseless.—Selected.

Secular News and Comment

The Bureau of Statistics at Washington furnishes the information that since March, 1907, to same date in 1910, the number of Americans moving to Canada was 520,500, taking with them nearly $100,000,000 for investment. The majority of them were from the middle West.

A farmer in Madison Parish, La., has 110 acres in pecan trees between 20 and 25 years old, and many other acres in younger trees. The trees are 60 feet apart, and on the 110 acres there are about 1,300 trees.

Three million farmers of the United States are co-banded together to attempt the defeat of such members of Congress and other public officials as are deaf to the demands of agriculturalists for laws advancing their interests. The Farmers' Union is agitating this.

The government experts at Washington have been examining samples of the so-called ice cream now so common in interstate commerce, and find it contains ordinary glue, an acid, flour, and a coloring matter, which combination is very unwholesome. The acid is used to keep it from spoiling. Officers have seized and destroyed the stuff by the wholesale in New York, Tennessee and other places.

Nearly a hundred bales of the new crop of Texas cotton have been received in Houston. The great drought out there will shorten the yield very much. Arkansas, Oklahoma, Tennessee and northwestern Mississippi have had too much rain, and the crop is reported unsatisfactory. Heavy rains have prevailed in Alabama and Georgia where it is not needed, and is spoiling the crop. But in western north Louisiana there is an exception, the cotton is good, and there are no boll weevils to speak of. With one exception (Rankin County, Miss.) there is scarcely any mention made of weevils in the crop reports. In this Mississippi locality the pests have appeared in great numbers, destroying the crop and filling the farmers with despair, as they had planted almost nothing else.

The details of the pending judicial election in Tennessee is not pleasant reading. It is one of the most bitter campaigns ever waged anywhere. Not only is there feverish activity in the respective State headquarters, but local committees all over the State are strenuous and aggressive. So bitter has this campaign become that families are divided and even dissension in churches has been caused. Never before in the history of the State have there been so many speakers on the stump, and from now until the polls open on the morning of August 4, the campaign will be of a whirlwind character. The negro registration in the State has broken all records, and it is claimed by the Patterson faction that they will, almost to a man, vote the straight Democratic ticket. On the other hand, the independent Democrats aver that the votes of the white Republicans will far overbalance the negro vote.

The amount of vegetables shipped to Panama is enormous. One ship, for instance, which sailed from New Orleans on July 8, took, in addition to a vast amount of other provisions, 1,950 bushels of Irish potatoes and 133 bushels of onions, and this was counted a small list. This is repeated every week, as the sailings occur about that often. Similar shipments go from Mobile, and about twice or three times that much from New York. The bidders here for the vegetables are often put to great trouble to fill their bids. The potato crop of Louisiana and Mississippi was about exhausted in June, and the onion crop was something of a failure this year. The West was called on to help out, but the response was poor. In order to get the onions, purchases had to be made in New York of cargoes from Egypt and reshipped here, and most of those sent on the 8th came all the way from that far country. Even two cargoes of potatoes from Ireland to New York have been ordered to be trans-shipped here.

Mr. Childs, of Lake Providence, La., arrived in New Orleans on the 26th inst. back from Panama, where he has been working on the Gatun part of the canal for two years, and he gave a Picayune reporter a very interesting talk. "Much has been said regarding what an earthquake might do to the canal or to the Gatun dam. The best engineers in the world have been looking forward to what might happen, and every calculation that the mind can conceive has been made. An earthquake will not destroy the locks, nor can it affect the dam. It might cause slides, but these can be easily removed without any great harm being done. The completion of the canal in 1915 is just as certain as anything human can be, and it will be a great work accomplished." "Seeing is believing," said Mr. Thomas, a passenger with Mr. Childs; "much that one hears is a misunderstanding, and I can see where I, too, would see things in a different light if I had not been to the canal. The lock system will answer all the purposes that a sea level canal would, and it will be finished in many years less time and will cost many millions less. To see the job is the thing. It is really the cutting away of a mountain, and I do not believe any person, after seeing the work, can have anything but praise for the government and the men that are fast bringing the great waterway to a completion."

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The secretary of the Brookhaven District Conference has been tardy about furnishing the Advocate with an account of its proceedings. This is not due to any lack of appreciation of this meeting, for we have never enjoyed a more delightful occasion. It was a pleasure and an inspiration from start to finish.

The town of Prentiss, in Jefferson Davis County, was lavish in its hospitality, irrespective of denominational lines. Since the coming of the Mississippi Central Railroad, this town has enjoyed a period of prosperity that is evident on every hand. That our Methodism is keeping pace with the growth of the community is abundantly proven by the handsome new church, built during the present pastorate, that of Rev. M. L. White, the structure being a matter of pride to the entire community.

The opening sermon was preached on Tuesday night by Brother Paul D. Hardin, which touched the key note for one of the most spiritual conferences we have ever attended.

This first session was called to order by the presiding elder, Rev. Jas. T. Leggett, Wednesday morning. Brother Leggett keeps things well in hand and under his presidency there was not a dull moment during the entire session.

During the morning session very cordial addresses of welcome were extended the Conference by our Brother W. H. Livingstone for our congregation, and by C. R. Dale on the part of the town generally. We thought none the less of Brother Dale that he allowed it to crop out that he had "been down into the water." His hospitality and general good nature at least had not been dampened by the process.

We were sorry to note the absence of several pastors and a number of delegates. We regret that sickness at home should have detained several pastors.

Among the most attractive features of the Conference was a carefully prepared address delivered by Dr. I. W. Cooper on the work of the last General Conference, of which he was a member. His familiarity with every important act of the Conference made his address very interesting and instructive.

It was a pleasure to us all to have Brother Bachman on hand with "the books" and to note that he was pretty well patronized.

The first afternoon of the session was devoted to the Laymen's Missionary Movement. Enthusiastic addresses were delivered by Z. Z. Linton, G. W. Holloway, H. T. McGehee, M. L. White and J. T. Leggett. It is impossible to put on paper the things these brethren helped us see and feel. In this district the Prentiss charge has the banner for the best working of the plan of the Laymen's Movement. Brother White knows how.

Whatever may be said about financial conditions, the reports from the charges generally are the best this writer has ever heard at this time of the year. Among the most surprising to us was the report of Wesson, which has everything right up to date. Wesson has suffered this year with the closing of the mills, but perhaps never has our Church there done better work. No wonder they have had a gracious revival recently.

Besides the opening sermon, the following brethren preached: T. H. King, J. L. Decell, W. M. Sullivan, H. M. Ellis, H. B. Watkins, W. L. Linfield. There was an evangelistic note in the preaching which seemed significant of a revival spirit to us.

The following brethren were granted licenses to preach: W. B. Perritt, P. H. Grice, H. G. Gatlin, George F. Connerly and Charles A. Schultz. On Thursday evening, after an impressive sermon by Bro. H. M. Ellis, the congregation extended Christian greetings to these brethren by a hearty handshake, after which Brother Parmenius Howard led in an earnest prayer that God's blessings might follow them.

Brothers H. G. Gatlin, J. L. Decell, H. B. Perritt and W. B. Waldrop were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. One of the most joyous things of this conference was the character of young preachers that it brought to us.

Our delegates to the Annual Conference are: J. P. Rembert, B. F. Goza, Z. Z. Linton and J. B. Summers. Alternates: H. T. McGehee and N. E. Alford. We meet next time at Osyka.

Our licensing committee is composed of I. W. Cooper, H. M. Ellis, W. L. Linfield, P. D. Hardin.

Among our older men, Brothers P. Howard, superannuate, and N. E. Alford, local elder, were a great blessing to the Conference by their presence and prayers and talks.

Brother A. B. Connerly, of Brookhaven, was elected District Lay Leader and Brother H. T. McGehee, Vice Lay Leader.

The thanks of the Conference are very fervent to the people of Prentiss and for Brother White, to whose thoughtful care, to a large extent, is due the success of this Conference.

H. B. WATKINS,
C. N. GUICE,
District Secretaries.

A TRIBUTE OF LOVE.

It is our sad office to record the sudden death of our sister, Mrs. Josie Warren Huntley, the wife of our pastor. She had taught her Sunday School class and had taken part in the opening exercises of the morning service, having just sung with the choir the second hymn, on Sunday, June 12th, when the call came. She passed away at about the same hour on Monday, June 13, 1910.

While we bow to what seems a stroke of Providence, strange as it is sorrowful, we can but grieve that one so gifted for the Master's work, so willing to do her best at any time and in anywise to aid his cause, and so very efficient in her sphere as our beloved Sister Huntley, should be taken so suddenly from us. To us it seems that no husband ever needed the help of such a wife more than did our beloved pastor; certainly, no children ever claimed the love and sympathy and guidance of such a mother more than did hers. No Church and community were more blessed with the rich, helpful personality of a pastor's wife than was this one in the person of Sister Huntley. Our Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, and our Woman's Home Mission Society, the latter claiming her as its president, feel specially poorer because of her going. She inspired both by her sunny faith and optimistic manner; and she very materially advanced the society over which she presided. Her touch upon the Young People's work of our Church was helpful and hope-giving. Her going away gives us great sorrow.

To Brother Huntley and his motherless children we tender prayerful sympathy, and sincerely share their sorrow. To all who loved her and are sad, we would say: "We loved her, and we, too, are sad."

Signed by: M. A. Lamkin, Ollie Conerly, Mabel Love Guice, L. R. Beard, M. R. Barney, E. W. Featherstun, for the Home and Foreign Missionary Societies of Gloster, Miss.

Wanted by Port Gibson Female College, Port Gibson, Miss., a lady of culture who is a practical seamstress to take charge of a Sewing Department.

Many a seeming defeat may force us to retreat to higher ground, where we may stand in stronger array, retrenched, re-inspired, to fight harder than ever.—Selected.

You Need the Leaders' Hand-Book.

The Most Complete Manual of the Laymen's Movement That Has Yet Appeared.

A hundred-page book full of practical plans and valuable suggestions for speakers, leaders, and committees, together with an appendix giving an account of the Dallas Conference, a copy of the National Policy adopted at Chicago, and a digest of the action of the late General Conference on the Laymen's Movement.

Price, 25 cents per copy, silver or stamps. Order on this coupon from

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT,
M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH,

810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

Name
Address

The Centenary College of Louisiana.

Fall Term will
open Sept. 14, 1910.

For Catalogues or other information write to FELIX R. HILL, President,
or
JOHN S. JOHNSTON, Dean,
SHREVEPORT, LA.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John M. Gosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. H. H. Ellis, Sec.-Treas.
Geo. A. Hero.

REV. W. L. C. HUNNICUTT, D.D.

It gives me pain to tell the readers of this Advocate that the gentle and beloved Brother, W. L. C. Hunnicutt, D.D., has passed away from the field of his earthly labors to the general assembly and church of the first-born written in heaven. No doubt many have already heard the sad news, but the report here renews it will doubtless deepen the sorrowful fact in very many hearts who cherished a tender regard for one so true and brotherly in his sympathy with the afflicted and so apt and ready to give instruction and comfort to all with whom he conversed. So natural was he, so artless, so unaffected, that one meeting him would impulsively say, "There is an Israelite, indeed, in whom there is no guile." His conversation in all respects was such as to invite one to trust his sincerity without suspicion and to find in him principles of highest honor and truest devotion to the obligations of duty. It is no matter of surprise that people amongst whom he lived were drawn to him by the strongest ties of personal regard and friendship, and that his departure is so great a grief to a large circle of relatives and acquaintances in both Georgia and Mississippi.

William Littleton Clark Hunnicutt was a native of Coweta County, Ga., born May 26, 1834. His father was Dr. J. E. P. Hunnicutt, a practicing physician and a descendant from a Quaker family. His mother was Martha Lundie Atkinson, whose grandfather was a clergyman in the Church of England. The sweet gentleness of her beautiful character drew all hearts to her, and in the home she was the tenderly beloved mother. Both parents were natives of Virginia. The Coweta County boy was reared on a Georgia farm, accustomed to the tasks and diversions of agricultural life. His alert and inquisitive mind found study and amusement in every object of plant and animal and soil about him. Nothing escaped his eye or thought. He took a lively interest in all he had to do and in the systematic order observed in every part of the place. It was the way with the father, followed by the son, who delighted to observe and obey the parental will. He was a free, happy boy in his growing up under the strict though loving discipline of a careful father and mother. In those days so far back in the nineteenth century, the itinerant preacher had to take week days for his services. When the day for preaching came, all hands on Dr. Hunnicutt's farm stopped work and went to church. Religion was put first in the daily life of the family. Though busy with professional practice and farming labors the father of that home found time and motive for daily family worship. The children of that home readily grew into habits of regular, systematic, industrious, devout living. The discipline was suited to the careful training of body, mind and morals. Longstreet Academy was nearby; and in that school the children got their start in scholastic education. When William was of right age and was well grounded in preparatory studies, he entered the Sophomore class at Emory College, Georgia, a school of high-grade scholarship and discipline, under the presidency of that great master, George F. Pierce, and in due course took his degree of A.B. from that institution. The young alumnus was at first inclined to follow his father's profession, and with this view he spent one year in the Medical College of Atlanta, Ga. During that year his mind underwent a change and he adopted teaching as his pursuit. He took a school for boys in Atlanta, which he taught for two years. During his stay in Atlanta, his home was with the family of the father of Bishop Haygood. Madison College, at Sharon, Madison County, Miss., was just rising to prominence under the presidency of the great Dr. Thornton. Prof. Hunnicutt was called to the Chair of Ancient Languages in that college in 1858. In August of the next year he was married to Miss Eliza, daughter of Major John H. and Eliza Magruder, of Madison County, resident near Sharon. His habits of accuracy and thoroughness in teaching soon gave him marked credit as a man of superior fitness to train the young for the great work of adult life. The intellectual and religious life of that community was at that time specially favorable to higher education and Prof. Hunnicutt found it delightfully congenial to his own residence there.

In 1860, he was elected to the presidency of Sharon Female College. Gradually his mind and heart were opened to a call to the gospel ministry as his life work. On Feb. 23, 1861, he was licensed to preach by the Quarterly Conference of Sharon Charge, Samuel W. Speer being presiding elder. At the session of the Mississippi Annual Conference the same year at Canton he was admitted on trial into the itinerant ministry. He was ordained deacon by Bishop Jas. O. Andrews, Nov. 8, 1863. He was appointed to missionary work in the Confederate Army, and became chaplain to Gen. Walhall's Brigade. In November he was ordained elder by Bishop Robt. Paine at Crystal Springs. When the army was disbanded he returned to his home in Madison County, and shortly after came to Jackson, Miss., and engaged in a private school with Prof. H. W. Pearce. At the session of the Conference of 1865, he was appointed to Jackson Station. This charge he served during 1866 and 1867, continuing his school work for awhile. But in 1867 he was chosen president of Madison College and also of Sharon Female College, and took charge of both schools. Charles B. Galloway, then recently graduated from the University of Mississippi, assisted in the instruction in Madison College. Both schools continued to do valuable work for a few years till it became impossible to maintain their organization, and both of these preachers served the adjacent churches as they could while teaching the schools. In 1870 Dr. Hunnicutt served Sharon Circuit while still president of Sharon Female College. In 1871 he was sent to Yazoo City and served part of 1872 in charge of Canton Station to fill a vacancy. At the Conference of 1872 he was sent to Natchez Station where he remained four years in charge. During 1877 and 1878 he served Brookhaven District; 1879, Vicksburg District; 1880 to 1883, Jackson District; 1884, Port Gibson Station; 1885 to 1886, Vicksburg District. In 1889 he was chosen president of Centenary College, Jackson, La., and in 1890 had charge of that station also. He remained president there till the summer of 1894. During 1895 he was in charge of East End Church, Meridian. The next year he was in charge of Capital Street, Jackson, Miss. 1897 to 1900 he served Natchez District. The following three years he served in charge of Woodville Station. In 1904 he took the supernumerary relation and from that time until his death he and his wife made their home with the writer, locating in Jackson, Miss., in 1907. During 1909 Dr. Hunnicutt supplied an unexpired year at Edwards. At the Conference of 1909 he was restored to the effective list. At this Conference he was appointed without salary, by his own request, to raise funds to help meet Mrs. Sage's offer to the American Bible Society. He was so deeply interested in this work that even after the required sum was raised to secure her donation, he continued to work for the cause, saying that a much larger sum would not be too much to raise for it, and believing that if Bibles were put in any country, the Christian religion would follow. He was away from home on this mission when he became ill.

He loved Mississippi and the Mississippi Conference. His friends and relatives wanted him to go back to his native State and finish the work of his life there. The appeal was strong, but he felt that the stronger reason favored his adopted State, in whose political and religious welfare he was deeply interested. How well he wrought here many hundreds of Christian citizens love to testify. These all sorrow over the departure of one who so lovingly and gently ministered the precious instruction and comforts of the blessed gospel to them in the last fifty years of his patient and cheerful service. Our brother was affected like other men by the events that touched his sensitive nature, but he was never given to despondency. His broad view of life and the buoyant teachings of the divine Word kept his soul in an atmosphere of electric cheerfulness. He was never so depressed that he could not sing the songs of Zion. He was a man of rare versatility and good humor. He taught a gospel of sunshine and constantly "let a little in." Dr. Hunnicutt was recognized as one of the strong leaders in the thought and activities of his Conference. He was amongst the foremost in giving practical, effective methods for profitable working of the enterprises of the Conference. Several times he was sent as a delegate to the General Conference. He had the high honor of a place on the Joint Committee to complete a suitable hymn book for use in both the great Methodist Churches in the United States. He often wrote valuable papers for publication in our religious periodicals, taking part in the discussion of leading questions of doctrine and polity. In both writing and speaking, his style was uniformly plain and simple. His aim was to state the truth in the plainest words and sentences that fidelity would allow. A show of learning, florid adjectives and shining rhetoric were excluded from his speech as offensive to cultivated ears and to reverent, serious hearts. His preaching possessed a remarkable and easy insight into the meaning of the Scripture which he used for the instruction and exhortation of his hearers. There was always a transparent sincerity, earnestness and simplicity, adorned with a spiritual consciousness and devoted aim at spiritual benefit to his congregation, that gave a winning charm to his preaching, and made him a valuable instructor in the paths of righteousness. He was a lifelong and patient student—a close observer of everything around him. He had a marvelous passion and facility for talking with children always in a manner to entertain and instruct them. He would give them any length of time in describing to them the nature and habits of birds and hogs and larger animals, as well as the stems and flowers and fruits of plants. A child or youth was to him an object of intense interest and engaged all of his powers to instruct and guide. Dr. Hunnicutt was a man of painstaking patience in all fields of study. He could not be content with a surface knowledge of things, he must know what, how, why, when and where as far as his mind could go into things physical, intellectual and moral. Hence he was generally ready on all important questions, and instructive. His convictions were formed after the most searching investigation and were then held firmly till he was assured of mistake. He rejoiced in the doctrines of American Methodism, believing that to be the teaching of the Holy Bible and adequate for the salvation of the world. He was an ardent advocate of every movement for giving the gospel to all the world. Every form of missionary work had his earnest approval. The Epworth League, Y. M. C. A., the Students' Volunteer Movement and the recent Laymen's Movement appealed to his faith and hope and energy as providential instruments in the hands of Christians for evangelizing the world. He was optimistic of increasing progress towards this glorious goal. He was slow to take up new forms and methods in place of those already tried and successful. But he favored strongly a creed of world-wide Methodism as possessing a moral influence of very great advantage, tending to draw the people of God closer together. He had no quarrel with the various forms of Methodist organization, so long as they would hold to the fundamental doctrines and genuine spiritual life. But he was inclined to think that it might be better to change the name of our own Church for the satisfaction of those who complain against the word South. Our brother had a liberal hospitality toward the opinions of other men. He was thoroughly true to his own convictions, without the slightest dogmatism. He was prepared to fellowship with other Christians as brothers together in Christ. His heart was in complete sympathy with every movement to put down vice and strife. He was accustomed to advocate his views, by the pen as well as by oral speech. Our Church papers have frequently been adorned with his chaste, elegant and instructive articles on important subjects. His war on the pistol is well known and has been waged for a long time and has gained strong endorsement by the secular as well as the religious press. The poetic fire burned with fervor in his mind, and ever and anon broke out in lyric effusion characteristic of his fraternal and spiritual sympathies and of his lofty ideas of holy worship. This was the trend and movement of the man. His friendships were deep and strong and nourishing—beautiful to see. He fastened friends to him with heartchords. The bereaved widow has received such expressions as this: "Perhaps you will never know what a dear friend and companion your beloved husband was to me. I could confide in him the innermost secrets of my soul and feel that I had a kind, sympathetic friend who knew my imperfections, but loved me none the less. I will never have another to take his place for you and I know how rare such pure, unselfish persons are." Another writes: "A more sincere, transparent character I have never known—utterly without guile, absolutely unselfish, with undisturbed faith and unflinching courage, he was truly a man to be honored and loved. I feel that I have lost an advisor and friend whose place cannot be filled." Many other testimonials have come, all bearing witness to the gentle, lovable simplicity and lofty spiritual courage of this noble man of God. Surely we are to be thankful to God for the ministry and friendship of this unsullied, consecrated follower of Christ. We need no more than the life he lived to assure us that he has entered into the house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Let us keep in mind the glorious gospel he has preached to us and enforced by his own consistent conversation and fellowship. But we must pause before this remarkable life, so symmetrical and complete, so rich in fruits of faith and love so pure and true, so liberal and kind; a life unstained from his boyhood by any social or private self-indulgence—a fit model for our boys and young men. Yet a man of like passions with ourselves, with like limitations and infirmities, simple, plain, unpretentious, modest, sincere, free from guile; yet, profoundly true to his deep, solid convictions. In his time he witnessed the battle between religion and science, and studied the arguments of both sides, and emerged from the conflict with a firmer grasp on the validity of Holy Scripture, and the divinity of the holy Lord and Savior, and the reality of the glorious gospel of the blessed God. On this foundation he built his convictions, his faith, his hopes, his energetic actions, his urgent appeals to men for purity and righteousness. On this foundation he yielded his commission and his soul to his divine Master and passed to his reward bestowed for his faith and labor. Much more might be said of this good and true man of God, but I forbear. We may say: "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter into the joy of thy Lord."

"Thou art gone to the grave, but we will not deplore thee."

Whose God was thy ransom, thy guardian, thy guide;

He gave thee, he took thee, and he will restore thee.

And death has no sting, for the Savior has died."

Jackson, Miss.

W. T. J. SULLIVAN.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that
Lasts a LIFETIME

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

The Home Circle

JOE'S MISSION.

Joe Meyers was spending the summer in the little town of Clinton on Clinch River. One morning, as he walked along a road leading into the country he heard a child talking and stopped to look over a fence and see if he could find some amusement. A little girl in a torn calico dress sat under a big tree, holding a battered old doll on her lap.

"Take these here pills, dolly," she was saying coaxingly, "an' you'll git well right off. If you air a bad chile an' won't swaller 'um, you'll die. Now, that's right," she went on, having succeeded in pushing the "pill" through the doll's mouth.

Joe watched her for a while and then opened the gate and went into the yard. "Hello," he began genially, "may I rest for a minute? What are you giving your doll? Well, I declare," Joe burst out suddenly, "they are pearls—a pint of them!"

"They're no sich," she exclaimed vehemently, "they're jes' pills to make Polly well."

"Where did you get them?" asked Joe, getting excited over the heap of beautiful pinkish white stones.

"Jim got 'um fore he got busted inside an' put out thar," Her hand indicated a little knoll at one side where under a spreading elm tree, a newly-made grave was visible. "I shore mis' Jim. He wuz awful good to me."

"Jim? Why, he wuz jes' Jim. He lived with Granny an' me an' he ust to hunt an' fish an' git clams outen the river with these here pills in 'um. That wuz fore Mis' Jones bull busted him all up, put horns clean through him. My, but Granny an' me did a sight of cryin', we uns all did, Mis' Jones, too."

Joe looked at the pathetic little figure of the mountain girl, and though only fifteen himself, he was old enough to be moved with emotion at the sight of her pinched little face and started body. Then he looked at the little heap of beautiful Tennessee pearls, which bring such big prices in the jewel market to-day, and which Jim had been too ignorant to appreciate; costly pearls, being fed to a battered old doll by a starved child!

"Where is your Granny?" asked Joe. "Let's go and find her."

"Well," agreed the child, "she's sittin' by a leetle fire. She's got the misery in her back, you know."

Joe had been in too many of the mountain cabins to be surprised at the poverty there. He was surprised, however, to find that the old grandmother—a yellow, wrinkled old woman, dipping snuff—was totally blind.

"Here's a boy, Granny," said the child.

"Howdy," she grunted, "set down. Dust off a cheer fer him, Mary Sue."

The little girl took the skirt of her dress and slapped at the bottom of an old cane chair.

"I came in," began Joe nervously, "to see if I could buy some of Mary's pearls? She's been feedin' them to her doll."

"Them leetle rocks she plays with? You want to buy 'um, huh?"

"Yes," said Joe, "and I feel sure—"

"Will ye giv' me a leetle bacon an' meal an' some coffee fer 'um, huh?" she interrupted shrilly and eagerly. "Me an' Mary Sue ain't hav' nuthin' to eat since yestiddy."

"Oh, my," cried Joe, "let her go back to the store with me now and I'll send you some things right away."

"We uns ain't beggin'." You all kin buy the rocks an' send me some bacon an' coffee an' a leetle snuff, shore some snuff."

Mary Sue reluctantly gathered up her "pills." As Joe gathered up the last pearl and tied them in his handkerchief she shook her doll until the pearls inside rattled. "Do you want these ones, too?" she questioned wistfully.

"No," said Joe, "you keep them until you are grown. Now come and go to the store with me."

Stopping by the hotel, put up for the benefit of summer visitors in the pretty little town, Joe called his mother and showed her the pearls. Mrs. Myers was a magazine writer and she seized upon the stones and the child in the interest of her profession, and again because Joe's story touched the mother in her and she wanted to help the wee girl and the blind old grandmother.

When the pearls had been locked up, Mrs. Myers and Joe took the child to the store and bought plenty to eat and to wear for the people who had been ignorant of the wealth they possessed. Going back to the cabin, Mrs. Myers was surprised to find three twenty-dollar gold pieces lying on a rock in the front yard where the child had been playing.

"Where did you get this money, Mary?" she asked.

"A man, he tuk some of my pills an' giv' me them dishes yestiddy," she answered solemnly.

"Starving," said Mrs. Myers to Joe, "with sixty dollars in the front yard. Oh, this pitiful ignorance! Some man has probably taken a thousand dollars' worth of pearls and left this money to ease his conscience."

The next day, Joe took the pearls and left for the nearest city with a letter from his mother to a pearl expert who was a friend of hers. The stones brought five thousand dollars which Joe proudly carried back and deposited in the bank in Mary Sue's name. Her father, whom she only knew as Jim, had accumulated the pearls for years, and with Mrs. Myers as guardian, they were the means of giving Mary Sue a good education and of fitting her to be a veritable missionary to the East Tennessee mountaineers and the river folks.

When the summer was over and Mrs. Myers and Joe were ready to go back to the city, Dr. Black, the old Presbyterian minister, called to see them.

"You have done more good work this summer," he said sincerely, "than all my preaching has done, and God, I know, will raise up Mary Sue to be a blessing to you and a shining light to point other darkened souls the way to love and knowledge and Paradise."

—A. Marie Crawford, in Christian Observer.

MOTHER GOOSE.

That was her real name, and not a fictitious one, as many people believe. Elizabeth Foster was born in Charleston, Mass., a town near Boston, in 1665.

Her family, being Puritans, she was reared as other little maidens then were, to be industrious. She was also taught to cook and sew and spin. On Sundays she went to the meeting house and sat demurely quiet through the long sermon, and on week days went to the free school and learned to read, write and count.

Little Elizabeth was, nevertheless, a mirth-loving child and greatly beloved by her playmates. Some of her rhymes are sly little jokes. You remember she tells us that

Dr. Foster went to Gloucester
In a shower of rain,
He stepped in a puddle
Up to his middle,
And he never went that way again.

Dr. Foster was evidently some member of her family, her uncle, perhaps, whom the saucy Elizabeth was poking fun at.

History does not tell us how early she began to produce her little rhymes.

At the age of twenty-seven she was wooed by a widower named Isaac Goose, who had ten little motherless goslings.

Her family, and indeed Elizabeth herself, opposed the match, but at length her kind heart was softened by the pitiful plight of Father Goose and his little goslings, and she finally married him.

Then six children of her own were added to the number, making sixteen in all.

No wonder poor Mother Goose tells us that "she had so many children she did not know what to do."

She probably sung them to sleep at night to "Rock-a-bye, baby, on the tree top," or to "Bye-o-baby bunting, father's gone a-hunting," and on wash days they merrily rubbed to "Rub-a-dub-dub, three maids in a tub."

When Joshua and Gilfilian took the pails and went to the top of the hill behind the house for water and disaster befell them, she probably made them laugh even while the tears stood in their eyes and they were being plastered up with vinegar and brown paper, by singing, "Jack and Jill went up the hill."

She also put into rhymes the tragedies that occurred in the neighborhood, telling of the children that were drowned, "Sliding on the ice, upon a summer's day," and about the poor pussy that the naughty Johnny Green put in the well.

But finally the flock were all scattered. Father Goose departed this life and poor Mother Goose was left all alone. Then her favorite daughter, Elizabeth, who had married Thomas Fleet, a printer, prevailed upon her to make her home henceforth with them, and to this fortunate circumstance we owe it, that thousands of children all over this land have been made happy by her simple little jingles.

Dear, merry, Grandmother Goose thus came to live among another flock of little ones in Pudding Lane, Boston.

Thomas Fleet had a printing office of his own, and to his wise head came the thought that if his own children were so pleased by his mother-in-law's fun, why might not others be also? So he began to write down her jingles whenever he got a chance to do so, following her about the house and even asking for more as the children did.

One day Mr. Fleet laid before Mother Goose's amused and astonished eyes the first volume of the now famous book. How she laughed when she turned to the title page and found pictured thereon a goose with its mouth wide open? It bore this title: "Songs for the Nursery, or, Mother Goose's Melodies for Children, Printed by T. Fleet at his Printing House, Pudding Lane, 1719. Price, two coppers." Her historian tells us that for thirty-eight years she lived to add new rhymes to each new edition, and died in 1757, at the age of ninety-two, her name a household word, dear to children, her memory blessed by mothers in many lands. —Clara A. Williams, in Our Companion.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location. Includes furniture. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1902-1904 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

SPEARING & CO.,
(Established 1817.)
SAIL MAKERS
AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS and TENTS.
CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOU LAS STREETS
Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY
—TO—TRANSFER MONEY
—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone
FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER,
Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co
INCORPORATED

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

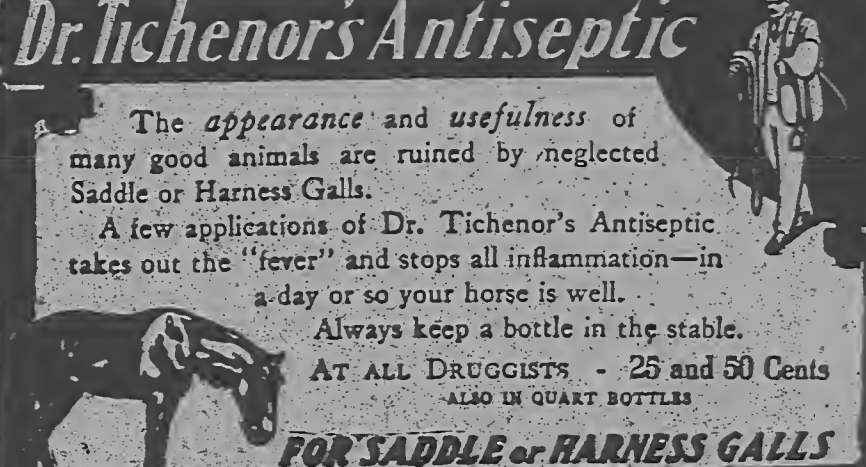

The appearance and usefulness of many good animals are ruined by neglected Saddle or Harness Galls.

A few applications of Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic takes out the "fever" and stops all inflammation—in a day or so your horse is well.

Always keep a bottle in the stable.

AT ALL DRUGGISTS - 25 and 50 Cents
ALSO IN QUART BOTTLES

FOR SADDLE or HARNESS GALLS

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Mounger, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woodard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

SOME LESSONS FROM THE CALL OF MOSES.

There is no more interesting and fascinating character in the world's history than Moses. From the moment that he appeared as a babe in the little ark amid the bulrushes of the Nile up to the time of his translation from Nebel's light and his honored burial by the Lord's own gracious hand, his career charms like a romance and awakens in one's bosom an aspiration to live for the things that are highest and best. Every paragraph of the brief account we have of his life and labors is luminous with instruction and teaches the needed lesson which the world finds so difficult to learn—that the path of virtue, though thorny at times, is the only way to the altitudes of majestic manhood, to real usefulness and true success.

Particularly impressive was the manner in which Moses received and accepted the divine call to become the leader and deliverer of God's chosen and oppressed people. It came to him when he was alone in the silence of the Midian desert. What a part solitude has played in the making of men and in the promotion of the march of human progress! It is when other scenes are shut out that God most unfolds himself and things spiritual to the soul's inner vision. It is generally when other sounds are hushed and quietude reigns around that "the still, small voice" is heard. It spoke to Elijah on Horeb, not in the storm, or the earthquake, or the fire flashing athwart the heavens, but in the after calm. It was on bleak and wave-washed Patmos, torn from his place in the Church and bereft of human companionship, that Saint John communed most with radiant spirits from "the invisible other world," and had his most inspiring glimpses of the City Celestial. It was in the loneliness of a prison that Bunyan dreamed his immortal dream, and that Paul composed several of his noblest epistles—sparkling streams of truth that will flow on, blessing and enriching mankind, until time has blended its fading light with the dawn of eternity. The Master himself had and cherished his seasons apart—hours that he insisted upon spending alone. As his tragic end drew near, he said to his disciples: "Hereafter I will not talk much with you." "He would now be silent to men, talking chiefly with God. The stream that lifts up its voice in the cataract among the hills and makes sweet music amid the stones of the valley is suddenly hushed as it merges itself into the sea; so Christ fell into a solemn silence as he came in sight of the ocean of sorrow of Gethsemane and Calvary." Every Christian should have his periods of retirement, when he can think and meditate and pray alone. Though there is no such thing as a solitary religion and the communion of saints is important, individual introspection, confession, and supplication are essential to the development of genuine piety and lofty character. The quiet hours of life are the moments which, perhaps, contribute most to the formation of worthy ideals and the shaping of human destiny.

God appeared to Moses in "the burning bush." The significance of this has been variously interpreted. Some have taught that the bramble aflame, but unconsumed, with the angel of the Lord (perhaps Christ himself) in the midst of it, was symbolical of Israel in servitude, wrapped in the fires of persecution, but undestroyed because of the presence and guardian care of him "who never slumbers, nor sleeps." But beautiful as is this exposition, we do not believe that it sets forth the true teaching of the burning bush. We think with Dr. F. B. Meyer that it brought to Moses a message more personal and direct. The thorn bush of the desert was a lowly and contemptible shrub. It had no grace of form, or attractiveness of foliage, or commercial value. But through it the infinite God could manifest himself and it could be used for the accomplishment of his divine plans. The thing considered the meanest and most common could be made to shine with his glory and transformed into a vehicle for the disclosure of his presence and power. Moses greatly needed to be taught this lesson at this particular time. For forty years he had been in exile, attending to the common-place duties of an ordinary shepherd. The pomp and pageantry of the Egyptian court was but a fading recollection, and the dream of becoming the liberator of his fellow-countrymen, which had fired his early ambition, had doubtless been utterly abandoned and had come to be looked upon as only one of the foolish vagaries of youth. Eighty years of age, slow of speech, rusticated in manner, broken in spirit, and having ceased to aspire to a loftier place in life, the future seemed to have little in store for this man whose infancy and opening career had been so marvelously shielded and guided by Providence. But in Moses' complete renunciation of self lay his fitness to become "a chosen vessel of the Lord." His felt weakness was his real strength; his nothingness in his own sight made him great in the sight of God. The low bramble with encircling fire and the angel of the covenant in it, proclaimed that he, though dejected and cast down, might be filled with the Holy Spirit and made the mouth-piece of the great Jehovah. How hard it is for even Christians to realize that the crucifixion of self is necessary to the highest holiness and largest usefulness! Self-reliance produces spiritual weaklings; it has been the age-long blight of the Church. Our own impotency and God's sufficiency are the two great lessons which the disciples of Jesus everywhere need to learn.

But Moses would not consent to undertake the task of leading the Israelites out of their bondage until God had promised to be with him and sustain him. "And Moses said unto God, Who am I, that I should go unto Pharaoh, and that I should bring forth the children of Israel out of Egypt?" "And he said, Certainly I will be with thee." Moses was right in refusing to go forth unaccompanied by the divine presence. No one should presume to undertake a great mission for God and humanity, trusting in his own strength. Most pitiable is the situation of the minister who has ventured to take up the work of that sacred office without the conscious realization of a divine call to it and the unmistakable assurance that the Master is a constant co-laborer with him. Every disciple should live in touch with his risen Lord, who has said: "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee." Re-enforced by him, we need not fear to go out and do our part in the stupendous struggle for the world's redemption. Led by him, we need never stumble or grope in darkness.

"A tender child, of summers three,
Seeking her little bed at night,
Paused on the dark stairs timidly;
'Oh, mother, take my hand,' said she,
'And then the dark will all be light.'
We older children grope our way,
From dark behind to dark before;
And only when our hand we lay,
Dear Lord, in thine, the night is day,
And there is darkness never more."

When Moses went forth as ambassador for God he carried his credentials with him. He was given a rod which, when cast upon the ground, would become a serpent; his hand thrust into his bosom would become leprous when withdrawn, and thrust back again would become sound and well; water which he dipped from the Nile and poured upon the ground would turn into blood. For four hundred years there had been no miracles, and these manifestations of power authenticated his mission and demonstrated the fact that he was truly the Lord's representative. And so the world-to-day demands of those who claim to come as messengers from the Almighty that they exhibit their credentials. The demonstration of the power of the Holy Spirit is the only thing which at this time can prove that they have been sent from God. Parchments signed by ecclesiastical dignitaries amount to little. They only evidence the commission of the Church. The real question concerning every minister is whether the Master has called and commissioned him. "Has he fruit in his work? Are any truly convinced of sin and converted to God by his preaching?" Does the divine attestation attend his pulpit messages? This is what the people desire to see, and this is what they have a right to expect. And herein lies the remedy for our empty pews and the widespread indifference to religion existing among the masses. Nothing draws and impresses like the Holy Spirit at work in the hearts of men. True penitents at the altar will attract vastly more than the pictures of a stereopticon. A preacher whose utterances are really accompanied by spiritual and life-giving power will not long want for hearers. Is this divine certificate to the genuineness of our ambassadorship lacking? If so, shall we not cry aloud to our Heavenly Father until he accords it to us? Men known to be in touch with Christ and through whom he speaks are the supreme need of the world. They, and they only, may hope to secure the attention of the needy millions of mankind, and lead them from a worse than Egyptian thralldom into a nobler freedom than that of Canaan.

THE VANDERBILT CHARTER.

We publish in this issue a copy of the charter of Vanderbilt University and the amendments, which have been made to that much-discussed instrument. We also print the correspondence between Bishop McTear and Commodore Vanderbilt concerning the establishment of the institution. It has been our desire to do this for some time, but we have found it exceedingly difficult to obtain the full text of the document originating the University and under which it is now operated. We take pleasure in giving it to our readers, because we want them to be apprised of the exact situation. We hold the view that our people are entitled to know the facts in the case, and should be shown proper consideration in the adjudication of a matter in which they, as a part of the Church, are so vitally interested.

With the contention now advanced that a few leading Methodists are so much wiser than their 1,800,000 brethren, that they alone are competent to manage our educational institutions and determine their relations to the Church, we have not the slightest trace of patience. The legal phase of the Vanderbilt controversy, though it is now the pivotal question, is in reality the least part of it. Primarily and fundamentally, the issue to be settled is a moral one. The supreme question is not one of law, but one of right. It is, "What part did the founders of the institution intend that the Methodist Church should have in its government?" If their purposes are defeated by legal manipulation and technicalities, injustice will have been done. No judicial construction can make right that which is wrong. There are loftier tribunals than any earthly court, and one of them is that of enlightened public sentiment. Before that great bar, as well as before the courts of the land, this issue must be and will be tried. And, furthermore, the very existence of the Church in any true sense in the field of education is involved. Let the notion that a worthy and growing institution of learning can only be successfully managed by an independent board of trust prevail, and our whole religious educational system will be ready to topple to the ground. More on this subject we will not say at present. But it is our purpose to discuss it at length in the near future.

There are two or three points in the Vanderbilt Charter to which it may be well to call special attention. One of them is the expression: "and shall have perpetual succession." It should be observed that it does not say independent succession, as is claimed by the Board of Trust. It is held by Bishop Hoss and those who share his view that this clause merely guarantees the perpetuity of the Board—that it should not cease with the passing of any particular set of trustees, but go on indefinitely. It should also be remembered that the five able lawyers of the Commission did not construe these words as giving the Board the right to elect their successors. The truth is, the Charter is silent as to the method of constituting the trustees. As a matter of fact, the Convention which met in Memphis in January, 1872, named a temporary Board of Trust and instructed them to proceed to get out a Charter. This they did, and submitted their work to the Annual Conferences in the fall for their approval, and each of them nominated four trustees who were given the places for which they were designated; and these formed the Board. The rights of the Conferences to participate in the selection of the trustees seems then to have been accepted as a matter of course. (See Chancellor Kirkland's pamphlet, entitled, "Vanderbilt University," issued in 1898, and the report of the Vanderbilt Commission in the Nashville Advocate of Dec. 14, 1906.)

Nor should it be overlooked that in determining who has power to elect the members of the Board of Trust, the common law and the Tennessee Act of 1895 are also to be taken into consideration. That Act is, in part, as follows:

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Tennessee, that all educational institutions, whether universities, colleges, academies, or institutions incorporated by special act, or are under the general laws of this State, or that may hereafter be incorporated, shall have and are hereby given power and authority to acquire any real or personal property, and to take, receive any and all gifts, bequests or devises of property, real, personal, or mixed, for educational purposes, heretofore or hereafter made subject to such limitations and conditions as the donor or testator may attach thereto."

"Section 2. Be it further enacted that whenever any such educational institution has been established and is being maintained and patronized by, or having been otherwise established is now being maintained or patronized by any religious society or denomination, or shall hereafter be so established, maintained, and patronized, the representative governing body of such society or denomination shall have power, at its option, to elect its Board of Directors or Trustees, to fill vacancies therein, etc."

This statute was held to be constitutional and valid by the Supreme Court of Tennessee in a case before it in 1904. Let it also be remarked that in his correspondence, Commodore Vanderbilt said not one word bearing on how the Board of Trust of the University was to be constituted.

The amendment allowing by-laws contrary to the Memphis resolutions, which had formerly been embodled in the Charter, should not be misunderstood. That was designed to give more liberty in the arrangement of the courses of study and in the minor details of the management of the institution. That it was not intended to affect the Charter rights of the Bishops or any essential feature of the declarations of the Memphis Convention is manifest to one familiar with the history of the institution; for, notwithstanding this change, Bishop McTyeire, who understood fully the purpose of every moment that was made, in his last will and testament urged, "That all of the Bishops exercise steadily and constantly their charter rights as members of the Board of Trust, directing and controlling." Had it been the intention of this amendment to abrogate these rights, the Bishop would not have given any such injunction.

AN ANIMATED DISCUSSION.

A vigorous discussion of the Vanderbilt situation has been going on in the columns of the Jackson Daily News. It began with a spirited communication from the pen of Mr. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., who sides with the Board of Trust and has taken the position that if the Church should control the institution, "it will shrink into the proportions of a college." Just why it would so dwindle Brother Bingham does not tell us. He only affirms it for the present. Possibly the proof will be adduced later. To Brother Bingham's article, Mr. J. D. Barbee, of Greenville, made a lengthy reply, arguing strongly for the position assumed by the General Conference in the controversy. To this Brother Bingham made an aggressive rejoinder, only to find himself confronted with a new antagonist in the person of Dr. H. W. Featherston, who stands squarely up for the rights of the Church. Brother Bingham has just responded to his last opponent, who doubtless will have something further to say on the subject.

It would be invidious to express an opinion as to which of the disputants we think has exhibited the most skill as a dialectician. But we feel sure that Brother Bingham will appreciate having his attention called to one blunder that he made in his reply to Dr. Featherston. He stated therein that the General Conference "levied an assessment of $25,000 to defray the expenses of a lawsuit." That is not true. The General Conference raised the educational assessment $25,000, but that was done at the request of Dr. Hammond, who stands with Bishop Hendrix and Chancellor Kirkland in the present controversy. That money is destined for the work of educational extension, and a large part of it was promised to needy institutions before the General Conference met. The Board of Education has authority to make any assessment that may be needed to maintain the rights of the Church in Vanderbilt University, but if they have yet taken any such action it has not been announced to the public.

THE SEASHORE ASSEMBLY FOR CHRISTIAN WORKERS.

The session of this organization which has just closed was a brilliant success. The attendance was good, the addresses were of superior merit, and the instruction imparted as to methods of work was practical and helpful. The interest was sustained throughout, and some of the services were inspirational in effect. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, the Rev. J. Bruce Alry; vice-president, the Rev. C. D. Arkison; secretary, Miss Laura Rankin; treasurer, Miss Ellen Jackson; counsellors, Mr. H. L. Baker, of Louisiana; Dr. A. F. Watkins, of Mississippi; R. A. Clark, of North Mississippi, and H. W. Grant, of Alabama.

CENTENARY COLLEGE.

Elsewhere appears a statement from Dr. Felix R. Hill concerning the outlook for the next session of this historic institution. It is most gratifying to know that the situation is so encouraging and that the future seems to be so full of hope and promise. Centenary has wrought well in the past and has behind it a highly creditable record, but its best days are yet to come. Let every Methodist in Louisiana lend a hand in filling the halls of the college and in entrenching it in the public esteem. Never was education, genuinely Christian, worse needed than now. Moral character is the great necessary asset, without which individuals and nations fail. The influences that touch student life are all-important, and exercise a far-reaching effect in shaping human destiny. Our young men will be safe at Centenary, where the entire atmosphere, social, educational, and religious, is wholesome. Let us send them there.

BISHOP MURRAH IN NEW ORLEANS.

Bishop W. B. Murrah, who has episcopal supervision of the Louisiana Conference, spent the latter part of last week in the city, conferring with Dr. Parker and others concerning the situation in this territory. He is wide-awake as to the needs of Methodism, and studious as to existing conditions in the several important fields assigned to his charge. The Bishop looks to be in perfect health, and is enthusiastic in his work. He was just back from a visit to Houston, Texas, from which section he brought a cheering and inspiring message. All of the interests of the Church are safe in the hands of this able and judicious chief-pastor.

PERSONAL.

Rev. T. W. Lewis recently assisted Rev. E. Nash Broyles in a meeting at Coffeeville, Miss. It is needless to say that the people of that community heard some vigorous and able preaching.

The Baptists have lately had an interesting revival at New Albany, Miss., where the Rev. E. L. Wesson is the pastor. Brothers A. W. Langley and L. M. Lipscomb took an active part in the meeting.

Dr. I. W. Cooper, the popular president of Whitworth College, recently preached two impressive sermons at the Mississippi Chautauqua at Crystal Springs. He is in much demand for important occasions.

The congregation at Mansfield have voted their pastor, Rev. A. W. Turner, a vacation during the month of August. He well deserves it. The Louisiana Conference has in it no more faithful and energetic worker.

We regret to learn that Rev. J. M. Huggin has found it necessary to give up his charge, the Mount Pleasant Circuit, in North Mississippi. Bishop McCoy has appointed Rev. Stander Raper to serve the work until the Annual Conference.

Zion's Herald thinks that surely the world is growing better. It facetiously says: "Within a week three subscribers to whom bills overdue for subscriptions had been sent thanked the sender for calling attention to the matter."—Nashville Advocate.

Rev. H. N. Harrison, of Donaldsonville, La., has been elected to a chair in Mansfield Female College and has signified his acceptance of the position. Brother Harrison is a man of wide and accurate scholarship, and his selection is being universally commended.

Writing from Water Valley, Miss., Rev. J. H. Mitchell, the efficient and enterprising pastor, says, "Our church work goes on encouragingly." There is no such word as failure in Brother Mitchell's vocabulary. We thank him for his kindly interest and good wishes.

We were pleased to have Rev. W. G. Harbin drop into our sanctuary Saturday of last week. He is just back from Texas, where he did most of the preaching at the Brenham District Camp Meeting. He reports a large attendance and that much good was accomplished.

Bishop Murrah will dedicate the Methodist Church at Ponchatoula, La., next Sunday at 11 o'clock. It is a neat brick structure, which reflects much credit upon that excellent community. The editor thanks Rev. J. P. Haney, the worthy pastor, for a cordial invitation to be present.

Rev. W. R. Goudelock has been conducting a series of revival services at Caledonia, Lowndes County, Miss., in which he has had the efficient aid of Rev. Len Egger, of Dallas, Texas. Much interest has been manifested and the church has proven wholly inadequate to accommodate the crowds.

Bishop and Mrs. W. B. Murrah entertained Bishop Mouzon at dinner in their hospitable home at Jackson, a few days since. The other guests were Major R. W. Millsaps, Dr. Smith, the new pastor of the First Methodist Church of that city; Rev. J. R. Jones, Professor Ricketts; and Mr. William H. Watkins.

In a business letter to the office, Rev. D. L. Cogdell, of the North Mississippi Conference, adds: "We are moving forward, I think, on the Lula and Lyon Charge. I have organized a church at Rich, with twelve members. I hope to have the parsonage refitted in the fall." A more tireless toiler than this noble itinerant can nowhere be found.

Information has reached us of the marriage on July 27, at the home of Dr. E. M. Baker, at Pelahatchie, Miss., by the Rev. C. McDonald, of Mr. S. B. Myers and Miss Mamie E. Baker. The accomplished bride is a granddaughter of the Rev. A. D. Miller, late of the Mississippi Conference, and the groom is a prosperous young business man of sterling moral worth.

Rev. A. G. Shankle, of Ruston, La., left with his family for Georgia on July 26, where they will remain for a month. The Daily Leader of that city states that Brother Shankle had been closely confined by his pastoral duties for a long time and was in need of a period of rest. We trust that his vacation will make him strong for the work of the approaching autumn.

We acknowledge the reception of a beautiful card announcing the arrival in the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. High, of Tupelo, Miss., of Master James Allen High on July the 19th. We extend most hearty congratulations, and express the earnest hope that a favoring Providence may watch over the little one and bring him in the course of the recurring years to a noble Christian manhood.

In remitting for the renewal of her subscription, Mrs. W. A. Pennington, of Monroe, La., speaks in commendatory terms of the Advocate. Among other things she asks the question, "How can people calling themselves Christians get along without their church paper?" Those who are much interested in the Master's work cannot do so. They want to know about the progress of the kingdom.

The citizens of Houston, Miss., are striking out vigorously for the enforcement of the Sunday laws of the State. This is as it should be: nothing does more to undermine the foundations of morality than the desecration of God's holy day. In the person of Brother L. W. Cain, this prosperous town has a fearless champion of civic righteousness. The worth of such a pastor to a community is incalculable.

A gentleman once horrified us by stating that a certain corporation's definition of an honest man is "one who will stay bought." If we were asked to frame such a definition, we should say he is one who will pay a delinquent subscription to a church paper. Doctors and preachers may have a hard time getting what is due them, but they are not in it in this respect compared to the average Conference organ.

Rev. J. W. Raper continues to place us under obligations for efficient work done for the Advocate. Referring to his charge, he says in a letter bearing date of the 25th ult.: "We are moving on nicely at Byhalia, and hope that the close of the year will find things in a good condition. We will have Bishop McCoy with us for the dedication of our new church on the 28th of August, and all former pastors are hereby invited to be present."

Rev. H. E. Smith, who for many years was a popular and useful member of the North Mississippi Conference, but who in 1886 transferred to Texas, has recently been visiting friends in the Magnolia State. He delighted the people of Carrollton with his presence, after an absence of twenty-four years, and was given an enthusiastic reception. He formerly served that charge, where he wrought faithfully and efficiently, and won the high esteem of all.

Rev. Frank Seay, professor of Hebrew and New Testament Greek at the Southwestern University, at Georgetown, Texas, delivered a highly intellectual sermon to an expectant congregation at the Louisiana Avenue Methodist Church of this city last Sunday evening. Prof. Seay is a son of ex-Governor Seay of the Lone Star State, and was born in New Orleans. He is a scholar with a wide reach of information and an impressive and instructive preacher.

Rev. W. E. M. Brogan, of Starkville, Miss., writes: "Rev. Chas. T. Barton, recently appointed to the Shuqualak Circuit to fill out the unexpired term of Rev. Q. A. Oats, deceased, has given up his work in order to accept a position with a business firm in Kentucky. Rev. Mark Guinn, a Millsaps graduate, has been assigned to that field in place of Brother Barton, and has already assumed control of the charge. He is a young man of more than ordinary promise."

The Yazoo County Sunday School Convention was held July 20 and 21. The attendance was gratifying, and the exercises interesting and profitable. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: N. A. Mott, president; R. E. Martin, vice-president; Beat 1; J. E. Redding, Beat 2; R. C. Langford, Beat 3; Mrs. R. Gilbert, Beat 4; W. H. Black, Beat 5; Mrs. E. W. Gibbins, secretary; and J. C. McGuire, treasurer. The next session will be held at Tranquil Church in the northern part of the County.

The correspondent of the Times-Democrat at Plaquemine, La., wired that paper on the 29th ultimo as follows: "It was learned to-day that the health of Rev. T. M. Bunley, the Methodist minister here, is completely shattered, caused, it is said, from overwork. Mr. Bunley is a brilliant student and scholar, and is extremely popular. He returned a few weeks ago from Washington, D. C., where he had gone as a delegate to the World's Sunday School Convention. He will be taken to a sanitarium for treatment." We sympathize with our brother in his indisposition, and pray that he may speedily recover his health.

The Carrollton Conservative makes the following comment upon the religious services conducted in that goodly town on Sunday, the 17th ult.: "The largest congregation assembled in Carrollton this year worshiped in the Methodist Church last Sunday at 11 o'clock. The sermon by the Rev. Doctor Duncan, of Athens, Ala., was clear in thought, strong in its grasp of truth, admirable in breadth of view, charming in its diction, and impressive in its delivery; and it created an atmosphere of profound reverence, conducive to spiritual worship. Mr. Langley's sermon in the evening was a practical exposition of presenting our bodies a living sacrifice, and elicited much favorable comment."

A dispatch to the Commercial Appeal from Nettleton, Miss., states that the recent union revival conducted there by the Rev. E. B. Ramsey, of Memphis, was the most successful one ever held in that community. The two honored superannuates of the North Mississippi Conference residing there, the Revs. J. B. Stone and K. M. Harrison, who lately have not been in robust health, were able to be present at a number of the services, to the great delight of their friends. At the close of the meeting a young men's and boys' prayer meeting was organized, and several hundred dollars was subscribed to build a reading room, which will be under religious auspices. Nettleton is the home of that worthy local preacher, Rev. J. A. Lowe, to whose splendid influence the remarkable activity of the churches in that locality is largely attributable. Brother Lowe was a delegate to the last General Conference, where he stood for a healthful conservatism and the maintenance of the integrity of Methodism.

When our ICE CREAM is served at receptions, or any place whatever, it gives a refined touch and an added pleasure to the occasion. We use the purest Sweet Cream and the finest and purest of all material necessary, is why. A trial order never fails to convince. We deliver to families as small quantities as a quart.

Our Pastry Department makes everything in the FANCY CAKE line, which we deliver also.

COUNTRY ORDERS, as well as CITY have prompt attention.

Harris Ice Cream Co.
1300-1302
DRYADES STREET.
PHONES — Jackson 1080 — 1081.

VISIT
MINERAL WELLS
—FOR—
HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND
WEST TEXAS
—For—
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS.
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE DAILY.
Write for Free Booklet.
E. P. TURNER,
General Passenger Agent,
DALLAS — TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a.m.
Instead of at 9:20 a.m., as formerly.
22 Hours to Asheville
THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.
24 Hours to Cincinnati
Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p.m.
FOR
NEW YORK, CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW ON SALE.

Bowlden Bells
CHURCH & SCHOOL Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, BORTVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

CHURCH DEDICATION AT ALEXANDRIA.

Dear Brother Members: Bishop W. B. Murray is to dedicate our church at Alexandria, La., on Sunday, Oct. 9. We extend a cordial invitation to all former pastors to be present. I will be glad for you to make a note of it in the Advocate. Yours truly,
H. R. SINGLETON,
Alexandria, La.

McHENRY CAMP MEETING.

The camp meeting at McHenry, Miss., will begin Sept. 4 and run ten days. The chief preacher will be Rev. John Paul, who is truly an able teacher and great preacher. Mr. Felix Phillips will lead the singing. Let everybody come and stay ten days. Put something into the meeting for God's glory, and get great blessings.
MISS ZORA SAUCIER, Sec.
Saucier, Miss.

A-PREACHER WANTED

For a charge in the New-Orleans District. The work will only support a single man. A splendid opportunity for city mission work.

F. N. PARKER,
Presiding Elder of N. O. District.

RECEIPTS ACKNOWLEDGED.

Rev. S. A. Brown, Comio, has paid Church Extension in full, $56.
Rev. W. R. Williams, Cockrum, has sent eight dollars for Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, Miss.
J. R. BINGHAM, Treasurer,
Carrollton, Miss., July 27, 1910.

Meridian Woman's College, Meridian, Miss., one of the nation's leading colleges for young ladies, has recently added new opera chairs to its handsome auditorium. It has just completed one of the handsomest pipe organs in the South, and has exchanged all the old pianos for new ones. Every piano will be new, just from the factory. It has employed fifteen music teachers, with a great Master Musician as director, one who was trained by that world renowned teacher, De Koniski, court pianist to the Emperor of Germany. This director was his favorite pupil, and the only one to whom he ever gave a diploma.

This already great Southern college and conservatory will have its faculty and equipments wonderfully increased by these additions. It has also enlarged the forty-acre campus to sixty acres, made lakes for boating and fishing, added athletic grounds for tennis and basket ball, and its unique military drill. It has added a special dormitory for young children. See advertisement of this great college elsewhere in this issue.

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; it is the best and most natural way of living; should we not fear and reverence the God that made us, that preserves us and provides all things for us.—Selected.

For Loss of Appetite
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate
Its use is especially recommended for restoration of appetite, strength and vitality. TRY IT.

Never to tire, never to grow cold; to be patient, sympathetic, tender; to look for the budding flower and the opening heart; to hope always and, like God, to love always—that is duty.—Amiel.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

In the matter of regular church-going, the force of habit asserts itself as truly as in other matters that concern us. This habit is a gracious, friendly influence in the lives of many of the best of our Lord's disciples.—Selected.

POLISHES - QUICK AS LIGHTNING

Qckwork is something new. It's so quick you'll hardly believe your own eyes. It makes polishing a pleasure. No acid—no grit. For automobiles, yachts, brass, copper, tin, enamel, silver, everything that shines.

In 25c Tins Everywhere.

Qckwork Silver Paste brings a quick and lasting lustre to silver, gold, cut glass, etc. It can not injure. Adds years of wear to silver.

In 25c Jars Everywhere.

Next Time You Drive Into Town

you'll be wanting during your stay a real good drink. Something to quench your thirst to stay quenched.

Drink

Coca-Cola

No matter how thirsty you are, or how tired you are, or how particular you are, you'll like Coca-Cola because it hits that dry spot—relieves fatigue and tickles the palate all the way down.

DELICIOUS-REFRESHING WHOLESOME

Send for Our Free Booklet

"The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells all about Coca-Cola, what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial.

THE COCA-COLA CO.,
Atlanta, Ga.

1-R

Whenever you see an Arrow, think of Coca-Cola

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

While the "gates stood ajar," on June 13, 1910, in the holy hush of an early hour, the beautiful spirit of Miss EUGENIA VANDIVER crossed eternity's boundless sea and passed into the "city of gold," methinks, amid shouts of welcome and anthems of praise by the hosts of redeemed who have gone on before, and the glad plaudits, "well done," of the Savior whom she loved and so faithfully served. Miss Eugenia was born April 19, 1875. But since early girlhood has lived in Baldwin, where the writer has known much of the homelife of this lovely girl and seldom have we found in the heart of woman such love, such unselfishness, and, withal, such Christian fortitude as adorned the life of this "child of a King." Being a victim to bodily ills almost her entire life, she was naturally indulged by a tender, loving mother until that mother was called home just two years gone by an indulgent and fond father, by three noble brothers who know how to love and serve as but few know, and by a sweet-spirited sister and two sisters-in-law who are equal to any stress laid upon noble womanhood; but "none of these things moved her" to neglect what she believed to be her duty to others. Among her last words were: "I should like to live longer so that I might serve better those whom I love; but if I cannot it will be all right. At home, among friends and in the church—Methodist—of which she was a faithful member, she was a light that could not be hid, but shall shine brighter and brighter along the pathway of those who shall follow on. Little wonder then that skilled physicians, loved ones and friends should have been untiring in their efforts to keep with us this brave Christian girl, for we felt we so much needed her; but the Master said, "I have need of thee," and we bow in humble submission to his will for "He doeth all things well." Bereaved ones, look up and be comforted for,

"Not now, but in the coming years, it may be in the better land, We'll know the meaning of our tears, And then sometime we'll understand."

MISS NANNIE ROWAN.

Mrs. LILLIE M. JACO (née Ray) was born Feb. 13, 1875, and died at her home near Crenshaw, Miss., after a painful illness of several days, caused by blood-poisoning. The writer performed the marriage ceremony at the home of her parents near Sardis, Miss., on March 31, 1895, that united her to Mr. Chas. C. Jaco, with whom she lived so happily for about fifteen years. Her devotion to home and loved ones was very great. She seemed to live for her husband and six children and friends. Whoever entered her home found genial hospitality. Early in life she became a Christian and united with the church of her parents, the Baptist Church, but after her marriage, joined the Methodist Church with her husband, in which she lived and worked until God called her up higher. This home knew but few sorrows before Dec. 5, 1909, when diphtheria caused the sudden death of their little girl, Elizabeth Mai, who was born Nov. 7, 1903. But sometimes sorrows gather like clouds thick and fast. On Feb. 14, 1910, the same dread disease took the baby, Alta Lillie, who was born April 14, 1908. Then ten days later the wife and mother fell on sleep. All three are waiting side by side in the Longtown Cemetery for the resurrection morn. when they shall join the poor heart-broken father and four other children. Long, lonely, and dreary will the days be, and heavy, how heavy! the hearts will be, but when the day comes when "sorrow and sighing shall flee away," then one day shall be as a thousand, for since "we shall see him as he is" we shall also see each other as we shall be and "we shall be like him." "We are not sufficient for these things." "My grace is sufficient for thee."

"BROTHER BEN."

On July 6, 1910, the great reaper, death, calmly entered the home of J. G. England and peacefully gathered him into its great harvestfold. He was born May 1, 1846, and lived with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Welch England, in Webster County, until his marriage to Miss Eliza Young, daughter of Rev. Tom Young, after which they located themselves in a comfortable home about two miles west of the little town of Cumberland, Webster County, where he died. He leaves a wife and three children to sustain the loss of this devoted husband and father. He was an upright, honest citizen, a faithful member of the Methodist Church, South, and a true, loyal member of the Masonic lodge, all that was mortal being laid in the newly-made mound in Cumberland cemetery by them. I knew him to be a consecrated Christian and one who seemed to be ever mindful of his God, keeping his precepts. One seeing his peaceful countenance and his cheerful, agreeable disposition could not but feel that they were in the presence of a child of God. Dear bereaved ones, weep not, for our only possible grief is the loss to us of this dear one, for he has only passed; as it were, from a long pilgrimage in a land where all that has life must bloom and die, and crossed the river into that bright, celestial land where God has promised a home for all that keep his precepts. For

There's a Christian home in heaven, far beyond this vale of tears, And it was prepared by Christ who reigns on high;

If we live Christ's best example, we need have no doubts or fears, For we'll reach that heavenly mansion by and by.

When we reach that home in heaven, that's prepared for you and me, There we'll meet our loved ones waiting at the door.

Over there they long have waited, since they crossed the crystal sea, There we'll join with them in praises evermore.

ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

JOHN FRANK MITCHELL was born Sept. 30, 1873, and died June 24, 1910. He joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in early childhood and for the last ten years he has taken an active part in church work—the last five years he has been an official of the church. About ten years ago he was happily married to Miss Eddie Wasson. He leaves a father, mother, one brother, a wife and three children to mourn for him. He was always ready and willing to go out and do anything the church saw fit to place upon him or ask of him. He was not afraid to die, having said a number of times that he was ready to go, and even prayed for the hour to come. Brother Mitchell loved his family with that love that makes home sweet and happy. He loved his church and was always at his place, ready to take the lead in singing; this he enjoyed doing. While he was a willing worker and the church needed him, the Father saw fit to call him home. There is a vacant place in the home and a vacant place in the church. Frank is not dead, but sleeping. We look forward with blessed assurance of meeting him beyond this vale of tears, where we will not say good-bye.

J. A. GOAD.

FELDER CAMP MEETING.

The Felder Camp Meeting, Topisaw Charge, will begin on Friday night, Aug. 12, and close on the 19th. All ministers are invited. We insist on all those of the Brookhaven District to join us in this meeting. Will all Christians join us in prayer for a great revival. We are anxious for you, Mr. Editor, to attend the meeting.

J. B. King, E. C.

McComb, Miss.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection, beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

THE VOTAN LINE

VOTAN TEA,

positively, cannot be matched at its price. In perfecting its blend our experts, cupped against teas selling 25% higher and succeeded in producing something still better.

Some tea-drinkers prefer a straight Oolong, others a Ceylon, still others a green tea. Votán is composed of several most delicate and pleasing teas, blending their flavors into an exquisite bouquet most grateful and satisfying. You will not willingly return to the one-tea idea after once trying the Votán blend. Votán Tea comes in quarter-pound, half-pound and one-pound canisters. Order some to-day.

VOTAN COFFEE like VOTAN TEA represents perfection. Make a test of all the so-called "best"; you'll find VOTAN still better. Votán Coffee stands out from the multitude with an individuality all its own. Let your curiosity once prompt you to try it, and your judgment will compel you thenceforth to use no other.

In 1, 2 and 3-lb. cans.

There is an exclusive agent in your town
If not, write us.

The Votán Tea & Coffee Co.
New Orleans, U. S. A.

DON'T BUY PAINT TILL YOU GET OUR BOOK

Here's the difference between Chase's, fresh, made-to-order paint and the paint at dealers' and paint that is made by painters. Dealers' paint is stale—with the linseed oil eaten up by chemicals. And no painter has the heavy machinery to mix and grind paint. Our paint is made after each order is received and shipped the day it is made. Chase paint means fresh paint—longer service, better service. Write now, for Big, Free Book and Color Card. Also direct-from-factory prices, free trial and freight-prepaid offer.

O. L. CHASE, THE PAINT MAN. DEPARTMENT 17. ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI.

Use good Judgement

In buying your organ

If you have the money; if you're raising it, or only planning—write for helpful suggestions.

ESTEY, Brattleboro, Vt.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS
UNBREAKABLE POINTED
TOP STYLE

Requires no top or back of the head to wash by hand. No need for a separate cup. LE PAGE NO. 12 COMMUNION CUPS.

A "SQUARE DEAL"

It is often argued that women do not have an equal chance with men, for enjoyment and usefulness, because women suffer so much from pain and weakness. In a general sense, it is true that women bear more physical pain than men. However, the belief that women must suffer regularly, on account of ailments and weakness peculiar to their sex, has been successfully contradicted by the relief so many women have obtained by the use of Cardui, that great remedy for suffering women.

During the past fifty years, many thousands of women have written us, telling of the immediate relief and permanent benefit they have received from Cardui. These letters cover a great many forms of womanly illness. Mrs. M. E. Allred of Hartford, Wash., writes: "Ever since I was 16 years old, I have suffered from female troubles. I had headache, backache and other troubles, every month. Some two years ago, I began to use Cardui, and since then I have had no backache, my other troubles have stopped, I don't need any medicine, and I am well."

What Cardui has done for Mrs. Allred and other women, it surely can do for you. Try it at once. Give yourself a "square deal." You will never regret it. Sold everywhere.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00
St. Louis, $26.00
Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares

To ALL Principal Points in the United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD,
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 3612.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Shreveport Dist.—Third Round.

Shreveport, First Church	Aug. 7
Texas Avenue	Aug. 10
Coushatta, at Holly	Aug. 13, 14
Campiti, at St. Maurice	Aug. 20, 21
Ida, at Munlin's Chp.	Aug. 24, 25
Greenwood	Aug. 27, 28
La Chute, at Taylortown	Sept. 3, 4
Pelican, at Bethel	Sept. 6, 7
Pleasant Hill, at Robeline	Sept. 10, 11
Mooringsport	Sept. 13, 14
Bossier City	Sept. 16
Zwolle, at Bayou Scie.	Sept. 17, 18
Many, at New Hope	Sept. 20
Hornbeck, at Holly	Sept. 22
Leesville	Sept. 23
Bon Ami	Sept. 24, 25
DeRidder	Sept. 25, 26
Langville	Sept. 27, 28
Noel Memorial	Sept. 30

T. J. WARLICK, P. E.

New Orleans Dist.—Third Round.

St. Tammany Ct.	Aug. 6, 7
Covington	Aug. 7, 8
Shidell, at Shidell	Aug. 14
Felicity	Aug. 21
Algiers	Aug. 21
Carrollton	Aug. 28
Second Church	Sept. 4
First Church	Sept. 11
Rayne Memorial	Sept. 18

F. N. PARKER, P. E.

Lafayette Dist.—Third Round.

Houma, at Bourg	Aug. 6, 7
Patterson	Aug. 13, 14
Prudehomme, at C. P.	Aug. 20, 21
Rayne	Aug. 27, 28
Jennings	Sept. 3, 4
Lake Charles	Sept. 10, 11
Sulphur, at Sulphur	Sept. 11, 12
Eunice, at L. P.	Sept. 17, 18
Bell City, at B. C.	Sept. 24, 25
Lake Arthur	Sept. 25, 26

J. E. DENSON, P. E.

Monroe Dist.—Third Round.

Tallulah	Aug. 6, 7
Rayville	Aug. 7, 8
Mangham, at Union	Aug. 13, 14
Downsville, at Willhite	Aug. 20, 21
Waterproof, at Wesley	Aug. 25
Floyd	Aug. 27, 28
Eros, at Indian Village	Aug. 31
Lake Providence	Sept. 3, 4
Merrouge	Sept. 7
Brookland	Sept. 10, 11

S. S. KEENER, P. E.

Ruston Dist.—Third Round.

Ruston	Aug. 7
Vernon, at New Prospect	Aug. 13, 14
Bienville, at Burk Place	Aug. 18
Bernice, at Summersfield	Aug. 20, 21
Ringgold, at G. B.	Aug. 27, 28
Gibbsland, at O. G.	Sept. 1
Jonesboro, at Wyatt	Sept. 2, 4
Winnfield	Sept. 4, 5
Houghton	Sept. 8
Lisbon, at —	Sept. 10, 11
Minden	Sept. 17, 18
Cotton Valley, at —	Sept. 19
Lanesville, at P. G.	Sept. 24, 25

R. W. TUCKER, P. E.

Baton Rouge Dist.—Third Round.

Ponchatoula	Aug. 6, 7
Baker, at Deerford	Aug. 13, 14
Zachary, at Ethel	Aug. 20, 21
Baton Rouge, Second Ch.	Aug. 21, 22
E. Feliciana, at C. G.	Aug. 26
Pine Grove, at C. G.	Aug. 26
Tickfaw, at Red Oak	Sept. 3, 4
Baton Rouge, First Ch.	Sept. 5
Pt. Vincent, at Huffs Chp.	Sept. 10, 11
Den. Sps., at Palmetto	Sept. 17, 18
Hammond	Sept. 18, 19
New Roads	Sept. 24, 25

C. C. MILLER, P. E.

Marriages

July 27, 1910, at the parsonage, at Auburn, Miss., by Rev. Jas. V. Bennett, Mr. W. E. KING and Miss MAT-TIE THOMPSON, all of Auburn, Lincoln County, Miss.

EDUCATIONAL.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE JACKSON, MISS.

Rev. David Carlisle Hull, M. S., President.

A high-grade College, situated at the Capital of the State. Location high, dry and healthful. Entrance requirement and Curriculum same as in other leading colleges and universities, North and South. The very finest Moral and Religious Influences. Extraordinary Advantages in

LITERARY AND LAW DEPARTMENTS.

Courses Leading to A. B., B. S., A. M., M. S., and LL. D. Degrees.

NINETEENTH SESSION BEGINS SEPTEMBER 23, 1910.

For Catalog and other information address

J. E. WALKLEY, Secretary, Jackson, Miss.

The Mississippi Conference Training School

MONTROSE, MISS.

This School has the largest and most competent Faculty in its history. Our pupils are prepared for Sophomore Class in high-grade Colleges. Our Musical Directress is in a Northern Conservatory, adding to her already splendid equipment for Piano and Voice Culture. We will build a Mission Hall on the School Campus, and have added the subject of Missions to our Curriculum. Our rates for board and tuition are reasonable.

Write for catalogue to

Rev. WALDO W. MOORE, A. M., President.

MERIDIAN WOMAN'S COLLEGE.

One of the Nation's Leading Schools for Young Ladies and Girls.

Sixty-acre campus for out-door life: Boating, Fishing, Swimming, Basket Ball, Tennis, Swings, Beautiful Military drill, Happy, healthful surroundings.

Excellent Faculty of Christian Teachers live with the girls.

Special Advantages in Art, Elocution, Domestic Science, along with the Highest Literary Training.

AN IDEAL UNION OF HOME AND SCHOOL.

A vegetable Farm, Scientific Cooking, Excellent Board, Special Dormitory for young girls in lower grades.

See full particulars in our beautiful illustrated catalog. Write to Pres. J. W. REESEN, "Dept. D," Meridian, Miss.

SOUTHEASTERN DENTAL COLLEGE

This school offers advantages excelled by no other school. Excellent building, superb equipment and strong faculty. Individual instruction given each pupil. Session opens Oct. 4th. For catalogue, address

DR. C. L. STOKES, President, 427-8 Austell Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

The Woman's College of Shreveport.

A high-grade College for Girls and Young Ladies. Ideal location. Steam heat. Modern improvements. Non-sectarian. Faculty of specialists. College and Preparatory Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Session begins Wednesday, September 21, 1910. Write for catalogue. GEORGE L. HARRELL, President, Shreveport, La.

ALABAMA POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE.

Only School of Technology in Alabama. 54 Professors and Instructors. 20 Well Equipped Laboratories.

CHAS. C. TEACE, M. A., LL. D., President

AUBURN, ALA.

Session begins Wednesday, September 7th, 1910. Location high and healthful. 826 feet above sea level. Attendance 761 students, from twelve States and three foreign countries.

COURSES OF INSTRUCTION:

Nine four-year degree courses: MINES, ENGINEERING, CHEMISTRY, (1) Mining, (2) Civil, (3) Electrical, (4) Mechanical, (5) Architecture, (6) Chemistry and Metallurgy, (7) Pharmacy. Forty-one professors and instructors. New machines and equipment in all laboratories. Students hold leading technical positions in Birmingham District and throughout the South. First course of Architecture established in the South. (8) HISTORY, LATIN, AND MODERN LANGUAGE COURSE: English (4 years), Latin, History, French, German Mathematics, Physics and Astronomy; Political Economy; and Psychology. Thirty-seven professors and instructors. (9) AGRICULTURE, HORTICULTURE, AND FORESTRY. Fifty-three professors and instructors. (1) 3-year course in Pharmaceutical Chemistry, Ph. C.; (2) 2-year course in Pharmacy, Ph. G.; (3) 3-year course in Veterinary Medicine, D. V. M. (1) New Dining Hall, also board in private families; (2) New Engineering Hall in course of construction; (3) New Library Building; (4) New Agricultural Hall; (5) Water Works and Electric Lights. For catalogue and further information address the President.

YOU CAN AFFORD

a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person: FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL. Round or Shape Notes, for $3 for 100. Words and music. 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 cents. E. A. K. HACKETT, 109 North Wayne Street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Methodist Benevolent Association

Ministers and Laymen of Southern Methodist Church. Benefits at Death, or Old Age, or Disability. Over $30,000 paid to Widows, Orphans, Disabled. Insurance at cost. If in good health, write for rates and other information. CARE METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE. NASHVILLE, TENN.

EDUCATIONAL

Port Gibson Female College,
PORT GIBSON, MISS.

71st session opens Sept. 14th. Literature, music, art, elocution, stenography, bookkeeping, sewing. Physical culture and chorus work free. Special attention given health and morals. Confers degree of A.B. Preparatory department. Students can reduce expenses by taking duties. For catalogue, address
REV. H. G. HAWKINS, A. B., Pres.

Whitworth College.

Twenty carefully selected teachers and officers. More than two hundred students last session. A most excellent literary course leading to the degrees of L.B. and A.B. Departments of Music, (including piano, violin and voice culture) expression, art, commerce.

Next Session begins Sept. 8, 1910.

For Catalogue, address,

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

RANDOLPH-MACON ACADEMY For Boys and Young Men.
Fits for college, scientific schools or business. Work endorsed by over 30 colleges and universities. Beautiful and healthful location. Athletic grounds; gymnasium. Terms only $230. No extras. For catalogue, address: E. SUMTER SMITH, Principal, Bedford City, Va.

FRABODY COLLEGE FOR TEACHERS,
NASHVILLE, TENN.

Only Teachers' College in South of recognized College Standard. Three groups of 4-year Degree-Courses. Two-year "Diploma" Course. Degree or Diploma insures easiest entrance into best positions. Recent Magnificent Endowment. Tuition $10.00 a quarter.

CHAR. E. LITTLE, Ph. D., Ph. M. of Faculty.

Campbell-Hagerman College

Resident school for girls and young women. Board and tuition, $300. New buildings. Every convenience. English College Preparatory, Junior College Courses. Music, Art, Expression. Physical Culture. Students the past year from 16 states. For year book apply to

G. P. SIMMONS, Associate President, LEXINGTON, KY., 437 West Second St.

Belmont College

For Young Women. Nashville, Tenn.

DR. LANDRITH, D.D., LL.D., President and MISS. HERON, Principals. The excellence of its educational methods and the broad and liberal courses of study, combined with its beautiful location in a matchless magnolia-shaded hilltop park, within the city limits, but with country environment, give Belmont its enviable reputation of a really high-grade school. The college comprises twelve schools. Diplomas conferred by these schools. Courses leading to degrees B.A. and M.A. Prepares for all colleges and universities. Music, Art, Expression, Physical Culture, Modern Languages, Domestic Science in hands of Masters. Director of School of Music, Edouard Hesselberg, eminent pianist and composer. Outdoor sports and study. Horseback riding a feature. 34 states represented last year. 20 per cent. Northern girls. Early registration necessary. Catalogue on request. Address BELMONT COLLEGE, Box 7.

TULANE

UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA

216 Teachers NEW ORLEANS 2476 Students

EDWIN B. CRAICHEAD, LL.D., President Tulane University is located in New Orleans, the metropolis of the South. Modern dormitories, extensive laboratories, libraries and museums. Ten departments comprising: College of Arts and Sciences, College of Technology, Newcomb College for Young Women, Teachers' College, Graduate Department, Law Department, Pharmacy Department, Medical Department, Post-Graduate Medical Department, Dental Department and Summer School. Expenses Low. Low Dormitory Rates. For Catalogue Address, LOUIS DATZ Secretary.

MRS. LULA LIPSCOMB WATERS.

Twenty years last spring, Rev. B. W. Waters, of the Japan Mission, and Miss Lula Lipscomb, of the China Mission, were married. Daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Lipscomb, of Columbus, Miss., and sister of Mrs. Mary L. Hargrove, of the Scarritt Bible and Training School, the best blood of the South flowed in her veins. Refined, educated, cultured, she was fitted, both by graces of person and intellect, for any position. Deeply spiritual, knowing much of the secret things of the Most High, rarely devoted to her Bible and to secret prayer, she was absolutely her Lord's. Latterly, frail in body and working constantly beyond her strength, because of the exigencies of mission work, she lived for years in utter isolation. Doing this and without complaint, in a hostile climate, with no school privileges for her children, she knew what it was to be crucified with Christ, and to die daily with him. Under other and more favorable circumstances she might have been with us for years, but someone had to fill the gap. A territory of nearly three million souls, on the Klushu coast, Japan, needed the gospel, and she, with her husband, were willing to stand in the lot.

Knowing her for a score of years as a neighbor, as a privileged guest in her home, and as a fellow-worker in the gospel, frequently conversing with her about the things of the kingdom, I say, without hesitation, Lula Waters would do it over again, even at the same price. Hers was the martyr's spirit, ever ready to do and to die.

Her worn and wasted body rests in a strange land. In the far-away foothills of the Sierras, in the soil of California, she sleeps. Denied the privilege of meeting those dear to her in the flesh, she died the death of a true soldier of the cross. Invalided home, with the hope of prolonging her precious life, the Master, himself, came and called for his tired servant, and now she is with him—the one she loved so well, and that to her is heaven.

A husband, three noble sons and several of her own family survive her, all journeying to the place to which she has gone. They have been in the way, many of them, a long time. And it is not far to yonder clime, and, some day, they will be with her and with their Lord. Till then, this hope buoys them on their pilgrim pathway—her Lord is their Lord and he has promised that they shall be with him forever.

What a meeting, what a greeting, there must have been when the sweet spirit of Lula Lipscomb Waters drew near to the heavenly gates! The precious son buried in Kobe, Japan, and his dear mother awaiting the resurrection in Sonoma County, California, with redeemed Orientals won by her to the Master, who had preceded her to heaven, all together in the presence of their Lord. What a meeting this, hard by the throne of God! And when I think of it, I could wish myself among them. W. E. TOWSON, Cairo, Ga.

CAMP MEETING NOTICE

The Cleveland (Miss.) Holiness Association will hold their fifth annual Camp Meeting, on the association's grounds, Aug. 11-21. These grounds are located three miles north of Cleveland, Miss. We have for our human leader, Dr. Beverly Carradine, once a member of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, but now a resident of St. Louis, Mo. Prof. Hemp Sewell, of Atlanta, Ga., will lead the host in song. We are expecting great things at the hands of the Lord and sincerely desire the earnest prayers of the Advocate family. For further information write R. J. Collins, P. C., Cleveland, Miss.; R. L. Beevers, Secretary, Cleveland, Miss.

He who is living on a high level, battling bravely to do his best, making happiness secondary to right, honor, truth, usefulness and justice is the one to whom happiness first comes.—Selected.

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.

Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Courses. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE.

THE OLDEST COLLEGE FOR WOMEN IN AMERICA—THE RECOGNIZED STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE FOR THE WHOLE SOUTH—NOTABLE PROGRESS AMONG SOUTHERN INSTITUTIONS.

Splendid plant—worth $350,000—with all modern comforts, on an eminence in the best residential district in Macon. $200,000 now being raised for improvements and endowment.

One of less than a half dozen colleges for women in the South, on a full fourteen units basis. Courses leading to A. B. and B. S. degrees. Faculty of thirty-nine officers and teachers. Nearly 3,000 alumnae throughout the Nation. The Wesleyan's diploma is the highest academic honor open to a woman in the South.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, employing fourteen officers and teachers, is the Mecca of artists and those preparing to teach. Schools of Art and Expression at the same high standard. Diplomas and teachers' certificates are conferred.

The moral and physical health of Wesleyan young ladies is safeguarded at every point. The discipline and training are non-sectarian, but Christian to the core. Wesleyan's high aim is to send out young women of genuine Christian culture. Health record without a parallel. Serious sickness has been rare, and not a single death has occurred at the College in many years.

Rates within reach of all. The College is not conducted for money making, but to bless the world. Apply for catalogue and information in detail to REV. W. H. AINSWORTH, D.D., President, Macon, Ga.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jackson, Tenn.

Next School Year begins Wednesday, September 14. Every facility offered for a thorough education for girls and young women. All departments taught, including besides regular Classical and Literary Course, Music, Art, Expression, Stenography, Typewriting, Business course, Etc. Charges reasonable. For catalogues, etc., apply to

REV. A. B. JONES, Jackson, Tenn.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute is one of the oldest Female Colleges in the South, having been chartered in 1843. The college has 259 attendants and 125 of them are boarding pupils.

THE TEXAS DENTAL COLLEGE
HOUSTON, TEXAS

THE SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION BEGINS OCTOBER 4th, 1910.

Offers to the prospective dental students unsurpassed clinical advantages and teaching facilities for the study of the most modern and up-to-date dentistry. Ideal winter climate; Reasonable living expenses, and the most wholesome moral influences.

For full information and catalogue, address the secretary, CHAR. H. EDGE.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

A home school for girls. 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful hill country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue.

Address, Pres. H. H. BROWDER,

CLINTON, LA.

FOR GIRLS AND YOUNG WOMEN

Ward Seminary Nashville, Tennessee

46th year. Seminary and Special Courses. Conservatory of Music—Emil Winkler, Director; Signer Campbelle, Voice; Fritz Schmitz, Violin. 175 Boarding Pupils. Complete appointments. City advantages. Beautiful campus for outdoor sports. For catalogue address J. D. BLANTON, President.

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McCord, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."

C. G. Butler, Argenta, Ark., wrote: "Used 4 bottles and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per cent better."

Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever Tonic Co.
Savannah, Georgia.

Memorize this package

It is the symbol of gelatine purity and will bring you joy and satisfaction each time it enters your home.

BOSTON
CRYSTAL GELATINE

"I can't keep house without it."

Crystal Gelatine will save you more pin money than any other article of food you can buy. Each package makes two quarts of delicious, "fender" jelly, which is truly as "clear as crystal". Simple to prepare, never curdles, agrees with the most delicate stomach. Thousands will use no other kind.

Ask your dealer.
Free sample for your dealer's name.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.
121 A Beverly St.,
BOSTON, MASS.

Tidings from the Field

From Verona:

Our third Quarterly Meeting came off last Saturday and Sunday at Planterville. It was a profitable occasion all around. Brother Felts, our presiding elder, was at his best. The people attended well, and the interests of the work were in good shape. We will soon commence our protracted meetings and expect a religious time. More anon.—D. W. Babb.

Smithville Charge:

I have a fine meeting in progress at Old Antioch on my charge. We have had evidences of the old-time power. This is the ninth day, with the exception of two days' help from Brother Yancy, I have done the preaching. I will hold a meeting at Paine Memorial Chapel next week with the assistance of Rev. L. T. Sargent. Brother F. M. Nichols, an old citizen and member of my charge, is critically ill. We ask prayer in his behalf. Capt. Caldwell, another one of our oldest citizens and a member of my charge, who has been very low, and not expected to live for several months, is getting well. My people enjoy the Advocate more and more, and think it never was so good. I use every opportunity for extending its circulation.—W. A. Bowlin.

Decatur, Miss.:

On last Sunday night we closed a nine days' meeting at Union, which was said to be the best ever held in that place. We were assisted by Rev. D. E. Kelley, he doing the preaching, and Rev. B. L. Sutherland led the singing. Brother Kelley preached with power; his sermons were forceful, and to the point. There were about fifty conversions, twenty-five accessions, and twenty-one family altars erected. The Lord was with us in great power. The Baptists opened their nice, large, new church to us, as our new church was not completed and the old one was not large enough. They worked in hearty accord with us. I thank God that a spirit of harmony and love prevails there and we can say, "glory to God for it." We expect to occupy our new church soon; will have Children's Day the first service in it. We hope to have it ready for dedication ere Conference. We are moving along very nicely at Decatur. We have plenty to do and we are trying to do our duty. Pray for us and may God bless you and your work.—H. E. Carter.

Waynesboro Circuit:

Dear Doctor Meek: Recently at Pleasant-Wood Church, on the Waynesboro Circuit, a delightful period was spent by the writer with Rev. J. T. McVey in a protracted meeting that resulted in four accessions on profession of faith and a spiritual uplift to the membership and community. The church and pastor are earnestly laboring together for the promotion of Christ's heritage. The followers of Calvin are numerous and very fraternal and in the song service of the sanctuary are particularly helpful. Brother McVey is an intelligent and tactful worker and untiring in his efforts as a shepherd of souls. He has a parsonage project on hand that bids fair to reach a happy consummation ere the year ends. At Waynesboro, it was a privilege to meet the venerable and venerated Francis Marion Williams, the father of the orphanage man so well known and loved throughout the bounds of the Mississippi Conference. Having seen his portrait and a sketch of him in the current issue of the Methodist Hand Book, the writer was able to recognize and appreciate the worth of the grand old hero of many a hard-fought battle for Christ. His name is as ointment poured forth in all this region of country. The cultured pastor of the Waynesboro Station, continuously showed the visiting brother through the house of worship, where he dispenses the Word of life to his flock and the community. At the parsonage, a son is hopefully convalescent after a protracted and serious illness. The people called Methodist in this section of the country are much in love with the genial and godly man now serving them as presiding elder.—W. A. Betts.

Dry Run Charge:

Will you give me a little space in your paper to say a few words about Dry Run Charge? Pleasant Grove was taken off of this work and Liberty and Stringfellow Schoolhouse put on. These words were said to us before we left Conference: "You have got a hard place now." So I went praying to the work and we closed a meeting at Liberty the 21st of July with twenty conversions and eleven accessions to the church and others to come soon. Rev. D. M. Floyd did the preaching. He is a good man, a good gospel preacher and a good revivalist. We feel like it was a great blessing to Liberty for D. M. Floyd to be there with us. We had a great meeting at Stringfellow Schoolhouse. There were twelve conversions, and the people express a determination to build a church. Rev. M. V. Shearer did the preaching. He is an earnest man and a good preacher. We believe he sowed a lot of good seed over there that will bring forth fruit. We feel like the association with these two good men has been a great help to us. We have a lot of fine people at these two places and all over our charge. We have learned to love them all. May God bless us with a great revival at the other places on the charge.—J. T. Gullett, P. C.

THERE IS NO EXERCISE TO EQUAL CYCLING.

Among all the sports or forms of exercise, which have found any degree of favor with Americans, cycling is most ideally suited to American needs and American temperament.

It satisfies our passion for being "on the go" in a sane, health-building manner. There is no nervous tension to cycling, such as attends the swift ride on the speeding motorcycle, or in the whizzing auto.

Gliding along on a light-running wheel, one forgets he has nerves or muscles. Instead of a rush of air in the face that renders breathing a difficult task, it seems second nature, when wheeling, to drink in long, sweet, soul-refreshing breaths of nature's ozone.

Get out your bicycle and get the fresh air! has been many a physician's advice to the patient seeking relief from nervous strain, stomach disorder, or a long list of kindred ailments. That, too, is our advice to our readers.

An hour or two a-wheel each day, will make a new person of you—will help the lungs carry away impurities from the blood, will clear the brain, quiet the nerves and bring the restful sleep of health.

If you have a bicycle, use it. If you haven't one, you will be surprised to learn how fine a wheel can be bought for a very few dollars from the Mead Cycle Company, Dept. M 295, Chicago. They are glad to send their catalogue to interested persons.

The Biggs Treatment

The most successful and best known method in the South for the cure of chronic ailments. No drugs. If you are afflicted with Paralysis, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Nervous Debility, or some other disease that medicine has failed to cure, write for our free book which tells about all this new and better way.

Ideal climate, home-like conditions, complete sanitarium equipment, low charges, liberal guarantee of satisfaction.

Write to-day for the book and diagnosis blank—both free.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM,
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

CONVENIENT WAY, LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA,
SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS
ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL, General Passenger Agent.

Summer Tours

VIA

SOUTHERN PACIFIC

California, Colorado, Utah, Mexico,
AND ALL THE WEST.

NEW YORK

And ALL EASTERN and NORTHERN RESORTS

See Your Local Agent for full Particulars, or Write

J. H. R. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La.

C. W. MURPHEY, City Pass. Agt.
New Orleans, La.

Epworth League

By Rev. H. B. Watkins.

TOPIC FOR AUGUST 7, 1910.

GOD'S UNFAILING LOVE.

References: Hosea XI, 8-9; John XIII, 1.

I have read with such pleasure and profit the comments in the lesson taken from our excellent League organ, The Epworth Era, that I feel like giving my space this week to the reproduction of that article, as follows:

Hosea's ministry is dated between 745 and 735 B.C., just succeeding that of Amos. Following the long and prosperous reign of Jeroboam II, a period of comparative anarchy prevailed, and the social and moral conditions grew worse and worse. Assyria had recommended her westward movements, and was threatening the independence, if not the national existence, of the smaller nations. The prophets Amos and Hosea saw in these corrupt conditions within and the alarming political situation without sufficient proof of impending disaster. Their profound conviction of the righteousness of God precluded the thought that Jehovah would intervene to protect them, regardless of their moral character, and made them indeed regard the Assyrians as the avengers of divine justice; the burden of their message was a call to repentance and a threat of dire punishment for the impenitent nation.

Hosea goes beyond Amos, however, in the sweep of his message. He sees as well as the earlier prophet the need of punishment; indeed, better possibly, because he understood as the other did not the awfulness of sin; but there is a greater insight with him into God's love; punishment becomes discipline for those who will be taught by it, and the hope of restoration is stronger. Hosea had come to this deeper insight through the agony of a great sorrow. His wife had been untrue to him, and righteousness said that punishment must follow sin. Still, he loved her; and while the holiness of his love said she must be punished, love said she must be saved from her sin and brought back home. If love's hard discipline could save her. So there came to him the realization of the deathlessness of true love in spite of the unfaithfulness of the loved one; and as he thought of the wonder of it in himself, he knew that such love must be God's gift because with such unfaithful love God loved his faithless people. Thus Hosea's most distinctive message is that of the tender, yearning love of God for his sinful children.

The first four verses of his eleventh chapter give a beautiful picture of God's love for Israel in the childhood of the nation. There is the picture of the father teaching the toddling infant to walk and clasping it in his arms and comforting it when it falls. Then the figure changes, and it is now the picture of oxen and a driver, significant of the growing brutishness of the people; but it is still a picture of tenderness and considerate treatment. "I drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love; and I was to them as they that lift up the yoke on their jaws; and I laid food before them." This is the earliest of all passages, says Ewald, in which human means precisely the same as love.

There follow verses announcing the coming punishment, because, says Jehovah, "my people are bent on backsliding from me." The sword shall fall upon their cities, and shall consume their bars, and devour them because of their own counsels. Then through the lips of the prophet there breaks forth from the heart of Jehovah the cry of tender yearning: "How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? how shall I cast thee off, Israel? how shall I make thee as Admah? how shall I set thee as Zeboiim? my heart is turned within me, my compassions are kindled together." And the promise is given: "I will not execute the fierceness of mine anger. I will not return to destroy Ephraim; for I am God, and not man, the holy one in the midst of thee, and I will not come in wrath." George Adam Smith calls this "the greatest passage in Hosea," and it is indeed a wonderful expression of the long-suffering love of God, of the divine pity that offers another chance to a stubbornly disobedient people, and when it punishes does not utterly destroy, but seeks to reclaim the wandering ones as long as there is any possibility of reclamation. Such was the prophet's thought about God more than twenty-six hundred years ago.

1. The love of God is unfailing in spite of man's sin. It is not strange that God should love the pure and good; but the wonderful thing about God is that he is kind toward the unthankful and the evil, making his sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sending rain on the just and the unjust, and that he so loved a sinful world that he sent his Son who died for us "while we were yet sinners." Let no one tell children the lie that "God doesn't love bad children." The only hope for them and us is that he does love us always. Mere hard punishment that has no love in it is brutalizing; love alone offers another chance and inspires to amendment and willing service. We might be the cowed slaves of an unloving Omnipotence; but we can be freemen and loving children only under the benevolent rule of a Heavenly Father. To save us from the love of self, which is the heart of sin, we must have a Savior who weeps over those who will not be gathered to him and who dies for us, "the righteous for the unrighteous, that he might bring us to God."

2. The heart of God suffers infinite pain because of the sin of men. Hosea's love for his wife and his terrible grief and shame for her sin made him realize the passion of the divine heart as no one before him had done. And this is the worst of sin, not that it offends dignity or undermines authority, but that it wounds love and makes it unavailing, that it separates from the source of truth and life and does despite to the spirit of grace.

3. The unfailing love of God demands that the sinner be disciplined. The highest gift of God is fellowship with himself; but this presupposes for its full realization holy character, ethical likeness to God, which is not his bestowment, but man's response to the revelation of truth and righteousness, the call of duty and privilege, the invitation and command of God. So for the unresponsive heart there must be correction, discipline. This is shown in the experience of Hosea in the fact that his wife suffered and was enslaved, and that when he brought her back it was not to welcome her straightway to her old place of intimate love, but she was to "abide" for him "many days" and prove her amendment and loyalty.

4. The unfailing love of God is eager to forgive the most guilty if only they return to him with penitence. No heart, then, that has any movings of penitence, any desire for a better life, any groping after the help of God need despair. The infinite love is ever ready to meet us more than halfway, and all our awakening comes from the stirring of his Spirit upon our forgetful and hardened minds and hearts.

"O Love that wilt not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in thee;
I give thee back the life I owe,
That in thine ocean depths its flow
May richer, fuller be."

IHC GASOLINE ENGINES

PROVED THE BEST

THOUSANDS of farmers all over the country are using IHC gasoline engines. Every day they are proving them to be the best and cheapest power for all farm uses.

The most power—with the least gasoline—with the least trouble—for the longest use—these are the qualities you want in your gasoline engine.

An IHC engine combines all of them—and has proved it through years of hard use.

Why not take the experience of these thousands of farmers instead of paying high prices for your own experience?

Don't experiment with unknown makes—go to the IHC local dealer and let him show you just why IHC gasoline engines are the best.

Let him show you how simple the IHC engine is, and take careful note of this simplicity, because it is very important. Let him show you that it is easy to get at and clean all parts, and always keep your engine in tip-top condition. Note the attractiveness of the engine—no heavy, clumsy castings, and yet every part more than strong enough to withstand all strains. This insures a big margin of safety in operating an IHC engine.

Let him show you how easy it is to start the engine. Turn on the switch, open the fuel valve, give the fly-wheel one turn, and the swing of your arm will release for you maximum power for the amount of fuel used.

Let him show you the simple, effective design of the hit-and-miss governor; the inlet check valve, the patented IHC feature which cuts down fuel bills by controlling the admission of fuel into the cylinder. Let him show you these and other important features. An IHC engine is so simple that you will realize at a glance how important these points are.

IHC engines are made in all styles and sizes from 1 to 25-horse power—vertical or horizontal, stationary, portable, or traction—to fit every need in every section. The IHC line offers you the widest selection from which to pick just the engine for your needs.

Talk it over with the IHC local dealer next time you go to town. Or, if you prefer, write direct for catalogue and full information.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY OF AMERICA

(Incorporated)

Chicago

U.S.A.

This Little Saw Mill Outclasses a Portable

WHELAND MACHINE WORKS

2700 Sydney St., Chattanooga, Tenn.

The mill in the picture cuts lumber as nicely as the largest circular; yet is easily moved and may be taken to timber where it would not pay to place heavier machinery. Is especially adapted to plantation use or small tracts. Can be well handled by one man, and bunches of trees yielding a few thousand feet may be sawed, with a handsome profit.

For this mill, if desired, we furnish an engine and boiler on wheels, in sizes up to forty horse-power.

Let us mail you our big new, illustrated catalogue. It is free.

USE THE L. and A. RAILWAY,

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

You Look Prematurely Old

Because of those ugly, grizzly gray hairs. Use "LA CREOLE" HAIR COLOR RESTORER. Price $1.00, retail.

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

THIRD QUARTER. LESSON VI. AUGUST 7, 1910.

JESUS ON THE WAY TO JERUSALEM.

Parallel Passages: Matthew xix, 1, 2, 13-26; Mark x, 13-28; Luke xviii, 15-28.

1. And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these sayings, he departed from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judea beyond Jordan.

2. And great multitudes followed him; and he healed them there.

13. Then there were brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray, and the disciples rebuked them.

14. But Jesus said, suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven.

15. And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence.

16. And, behold, one came and said unto him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do; that I may have eternal life?

17. And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments.

18. He saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder, Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness.

19. Honor thy father and thy mother: and Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

20. The young man saith unto him, All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?

21. Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come and follow me.

22. But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions.

23. Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven.

24. And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

25. When his disciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved?

26. But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible.

Golden Text: "Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven." (Matt. xix, 14.)

I. The Lesson's Meaning.

Nowhere in all history, we are convinced, can be found so sublime an illustration of courage, physical as well as moral, as is seen in Christ as he set his face steadfastly toward Jerusalem, knowing full well the things that should befall him there. Our common ideal of courage—to rush boldly into the thick of battle, and there, perchance to fall, covered with glory and the admiration and praises of one's countrymen—is one thing; but deliberately to follow a course of conduct which brings only the hatred and opposition of the chief of one's own people, and then deliberately to go forward to face shame, and mockery, and scourging, and death by crucifixion is quite another and an infinitely higher thing.

But even more wonderful still was the spirit in which Christ made this journey. We might expect to see him going with set face and determined look, as Luther to Worms, and such would have been sublimely human; but we find Jesus infinitely courageous without seeming so, and able under such trying circumstances to take little children in his arms and bless them, and to carry forward his work of unselfish ministry regardless of his personal prospects.

So, our lesson opens with an incident which none would expect in connection with such a journey as Christ was now entering upon. "They brought unto him their babes," as Luke affectingly puts it. And how could they have refrained! They were accustomed to carrying them to the temple for circumcision, and to the Rabbis (if especially revered) for blessing, so what more natural and more Christian instinct than to bring them now to Jesus? We do not believe the disciples would have rebuked them under ordinary circumstances. They must have been heavy with the prospective end of their journey, and so thought, it is no time now for the Master to be bothered with children. But they but little knew the serene heights in which he dwelt, and Mark tells us that Jesus was moved to indignation at their rebuff of the parents; and said, (those sweet words which we learned in our childhood): "Suffer the little children to come unto me; and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of heaven." "Of such is the kingdom of heaven," these last words are being interpreted by some to-day, as indicating that there is no need that children be regenerated, as implying they are naturally sinless and holy—in a condition already fit for heaven. But such is a perversion of the real meaning of Jesus, and is disproved even by the experience of all who have had anything to do with even the fairest and best of little children. The evidences of depravity—willfulness, selfishness, anger—are all too apparent from the start, and if the kingdom above is to be made up of little children, transported as they are unchanged to heaven, there must be a great many jarring notes of discord there, and sorrow and crying will not be done away. We believe that the spirits of children dying in infancy are sanctified as well as saved through Christ's atonement. No, the meaning is: Of those who are like children in their better traits—in humility, in trustfulness, in teachableness, in obedience—of such is the kingdom of heaven. And he who will not receive the kingdom of God in this spirit shall in no wise enter therein.

The remainder of our lesson consists of the story of the rich young ruler who came to him, and kneeling, as Mark tells us, asked: "Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" To whom Christ replied, "Why callest thou me good? none is good save one, even God." Some find difficulty in this reply, and Dr. Horton suggests that the Revised Version translation in Matthew, "relieves it," "Why askest thou me concerning that which is good?" However, Mark and Luke both stand plainly, "Why callest thou me good?" etc. To us the explanation is simple. The address, "Good Master," was a very unusual one among the Jews, and Christ merely asks, "Why do you address me thus? perhaps as a leading question to discover whether it represented any high appreciation of his character." He did not repudiate being good, but he did reject the title unless its use signified some real appreciation of his nature. He did not want it as a mere compliment.

But the answer to the question was given, and the evident sincerity of the young man as he replied, "All these things have I observed from my youth," touched the heart of Christ, and Mark (whose record is best throughout) tells us that "Jesus looking upon him loved him."

But though he loved him, the task he set him was severe, as he answered then the further question, "What lack I yet?" "One thing thou lackest; sell all that thou hast, and distribute unto the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven; and come, follow me." Christ claimed him as a personal disciple; and that he might join the company of the twelve—perhaps to take Judas's place, after he by transgression fell—be suggested, rather commanded, "Go sell all that thou hast." The command doubtless arose, too, out of a recognition on Christ's part that love of his wealth was in the way of his soul. The command is of course not of universal application, though it is universally demanded that a man must be willing to sacrifice all for Christ, holding all then only as stewards under the direction of God. The young man refused to obey. "He went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions," and loved his possessions on earth more than Christ's companionship and treasures in heaven. And so was fulfilled again, "He that will save his life shall lose it," whereas had the young ruler here consented to lose his life for Christ's sake, what large place of honor and glory might he not now have in both the Church militant and the Church triumphant. As it is, his name even is unknown.

The lesson closes, as the treasure-lover turns away, with a warning from the lips of Christ as to the danger of riches. "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of heaven." The interesting and supposedly scholarly explanation of this passage, which represents the "needle" as the small side gate of the city for pedestrians which a small camel could barely squeeze through, I find no authority for. Christ here means to assert an absolute impossibility. The German Meyer affirms: "To render this word by a narrow gate, a narrow mountain pass, or anything but a needle is simply inadmissible." So on hearing so absolute a statement the disciples "were astonished exceedingly." This was the more natural in them, for "With the Jews it was believed by all that a rich man was shown by his wealth to have God's favor, and could secure additional favor by beneficence." "Who, then, can be saved?" they cried, and Christ qualified his totally exclusive figure by saying that what is impossible to nature is possible by the grace of God; that rich men can be saved, though the danger of trusting in and being satisfied with worldly goods is exceeding great.

II. The Lesson's Message. Points to Impress.

1. There is no conflict between tenderness and courage. While performing one of the most courageous acts of his life, Christ took little children in his arms and blessed them. Don't be afraid of gentle deeds and kindly words. They are marks of lofty souls. The great Bishop Brooks played horse for the children on the floor.

2. It is a holy impulse which leads us to bring our children to Jesus, therefore let us bring them, for Christ rebukes those who rebuke us for doing so. How our Baptist friends can refrain from bringing their children openly to Jesus, as here, and seeking his blessing upon them I cannot see. It is well that fore-birth-children of Christendom disagree with them on this point of bringing young children infants (paidia) to Jesus. And we will still believe that his blessing upon them amounts to something, though they cannot understand it.

3. "Of such is the kingdom of God," have I the child-like disposition with which I cannot enter the kingdom—humble, trustful, teachable, obedient, forgiving. Otherwise let me not deceive myself.

4. And Jesus, looking upon him, loved him, yet he gave to him no easy task. True love does not always express itself in making smooth the way and easy the task, sure, after is the ruin of the one thus spared. It rather demands much and aims at great achievement. Parents to-day have great need of remembering this.

5. Let us not shrink from doing the one thing needful which Christ reveals to each one as the condition of discipleship. You say, I cannot afford it. You cannot afford not to do it. The young man kept his gold for a few brief years, and lost his soul, and we know not what honor and glory.

We speak of the "shadow of death"—it is only the shadow which falls on the portico as we stand knocking at the door—the next, the Father's voice of welcome is heard.—Selected.

Where it is said, "There is no fear in love," there is a gracious suggestion to some amiable persons who should have clearer vision and larger inflowings of spiritual life.—Selected.

Prayer is so mighty an instrument that no one ever thoroughly mastered all its keys. They sweep along the infinite scale of man's wants and God's goodness.—Hugh Miller.

Vanderbilt University

NASHVILLE, TENN.

1007 STUDENTS. 100 TEACHERS. CAMPUS OF 80 ACRES

New College Hall and Chemical Laboratory Just Completed

Expenses low. Literary courses for graduates and undergraduates. Professional courses in Engineering, Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, Theology. Send for catalogue, naming department. J. E. HART, Secretary.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

THE MAKING OF A MAN.

The making of our future men, men in whose hands lay the destinies of this great Nation, is a task of vast importance, and all the more so because of the many difficulties and grave responsibilities which surround it. Prof. M. A. Beeson, B.S., President of the Meridian Male College of Meridian, Miss.

In this great institution the boys receive a thorough education, body and soul. They have every comfort and convenience, with a large variety of recreations, such as fishing, swimming, etc. The young man has great advantages, and the location is exceptionally beautiful. It is impossible to realize the superiority of the Meridian Male College until he has looked through their handsome catalogues, and parents contemplating a college education for their boys should write Prof. Beeson before determining a place to send them. It is regarded by thousands as the safest, sanest, best college for boys and the land. The Meridian Male College is only a quarter of a mile away. Brothers and sisters can be near each other in safe colleges. Address Prof. M. A. Beeson, President, Meridian, Miss., for catalogue.

LADY WANTED.

The introduction of our very complete Fall line of ladies' wear, suitings, wash dresses, etc., is now on hand. City Patterns, and patterns for the market. Deal direct with the mills you will find our prices low. If others can make $10 to $20 weekly, you can also. Samples, full instructions in neat sample book, shipped express prepaid. No money required. Exclusive territory. Write for particulars. Also first to apply. Standard Dress Goods Co., Dept. 985 Binghamton, N. Y.

Progress Self-Tramping

COTTON PRESS

3 Horse Power Mill Operate. Capacity 25 bales. Write for prices.

Manufactured by

C. J. HYDE, MERIDIAN, MISS.

WANTED

Morphine, Whiskey and Tobacco Addictions to cure in ten days by our Painless Method. Fee can be kept in possession of patients until cured. Sanitarium of thirty rooms equipped with all latest conveniences. Patients who cannot visit Sanitarium can be treated privately at home. References: Any Minister or Physician of Lebanon. Booklet of particulars sent free.

CEDARCROFT SANITARIUM, Box 735, Lebanon, Tenn.

BATH TUB

We sell the best Cost Little. Write for catalogue. N. Y. BATH MFG. CO., (Established 1900) 102 Chambers St., N. Y. City

ESTABLISHED 1858

CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS

Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57

THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

CLYMYER

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

CHURCH BELLS

Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

ATHENS COLLEGE

FOUNDED 1843 ATHENS, ALA. FACULTY OF TWENTY

Governed by Women for Girls and Women. Merit not Money; Polish not Varnish. Member of Ala. Assn. of Colleges. Preparatory School in connection, students enjoying equal opportunities with college students. Boarding Department enrollment quadrupled five years. Excellent advantages in Music, Oratory, Art, Normal Training and Domestic Science for those desiring special courses. Graduate nurse, sterilized, drinking water, Chemical fire extinguishers. Rates, nine months: Board, Laundry, tuition in Regular Course, Physical Culture, Chorus Singing, Medical Fee and Handsome Uniform (made to measure by New York tailor) hat and gloves to match $205. Sixty-eighth session begins Wednesday, September 20, 1910. For catalog apply to MARY NORMAN MOORE, President.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 57—No. 31.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2844.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 11, 1910.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

REFLECTING THE GLORY OF THE LORD.

Very wonderful indeed was the interview of Moses with God on the mount during the period of forty days and forty nights. Moses was there in intimate communion with God, and during this entire period he did neither eat nor drink. He was thus taught, by a strange and blessed experience, that man does not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. Perhaps his communion with God was such that he neither required nor desired the bread which perisheth. There are many difficult questions which can readily be asked regarding the nature of this communion with God and the method of life which Moses lived while that communion continued. But we may be quite sure that God, who sought this communion, answered in the practical experience of Moses all those questions that seem to us so difficult. Moses could readily be sustained without the ordinary use of the means necessary for our sustenance. Moses had meat to eat, of which the world knew nothing. Not with meat and drink, but by his light, his law, his love, his peace, and his joy, did God fill the body and soul of his distinguished servant.

In developing the thoughts of this incident, attention may fittingly be called to the shining of the face of Moses. Moses carried with him from God the two tables of the testimony written by the finger of God; but he also carried back to the people the best kind of personal adornment—a shining face. No man is ever so beautifully adorned as the man whose face glows with the light of God. His shining face was a mark of the divine favor to himself. The people, in this way, were to know that he had been with God and had been accepted by God. They would not, therefore, be likely again ever to question his divine authority because of their present knowledge of the communion with God he had just enjoyed. He thus carried, as has been suggestively said, his divine credentials in the shining of his face.

The face often is the man. The soul looks out through the eyes; the heart often voices itself by the lips. A shining face is suggestive of a peaceful spirit, and a musical voice of a properly attuned soul. It thus comes to pass that when men have lived with God they carry the very glory of God in their faces. It would not be surprising if ever after that moment until his mysterious death, Moses was a different man in face and in spirit from what he had ever been before. This interview may have contributed to the vigor of his old age. There are marvelously mysterious laws of life; we have not yet mastered them in their full meaning. There is a broad margin of mystery lying between the known and the unknown, between life and death, and between sickness and health. We occasionally make incursions into that margin of territory, and we often carry back therefrom some new knowledge; but in the years to come parents, physicians and clergymen will have vastly enlarged spheres of knowledge—knowledge of which now we only dream in our loftiest moments. There are times when we are just as distinctly conscious that God pours physical vigor into us as we are that we are alive. In our everyday life we live too far from God, and the result is that we fail to receive from God copious supplies in physical vigor, in mental force, and in spiritual power and joy.

Mysterious joy often comes into the hearts of God's people, and the glory of the Lord often shines in their faces. Christian joy will make a homely face beautiful; a rugged and seamed face, if illumined with the glory of God, is a sight to charm the soul of an artist and to inspire with joy the heart of an angel. God loves joy and not gloom. The gloomy Christian misrepresents his Heavenly Father; he practically says that God is a hard master. A long face on a Christian man is truly a false face. Do not tell me that men of the world are joyous. They never know genuine joy, such as they might know if they were men of God. They call a life of sin a life of pleasure. It is a life of slavery. He who serves the devil serves a hard master. There is a great difference between joy and happiness. Happiness is just what happens; but joy is not external, it is internal. Joy is not dependent upon what happens; joy springs from within the soul. We must live with Christ if we would gain his image. A few minutes in the day with God will change the whole day; it will soften the spirit; it will sweeten the life; it will beautify the home; it will make the heart joyous and the face radiant.

Moses did not know that his face was shining. This is the very charm of his shining face. Others saw the shining; but he did not know it. The truth was attested by Aaron and by the children of Israel generally. They were dazzled and awed by what they saw. Goodness always commands respect. The value of a man's testimony in court depends upon the man's life out of court. The influence of a physician in a sick room depends somewhat upon the spirit and life of that physician outside the sick room. One reason why certain spiritual forms of treatment of disease have come into vogue is because some doctors forget that their patients have spiritual natures.

Moses, in his modesty and humility, put a veil upon his face. He accommodated himself to the capacity of the people to bear the tokens of God's nearness. He then went into the tabernacle before the Lord and put off his veil. Every form of concealment is necessarily thrown aside when men present themselves before God. How beautiful was the unconsciousness of Moses! We never know the power that goes out from us: often unconscious power is the highest form of power. The beauty of the Lord our God is upon many Christian men and women, and they are thinking only of their own unworthiness. Their faces and lives shine with the indwelling of Christ in their souls; but they see not the radiance of glory which all others see in their lives and faces. Their unconsciousness is one of the best evidences of their possession of divine grace in its fullest measure. The moment a man thinks he is perfect, that moment he ceases to be perfect. The moment a man begins to think of himself unduly, that moment he begins to think of God unjustly. The man who forgets himself and goes out to help his fellow-men, and thus to serve his God, is saving his soul after God's fashion.

How beautiful was the humility of John the Baptist! He never forgot his inferiority to Jesus the Christ. He virtually said, "I am only a voice. I am nothing but one crying in the wilderness." But what did Jesus Christ say of him? "Among them that are born of women, there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist." This is the proudest eulogy that was ever pronounced upon a human being in the history of the race. In Prov. xv, 33, we read, "Before honor is humility." On one of the colleges in Cambridge this thought is beautifully expressed. There are three gateways: the first is called "Humilitatis," the gate of humility; the second is "Virtutis," the gate of virtue; the third is "Honoris," the gate of honor. This is the order of the Christian life.

If you can do nothing else for God, you can carry a shining face. Charles Kingsley finely said, "If you wish your neighbors to see what God is like, let them see what he can make you like." May we hear the words of the Master, "Even so let your light shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in heaven."—Rev. R. S. MacArthur, D.D., in Northwestern Christian Advocate.

THE CHILD.

Let us labor for our children. "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." They themselves and adults who are like them—receptive, teachable, not resisting the inward monitions, willing to be led, in sympathy with the ways and spirit of Christ—all belong to the kingdom of heaven. They are not fully matured saints. They have not "resisted unto death striving strong against sin." But they are in the arms of Christ or getting as close as possible to Christ. They choose and love and take pleasure in him. That is "child religion." The Spirit of God is in and at the root of it. It is not "nature" according to the tough old theory. It is "grace." Every child has it.

You tell a certain type of itinerant evangelists to "let that child alone." Keep the hands of indiscriminating, sentimental, sensational "evangelism" from flogging, fussing with, labeling and counting these tender plants in the garden of our God. No, don't "have patience" with such rude intermeddlers. Rebuke them in the name of the Master. Let parents and pastors and Sunday school teachers and the wisest women of the Church take these children in hand and learn the exquisite art of letting them alone a great deal. A child's fears may be easily excited, its sympathies awakened, and almost any sort of response secured. And scores of children can be led "to the altar" or persuaded to "rise for prayers," or to "meet our dear brother the evangelist in the inquiry-room." And the counting, when it can include children, will make splendid numerical gains to be announced as results of the "remarkable work of grace just closing on Numberville circuit."

Put a stop to all this. And do it in such prompt and emphatic fashion that our superficial and emotional invader will think that he has himself come to the halter. Of course, I discriminate between evangelists and evangelists!

And while you prevent the abuse of sensitive childhood by both honest and dishonest exploiters of religious awakenings, see to it that with all wisdom, diligence and fidelity this same young life is sought, studied, instructed and safe-guarded in the interest of a real, rational and radical religious life.

1. As a pastor, know every child in your church. Have its name in the little vest-pocketbook that you carry over your heart. Have the little ones of your fold in your heart. Think about them. Visit them. Talk in wise and winsome fashion to them. Assume that they are lambs of Christ's fold. So record them. So train them. Develop conscience in them, a sense of responsibility and a perfect faith in the love of God for them. And do it 365 days every year. So do it that you need not speak often about it to them, but let the very sight of you suggest it.

2. As a pastor, work with their parents in the same interest. Put on parents a sense of responsibility for home religion, family prayer, Christian example and the compulsory attendance of children at the church service.

3. As a pastor, prevent the false theory that "the Sunday school is the children's church." If youngsters can go to but one place on Sunday—public service or Sunday school—let it be to the public service.

4. As a pastor, make the public service short and attractive. One hour is usually long enough for a public service. There are exceptions. Make them rare. Better have shorter services—less choir display, fewer "artistic" anthems, shorter public prayers and short sermons, packing an hour's thought into thirty minutes. Of course, you may make exceptions.

5. As a pastor, hold special services for children. Teach them everyday ethics. Teach to children the sublime doctrines of the gospel—all of them that you think of spiritual value to an average adult. Do all this teaching in a natural tone, avoiding pathos and the "tremulous" voice. Be sane and simple and sincere, and don't let a child fancy that you are more interested in his real welfare for one month, one week or one day of the year than you are for the whole of the year. Periodical piety is a poor thing to exploit.—Bishop Vincent, in Central Christian Advocate.

Frank Martin, Pres. John McCall, Secy. & Treas.
W. S. F. Hill, Genl. Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Asst. Secy.
Geo. A. Horn

THE VANDERBILT BOARD OF TRUST.

By Rev. G. B. Winton, D.D.

A correspondent of this Advocate recently raised the question whether the trustees of Vanderbilt University do or do not recognize their trusteeship. It is precisely their sense of obligation as trustees which has led them to take the course that they have taken.

The terms of the trust under which any incorporated board of trustees acts are defined by its charter, which is of the nature of a contract with the State to do certain things. If the board is one that holds money in trust, its duties may be further defined by deeds of gift of funds accepted by it. If gifts are made without special provisions, it is understood that the donor considers himself sufficiently protected by the charter.

Now, one of the solemn obligations of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University, conferred by its charter, known to its donors, and from the beginning accepted, announced and exercised by the board itself, is the duty of filling vacancies in its membership. The recent General Conference, and now later, the College of Bishops, asked the board to delegate that function to another body, namely, the General Conference, a body not so much as named in the constituent law of the board. But, since neither the General Conference nor the College of Bishops is a civil court of Tennessee, with power either to define or to alter the provisions under which the board acts, it could not and cannot accede to this request unless first assured by a duly empowered court that such a course would not be unlawful. Its members honestly believe that it is an illegal thing, and therefore an immoral thing, for them to seek to divest themselves of a responsibility laid upon them by their charter. Their counsel advise them that the committee of lawyers appointed by the General Conference of 1906 is no more a civil court than the General Conference itself, and that the opinion of that committee could not serve as a protection for the members of the board should they violate the law.

Nashville, Tenn.

HOW AN OUTSIDER VIEWS IT.

Vanderbilt University, Tennessee, is supposed to be the property of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and as the Church has built it, and as both the Trustees of the University and the General Conference agree on this point, it may be taken for granted that the ownership of the University is vested in the M. E. Church, South. But lately there has arisen some dispute as to the control of said University. The Trustees declare that while the Church owns the University, the Trustee Board alone is morally and legally responsible for its control. The Board claims that, by the charter, the Trustee Board alone can appoint new trustees and make regulations for the government of the University; and while it admits the right of the Church to deal with University matters, it declares that such right can only be exercised through the Trustee Board. This contention the Bishops and the General Conference seem disinclined to accept, and the last General Conference in Asheville, N. C., appointed certain Trustees to fill vacancies in the Vanderbilt Trustee Board. A few days ago the gentlemen so elected presented their credentials, and were politely informed that the Board could not admit them as Trustees, as the Board claimed that it alone had the right to fill vacancies in its ranks. This means, of course, that a Board of the Church, while acknowledging technically the Church's right to control, has refused to submit to that control. The issue is a serious one, and will now probably be settled in the courts. It seems altogether a most unfortunate chapter in Methodist Church history, and ought surely to have been avoided. The Board may be right technically and legally—as to that we cannot tell—but the control of the University ought surely to rest in the Church which has created it, and not in any minor body.—The Christian Guardian.

DR. SMITH'S ENDORSEMENT.

By Mr. J. D. Barbee.

My Dear Mr. Meek: A fugitive clipping, which I suppose to be taken from the Nashville American, has fallen into my hands through the kindness of some friend. It reads as follows:

"The following letter, from Dr. Charles Forster Smith, who was for a long time a member of Vanderbilt University faculty, but now Professor of Greek in the University of Wisconsin, will be of interest to his Nashville friends. It was written to Bishop Hendrix in connection with the present Vanderbilt controversy:

"509 West Main Avenue, Knoxville, Tenn., July 10, 1910.—My dear Bishop Hendrix: I have heard of the Bishops' meeting on the Vanderbilt matter and venture to write to you concerning this controversy. I presume that you stand alone, or nearly alone, among your colleagues on the Board of Bishops, and it requires courage to stand firm under such pressure. You have been a very brave man in this junction and have commanded my increased admiration. What you and the Chancellor stand for has my unqualified approval. The University belongs to the Methodist Church, South, but it must be administered by a self-perpetuating Board of Trust, and only such a body can efficiently and safely govern it. Only resort to the courts can settle the legal question, and I am glad this resort is to be no longer delayed. If the decision should be in favor of what is called the Church side, it would be, in my opinion, a victory that would ruin the highest usefulness of the university as a seat of learning and do greater harm to the cause of Christian education and to the Methodist Church than anything that could happen.

The result of such a victory for the Church would be that Vanderbilt would become simply another little Methodist College. With the ideals and plans for the Board of Trust and Chancellor, Vanderbilt seemed destined to become a great university, creditable to the South and the nation, that would attract more and more the youth, not only of the South, but of the East and the North and the West. I have desired above all things to see some very strong Southern universities, equal to any in the land, that would restore the educational balance and keep things from getting top-heavy by reason of all the very strongest institutions of learning being north of Mason and Dixon's line. If your side wins, the Church will come, even in my day, to rejoice in your victory. I believe that you are right in your views of this case, and I am glad to believe that you have the courage of your convictions. I am sorry to differ from Bishop Hoss, whom I love as I do few men in all the world; but he is honest in his belief and I would think less of me if I did not stand by my convictions. It will surely be recognized that I have a right to express my opinion where Vanderbilt's best interests are concerned. Very truly yours,

CHARLES FORSTER SMITH.

I wish to make only two or three comments on the contents of this letter.

First: If the dominant element of the Board of Trust had in the beginning, or at any time within the past five years, come before the Church with their program and said: "Here it is; this is what we propose, and we believe it to be for the best interests of all concerned, the University and the Church, and for the following reasons," and had thereupon appealed to the judgment of the Church—that might have been "brave." Their courage has not at any time mounted to that altitude. But to seek to gain their end by stealth and indirection seems to me to wear an entirely different aspect. It is not "brave" to assume, as Dr. Smith does, that the entire College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, one alone excepted, are a company of ignoramuses. It is simply contemptible.

Dr. Smith possesses information denied to the Church, as indicated by this statement in his letter: "What you and the Chancellor stand for has my unqualified approval." What do they stand for? Is it their words or their votes? They certainly do not stand for the Church—they have simply laid down on it.

Second: It is quite refreshing to have a member of the opposition admit thus publicly that Bishop Hoss "is honest in his belief." So far as I have seen, this is the very first admission from that source that his motives would bear the scrutiny of investigation. I am moved to wonder, moreover, since Dr. Smith loves him so much, that he could not find it in his heart to grant that Bishop Hoss' course also might be described as "brave." If it be not "brave" to stand up boldly against entrenched power and influence, single-handed and alone, then I do not comprehend the meaning of the word.

Third: Must we accept the ipse dixit of these gentlemen who continually announce to us with an arrogant flourish that "the result of such a victory for the Church would be that Vanderbilt would become simply another little Methodist College"? Why do they not furnish us with a bill of particulars so as to remove all doubt from our minds? What is there about the Methodist Church that produces mildew, decay and death? If it is such a monster and its influence so fatal, we desire to know it, that we may withdraw from it before it is too late. When Bishop McTear, who during the last few years has been the object of the most unrestrained laudation from Dr. Smith, was president of the Board of Trust, with undisputed sway did they teach Methodist, Greek, Methodist Latin, Methodist mathematics or Methodist science at Vanderbilt? Do they teach these brands to-day? Can it be truthfully said that there is the slightest tincture of sectarianism at any Southern Methodist school? If so, I have never heard of it.

Dr. Smith has a queer notion of benefiting the cause of Christian education and the Methodist Church by turning its chief institution of learning over to the higher critics and other enemies. Bah!

DR. W. L. WEBER AND MANSFIELD COLLEGE.

Dear Mr. Editor: No doubt the many friends of Dr. W. L. Weber, the recently elected president of Mansfield Female College, will be delighted to learn that he has about recovered from his surgical operation and that his usual health is now a certainty. He is now in his office at Mansfield ready and anxious to correspond with any who have girls to send to college.

The Board of Trustees is, indeed, fortunate in securing the valuable services of Dr. Weber, who is, in fact, one of the leading educators in the South. No man is better equipped for the responsible work of training our young women for the Church. He is a refined Christian gentleman and a scholar. Having had years of experience in teaching in the leading colleges and being the author of several textbooks, he is especially fitted not only for teaching, but for selecting a competent faculty.

My honest conviction is that Mansfield College has bright prospects for the future. We have everything in our reach that it takes to make a "class A" college. We have splendid buildings located in the most beautiful section of the State; we have the very best teaching force; we have the girls and our Methodist people have the money. If we will bring these elements together, we can have just such an institution as our Church needs in this State.

We appeal, therefore, to every preacher, layman and alumnus of the old college, to affirm in this great work. Why not have as good a college for women here at home as can be found anywhere? You will no doubt be met with the contention that sending girls out of the State broadens them. Is it not a fact that if pupils are broadened they are broadened by their teachers? Broad teachers will give broad culture. At Mansfield we propose not only to broaden but to deepen. And is it not true that our young people need to be deepened?

Let us remind ourselves that many of our good women who are doing most for the Church and for humanity were educated at old Mansfield College. Many of the leading men in the State say, "My brother was educated there." Then come to the aid of your mother's Alma Mater and see to it that she holds her place in the history of this country.

Send the names of girls and money collected to Dr. W. L. Weber, Mansfield, La.

T. J. WARLICK.

ARE THE LABORERS WORTHY OF THEIR HIRE?

By Rev. Joseph S. Terry.

This is the most vital question that concerns the Church of God to-day: are the laborers worthy of their hire?

Surely we would not depreciate the merit of the bride of Christ, whose light illumines all nations to-day, but from the viewpoint of individuality, this question is entitled to serious consideration.

This time is at hand when every man must exercise his own thinking powers. Too much dependence upon some one else leads to unwise ends, and causes discontent. In the early part of the seventeenth century, John Wesley, when asked concerning the assignment of his parish, answered: "The world is my parish." Here we see asserted the views of an independent mind. This great man of God had a heart large enough to embrace all mankind. His views were not so narrow, and his service so small, but his convictions were executed in extending sympathy to the sons of men everywhere. The words of Christ unto his disciples, "Can ye neither curse, nor scold, nor shoe; and salute no man by the way," was the power which animated the fathers of early Methodism, who fought amidst heresy and dissension.

Let us reason together: doesn't this question, whether or not the laborer is worthy of his hire, relate to the very centers of church government? It excites no man. We cannot behold the indifference practiced by some ministers, whose business it is to look after the interests of those in less authority, and defend them in the light of Christ's imperative commands. Christ's mission in the world, was to give his life "a ransom for many," and not to appoint any man to a position on the right hand of his Father in heaven. The brightest star that ever illumined the mediæval papacy was extinguished when "simony" knocked at its door, and was ushered in. We would not brand the Church of the living God, and the circulating medium of Christian endeavor, with such a dark streak of heresy, but the warning comes to those who are called to perform the sacred duties of the same. When Christ was offered the nations of the earth by Satan, he replied: "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." This temptation has come to many a Christian toiler, but thanks be ever that the true spirit of Christ's ministry is not that of a monopoly, but it voices itself in the refusal of worldly inducements.

"The fields are white unto the harvest already," and after the laborers are sent forth by the Master, God forbid that they should prove slothful and unworthy. While the sun of righteousness shines in night and power upon the Church, let's be sober and vigilant and have an eye to the business of our King, who reigns eternally.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH

LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street

Phone, Main 535.

Church News

There are now in Jackson, Miss., five Presbyterian Sunday schools well organized and flourishing.

The Northern Baptist Church has inaugurated a movement to raise a fund of $100,000 to support its aged preachers.

Dr. John Boring, who for sixty years was a member of the Holston Conference, died at Emory, Va., on Aug. 5, at the advanced age of 81. His obsequies were conducted by Bishop Waterhouse.

The Jackson Daily News is authority for the statement that Dr. W. C. Black, whose poor health some months ago forced him to give up his charge, will soon commence to reside at Tupelo, Miss. He formerly served the First Methodist Church of that city with great acceptability.

Mississippi College, at Clinton, is to have a new $40,000 dormitory, and there is some discussion of this institution organizing a medical department at Vicksburg. Its enrollment last year was 175, and Dr. Lowry has announced that the attendance upon the next session promises to be still larger.

The English accession oath as it seems about to be finally amended only requires the king to declare himself "a faithful Protestant." If this should be the form which is adopted, it would appear to make it possible for a non-conformist to become the head of the Established Church in Great Britain. We presume, however, that if such a thing should ever happen, it will be in the far future.

Rev. Doctor J. W. Hill, of Dallas, Texas, says: "The sentiment in Texas, so far as I am able to understand it, is that we wish to know, at the earliest possible moment whether or not we have a University at Nashville. If we have, we wish our General Conference recognized and obeyed. If not, we wish to know that so we may turn our influence and patronage in another direction."

The following are said to be the latest available missionary statistics: "In all the Protestant missionary societies are at work in foreign fields. The annual combined contributions are $25,350,000. There are 5,121 ordained missionaries, 992 physicians, 2,503 men lay missionaries, 1,406 married women, 4,088 unmarried women, or a total of 19,240 foreign missionaries. There are 3,045 ordained natives and 9,915 unordained teachers, Bible women, etc. The total living baptized Christians are 2,000,000 adherents, 1,581,571. The native gifts aggregate $2,500,000."

A dispatch from Mobile, Ala., to the Commercial Appeal on Aug. the 5th says: "News reached Mobile today of the death of Rev. J. B. K. Spain, one of the most prominent ministers of the Alabama Methodist Conference. Rev. Mr. Spain died of heart failure Thursday night at Troy, Ala., where he was presiding elder of that district. Deceased was born at Pickens County, Ala., and was 55 years old. In 1909 he was transferred to Texas, where he remained four years. He leaves four children—two daughters and two sons. Mr. Spain served four years as pastor of the Government Street Methodist Church, Mobile."

Rev. Albert D. Berts, in an article in the Christian Advocate (Nashville) of last week, gives figures showing the average salary of pastors in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, for the last year was $731, while the average salary of presiding elders was $1,741. The Virginia Conference has the highest average, $1,010, while the lowest, $361, is reported by the Illinois Conference. The Alabama Conference ranks seventh in the list of thirty-nine Conferences with an average of $441, while the North Alabama is twenty-fifth with an average salary of $635. Of a total of 5,921 pastors in our Church, 3,804 receive less than $750, while 2,216 of that number were paid less than $500.—Alabama Advocate.

In a report just given out at Nashville, it is shown that during the past quadrennium $1,938,635 was collected for the foreign field by the two mission boards of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This is an increase of $487,064 over the previous quadrennium. The report states further: "The collections on the foreign field indicate a steady growth in the spirit of self-support. Four years ago the total contributions amounted to $36,750 (United States currency), while during the past year the sum of $51,886 has been reported, or an increase of $15,136. The increase in church buildings is most striking. While in 1905 there were reported 167 churches and chapels, we have 345 at the present time—an increase of 161. Parsonages to the number of 89 have been built during the four years, there now being 149, against 69 during the last quadrennium. The value of property owned by the church on the mission field has advanced to nearly two and a half million dollars, the exact figures being $2,457,484, or an increase of $1,063,323."

Bishop Hoss, in the Nashville Advocate of July last has the following to say about Professor Thomas Carter, a popular member of the Louisiana Conference and New Orleans Methodist. "And while I am writing about the Alexander, I may as well say a word about that other fine young Methodist scholar, Prof. Thomas Carter, whom I expect to be his own successor. The power of a teacher is measured by the character of his students. If he cannot raise up somebody to take his own place, he is a failure. The reputation and fruitful effect of his life and true scholarship is one of the surest marks. I have come to read everything that Professor Carter writes, especially in his deals with any of the Pacific problems, and when I have finished what he has to say, I always feel like thanking God for him in setting us a new man. And I wish that somebody would tell me why it is that out of our comparatively weak New Orleans Churches we should have such so many fine preachers, Williamson Sawyer and Evans, and the Keeners, and the Parkers, and the Carters, and Carra. The phenomenon is worth studying. Not a few of our city churches—even the smallest of them—never send a man into the ministry. There is a cause for it."

THE MEETING OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL

By Frank M. Thomas, Secretary

The Federal Council, created by the act of the General Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, met in Ocean Grove, N. J., July six and seventh, 1910. There were present from the Methodist Episcopal Church Bishop Earl Cranston, Bishop John M. Walden, Bishop Luther H. Wilson, J. F. Goughen, D.D., G. A. Reader, D.D., W. W. Evans, D.D., R. T. Miller, Hartford Crawford, and J. A. Patton. From the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Bishop A. W. Wilson, Bishop Collins Denney, W. J. Young, D.D., Frank M. Thomas, D.D., C. M. Bishop, D.D., M. L. Walton, R. S. Hyer, and W. B. Stiles. A permanent organization was effected by the election of the two senior Bishops as chairman to preside alternately, and W. W. Evans and Frank M. Thomas as secretaries. Bishop Hoss was unavoidably absent to the regret of all present. Bishop A. W. Wilson, being physically indisposed, Bishop Denney served as chairman for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, during all the proceedings.

The two days were spent in carefully considering rules and regulations for the government of the Council and the adoption of forms of procedure by which questions of local conflict can be brought before the Federal Council. In due time these rules and forms will be published for the information of both churches. Dr. T. H. Lewis, whose brilliant fraternal address at Asheville elicited such favorable comment, appeared before the Council and requested a joint conference of the two commissions with that of the Methodist Protestant Church. As both commissions had been authorized to take such action, it was decided to meet in Baltimore the first of next November, said meeting to be followed by a meeting of the Federal Council. Standing committees were named on Christian Education, Worldwide Missions, the Evangelization of the unpurged masses, and Methods of Procedure. It was earnestly recommended that in all territory occupied by both churches the Annual Conferences concerned should constitute local Commissions on Federation of not more than five members nor less than three from each Conference. The following statement was unanimously adopted and ordered published:

As representatives of the two Methodist bodies, whose General Conferences have constituted this Federal Council, and in furtherance of the objects for which this Council was created, we are impelled to advise our people and the administrative Boards concerned of our respective churches, that the first and most prolific cause of irritation and complaint tending to perpetuate the unhappy differences of the past, is found in the administration by which the two churches are in many communities brought into unwise and wasteful competition. We find that the responsibility for such administration appears to be divided between boards, bishops, district superintendents, presiding elders, and conferences. In the discharge of the duties laid upon us by our General Conferences, and in recognition of what we believe to be the fraternal spirit of the masses of our people, we most earnestly entreat our several boards, all bishops, district and mission superintendents, presiding elders and pastors, to so administer their several offices and trusts that this evil may cease. And this we do not in the interest of economy alone, but from the larger consideration to which all Christians should ever be responsive, the peace of Zion, the spiritual welfare of our people, and plain consistency with the gospel of love, committed to us by our Divine Master. We urge this thus insistently, believing that little can be done for the solution of the problems committed to us until all administrative Boards of the two Churches adopt the policy that where either church is now established in a community, the other church not being established, no appropriation shall be made by any Board of the other church to open work in that community, except

Real French Drip Coffee can not be made unless the coffee itself is prepared, blended and roasted according to the famous French method. Use

LUZIANNE COFFEE

For French Drip Coffee

For all around family use

THE REILLY TAYLOR CO.
NEW ORLEANS, U.S.A.

where said entrance shall be approved by both commissions or Federation of the Annual Conferences concerned. We therefore recommend that such administrative Boards and officers of the two churches adopt as a policy the principles herein set forth, as necessary to the well-being and helpful co-operation of the two churches.

Signed by Earl Cranston, Chairman, Collins Denney, Chairman, W. W. Evans, Secretary, Frank M. Thomas, Secretary.

WHITHWORTH COLLEGE

The president has been in personal contact with many of the public schools of the State and is placing the graduates and other students in good positions in public schools, where they are giving eminent satisfaction. In fact, the demand for teachers of our recommendation is greater than the supply. This speaks well for the literary work done at Whitworth. In the departments of special, the college has made a fine record—the art students receiving nine first prizes on this exhibit at the last State Fair.

Miss Annie Blue has just won the medal in June at the Mississippi Chautauqua. Miss Elden, our experienced teacher, is assisting Mr. Curry in his school in Chicago, this month. Mrs. Sisk, art teacher, is spending the summer in study in Chicago. Our piano, violin and voice teachers are all graduates of leading conservatories.

Miss Drake, head of the English Department, has just finished her work at the State Normal as instructor of English, having given great satisfaction.

Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb, Dean of the faculty and teacher of the college classes in Mathematics, is spending the summer in study at Chautauqua, N. Y.

The vice-president, Mr. Peters, is spending the month of August at his home in Tennessee.

The entire faculty is one of the strongest in the history of the college.

The president, at his own expense, is making improvements on the dormitories and institute to the amount of $25,000, putting new tin roofs on the dormitories, ceilings, painting, papering and calclining rooms and putting in an improved hot and cold water system. These improvements will put the dormitories in condition equal to the best in the country.

The enrollment to date is larger than usual.

New Trustees of Whitworth College are: Rev. C. W. Chasler, W. D. Davis, Rev. L. L. Roberts, Rev. G. Galloway, Rev. C. E. Emery. Re-elected for a term of four years, Rev. E. H. Mottet, D.D., Dr. J. T. Butler, E. H. Wentworth and Rev. B. F. Jones, D.D.

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

A series of five sermons on the work of the Holy Spirit.

By REV. WALTER G. HARBIN.

Price, 75 cents.

Send to CHAS. O. CHALMERS, 511 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

Secular News and Comment

On last Tuesday morning Mayor Gaynor, of New York City, was shot and dangerously wounded by a disgruntled dock employee.

Governor Mann, of Virginia, has appointed ex-Governor Claude A. Swanson to succeed the late John W. Daniel in the United States Senate. The term for which he is named will expire in 1911, but it is not believed that he will have any opposition in his candidacy for the full term following.

The Mississippi Intercollegiate Oratorical Contest took place at Crystal Springs on July 30th. The medal was won by Mr. C. T. Rand, the representative of the Agricultural and Mechanical College, of Starkville. His theme was the pertinent one of "State Immigration."

The population of Puerto Rico in 1899 was 953,243; according to the census just taken and now being tabulated, it is 1,118,012. This shows an increase during the last decade of 17.3 per cent. The largest cities on the island are San Juan, with a population of 48,716; Ponce, 35,027; Mayaguez, 16,591; and Caguas, 10,354.

Mr. James Rogers Taylor, Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department of the United States Government, has recently announced that the interior finish of the New Orleans postoffice building will be very beautiful and elegant, much of it probably being in marble and onyx. This great structure is going steadily up.

Tulane University is to have a new and modern gymnasium, with a swimming pool and all up-to-date appliances. The Stanley O. Thomas memorial donation of $60,000 will be used for its construction. It is thought that this well-equipped structure will give great impetus to the cause of athletics at this institution.

Although it is claimed that the Democratic nominee for governor in Texas is favorable to the liquor traffic, the prohibitionists have elected two-thirds of the members of the State Legislature and the passage of a measure submitting the question of a Constitutional amendment outlawing the saloon to the people is said to be assured. Whether such an amendment will carry at the polls is, of course, at this time, purely a matter of conjecture.

Governor Sanders addressed the Texas Legislature a few days since with a view to interesting the people of that State in the movement to bring the Panama Exposition to New Orleans. The whole eastern and middle sections of the United States seem to be favorable to the Crescent City as the place for the great celebration. Of late, there has been some talk of having two expositions, one in New Orleans, and the other in San Francisco.

The enlisted strength of the army during the fiscal year has been fixed approximately at 87,000 men under the arrangement of the estimates of Major Gen'l Leonard Wood, chief of staff, and approved by President Taft. Gen. Wood's plan is to use the army appropriation for soldiers and material and make reductions in other directions. The new chief of staff wants an army of fighting men equipped for business and says he is willing to make sacrifices in other ways to obtain it.

Herbert Spencer offered a characteristically original system of reckoning. He clung to the duodecimal system, mainly because twelve can be divided by three and four, as ten cannot. But he suggested that all the advantages of both systems might be combined by making twelve the basis of calculation, inventing two new digits to take the places of ten and eleven, and making twelve times twelve the hundred. Spencer scornfully remarked that the decimal system rests solely on the fact that man has ten fingers and ten toes; if he had twelve "there never would have been any difficulty."—Times-Democrat.

Mrs. Dunbar Rowland, of Jackson, assistant in the State Historical Department, at the request of the Mississippi Society of Colonial Dames, has recently prepared two very interesting historical inscriptions—one for the sun dial which will be used to mark old Fort Rosalie in the city of Natchez, the other for a bronze tablet commemorating the colonial occupancy of the territory from which Mississippi was made. The inscriptions have been forwarded by Mrs. W. B. Rhodes, president of the Mississippi Society, to the artist who has the work in charge, and when they are completed they will not fail to attract the attention of all sight-seers who may become interested in Mississippi.

The death of the Hon. John Griffin Carlisle, which occurred in New York City on July 31, removed from the stage of action a most gifted and remarkable man. The State of his nativity was Kentucky, where he was born Sept. 5, 1825. He was a member of the Lower House of Congress for thirteen years, and was Speaker of that body for six years. From 1890 to 1893 he represented the Blue Grass State in the United States Senate, and from that time to 1897 he was the Secretary of the Treasury under Grover Cleveland, of whose second administration he was the most forceful and majestic figure except the President himself. After leaving the cabinet, Mr. Carlisle engaged in the practice of law in New York, where he took high rank at the bar. As an advocate before the Supreme Court of the United States it is said he has had no superior since the day of Daniel Webster. He was buried at Covington, Ky., by the side of his wife, who was one of the noblest women that ever adorned American public life.

At the very time that thousands of relieved graduates are putting away their caps and gowns and facing the world, ready for business, similar thousands of prospective students are bending over the examination papers which will entitle them to entrance in some college or university next fall. The College Entrance Examination Board, which is the result of many years' effort on the part of educators to establish a standard in such matters, is holding its tests this week in more than 175 large cities and at various university centers in Europe. Those who are successful in passing them will be eligible to any college or university in the land. Such a system obviates much inconvenience to the inconspicuous student, since those fortunate enough to pass are certified in their ability, and have a standing no one can ignore.—Boston Herald.

THE BOARD OF MISSIONS AND THE WOMAN'S WORK OF THE CHURCH.

Much interest has been manifested in the plan of missionary operation adopted by the last General Conference. Friends of the woman's work feared that the merging of the three boards into the Board of Missions would remove all sense of responsibility from the women and thereby paralyze all energy. The facts are, that instead of removing responsibility, the union means increased opportunity and larger life for the women of the Church. They now, not only preserve the past autonomy of the auxiliaries and Conference Societies, but through their representatives have part in the general administration of missionary interests of the Church.

There is no change in methods of work, collection of dues and other moneys, or administration. If, however, two auxiliaries in a church wish to unite, the plan authorizes such a course, but there must be a distinct home and a distinct foreign department if such a union is effected. The funds must be kept separate and remitted to the different Conference treasurers. There is no change whatever in the local work of the home mission auxiliary or local department of the auxiliary. The plans of work for the city mission boards are unchanged, while the deaconess and city mission work will continue in connection with the Woman's Home Mission Department.

The department of education and supplies will be continued as a feature of the home work, but will be known in future as the Bureau of Supplies, and the Bureau of Education. Mrs. J. H. Yarbrough, Nashville, Tenn., will continue as superintendent of the Bureau of Supplies, and will superintend the sending of boxes to preachers, orphanages and home mission schools.

Where Changes are Found.

The changes made by merging the boards are found at the top, rather than at the foundation of the work. The Board of Missions is now composed of ten laymen, ten preachers, and ten women managers, and six men officers and five women officers, plus the College of Bishops. The women officers of the Board are Mrs. B. W. MacDonell, Secretary of the Home Department; Mrs. J. B. Cobb, Secretary of the Foreign Department; Miss Mabel Head, Educational Secretary; Mrs. A. L. Marshall, Editorial Secretary; and Mrs. F. H. E. Ross, Assistant Treasurer.

The women managers of the Board of Missions are Miss Gibson, Mrs. W. F. Barnum, Mrs. E. B. Chappell, Mrs. Lee Britt, Miss Davies, Miss Bennett, Mrs. L. G. Johnson, Mrs. L. P. Smith, Miss Mary Moore, Mrs. Humie Stelle. The women on the Board are selected by a Woman's Missionary Council and by it nominated to the Committee on Missions of the General Conference, for election. Of course, every department of the work comes up to the Board of Missions for consideration, but the detailed apportionment of money raised by the two departments of the woman's work, the selection, training and recommendation for appointment of deaconesses and missionaries pass first through the Woman's Mission Council.

Parsonage building is transferred to the Board of Church Extension, this to take effect after the Board Meeting of 1911. Until then, all grants or promises which are on the calendar will be met by the women in the Home Mission Department.

Who Compose the Woman's Missionary Council. Perhaps the greatest change in the missionary work, next to the admission of women to the Board of Missions, is found in the Woman's Missionary Council, which is practically a union of the two woman's boards. This Council is composed of a president, four vice-presidents, two recording secretaries, a corresponding secretary of each of the Conference Societies (Home and Foreign) and the women managers and officers of the Board. The Council will meet annually to review the work done by the women at home and abroad; plans for the ensuing year's work will be adopted, and as stated above the detailed apportionment of moneys and appointment of workers will be recommended to the Board by the Council. Educational and inspirational facts and figures will be gathered at this annual meeting for transmission to conference societies and auxiliaries.

The General Conference called a Provisional Committee to draft plans of work under the new relations. This Committee drafted some few outlines of duties for officers, but a Committee of seven was appointed for By-Laws for the government of each department of work. This Committee will not report before the first Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council in the spring of 1911.

Some Duties Outlined.

The Provisional Committee, however, gives the following instructions to the officers:

The president of the Woman's Missionary Council, Miss Belle H. Bennett, will preside at meetings, and actively advance the interests of the societies. To avoid confusion in conferences and auxiliaries the vice-presidents will not be numbered, but to each some special duty is given. These are:

Vice-president, to superintend Young People's Work, Mrs. J. E. Grubbs, Winchester, Ky.

Vice-president, to superintend the Children's Work, Mrs. J. R. Nelson, Nashville, Tenn.

Vice-president, to superintend Local Church Work, Mrs. J. W. Perry, Morristown, Tenn.

Vice-president, to superintend Relief and Retirement Funds, Mrs. H. N. McTyeire, Nashville, Tenn.

The women secretaries of the Home and Foreign Mission Departments of the Board, Mrs. R. W. MacDonell and Mrs. J. B. Cobb, serve as corresponding secretaries of their respective departments on the Council.

The Field Secretary, Miss Daisy Davies, Atlanta, Ga., will do field work, representing both the Home and Foreign Departments.

Mrs. Frank Siler, Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. Fitzgerald Parker, Nashville, Tenn., serve as recording secretaries of the Council.

The assistant treasurer, Mrs. F. H. E. Ross, has been elected since the General Conference, but will not enter upon her duties until after November. To her all funds from both Conference Societies will be sent, and she will make a detailed report of receipts and expenditures to the Woman's Missionary Council in Annual Session.

MRS. R. W. MACDONELL.
MRS. J. B. COBB.

You Need the Leaders' Hand-Book.

The Most Complete Manual of the Laymen's Movement That Has Yet Appeared.

A hundred-page book full of practical plans and valuable suggestions for speakers, leaders, and committees, together with an appendix giving an account of the Dallas Conference, a copy of the National Policy adopted at Chicago, and a digest of the action of the late General Conference on the Laymen's Movement.

Price, 25 cents per copy, silver or stamps. Order on this coupon from

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT,
M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH,

810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

Name
Address

The Centenary College of Louisiana

Fall Term will
open Sept. 14, 1910.

For Catalogues or other information write to FELIX R. HILL, President,
or
JOHN S. JOHNSTON, Dean,
SHREVEPORT, LA.
Middlesboro, Ky.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd
Manufacturer of Lumber
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Home Circle

WHAT THE MOON COULD TELL.

By Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr.

When you show yourself to men you begin in a timid way, and then you become bolder until you are seen in great splendor. Then you are ashamed of your boldness and you hide yourself again. And thus have you let your face periodically shine upon the earth since the hand of the Eternal first placed you in the heavens with the commandment to give light by the night.

During these countless ages, what have you seen when you have looked out from your hiding place in the skies? You saw the beginnings of life. When the shrubs and the trees first began to grow and the earth was first carpeted with green, when the beasts of the field, the birds of the air and the fish of the sea began to disport themselves and the creeping things of the earth to wriggle in ceaseless motion, when man first came in his innocence to behold these wonders of the Creator, when all these things passed in panoramic procession before the hosts of the heavens, you looked down from your window in God's great house and beheld them all.

But what have you seen since that time of the beginnings of things? You have seen nations rise to splendor and sink again into oblivion; you have seen empires come into being, spread themselves in every direction, and then fade, leaving but few traces of their former glory; you have seen race after race come on the stage of the world's action, play its part, make its mark, and then pass on to make place for others. You have seen men engaged in deadly conflict, crushing the life out of each other for the sake of power, of fame, or of gain. You have marked man's weak and halting efforts to penetrate the mysteries of the universe and have seen him advance so slowly from his earliest stage to his present position. You have seen him adorn himself and strut in the pride of life, glorying in his achievements, or in his possessions, or in something that is equally as perishing. You have seen men commit dark and bloody deeds when they said that it was night and that no man saw, but you saw.

You saw the tragedy of the ages when the Son of God was by man's sin made to hang upon the cross. You saw this same Savior come forth from the tomb when the Roman guard could not see. You saw the joy of the disciples when he came to them in the upper room and comforted them there. You saw when the martyrs spilled their blood on the sands of the arena and when they lighted Nero's gardens with their burnings. All this did you see, and now you see, too, the growth and the advancement of the hosts of God. Who can tell all that you have seen? You cannot tell it yourself because you cannot speak to us in the language of man. But suppose that you could, would you not also tell us that what you have seen is as nothing when compared to what has been seen and is seen by the great Searcher of all secrets? If you could speak, would you not warn men that they are indeed compassed about by a great cloud of witnesses and that the most secret act is seen by the Greatest in the universe and by a multitude that is by far greater than that whose restless feet still harass the earth?

Rayne, La.

ODD FACTS ABOUT TURTLES.

It has been said that the turtle, like the whale, has no other enemy than man, in as much as both the little creature and the big pursue their various ways in practical immunity from harm and the fear of sudden death.

In many ways the turtle is one of the strangest of living things. Whales must come to the surface frequently to breathe, and it is pretty well known what they feed upon.

The seal cannot remain beneath the sea nearly so long as the whale, and his food is very well known; but the turtle, in all his varieties, in all his ways, is a most mysterious animal. It does not, indeed, seem to matter to him whether he stays beneath the surface for an hour or for a week, nor does it trouble him to spend an equal time on land if the need arises.

Your turtle is neither fish, flesh, nor fowl, yet his flesh partakes of the characteristics of all three. Eating seems as mere superfluity with him, since for weeks at a time he may be headed up in a barrel, with the bung out, and emerge, after his long fast, apparently none the worse for his enforced abstinence from food, from light, and almost from air.

In the whole category of animal organisms there is none so tenacious of life as the turtle. Injuries that would instantly be fatal even to fish leave the turtle apparently undisturbed, and his power of staying off death is nothing short of marvelous.

Just so soon as a baby turtle emerges from the egg, off he scurries down to the sea. He has no one to teach him, no one to guide him. In his curious little brain there is implanted a streak of caution based upon the fact that until a certain period in his life his armor is soft and no defense against hungry fish, and he at once seeks shelter in the tropical profusion of the gulf-weed, which holds within its branching fronds an astonishing abundance of marine life. Here the young turtle feeds unmolested while his armor undergoes the hardening process.

Whatever the young sea-turtle eats and whatever he eats it—facts not generally ascertained—something is certain, it accretes with him immensely. He leads a pleasant sort of life, basking in the tropical sun and cruising idly in the cool depths.

Once he has attained the weight of twenty-five pounds, which usually occurs within the first year, the turtle is free from all danger. After that no fish or mammal, however ravenous, however well armed with teeth, interferes with the turtle.

When once he has withdrawn his head from its position of outlook into the folds of his neck between the two shells, intending devourers may struggle in vain to make an impression upon him.—Harper's Weekly.

CARD PLAYING.

Some time since we were seated at the breakfast table in a certain hotel with two commercial travelers who were engaged in discussing a game of cards in which they had been engaged the night before—the first game, one of them said, he had played in about fifteen years. Before his marriage she had played cards a good deal, so he said, but having married a Methodist preacher's daughter, he deemed it improper to keep up the practice, and therefore had entirely quit the game. The conversation turned on the practice of women playing, and while one of them still kept up the practice, both admitted it to be a very foolish practice for women. Both admitted that many women of high social standing played for stakes—not only for the ordinary prize offered (which, after all, is a stake), but put up money on the game and literally gambled.

Whether this latter statement is true we are not prepared to say, but if the social columns of our city dailies are to be trusted, many women, and some of them Methodists, play for prizes—some of them quite costly, too. Whether this in the eyes of the law is gambling is a question of some dispute, but in the eyes of morals it cannot be successfully disputed. If one will take the trouble to investigate a little, or, if that is not desirable, to read the police records, he will find that in some low dive in the city some low negroes or low whites are caught playing a game of cards for a stake of two or three dollars; more or less, and "run in" by the police, charged with gambling. The same night, in a fashionable home out in the best residence portion of the city, is a card party given by Mrs. Goldbutz, where the stake is a fifty-dollar cut-glass vase, and the next morning the papers announced it as the most brilliant social event of the season and tell us with a flourish that the prize was won by Miss Silversmith. Now, if it is gambling to play cards for two or three dollars, why is it not gambling to play cards for a cut-glass vase worth fifty dollars? Will some one be good enough to tell us?

There is some difference in the two games that any one can see. In the first place, the people who played in the first game were vulgar and coarse. The house was a mere shack down in the rough district of the city. The table on which they played was perhaps just an old box or the head of a barrel. The light was a smoky old lamp. In short, the whole thing was common and cheap, but it was the best they could do. And they gamblers because they are poor? And if the game is innocent, have they not a right to such innocent amusement as they can afford? In the second game the house is a brownstone front. The people are cultured and refined. The table is an old mahogany, the light is a blazing chandelier. The floor is covered with the finest Brussels, the wine sparkles in the glasses, and servants answer every call. In short, everything is pleasing because they can afford it. Are they immune because they are rich? Does kissing go by favors? The game is exactly the same, and is played with the same kind of cards. Yet one set pays a fine in the police court, and the other is written up in the paper as a most brilliant social set. Morally, we cannot see any difference in the two affairs. If one is wrong, the other is. If one is innocent, so is the other. If one set are gamblers, so are the others. We cannot split hairs in morals quite as fine as that.

To the Methodists who chafe to read this let it be said with all possible emphasis: The best people do not play cards. Those who have had experience with card-playing Methodists know that as Church members they are of little account. You can find no family altars in a card-playing home. Such members are not to be found at the prayer meeting, nor are they of any service in a revival. Besides, a woman who plays cards has not the highest sense of refinement. We are writing after many years of observation, and know whereof we write.

The following plea against the practice of card-playing is from the heart of a pastor who feels the blight of it amongst his own people, and the plea could be duplicated in many places. If Church members respect their pastor's advice and counsel, they should listen to such a plea.

"I have seen from twenty to forty of the elect ladies, going to the card parties two or three times a week, and for hours their time is taken in playing the game. Often dissatisfaction and hard feelings follow the award of the prize, and the spirit of rivalry leads to extravagant affairs, which some who are in debt to the club can ill afford.

It is too great a waste. These good women owe it to their families and to the Church and to the communities to give their energy to better things. The call is to a service of altruism which is Christ-like in spirit, and which, to any way of thinking, is more noble than the constant grind of selfish pleasures growing out of card indulgences. If the women of this city would give the time and energy that are spent in playing cards to the Church in consecrated service, the entire community would feel the effect of it at once. It would be appreciated, too.

I knew of a family who were given to cards in their home. In the family there were two daughters and three sons. I have had serious conversation with the mother about it. Her argument was like this: "We will let the boys at home, and by this method we will make home happy and pleasant."

"The oldest son gambled his money away in a saloon, and then in a fit of desperation, put up a $1,000 diamond ring which was given to his mother when she became engaged to his father. All kinds of offers have been made to buy it back, but to no avail. The wife of a saloon keeper wears this ring today. The other boys indulge in poker, and while not downright gamblers, the odds are against them. For sixteen years, I have observed very carefully card playing, and it is a very dangerous example. My appeal is for the intelligent people of this city to suit it. For your husband's sake quit it; for your children's sake quit it; for your Church's sake quit it; for your own soul's welfare quit it; for the sake of the young people quit it."—Midland Methodist.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER.

Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co.
INCORPORATED.

FLESH WOUNDS

Whether Cuts, Bruises or Burns cannot and will not inflame if treated promptly with

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

The cooling effect stops the pain at once—and a prompt cure, without swelling or suppuration, will follow in each instance.

A bottle in the house is your best safeguard against accidents.

All druggists 25 and 50 cts.

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic.
ASK ANY ONE WHO HAS EVER USED IT

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.
OFFICE: 111 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Jordan, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulton, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murray, Rev. W. W. Woodard, Rev. H. S. Sprague.

Editorial.

SELECTING A COLLEGE.

A perplexing problem confronts many parents at this season. It is that of selecting a school for their sons and daughters who have arrived at a time in life when they must go away from home for further educational instruction. The question is, indeed, a grave one, and well deserves painstaking and prayerful consideration. The critical period of life is that intervening between the years of sixteen and twenty-one. Character is then in the process of rapid formation, and deep and lasting impressions are easily made. Every consideration demands that the influences surrounding youth at such a time should be pure and wholesome.

Of course, no school is worthy of being patronized where the work of instruction is not thorough and well done. Life furnishes but one opportunity for obtaining an education, and to deprive a boy or girl of that by placing them where worthless methods of teaching and training are in vogue is little short of criminal. No church should presume to ask its people to do this on the ground of denominational loyalty.

Another point which should be searchingly acquired into is the moral and religious atmosphere of an institution. The importance of this cannot be overstated. Our ideals either make or mar us, and these are largely formed during our college days. Multiplied thousands of young people receive the first downward impulse at our educational centers. In this respect the Church schools have a great advantage over those maintained by the State or private benefactions. They exalt Christianity, the Bible is in them, not as a matter of suzerainty, but because it is believed to be helpful and necessary. The casual observer may see little difference between the secular and Christian institution of learning, but there is a vast difference notwithstanding. There is to the physical eye no perceptible distinction between the atmosphere of the mountain and the marsh, and yet in the one there is life, and in the other, death. The silent, invisible forces that touch young men and women are often among the most potent and permanent in their effects.

As far as is possible, Methodist people should patronize our Methodist academies and colleges. They are equal to the best in the land in the character of the work done, and none surpass them as places of nurture for Christian experience and character. Surely fathers and mothers should count it a privilege to have their children under the tutelage of the Church which has so greatly blessed and enriched their own lives. Indeed, to send them elsewhere is to run the risk of their alienation from the noble faith that we cherish, and of losing them to other denominations in the coming years. This has long been a large source of leakage to Southern Methodism, and it is high time our people were learning to stop it.

DR. WINTON TO THE RESCUE.

In another column we publish a communication from Dr. G. B. Winton, formerly editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate, entitled, "The Vanderbilt Board of Trust." It is not our purpose to reply in full to this effusion of the gentleman who has written so much concerning the Vanderbilt situation, but only to make two or three brief observations upon it.

The correspondent referred to is the Hon. W. W. Magruder, of Starkville, Miss., a literary graduate of the Agricultural and Mechanical College of Mississippi and a law graduate of the University of that commonwealth. He is an attorney of high rank, and has served with distinction in the State Senate. We mention these facts that our readers may know to what Dr. Winton is undertaking to reply, and may believe his article published some weeks ago, if not days ago.

In the course of his statement, Dr. Winton says, "Now, one of the solemn obligations of the Board of Trust of Vanderbilt University, conferred by the charter known to the donors, and from the beginning accepted, approved, and exercised by the Board itself, is the duty of filling vacancies in its membership. If this right is so plainly conferred, it is the charter right, not passing strange that many of the ablest men of the Church, among them Bishop Ross, have not been able to discover it therein. It is not remarkable that it was overlooked by the first able lawyers who constitute the Vanderbilt Commission." When attorneys of such eminence have reached a contrary conclusion, is it not rather surprising for a layman to make an affirmation so sweeping and dogmatic?

Again Dr. Winton says, "We are asked to delegate that function, the electing of trustees, to a body not so much as named in the constituent law of the Board." It is true that the name of the General Conference does not appear in the charter, but the names of the Annual Conferences that founded the institution are written all over that instrument. And did not members of the Board of Trust of the University importune these Conferences to cede their rights to the General Conference? And have they not said that whatever powers and functions they originally had, were acquired by that body? Then, what sort of logic is it that now undertakes to set up such a plea as this is it fair and just when these Conferences were importuned to transfer their rights and were assured that they would be conserved in the great law-making body of Methodism, for these same gentlemen, now when that body seeks to exercise what it conceives to be the acquired powers, to argue that it ought not to do so because its name did not originally appear in the charter? Such a contention would be regarded as astonishing, if it had come from any other source than from a member of the present Vanderbilt Board of Trust.

The Doctor refers to the weight of this obligation as a burden. Should not this constrain him to conserve the rights of the Church as well as those of the donors? If his attitude is judicial and unbiased, as he would have us believe, why is it that wherever he has appeared he and his associates have in every instance resolved in against the Church? That whenever a decision has weakened the authority of the Church in the institution they have at once acquiesced in, and that whenever it has strengthened the authority of the Church they have invariably challenged it? He speaks of being restrained by the law of Tennessee. If that is what has kept him and his associates from acceding to the demands of the Church, they should be willing to accept the primary verdict in the impending litigation. If a court of Tennessee should decide in favor of the Church, they should at once acquiesce in the decision without waiting a further legal fight. Are they willing to agree to that?

But once more, Dr. Winton says, "His members honestly believe that it is an illegal thing, and therefore, an immoral thing, to direct themselves as a responsible body upon them." Does he believe that Bishop Wilson, in order to see the trustees elected by the General Conference and resigning from the Board of Trust, has been guilty of immorality? Such would clearly seem to be the logic of the gentleman's position. If this is his view and he will convince us of the correctness of it, we will join him in a movement to arrest the character of our senior Bishop, for certainly one holding so high and honored a place in the Church should not be allowed to go unchallenged when guilty of immoral conduct.

SNEERING AT MR. BRYAN.

There is a disposition in some quarters to sneer at William J. Bryan because of the failure of the Democratic State Convention in Nebraska to adopt his country-oppian plan of dealing with the liquor traffic. But this making merry over his defeat is unseemly and wholly out of place. It by no means follows, as some would have it appear, that the influence of this distinguished citizen will hereafter be a negligible factor in American politics. No man was ever yet weaker because of a fearless advocacy of a great moral issue. It was Grover Cleveland who said, "No question is settled until it is settled right." True greatness is not contingent upon uniform world success. Mr. Roosevelt, perhaps the most eminent living citizen of the planet, recently failed to secure at the hands of the New York Legislature direct primary elections for the people of that commonwealth. Is he less in this account in any true sense less great or majestic than he was before? He is truly great who has a great mind, a great heart, a great conscience, and stands bravely for great principles, whether they are triumphant or defeated. Mr. Bryan will be remembered when his petty detractors have been forgotten, and when his brilliant biography is written, the quality that will shine with the brightest light will be his sterling and incorruptible moral character. This was the glory of Gladstone and it will also be the unfading glory of the great American tribune.

AN EXPLANATION IN ORDER.

We have seen it stated a number of times within the past few weeks that "the Methodist Church should control Vanderbilt University. It will shrink into the proportions of a small college, but that if the Board of Trust should govern it, it will expand into a commanding institution of far-reaching influence. The gentlemen who have made this sweeping affirmation, owe it to all concerned to be more explicit—to point out plainly, so that all can see it, what it is in Church management that is to be dwarfed and destroyed, and what it is in an independent government that develops, enlarges, and makes prosperous. As Mr. Barber has expressed it in his discussion of Dr. Smith's letter to Bishop Hendrix, they should unfold their program in sufficient detail for the Methodist public to understand and properly consider it.

Is it because it would make it possible to have the professions, pensioned by the Carnegie Foundation, that these advocates of an undenominational policy think that regime would be conducive to greater prosperity? Do they favor throwing off the authority of the Church to the humiliating extent necessary to have the faculty of the University become the beneficiaries of that fund? Or is it because they believe an independent government would bring larger general donations from the millionaires of the North, that they think it more efficacious and desirable? Are they for the mere sake of money willing to have the institution repudiate all real connection with the Church? Would they have us count dollars, no matter how acquired, a more valuable asset in the work of education than the counsel and Christian teaching and influence of Southern Methodism? Would they have us abandon the attitude of manly self-reliance and fall upon our knees before the modern money kings, abjuring the Church of the Lord Jesus Christ, and lifting aloft itching palms in supplication? Let these gentlemen cease to speak in glittering generalities, and tell us plainly what they mean and what they want.

And if an independent management is better for a university, why is it not better for a college? If it would make Vanderbilt a better and more useful institution, why would it not in proportion do the same thing for Millsaps, Trinity, Emory, and the Southwestern? Why not let independent boards have control of all our educational work, and the Church cease to exercise any governmental influence in connection with it? Such is manifestly the wise course to pursue if these gentlemen are right in their position.

NOT CONNECTED WITH OUR CHURCH.

We have been asked a number of times whether Mr. W. A. White, a representative in the Mississippi Legislature from Prentiss County, and who has lately been considerably before the public as a member or minister of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. We are reliably informed that he is not connected with our denomination in any way whatever, but that he belongs, or did belong, to the Methodist Protestant Church, a wholly different organization. We mean to reflection upon Mr. White. We know nothing about the charges which have been made against him in the secular papers. We are only sure our information as to which we think our people and the general public are justly entitled.

DR. W. P. BARTON DEAD.

Just as we are about to close our forms for the press, we are in receipt of a marked copy of the Commercial Appeal containing the following sad announcement:

Funeral services over the remains of the late Dr. W. P. Barton, of Hillsboro, Miss., who died Thursday morning at his home near Bunkum, will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock. The active pallbearers will be G. W. Rutland, John Dickinson, J. A. Heard, J. C. Gilbert, W. S. Goodwin and Dr. J. L. Andrews. The honorary pallbearers appointed are J. W. Eldridge, S. T. Humber, W. D. Smith, S. P. Alexander, Frank McNally, J. O. Burch, Henry S. Sharp, J. C. West. All the honorary pallbearers are residents of Choctaw County, Miss., where Dr. Barton lived. Interment will take place in Elmwood Cemetery at 3 o'clock.

More than we have words to express we deplore the early and apparently untimely death of this noble man. His father was the Rev. W. P. Barton, one of the choicest and saintliest preachers that ever wrought in North Mississippi, and he was a worthy son of the honored sire whose name he bore. As a physician he ranked with the best in the Magnolia State, and was well-nigh idolized in the community in which he practiced. His devotion to the Church was unwavering, and in all of its enterprises he was joyously interested. He was generous, kind-hearted, and a true Christian gentleman. His life was an open book, and when the last chapter was written and the volume closed, we are sure that there was not a single page upon a single page. Our Delta Methodism has lost a burning and a shining light, and stricken a faithful friend whose hand was ever stretched forth to bless. May the dear light upon him," and may the flowers bloom sweetly above his dust in beautiful Elmwood, where he will sleep until the Master comes!

"AL-E-THE-IA."

This interesting story from the facile pen of Mrs. Martha Carolyn Keller Miller, of Hammond, La., is just from the press. It is a neat little volume of eighty-nine pages, well printed and attractively bound in paper. It is dedicated to Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Crow Girard, Hon. H. H. White, Col. I. D. Wall, and Dr. J. W. Lea. The author in her modest introduction says: "My object in writing this truthful story is two-fold. I desire to help our Ruston Orphanage, containing orphans, some of whom the saloon made destitute. My greater desire is to help the cause of prohibition, and thereby stop the wreck of human lives and the creation of orphans by drunkenness." The scene of the story is South Louisiana, and presumably, a part of it, at least, in New Orleans. People living to high purpose and seeking to bless and uplift humanity are brought into sharp contrast with those living selfish and empty lives and seeking to achieve meretricious success. The blighting influence of intemperance is graphically portrayed. The writer is gifted in the art of description, and her style is fluent and graceful. The interest in the narrative is sustained throughout, and having begun it, one is disinclined to stop reading until the end is reached. The work is thoroughly creditable in every respect, and deserves a wide circulation. Written for a reformatory and benevolent purpose, it is calculated to do much good, and we sincerely hope that it may prove instrumental in blessing many hearts and homes. Price, postpaid, 25 cents. Address Mrs. C. C. Miller, Hammond, La.

PERSONAL.

Six of the presiding elders of the Mississippi Conference attended the recent Mid-Year Meeting of the Board of Missions at Hazlehurst.

Rev. R. B. Downer is visiting relatives at Bowerton, Miss. He is burdened in spirit for a great revival throughout the Church, and is earnestly praying for it.

Rev. E. L. Hillman, a local preacher, has been appointed by Bishop Mouzon to the pastorate at Montrose in place of Rev. W. A. Betts, who was recently released from that charge.

Rev. C. N. Guice, of Summit, has lately assisted Rev. W. W. Graves at Homewood and Rev. A. M. Broadfoot at Lena, Miss., in meetings. He is a most effective worker in a revival.

Rev. J. W. Thompson, of Pachuta, Miss., has just closed two good meetings: one at McGovern's Chapel, conducted by Rev. G. S. Harmon, and the other at Portorico, conducted by Rev. C. C. Griffin.

We heartily congratulate Rev. and Mrs. James V. Bennett upon the arrival in their home at Auburn, Miss., on July 30th of a fine boy. May a favoring Providence watch over the little one and make him a great blessing to the happy parents!

Rev. R. A. Sibley, Jr., is conducting a revival at Pleasant Valley, in which the preaching is being done by Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Vicksburg; Dr. Bethea, local elder, is with these brethren, lending a hand in the work and enjoying old-time friendships.

Hickory Flat, Miss., has recently enjoyed a great revival, conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Jones, and Evangelist W. D. Bass. The services were held under the Corinth District tent, and there were fifty conversions and thirty-one additions to the church.

Bishop Murrah has appointed Rev. B. T. Crews, formerly of the Bossier Circuit, to the Donaldsonville work in place of the Rev. H. N. Harrison, who has been chosen to a chair in Mansfield College. Brother Crews will take charge of his new pastorate on September 1.

Mrs. C. C. Miller, of Hammond, La., writes: "The dedication sermon of the Methodist Church at Ponchatoula was preached last Sunday by Bishop Murrah. It was a strong and masterful argument, delivered in clear and impressive tones. Every word was distinctly heard."

We are indebted to Capt. H. H. Estes, of Greenwood, Miss., for the renewal of his subscription until 1911 and commendatory words. We have known this honored brother and held him in high esteem since boyhood. He has long been a recognized force in North Mississippi Methodism.

The New Orleans Epworth League Union held its monthly meeting at the Parker Memorial Church on Tuesday evening of this week. After the business session was over, the visitors were entertained with an appropriate program of exercises, and tempting refreshments were served.

Rev. R. P. Neblett, the energetic pastor of the Second Church, Columbus, Miss., has been attending the Training Institute for Sunday School Workers at Monteagle, Tenn. Dr. H. M. Hamill is the dean of this excellent organization which meets annually, and Brother Neblett is the secretary.

Rev. W. J. Wood, of Paris, Miss., writes: "We are moving on smoothly on the Paris Circuit. We are just beginning our revival meetings. I will do some work in behalf of the Advocate." Thank you brother; we need, and shall greatly appreciate, your assistance. Such assurances encourage us.

We regret to learn that Mrs. T. B. Holloman continues to lack robust health. She is at this time resting at the home of her brother, Mr. Millsaps, of Hazlehurst. Brother Holloman has just returned to Moss Point after a visit to her. We trust that with the passing of the hot season she will speedily regain her accustomed strength and vigor.

Writing from New Iberia, La., under date of the 6th inst., Rev. K. W. Dodson says: "We had the largest congregation last Sunday that we have ever had in this place, and the largest prayer meeting of our pastorate here last Wednesday evening. Everything is moving on nicely." We are rejoiced to hear of our brother's growing success in his work.

Rev. R. A. Davis is meeting with encouragement at Bienville, La., though he finds some difficulty in traveling the charge, as there are ten appointments on it and he has no horse or conveyance. He recently held a good meeting at Burk Place, Rev. J. B. Williams doing most of the preaching. The church was graciously revived, and there were nine accessions.

In renewing her subscription to the Advocate, Mrs. Emma Stebe, of Crystal Springs, remarks: "I love the paper. I have taken it in my home ever since I have been keeping house. And since my husband has retired from the drug business, he always reads with interest the editorials and secular news, saying, 'I get it more correct from the Advocate.'"

Dr. J. E. Walmsley, of Millsaps College was in the city last Saturday, and honored our office with a call. He spoke encouragingly of the outlook for a fine opening at Millsaps, and stated that Dr. Smith, the new pastor of the First Methodist Church at Jackson, has made a most favorable beginning. As a teacher of history, Professor Walmsley ranks with the best in the South.

Miss Annie Carlton, of Thomasville, Ala., kindly calls our attention to the fact that Professor Frank Seay is a son of ex-Governor Seay, of Alabama, not of Texas, and that he was reared in the goodly town of Greensboro in that State. We gladly make this correction. Our personal was gleaned from the secular press, which helps us immensely, but occasionally leads us astray.

The Sunday School Association of Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana will begin its second session at the Seashore Campground on Thursday of this week and continue through August the 15th. An excellent program has been arranged, and the occasion promises to be one of much interest. Reduced rates will be given on all the railroads; a registration and admission fee of $1 will be required, and board and lodging may be had at from $9 to $12 for the term.

In an appreciated communication to the editor, that faithful pastor and noble Christian gentleman, Rev. D. W. Babb, says: "We pray for your continued prosperity." That is as it should be. Let the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi pray for the Advocate. Prayer is an important factor in every worthy undertaking, and Tennyson was right when he said more things are wrought by it than the world dreams of.

We were pleased to have Rev. P. H. Howse, of Carriere, Miss., call at our sanctum a few days since. Brother Howse is in the evangelistic work, and was just out of a good meeting with Rev. George D. Anders of Purvis, in which there were six accessions and the church was greatly revived. He left New Orleans for Baker, La., where he has gone to assist Brother Sweeney in a series of services at Deerford and Black Creek.

Rev. J. A. Bowen, the pastor at Ensley, Ala., writes: "On August the 28th Bishop Kilgo will preach two sermons for us and lay the corner-stone of our beautiful church, which is now ready for the roof. We invited Bishop McCoy to take an equal part with Bishop Kilgo in these exercises, and he would do so, but for the fact that other duties will prevent. We are having a fine revival. Rev. E. R. Smoot, of Greenwood, Miss., is assisting me. His singing is great."

Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Gulfport, has been aiding some of the brethren in evangelistic services. He was with Brother Broadfoot at Oak Grove and Harpersville, where he preached the Word effectively and delivered a couple of helpful addresses on the mission work of the Church. He also assisted Pastor Graves in a meeting in the home community of the father of Dr. J. M. Weems, who is in the ninety-sixth year of his age. He reports much good accomplished at all of these points.

In a letter to this office, Rev. J. W. Campbell, of Fayette, Miss., states that the boll weevil is master of the situation in his section, and that the outlook is gloomy. The Advocate sympathizes with its stricken friends, and cherishes the hope that the coming of brighter days will not be long delayed. That this pest is a thing which leaves ruin in its wake there is no sort of doubt, and it behooves the people to prepare for its approach. It will likely infest the entire cotton belt in a few years.

It was recently our great pleasure to spend a night in the hospitable home of Mr. J. B. Streater, at Black Hawk, Miss. A nohler, truer layman is not to be found in Southern Methodism. We doubt if there is a better Sunday school superintendent in the Magnolia State. We were pleased, but not surprised, to find Brother Streater in accord with the General Conference on the Vanderbilt question, to which institution he gave $250, when funds were being raised for its establishment. Sister Streater, whose health has been somewhat impaired for two or three years, had been under special treatment for some weeks and was looking much stronger than usual. We trust that she will continue to improve until she is quite herself again.

LET THE CHURCH SHOW APPRECIATION.

Dear Doctor Meek: Let me thank you for the tribute so happily bestowed in your editorial, 28th of July, entitled, "A True Hero."

Unmistakably there is the man "whom the King delighteth to honor." He and his household will be crowned with glory in the judgment. But why should the Church not share the kingly sentiment and place beforehand the laurel of brotherly praise and support, whereby to cheer the noble shepherd oft distraught? Serving "Hardscrabble Circuit" is no small affair, and taxes to the utmost tension brain and heart and body of the hero and his heroine.

Why should not the Mission Board of the Conference make provision for meeting with business promptitude the quarterly assessment made for the men serving missions? The Foreign Mission Board borrows the necessary amount and regularly sends a full check to the missionary. The interest on the money would not amount to much and might be readily "made up" at Conference. Some Conferences early in the year take up this collection and provide for at least prompt settlement in full the first three quarters.

But is there no way to get the members of "Hardscrabble Circuit" to also do the royal and brotherly thing by their heroic shepherd? Suppose the presiding elder should make them his special care, and by personal visitation and fraternal correspondence undertake to instruct them touching certain duties toward their pastor, who cannot appeal to them in his own behalf? As an expert agriculturist, he (the presiding elder) should give careful attention early to that part of the farm needing heroic treatment whereby to have it in readiness to receive along with the rest of the ground the planted seed. A word from the "elder" goes a long way even on the humblest pastorate. No doubt of that; and he should magnify his office herein by all means.

The Laymen's Missionary Movement was, we imagine, raised up to meet such a crying need as this. What a wonderful degree of profit every way would certainly result if these godly and zealous brethren should train their skill upon this part of the Lord's heritage and "bring up" to better yield the unpromising and "poor" land. Of course, it will require patience and painstaking effort in personal endeavor. But just think of the advantage secured if only one of the members of "Hardscrabble Circuit" shall receive an uplift of the intellectual and spiritual kind needed for "strengthening his brethren" on the charge. It is surely worth while.

Moreover, brethren, let us consider that tacitly, if not so "nominated in the bond," the Church as a corporation promises to her ministry an adequate maintenance with honor while in her service. Our Lord underwrites for the Church after that tenor certainly. And, if one of the least of these "brethren of mine" shall be found unduly in distress financially, it impeaches those in authority somewhere. Men have lived with undeniably painful economy and suffered hardship that is a shame and will be recognized and denominated such at the judgment. Let us be "good Samaritans" and relieve these men and cheer them practically and fraternally. There is danger of our playing the part of the Priest and Levite in sinful manner.

With sincere good-will, I subscribe myself,
A MISSISSIPPI METHODIST.

READY FOR WORK.

Dear Brother Meek: The condition of my health has improved very much, and my physician gives me the assurance that I can now engage in revival work.

If any of my brethren desire my help in meetings, they may correspond with me either at Alexandria or Rayne, La.

Thanking you any my brethren for prayers and interest in my behalf, I am yours in the work.

A. R. HOFFPAUR

Alexandria, La.

FOR SALE:—A sixty-dollar Stereopticon Outfit with fifty views, $30. A twenty-dollar Pope Bicycle, $12. A six-dollar Lawton Simplex Printer, ten by eight, 100 copies written matter, $2.50. A printing press and job outfit, $20. A fourteen-dollar writing desk, with five drawers and cabinet, $8. A $400 piano for $250. Shipped at buyer's expense. Box 25, Montrose, Miss.

Next Time You Drive Into Town you'll be waiting for a good drink. Something to refresh your throat to stay quenched.

DRINK

Coca-Cola

No matter how thirsty you are or how tired you are or how particular you are, you'll like Coca-Cola because it has that dry spot—refreshing and tickles the palate all the way down.

Delicious - Refreshing - Wholesome

Send for Our Free Booklet "The Truth About Coca-Cola." Tells all about Coca-Cola, what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial.

THE COCA-COLA CO.
Atlanta, Ga.

Wherever you see an arrow think of Coca-Cola

VISIT MINERAL WELLS

FOR HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND

WEST TEXAS

For
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS.
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE
DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,

General Passenger Agent,
DALLAS - - - - - TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a. m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS,
WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves 7:30 p. m.

FOR
NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW
ON SALE.

Bowlden
CHURCH & SCHOOL BELLS
Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, MONTVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

Don't Wear a Truss
FREE
STUART'S PLAS-TO-PADS are different from the ordinary truss, being made of soft adhesive, responsive to both the pressure in place without straps, buckles or springs—cannot slip, so causes chafe or discomfort around the pelvic zone. The most delicate cases cured in the privacy of the home. Thousands have successfully treated themselves without hindrance from work. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—disappears. Prices of cure is nominal, so no further cost for trusses. We prove what we say by sending you one of Plastro-Pads absolutely FREE. Write TODAY. Address—PLASTO-LINIMENT CO., Box 127, St. Louis, Mo.

THE PROGRAM OF THE ECUMENICAL METHODIST CONFERENCE.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, secretary of the American executive committee of the Ecumenical Methodist Conference of 1911, as well as of the American executive committee of the World Missionary Conference, took advantage of his presence at the Edinburgh Conference to confer with the eastern section of the Ecumenical Methodist commission in London concerning points of difference as to the program prepared by the American section, with happy results; as the following statement of the London Methodist Recorder of July 7, shows:

"On Tuesday Sir Robert W. Perks, treasurer of the executive committee for the eastern section, invited the members of the committee to a luncheon at the Charing Cross Hotel, to meet the Rev. Dr. Carroll of New York, the secretary of the executive commission of the western section. Owing to previous engagements, many members of the committee, including the president and the secretary of Western Conference, were unable to attend. Representatives of most of the Methodist Churches were present. After luncheon Sir Robert Perks expressed the pleasure of the committee in seeing Dr. Carroll and having the opportunity of taking counsel with him in regard to the Conference. He was followed by the secretary, the Rev. James Chapman, and the Rev. Dr. Scott Lidgett. Several points of interest were raised, especially as to the duration of the Conference, the scope of the program and the advisability of discussing certain questions in sectional meetings.

The Rev. Dr. Carroll, in the course of an interesting address, assured the committee of the warm welcome which the delegates from the eastern section would receive in America, dwelt on the suitability of Toronto as the Conference town and stated the views of the American commission on the points which had been considered.

In concluding, Sir Robert Perks assured Dr. Carroll that the eastern committee, having placed their views before the western commission, would heartily consent to any arrangement which the latter might find it desirable to make. On one matter there was general consent, that the Conference should frankly face all the living issues of the age, in so far as they affect the organization and work of the Methodist Churches. A suggestion was made, which found favor with all, that the Ecumenical Conference should issue an address to the Methodist Churches throughout the world, setting forth the conditions of the present age and the opportunities and obligations which they involve to universal Methodism, and that this address should, as far as possible, be read on a given Sunday in our churches all over the world, as a symbol of union and a call to action.

Bishop J. W. Hamilton, chairman of the American program committee, was prevented, to the regret of all, from being present by an engagement on the continent.

CAMP MEETING NOTICE.

The Cleveland (Miss.) Holiness Association will hold their fifth annual Camp Meeting on the association's grounds, Aug. 11-21. These grounds are located three miles north of Cleveland, Miss. We have for our human leader, Dr. Beverly Carradine, once a member of the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences, but now a resident of St. Louis, Mo. Prof. Hemp Sewell, of Atlanta, Ga., will lead the host in sons. We are expecting great things at the hands of the Lord and sincerely desire the earnest prayers of the Advocate family. For further information write R. J. Collins, P. O. Cleveland, Miss.; R. L. Beavers, Secretary, Cleveland, Miss.

FOR BRASS SIGNS, BANK FIXTURES AND ALL METALS USE

QCKWORK METAL POLISH

AT LAST! - a metal polish that does the work quick, saves drudgery, makes all metals look new. Try this new polish that is absolutely free from acid or grit.

IN 25c. TINS EVERYWHERE

Manufactured by Kettler Brass Mfg. Co., Houston Texas.

Every Druggist Knows

and thousands of users know that

MINARD'S LINIMENT

"KING OF PAIN"

is the great family Remedy For Bodily Pain

resulting from rheumatism or neuralgia, stiff joints, strained or lame muscles, sprains, tired, aching feet, sore hands, and all sorts of bruises; also for painful chest or tubes, heavy colds, sore throat and hoarseness; as well as for scores of every-day emergencies and accidents that happen in every family. MINARD'S LINIMENT is a safe and reliable standby, and should be on every medicine shelf.

MINARD'S LINIMENT is a smooth, aromatic cream, clean to use, powerful, penetrating and soothing, and absolutely free from anything poisonous or harmful. When rubbed into the skin it stops inflammation, easing the pain and soreness at once.

If you are not one of the thousands who are already familiar with its merits, we want you to

TRY MINARD'S LINIMENT AT OUR RISK

Buy it from your druggist or dealer, use as directed, and if not found exactly as represented, we will refund your money. Prices: Small 25c., Medium 50c., Large 75c.

MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO. SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all-around.

Brother NEVILLE FAULK was born in Vermilion Parish, La., Sept. 2, 1859, and died at his home in the same parish, July 25, 1910. Brother Faulk joined the M. E. Church, South, in boyhood days and remained a faithful member through life. He was an effective steward for a number of years. His devotion to his church and his home was unsurpassed. He was happily married to Miss Rosebud Morgan, Aug. 15, 1878. From this union there were 7 children, 3 of whom preceded him to the glory land, and the other four reflect glory to his training here. His oldest son, Professor Jno. Faulk, is principal of the high school at Coushatta, La. His next son is an aggressive farmer. His only daughter, Miss Ida, is a teacher in the high school here. His youngest son, Earnest, graduated only last month. So he felt when the physician told him he must die, that he had fought a good fight, had finished a noble course. In a conversation with the writer a few days before his death he rejoiced more because his children were Christians. For some months he had been beautifying his home and had succeeded in making it a lovely one ere he went to that home not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. To the bereaved ones, oh! let us not mourn our loss, which is his everlasting gain.

His pastor, J. S. RUTLEDGE.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. LIZZIE WILEY (nee Bounds), was born in Marietta, Ga., Oct. 28, 1868. At the age of nine or ten years, she moved to Texas with her parents. At Cleburn, Tex., in the year 1889, she was happily married to Mr. S. C. Bounds, and later moved with him to Calhoun County, Miss., where she lived till death claimed her. To this happy union there was born ten children, all of which survive her. It was in the early morning of June 13, 1910, that she closed her eyes to earth's sin, sorrow and suffering and went sweeping through the gates, washed in the blood of the Lamb. In early life she was a member of the Presbyterian Church. But after her marriage to Brother Bounds she united with the M. E. Church, South, in which church she lived a happy, consistent member and died in the triumphs of faith. May the kind, loving Heavenly Father comfort the sorrowing ones, and remember that while she cannot come back to you, you can go to her.

"Earth to earth, and dust to dust.
Calmly now the words we say:
Left behind we wait and trust
For the resurrection day.
Father in thy gracious keeping Leave me now, thy servant sleeping."

F. O. BELL, P. C.

Mrs. ELIZABETH C. BAILEY was born in Moulton, Ala., Dec. 23, 1835; she moved with her parents, Mary and Geo. Armstrong, to Monroe County, Miss., at the age of 5 years, where she lived for nearly 70 years. Both of her parents died before she was 20 years old. She was the eldest daughter of twelve children, of whom, six survive her: Mrs. Mollie Summer, Houston, Miss.; Mrs. Jane Stewart and Richard Armstrong, of Kennedale, Texas; Jas. and Ben Armstrong, of Pope and Quanah, Texas; and John W. Armstrong, of Norman, Okla. In 1865 she was married to Jas. Asbury Bailey. To this union was born six children; one died in infancy. She raised five children, Annie, Laura, and James A., going before. Three survive her: Mrs. John Haney, Bettie J. and W. L. C. Bailey. She professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, at Tranquil, at the age of 16 years, and was buried at the same church, June 27, 1909, nearly 57 years later. Her funeral service was held by Rev. M. A. Burns, of Okolona Circuit, Aberdeen District, North Mississippi Conference.

Another mother in Israel is gone. Mrs. FANNIE GATES (nee O'Neal) was born near Selma, Ala., March 24, 1838. She professed religion and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1856; was married to M. R. Gilmore, in 1858, and came to Pontotoc County, Miss., the same year. She was left a widow in 1885; four children resulted from this union; two have died, and two still live to mourn the loss of their mother. Mr. James Gilmore and Mrs. Robert Garmon, at whose home Sister Gates died in Verona. She was married again in 1889 to T. Z. Gates. He died in 1898 or 1899. She spent the remainder of her life as a widow and left us all the 19th of July, 1910. Thus passed away a sturdy Christian character, one who blessed God for a long life, and his grace which had sustained her in life's trials, and the salvation he had given her through his Son. Her last was peaceful, and abiding in a precious hope of an immortal life. May the weeping ones left behind overtake her where all tears will be wiped away.

D. W. BABB.

As the month of June, 1910, was passing into history, little WILLIE CRAWFORD departed this life and went to a brighter clime, where there is no more dying. Little Willie was the son of Mr. T. P. and Mrs. Ella Crawford, of Pearl River, La.; a nephew of Rev. N. E. Joyner, of New Orleans. This is the first time that the death angel ever came into this home—a family of ten children, two of which are younger than Willie. Willie was a dear, good boy in the home and among his playmates; he was liked by everyone who knew him. His death was quite sudden and unexpected, as he was sick only a week. All that is in the power of man to do was done for his recovery; but the Heavenly Father knew best, and so we say, "His will be done." Blessed be the name of the Lord. May God bless his father and mother, brothers and sisters and help them to look to God for comfort.

T. V. PETERS.

Mrs. CHARITY RIALS was born at Ringgold, La., Oct. 5, 1850, and died at Lottie, La., July 16, 1910. Sister Rials was converted and joined the Baptist Church at the age of sixteen, and in 1894 united with the Methodist Church. She was loved and respected by all who knew her. Her life showed that she loved God. In her testimony at last she gave evidence of her acceptance with God, saying to the writer a few days before her death, "It is right between me and God. I am ready to go." She leaves six children and a host of friends to mourn their loss—Mrs. B. D. Hendrix, of Ollie, La.; W. P., J. M., E. T., C. C. and S. S. Rials. All that loving hands could do was done to relieve her to the last. Her death was without a struggle. How good is it to see a Christian die; for after all, it is not dying, but a beginning to live. And living without a fear of ever dying more. The funeral services were conducted by the writer in Cottonwood Church and interment made in Cottonwood Cemetery. Then, to the bereaved, we say: Weep no more for mother is at rest. Give your hearts to God, and live for him and he will surely bring you home at last where father and mother and all the company of heaven dwell.

Her friend and pastor, J. W. FAULK.

AVAILABLE FOR SERVICE.

Any one needing a competent choir leader for revival meetings would do well to correspond with

L. L. GLASS.

Laurel, Miss., R. F. D. No. 1.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by U.S.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!

NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00

Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.,

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection; beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders a Specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

THE VOTAN LINE

All coffees of good quality have a somewhat sameness of taste. VOTAN has tang—distinctive characteristic flavor. You don't have to cultivate a liking for it. Appreciation comes with the first sip; infinite satisfaction with the first cup.

In 1, 2 and 3-lb. cans.

VOTAN TEA is a fit companion for Votan Coffee. Clear, clean and perfect in the leaf; fragrant and stimulating in the cup, sparkling and crystal-like in its transparent purity when used as an iced drink; it fills every requirement of a satisfying beverage.

3, 2 and 1 lb. canisters.

THERE IS AN EXCLUSIVE AGENT IN YOUR TOWN (If not, write us.)

The Votan
TEA & COFFEE CO.
New Orleans
U.S.A.

WANTS OF THE WORLD.

O. K. WE WANT WIDOWS, LADIES AND CHILDREN.

CURE YOUR FEELING IF THEY GET SORE.

THE CHILDREN'S HOME.

ROSETHEL DORMITORY is the outcome of a demand in the past to take small children without mothers, or having no friends, and also the outcome of requests from many parents who, for various reasons, need to place their children where they can get both schooling and motherly care. So Rosethel Dormitory has been opened for them and placed under the care of trained nurses and well educated ladies. No longer is there a home with the religious atmosphere for children other than the orphanages so kindly provided by the various churches. Meridian Woman's College, Meridian, Miss., arranged this Dormitory with an adjacent playground. Any child who is old enough to go to school will be most carefully instructed in their Home Department where everything is done to make life happy. If you know any children of means needing cultured, religious educational advantages, send the names of those in charge to Prof. J. W. Beeson, Meridian, Miss., Dept. D, and he will take a personal pleasure in sending you information about the Children's Home which is conducted in conjunction with the Meridian Woman's College, of Meridian, Miss. This is the ideal school for young and old, having the unequalled endorsement of the eminent Mr. Chas. N. Carter, and other competent judges. A great Conservatory of Music, Art and Elocution Department, etc., is connected with it. Meridian Male College, a safe place for boys, a quarter of a mile distant.

J. W. BEESON, A. M.
President
Meridian Woman's College

Meridian, Miss., Dept. D, and he will take a personal pleasure in sending you information about the Children's Home which is conducted in conjunction with the Meridian Woman's College, of Meridian, Miss. This is the ideal school for young and old, having the unequalled endorsement of the eminent Mr. Chas. N. Carter, and other competent judges. A great Conservatory of Music, Art and Elocution Department, etc., is connected with it. Meridian Male College, a safe place for boys, a quarter of a mile distant.

HER DUTY

"I feel it my duty," writes Mrs. Martha Dingus, of Lykins, Ky., "to inform you what Cardui has done for me. I have been a chronic invalid for years. I reckon I have had about every ailment that women are heir to. I have doctored a great deal with a great many doctors, as we have traveled a great deal in search of health, yet received but little benefit and got no better.

"Four months ago I commenced to use Cardui, and since then have been steadily improving all the time. I am now 46 years old, and am in better health than I have been in 20 years, and I give Cardui the credit for it."

Cardui has been known, during the past 50 years, as a reliable, effective remedy, for the ailments peculiar to women. It is a pure, non-intoxicating preparation, made exclusively from vegetable ingredients, having a special, curative effect on the female system. Cardui has been found to relieve pain and restore disordered functions to health.

If you're ill, don't wait until you have suffered for years before taking Cardui to relieve you. Isn't it your duty to spare yourself this pain? - Get Cardui at once. All reliable druggists sell it.

SALESMEN & SALESWOMEN WANTED

THOUSANDS of good positions now open, paying from $100 to $1,000 a year and expenses. No experience needed to get one of them. We want you to be an expert salesman or saleswoman by mail in eight weeks and assist you to secure a good position and you can pay for your tuition out of your earnings. Write today for full particulars and terms. Positions from hundreds of men and women have been placed in good positions paying from $100 to $1,000 a month and expenses. Address nearest office. Dept. 400.

NATIONAL SALESMEN TRAINING ASSOCIATION.
Chicago, New York, Minneapolis, Atlanta, Kansas City, San Francisco.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Natchez Dist.—Third Round.

Adams, at Ebenezer	Aug. 20, 21
Centerville	Aug. 24
Gloster, at Woodland	Aug. 27, 28
Nébo, at Ebenezer	Sept. 3, 4
Bayou Pierre, at Sweet
Water	Sept. 10, 11
Barlow, at Rehoboth	Sept. 12
Wilkinson, at Friendship	Sept. 17, 18
Scotland, at Galatia	Sept. 24, 25
H. WALTER FEATHERSTON, Gloster, Miss.	P. E.

Jackson Dist.—Third Round.

Lintonia, at Bethany	Aug. 20, 21
Yazoo City	5 a. m. Aug. 22
Eden, at Phillips	Aug. 27, 28
Benton, at Tranquill	Aug. 29
Flora, at Livingston	Aug. 31
Harrisville, at Poplar Sps	Sept. 3, 4
Jackson, Capitol St.	Sept. 5
Jackson, Galloway Church
7:30 p. m.	Sept. 7
Deasonville, at Dover	Sept. 10, 11
Jackson, First Church
7:30 p. m.	Sept. 12
Fannin, at Holly Bush	Sept. 14
Canton	Sept. 18
J. R. JONES, P. E.

Vicksburg Dist.—Third Round.

Harrison, at Mispah	Aug. 21, 22
Satartia, at Satartia	Aug. 27, 28
Anguilla, at Sunflower
Chapel	Aug. 31
Hermanville, at Carpenter	Sept. 3, 4
G. H. GALLOWAY, P. E.

Meridian Dist.—Third Round.

Meridian, Central, 11 a. m.	Aug. 21
Meridian, East End, 8 p. m.	Aug. 21
Meridian, South Side and
Poplar Springs, at S. Side	Aug. 24
De Kalb, at De Kalb	Aug. 26
N. Kemper, at Mt. Zion	Aug. 27, 28
Buckatunna, at Chicora	Sept. 1
Enterprise and Stonewall,
at Concord	Sept. 3, 4
Porterville, at P.	Sept. 10, 11
Vimville, at Pleasant Hill	Sept. 13
Meridian, 5th St., 11 a. m.	Sept. 18
Meridian, 7th Ave., 8 p. m.	Sept. 18
W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

Newton Dist.—Third Round.

Laurel, 1st Church	Aug. 20, 21
Laurel, Kingston	Aug. 20, 21
Laurel, 6th Street	Aug. 22
Newton	Aug. 23
Lake, at Lake	Aug. 27, 28
Hillsboro, at Lane's Chapel	Sept. 3
Forest, at Coulter	Sept. 3, 4
Homewood, Circuit	Sept. 5
Montrose	Sept. 6
Chunky, at Lost Gap	Sept. 10, 11
Decatur, at Union	Sept. 15
Neshoba	Sept. 16
T. J. O'NEIL, P. E.

Hattiesburg Dist.—Third Round.

Samrall	Aug. 21, 22
Leakesville, at Adam's M.	Aug. 24, 25
New Augusta, at N. A.	Sept. 4, 5
Eastabuchie, at E.	Sept. 10, 11
Magee, at Rials	Sept. 15, 16
Bethel, at Summerland	Sept. 17, 18
Seminary, at S.	Sept. 19
Lucedale	Sept. 21
Collins, at Ora	Sept. 24, 25
M. B. SHARBROUGH, P. E.

Seashore Dist.—Third Round.

Carriere and McNeill, at
Picayune	Aug. 16
Columbia	Aug. 17
Oakville, at Baxterville	Aug. 18
Coalville, at White Plains	Aug. 20, 21
Long Beach	Aug. 26
Lumberton	Aug. 27, 28
Vandervee, at Red Hill	Aug. 31
Wolf River Mission, at Beau-
lah	Sept. 1
Moss Point	Sept. 2
Americus, at Big Point	Sept. 3, 4
W. B. JONES, P. E.

Brookhaven District—Third Round.

Silver Creek, at S. C.	Aug. 20, 21
Wesson, at W.	Aug. 28, 29
Bogue Chitto and Norfield,
at Bogue Chitto	Sept. 3, 4
Prentiss, at Santee	Sept. 10, 11
Buford, at Sandy Hook	Sept. 16
Tylertown, at Tylertown	Sept. 17, 18
Pearlhaven, at Pleas Grove	Sept. 25, 26
Brookhaven	Sept. 25, 26
J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

EDUCATIONAL.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE

JACKSON, MISS.

Rev. David Carlisle Hull, M. S., President.

A high-grade College, situated at the Capital of the State. Location high, dry and beautiful. Entrance requirement and Curriculum same as in other leading colleges and universities. North and South. The very finest Moral and Religious Influences. Extraordinary Advantages in

LITERARY AND LAW DEPARTMENTS.

Courses Leading to A. B., B. S., A. M., M. S., and LL.D. Degrees.

NINETEENTH SESSION BEGINS SEPTEMBER 23, 1910.

For Catalog and other information address:

J. E. WALMSLEY, Secretary, Jackson, Miss.

The Mississippi Conference Training School

MONTROSE, MISS.

This School has the largest and most competent Faculty in its history. Our pupils are prepared for Sophomore Class in high-grade Colleges. Our Musical Directress is in a Northern Conservatory, adding to her already splendid equipment for Piano and Voice Culture. We will build a Mission Hall on the School Campus, and have added the subject of Missions to our Curriculum. Our rates for board and tuition are reasonable.

Write for catalogue to

Rev. WALDO W. MOORE, A. M., President.

MERIDIAN WOMAN'S COLLEGE.

One of the Nation's Leading Schools for Young Ladies and Girls.

Sixty-acre campus for out door life. Boating, Fishing, swimming, Basket Ball, Tennis, swings, Beautiful Military drill, happy, healthful surroundings.

Excellent Faculty of Christian Teachers live with the girls. Special advantages in Art, Elocution, Domestic Science, along with the highest Literary Training.

AN IDEAL UNION OF HOME AND SCHOOL.

A vegetable Farm, Scientific Cooking, Excellent Board. Special Dormitory for young girls in lower grades.

See full particulars in our beautiful illustrated catalog. Write to Pres. J. W. BEESON, "Dept. D," Meridian, Miss.

SOUTHEASTERN DENTAL COLLEGE

This school offers advantages excelled by no other school. Excellent building, superb equipment and strong faculty. Individual instruction given each pupil. Session opens Oct. 4th. For catalogue, address

DR. C. L. STÖCKE, President, 427-8 Austin Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

The Woman's College of Shreveport.

A high-grade College for Girls and Young Ladies. Ideal location. Steam heat. Modern improvements. Non-sectarian. Faculty of specialists. College and Preparatory Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Session begins Wednesday, September 21, 1910. Write for catalogue. GEORGE L. HARRELL, President, Shreveport, La.

ALABAMA POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE.

Only School of Technology in Alabama. 64 Professors and Instructors. 20 Well Equipped Laboratories.

CHAS. C. TRACH, M. A., LL.D., President
AUBURN, ALA.

Session begins Wednesday, September 7th, 1910. Location high and healthful, 225 feet above sea level. Attendance 761 students from twelve States and three foreign countries.

COURSES OF INSTRUCTION:

Nine four-year degree courses. MINES, ENGINEERING, CHEMISTRY, (1) Mining, (2) Civil, (3) Electrical, (4) Mechanical, (5) Architecture, (6) Chemistry and Metallurgy, (7) Pharmacy. Forty-one professors and instructors. New machines and equipment in all laboratories. Students hold leading technical positions in Birmingham District and throughout the South. First course of Architecture established in the South. (8) HISTORY, LATIN, AND MODERN LANGUAGE COURSE. English (4 years), Latin, History, French, German, Mathematics, Physics and Astronomy, Political Economy, and Psychology. Thirty-seven professors and instructors. (9) AGRICULTURE, HORTICULTURE, AND FORESTRY. Fifty-three professors and instructors. (10) 3-year course in Pharmaceutical Chemistry, Ph. C. (11) 3-year course in Pharmacy, Ph. G. (12) 3-year course in Veterinary Medicine, D.V.M. (13) New Dining Hall, also board in private families. (14) New Engineering Hall in course of construction. (15) New Library Building. (16) New Agricultural Hall. (17) Water Works and Electric Lights. For catalogue and further information address the President.

STEWART
HOME and SCHOOL

FOR BACKWARD

CHILDREN
AND ADULTS.

Expert training and care by specially trained teachers and experienced physician who has devoted his life to this work. Home instruction, no school fees. Law and Woodland for pleasure grounds. Citrus system. Electrically appointed buildings, electric light and steam heat. Highly endorsed and recommended by prominent physicians, ministers and patrons. A beautiful book will be mailed upon application.

DR. JOHN P. STEWART, Box 4, Farmdale, Ky.

EDUCATIONAL.

Port Gibson Female College,
PORT GIBSON, MISS.

1st session opens Sept. 14th. Literature, music, art, elocution, stenography, bookkeeping, sewing. Physical culture and chorus work free. Special attention given health and morals. Confers degrees of A.B. Preparatory department. Students can reduce expenses by taking duties.
For catalogue, address
REV. H. G. HAWKINS, A. B., Pres.

Whitworth College.

Twenty carefully selected teachers and officers. More than two hundred students last session. A most excellent literary course leading to the degrees of L.B. and A.B. Departments of Music, (including piano, violin and voice culture) expression, art, commerce.

Next Session begins Sept. 8, 1910.

For Catalogue address,

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

RANDOLPH-MACON ACADEMY For Boys and Young Men.
Fits for college, scientific schools or business. Work endorsed by over 30 colleges and universities. Beautiful and healthful location. Athletic grounds; gymnasium. Terms only $230. No extras.
For catalogue, address E. SUMTER SMITH, Principal, Bedford City, Va.

PEABODY COLLEGE FOR TEACHERS.
NASHVILLE, TENN.

Only Teachers' College in South of recognized College Standard. Three groups of 4-year Degree-Courses. Two-year "Diploma" Course. Degree or Diploma insures easiest entrance into best positions. Recent Magnificent Endowment. Tuition $10.00 a quarter.
CHAR. E. LITTLE, Ph. D., Ph. M. of Faculty.

Vanderbilt University
NASHVILLE, TENN.

1007 STUDENTS 100 TEACHERS
CAMPUS OF 80 ACRES

New College Hall and Chemical Laboratory Just Completed

Expenses low. Literary courses for graduates and undergraduates. Professional courses in Engineering, Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, Theology. Send for catalogue, naming department.
J. E. HART, Secretary.

Belmont College

For Young Women Nashville, Tenn.
IRA LANDRITH, D. D., LL. D., President
MISS HOOD and MISS HERON, Principals
College and Preparatory Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Modern Languages, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Matchless location. Athletics, Horseback Riding. Register now. For catalogue, address
BELMONT COLLEGE, Box T.

TULANE

UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA

216 Teachers NEW ORLEANS 2470 Students

EDWIN E. CRAIGHEAD, L. L. D., President
Tulane University is located in New Orleans, the metropolis of the South. Modern dormitories, extensive laboratories, libraries and museums.

Ten departments, comprising:
College of Arts and Sciences, College of Technology, Business College for Young Women, Teachers' College, Graduate Department, Law Department, Pharmacy Department, Medical Department, Post-Graduate Medical Department, Dental Department and Summer School.

Expenses Low. Low Dormitory Rates. For Catalogue Address, LOUIS DATZ, Secretary

WHILE FOR REFINEMENT by hand - no breaking of the head - no washing
Requires no tipping
TOP STYLE
UNBREAKABLE POINTED CUPS NO INNOVATIONS

ESTABLISHED 1858
BELLS
CHURCH AND SCHOOL
With SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. B. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

PROGRAM OF EPWORTH LEAGUE WORKERS' CONFERENCE,

West Point, October 6, 7, 8.

Opening Session, Thursday Night, 8:00; Rev. R. A. Clark, presiding.—Devotional service. The purpose of the Worker's Conference. General subject for discussion, The Organized League, Its Work, and the Relative Value of Its Departments; discussion led by J. H. Holder.

Friday Morning Session, 8:00; Mr. W. E. Kennedy, presiding.—Devotional service. The connectional work of the League, the League as a connectional organization—central office, literature, assemblies, etc.; discussion led by Rev. R. A. Clark. Junior League work; discussion led by Mrs. T. B. Clifford, Mrs. Cavin.

Friday, 2 p. m.; Rev. W. L. Graves, presiding.—The work of the Districts. District League Conference, duties of the District Secretary, review of the work of the Districts; discussion led by Rev. K. P. Foust.

Friday Evening, 8:00; Rev. J. H. Holder, presiding.—The Local League—Its departments, its officers, how to get the co-operation of the pastor, how may the League best serve the pastor, difficulties and how to overcome them; discussion led by Rev. R. P. Nebbett.

Saturday Morning, 8:00; Mr. Walter Boswell, presiding.—Work of the Conference officers; discussion led by Mr. W. E. Kennedy.

A campaign for a thousand members in 1910-1911 (to June 15, 1911).

"At It, All At It, Always At It."

LAKE CAMP MEETING.

Lake Camp Meeting begins Aug. 26, and runs through Sunday, Sept. 4. Rev. W. C. Swope, of Charleston, Mo., will be in charge of the preaching. There will be good music. The grounds are ideal. Accommodations adequate. Come and have a good rest physically, and a refreshing and helpful time spiritually. We extend a hearty invitation to all preachers and laymen, especially of Newton District. Our presiding elder has already arranged to be with us, bringing his good wife and children. Let the rest of the preachers follow in the tracks of our worthy leader. Remember the dates, and come.
H. F. TOLLE, P. C.

ATTENTION, FATHERS AND MOTHERS.

When you were a child your parents cured your boils, old sores, chronic ulcers, bone felons, carbuncles, poison oak and many other ailments with "Gray's Ointment." For over half a century it has been the honored family remedy in thousands of homes throughout America and foreign countries. If you are not using it in your home regularly, it is because you do not appreciate how helpful and indispensable it is to every parent. Get a box for 25c at your druggist's, or if you have never used it, write us for a small sample, which we will gladly send free postage to demonstrate its value to those who do not know it. Address Dr. W. F. Gray & Company, 309 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn.

Mr. B. G. Worth, Wilmington, N. C., writes: "I have been extolling Gray's Ointment for over fifty years. I am now 86 years of age and would not be without your Ointment for anything."

TWO HAVE FALLEN.

Dear Brother: Two of the members of the Alabama Conference died on yesterday, namely, Revs. W. H. Morris, superannuate, of Escatawpa, Ala., and J. B. K. Spain, presiding elder of Troy District. These dear brethren were men of excellent characters. Heaven is much enriched by their release. Fraternally,
L. C. CALHOUN.

Milton, Fla., Aug. 6.

Remarkable Treatment.

Almost miraculous cures of persons affected with the opium, morphine and whisky habit are being accomplished daily by Dr. Woolley, of Atlanta, Ga. For over a quarter of a century Dr. Woolley's cure for the drug habit has been in the public eye. Dr. Woolley's treatment is harmless and absolutely removes the need and desire for opiates and stimulants. This feature no doubt appeals with considerable force to those who fear their craving will remain unsatisfied after they put themselves under Dr. Woolley's care. If you address him, No. 21-K, Victor Sanitarium, Atlanta, Ga., he will send you his book on these diseases free.

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.

Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Courses. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE.

THE OLDEST COLLEGE FOR WOMEN IN AMERICA—THE RECOGNIZED STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE FOR THE WHOLE SOUTH—NOTABLE PROGRESS AMONG SOUTHERN INSTITUTIONS.

Splendid plant—worth $350,000—with all modern comforts, on an eminence in the best residential district in Macon. $200,000 now being raised for improvements and endowment.

One of less than a half dozen colleges for women in the South, on a full fourteen-units basis. Courses leading to A. B. and B. S. degrees. Faculty of thirty-nine officers and teachers. Nearly 3,000 alumnae throughout the Nation. The Wesleyan's diploma is the highest academic honor open to a woman in the South.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, employing fourteen officers and teachers, is the Mecca of artists and those preparing to teach. Schools of Art and Expression at the same high standard. Diplomas and teachers' certificates are conferred.

The moral and physical health of Wesleyan young ladies is safeguarded at every point. The discipline and training are non-sectarian, but Christian to the core. Wesleyan's high aim is to send out young women of genuine Christian culture. Health record without a parallel. Serious sickness has been rare, and not a single death has occurred at the College in many years.

Rates within reach of all. The College is not conducted for money making, but to bless the world. Apply for catalogue and information in detail to REV. W. H. AINSWORTH, D.D., President, Macon, Ga.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jackson, Tenn.

Next School Year begins Wednesday, September 14. Every facility offered for a thorough education for girls and young women. All departments taught, including besides regular Classical and Literary Courses, Music, Art, Expression, Stenography, Typewriting, Business course, Etc. Charges reasonable. For catalogues, etc., apply to

REV. A. B. JONES, Jackson, Tenn.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute is one of the oldest Female Colleges in the South, having been chartered in 1843. The college has 250 attendants and 125 of them are boarding pupils.

THE TEXAS DENTAL COLLEGE
HOUSTON, TEXAS

THE SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION BEGINS OCTOBER 4th, 1910.

Offers to the prospective dental students unsurpassed clinical advantages and teaching facilities for the study of the most modern and up-to-date dentistry. Ideal winter climate; Reasonable living expenses, and the most wholesome moral influences.

For full information and catalogue, address the secretary, CHAS. E. EDGE.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

A home school for girls. 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful hill country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue.

Address, Prof. E. H. BROWDER,

CLINTON, LA.

Ward Seminary Nashville, Tennessee

FOR GIRLS AND YOUNG WOMEN

46th year. Seminary and Special Courses. Conservatory of Music—Emil Winkler, Director; Signor Campobello, Voice; Fritz Schmitz, Violin. 175 Boarding Pupils. Complete appointments. City advantages. Beautiful campus for outdoor sports. For catalogue address J. D. BLANTON, President.

Epworth League

By Rev. Wm. H. Colenian.

TOPIC FOR AUGUST 14, 1910.

THE SIGNS OF THE GOSPEL DAY.

(Joel ii. 28-32; John xvi. 1-15.)

Joel prophesies of a glorious gospel day when God shall pour out his Spirit upon all flesh, that is upon all the people, and tells of some of the manifestations of the Spirit in the lives of those who receive him; they shall dream dreams, see visions and prophecy. Jesus, also, often spoke of that gospel day when the Holy Spirit should come, or rather, he made many promises that he should come, and told of what he should accomplish in the lives of those who received him when he had come. Read chapters 14 to 17 of the Gospel according to St. John, and note carefully all that Christ promised regarding the coming and work of the Holy Spirit. Our second reference for to-day is only one of these many promises.

The signs of this gospel day began on the Day of Pentecost (Acts ii). St. Peter recognized this as the time spoken of by Joel (Acts ii. 16-17). We also see in that day the fulfillment of Christ's promises regarding the coming and offices of the Spirit; for he had not only made these promises of an indefinite coming, but had definitely told his disciples to tarry at Jerusalem until they had received the promise (Luke xxiv. 49).

This promised gospel day not only began on the Day of Pentecost, but has continued and we are living under the dispensation of the Holy Spirit to-day; for, not only did the Spirit manifest himself in the lives of the people that day, but he has continued to manifest himself in the lives of all who are wholly the Lord's even unto to-day.

But what are the signs?

(a) Conviction. "And when he is come he will reprove (Elegxei, convict) the world of sin, etc." (John xvi. 8.) On that day men were mightily and powerfully convicted, and three thousand were led to Christ; repentant of their sins and were saved. And ever since that time the good Spirit has continued to convict people of their sins. It is by the reproof or conviction of the Holy Spirit, as he awakens the conscience to a sense of guilt and a need of a Savior that Christ Jesus, who came to save his people from their sins, stands at the heart's door and knocks for admittance (Rev. iii. 20).

This divine gift of the Holy Spirit's conviction, this divine condescension to come and knock at the door of a human heart for admittance that he may save the soul from death and redeem the life from destruction is too sacred a thing, my dear young friends, to be ruthlessly trampled under unhallowed feet. We are solemnly warned against resisting or rejecting the Holy Spirit when he thus comes to lead us to God (1. Thes. v. 19).

(b) Being poured out upon all flesh. This second sign was manifest on the day of Pentecost in that the Spirit was poured out indiscriminately on members of the vast multitude from all parts of the Jewish world, and was later manifested in the pouring out of the Holy Spirit on the Gentiles also, Cornelius and others. And to-day he is being poured out upon all flesh! Conviction is taking hold of the hearts of men and women of all nations and all stations and all conditions of life wherever this glorious gospel of our Lord is preached. Christ came to save, and the Holy Ghost convicts indiscriminately the rich and the poor, the respectable, the vile, the cultured, the ignorant, the civilized, the uncivilized, the white man, the black man, the yellow man, the red man, the brown man. None are too good to yield to him when he convicts, none are too bad to be saved by his uplifting touch when they do yield. Here he convicts Jerry McAuley, and a criminal yields and is transformed into a saint; there he convicts S. H. Hadley, and a drunken wreck is transformed into a princely man of God; there he convicts the wealthy, fashionable, pleasure-loving society leader; she yields to his gentle touch, is converted and becomes the pioneer in establishing doors of hope through which the same good Spirit leads thousands of friendless outcasts to Christ and heaven. There he accompanies the ministry of John R. Mott, in Korea, and is poured out on two hundred young men in one service. There he accompanies the messages of J. W. Chapman, in Australia, and is poured out upon five hundred men at one service and they are led to Christ. Thus we could continue to give illustrative examples of the continuing of this second sign.

(c) He is guiding into all truth. To-day the young man or young woman who will not receive the Holy Spirit, who will not be led by him to Christ, and who will not be constantly kept by his power and led by his unerring council, in faithfully and obediently doing the will of God, is the one who can see "no harm" in all kinds of godless pleasures and degrading amusements. This is the young person who cannot see the truth, who is deluded by the devil; who is sadly missing life's great aim and moving along a low plane of existence to finally sink down into eternal despair; while the young person who is led by the Holy Spirit in all things is the one who can see danger and avoid it; can see the loftier, nobler, purer, richer, more useful ways of life and truth and walk therein. He is leading thousands to-day, both young and old, in this way of truth and shall continue to lead them on into higher heights and sublimer realms until at last, when the journey of life is ended they shall go to dwell with him in his glory.

Christ, also, in passages other than our reference taught that this same Holy Spirit should give us peace and joy in walking this way of truth, and that he should give us power in living the Christian life and doing the will of God.

Has he come to you to convict you of sin, and did you yield and let him lead you to Christ?

Are you to-day so surrendered to the will of God that he can lead you into all truth?

Are you consecrated to his service, filled with his peace, kept by his power, and zealous for his Spirit to be poured out upon all flesh until the whole world shall be brought to Christ?

For Physical Exhaustion
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate
Especially recommended in physical and mental exhaustion, nervousness, indigestion, and general debility.

GOOD BOOKS FOR SALE.

Dear Brother Meek: As my health is so poor, that I can do nothing, and need money more than books, with your kind permission, I will announce these for sale. Viz:

People's Cyclopædia, 4 vols. bound in Morocco in 1893. Price, $25. My price, $6.25. These are as sound as they ever were.

Shaw on Prophecy. Dan. and Rev. 676 pages. Cloth. Good as new. Price, $3.50. My price, $1.50.

Westeyan Standards, revised by W. P. Harrison, vol. 1, 565 pages. Nice black cloth, $1.

Divinity by Geo. Smith, F. S. A. Black cloth, new, 592 pages. My price, 75 cents.

Paine's Life of McKendree, 2 vols. Brown cloth. Sound. Price, $3. My price, $1.50. Purchaser to pay conveyance.

Have been a great sufferer this spring, and the end is not yet.

H. ARMSTRONG.

Olla, La., June 21.

Habits were never formed in a day, and they cannot be mastered in a day. Time with heart and mind united in determination, can conquer any evil habit, and make or strengthen any good one.—Selected.

Why buy a piano and be satisfied with piano music only, when for a small fraction of the cost of a piano you can have bringing music of every instrument into your home, the whole band, orchestra, Grand Opera, the whole vaudeville show.

The EDISON PHONOGRAPH

FOR a good piano you have to pay the price of a piano. Think! For one-half that price you can have an Amberola—the highest type of Edison Phonograph made, and just as beautifully finished as a $100.00 Grand Piano. And you can get other types of Edison Phonographs at any price you want to pay, from $12.50 up. Does your Phonograph play Amberola Records? If not, ask your dealer about our money-saving combination offer on Amberola Records and the attachment to play them.

The Amberola $200

Edison Standard Records

Edison Amberola Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Edison Gramophone Records

Other Styles $12.50 to $125

NATIONAL PHONOGRAPH COMPANY

149 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

The Edison Business Phonograph saves 50 per cent of the typist's actual transcribing time.

We are Headquarters for

Edison's Phonographs, Records and Supplies

—CASH OR INSTALLMENT—

We pay transportation charges on purchase of one dozen records or more.

NATIONAL AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM CO., OF LA.
614 GRAVIER STREET . . . NEW ORLEANS.

USE THE L. and A. RAILWAY, EVER ON TIME

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA, SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL,

General Passenger Agent.

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

THIRD QUARTER. LESSON VII. AUGUST 14.

THE LABORERS OF THE VINEYARD

Matthew xx, 1-16.

For the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is a householder which went out early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard.

And when he had agreed with the laborers for a penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard.

And he went out about the third hour, and saw others standing idle in the market place.

And said unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you. And they went their way.

Again he went out about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise.

And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and said unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle?

They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you.

So when even was come, the lord of the vineyard said unto his steward, Call the laborers, and give them their wage, beginning from the last unto the first.

And when they came, that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny.

But when the first came, they supposed that they should have received more, and they likewise received every man a penny.

And when they had received it, they murmured against the good man of the house.

Saying, These last have wrought but one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, which have borne the burden and heat of the day.

But he answered one of them, and said, Friend, I do thee no wrong, dost thou not agree with me for a penny?

Take thy penny, and go thy way; I will give unto this last, even as unto thee.

Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? Is thine eye evil, because I am good?

So the last shall be first, and the first last, for many be called, but few chosen.

Golden Text: "Many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first" (Matt. xix, 30.)

1. The Lesson's Meaning.

The rich young ruler, in our last lesson, refused to forsake all and follow Jesus; whereupon Peter, outspoken and inquisitive, as usual, declared: "Behold we have left all and followed thee (we have) done what this young man failed to do, what shall we have therefore?" The reply of Jesus, which just precedes the parable comprising our lesson to-day, was in assurance that there is no man that hath left house or wife, or brethren, or parents, or children, for the kingdom of God's sake, who shall not receive manifold more in this time, and in the world to come eternal life.

But Christ saw in the spirit of Peter a self-complacency with regard to what he had done, and self-exaltation, as compared with others, which was unnamable and un-Christian, which he could not allow to pass unrebuked; especially as his promise of great reward would have been as fuel to the fire, if allowed to stand unqualified.

So our parable to-day is a warning to Peter immediately, but to Christians of all ages as well; that "if we become self-assertive, and presume on what we have done for God, we may find ourselves far down in the list of honors; but if we serve ungrudgingly, and without the thought of what we are to get, then, little and late as our service may be, God can put us on a level with those who have been longer by far at work for him than we." (Dr. James Denny in Homiletic Review, August.) "Many that are first shall be last (having yielded to the temptation to pride and trust in works as bringing reward of right and not of grace), and the last (those less eminent in achievement, but possessed of a more Christ-like spirit) shall be first."

Viewed thus as a parabolic statement of the command: "When ye have done all say, we are unprofitable servants," as a lesson in humility to disciples who were manifesting a self-righteous pride, the explanation of the parable is simple and its message clear, and thus it should be interpreted.

But taken as an exposition of the relations of wage-earners to employers, or even as an example of generosity, there are serious objections to it which have been urged in all ages, and which have made this parable one of the most difficult of all to interpret. The paying to all the same wage would not ordinarily be a just procedure, and, if without special reason, we can sympathize with the complaint of those who had borne the burden and heat of the day. The words "Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own?" we cannot admit either, except in a limited sense, for it is a principle which has been the ruin of many. Even a man's generosity must be based on reason and principle, else it may be objected to as indiscriminate, and as unduly rewarding the unworthy and discouraging the more deserving. Certainly the unscriptural corollary cannot be allowed either that those willfully delaying to enter upon the service of God may have as abundant reward as others who give their whole lives in loving service.

So it may seem that we have raised serious objections which it might seem difficult to remove. What then is the justification for paying those who started at six, nine, twelve, three, and even five o'clock in the afternoon the same wages at the close of the day? And wherefore is this generosity to be applauded, or the murmurings of the fellow-laborers condemned?

We believe the only justification is to be inferred from the answer of the men standing in the market place: "Why stand ye here all the day idle?" That answer is: "Because no man hath hired us." They had longingly waited, no doubt, for work; they had needed work, a day's work and a day's wage, for the support of themselves and those dependent on them; and the husbandman knew this, saw it and felt it by their manner and their alacrity in accepting a job at so late an hour, and in generous thoughtfulness, realizing that the blame was not on them, he paid them a full day's wage, a denarius—about 16 cents, but of about fifty cents purchasing power. The other laborers must have known the need of their fellow-laborers, and their unhappy delay in getting work, for it is in this light that their spirit was heartless and envious, deserving only of contract pay and rebuke. So the parable, considered in its connection with what precedes, teaches the lesson of humility to those tempted to pride and trust in their works and worth, considered in itself, it is a beautiful illustration of considerate and generous thoughtfulness on the part of an employer toward those employed, which we of to-day may well heed and follow.

II. The Lesson's Message. Points to Impress.

1. Our salvation is wholly of grace, not of works; lest any man should boast. Good work, long and faithful service even may become a snare to us, if we look upon them as constituting a claim upon God. Whoever ceases to feel, as well as say, "I am an unprofitable servant," is descending rather than ascending in the scale of honor and reward.

2. "Because no man hath hired us," is not that the reason why many are to-day outside the fold of Christ? Our Sunday School Quarterly, and many commentators claim that none can utter such words to-day, but are there not many who from all that they hear or see of spiritual life, in them could only say, "No man cares for my soul." The Evangelistic Note, in W. L. Dawkins says, "I do not believe in the indifference of the masses to religion. The indifference is not in the masses, but in the churches." One of the amazing things of our time has been to discover with what readiness men will respond to Christ, and strive to be made to win them to Christ.

The next may be heartless to wait, as well as to be rich toward the poor, there are laborers leaning on their elbows, as much as they, waiting for an ungenerous, unsympathetic spirit. Let us learn to rejoice even at the good fortune of others, even when we ourselves are not conspicuously favored.

Let all employers of servants and others, learn the lesson of generous thoughtfulness to the needy, shown in the conduct of the husbandman here. Were some one to come to our door some day, asking for work, having tried in vain to obtain it, and should we give him work, and seeing him in need of food or more exactly in part, a full day, when our work was over, would we give him a day's wage, and then find out that the hundred who had waited for us, after our work was over, had a day's pay, him in a day's work, this immediate needs, or for a full month when he had waited only a few days, close in such circumstances, thoughtfulness we should reflect the spirit set forth before us in the parable.

A PREACHER WANTED

For a charge in the New Orleans District. The work will only support a single man. A splendid opportunity for city mission work.

F. N. PARKER,
Presiding Elder of N. O. District.

GALL STONES OF LIVER or Stomach Ailment Cured, AVOID AN OPERATION

HAVE YOU PAIN IN YOUR STOMACH, PAIN IN YOUR LIVER, PAIN IN YOUR BOWELS, PAIN IN YOUR SPLEEN, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR CECUM, PAIN IN YOUR ILEUM, PAIN IN YOUR JEJUNUM, PAIN IN YOUR DUODENUM, PAIN IN YOUR PANCREAS, PAIN IN YOUR GALLBLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR BILE, PAIN IN YOUR LUNG, PAIN IN YOUR HEART, PAIN IN YOUR KIDNEY, PAIN IN YOUR BLADDER, PAIN IN YOUR UTERUS, PAIN IN YOUR VAGINA, PAIN IN YOUR CERVIX, PAIN IN YOUR VULVA, PAIN IN YOUR PERINEUM, PAIN IN YOUR ANUS, PAIN IN YOUR RECTUM, PAIN IN YOUR SIGMOID COLON, PAIN IN YOUR DESCENDING COLON, PAIN IN YOUR ASCENDING

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 57—No. 32

"PROVE ALL THINGS, HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2345.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 18, 1910.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

A LOST GOSPEL.

A soul-saving gospel is the chief need of every generation. A recognition of this need and an effort on the part of John Wesley to supply it for his generation and his country brought Methodism into being. So the note struck by Bishop Wilson in his address at the close of the General Conference at Asheville was the keynote. There is need that we take up with renewed vigor the work of preaching the gospel of salvation to men, for it must be admitted that there is a whole lot of preaching among us that has not in it the power of convicting men of sin and bringing them to Christ. We Methodists have not fully obeyed the exhortation of the apostle: "Let no man take thy crown." Other denominations that once looked with contempt upon our revival methods have taken them up, and are prosecuting them more vigorously than we ourselves do. At the same time many of our strongest men, who ought to be leading the church in a vigorous campaign of evangelism, steer entirely clear of this work, some being indifferent to it, and others treating it with contempt, as other denominations used to do before they learned a better way from us. There are some, sorry to relate, who began their ministry as soul-savers who have lost the power to preach the gospel so as to save men. The trouble is that the preacher has lost his gospel. Let us look a little while at this tragedy of a lost gospel, and it may be that we shall be able to find it to the joy of our own souls and the salvation of others.

1. In the first place, the trouble may be not so much a lost gospel as a lost man. The Indian guide who failed to bring his white employer to the place they were seeking and was told that he was lost said: "Wigwam lost. Indian here." So it is with many men who wonder why the gospel has lost its power to save. The gospel has lost nothing. It is still "the power of God unto salvation." It is the awful tragedy of a man, mouthing the message which is only an echo in his own soul. A veil hangs between his soul and the gospel, so that he no longer sees its beauty nor feels its power. And even if our gospel is veiled, it is veiled in them that perish, in whom the god of this world hath blinded the mind of the unbelieving, that the light of the gospel of the glory of Christ, who is the image of God, should not dawn upon them. What is a man to do who, when he stops to examine himself, finds that he no longer enjoys the peace of God, and that therefore his preaching is powerless? He must, if he has the commonest kind of honesty, do one of two things: First, let him repent. Let him pray the prayer of the backslidden Psalmist, the king of Israel: "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation." Then shall I teach transgressors thy way, and sinners shall be converted unto thee. Second, if he has not sorrow for his sins, and does not long for the joy of the Lord and the power to save souls, it would seem that every consideration would point to his giving up the ministry and taking up some line of work by which he might be able to eat honest bread.

2. It may be the educational mania that has dried up the gospel stream in the soul of the man whom God called to preach, and who at the beginning of his ministry was a soul savior. Now I am not to degratiate yourself with any people by slackness of splicing nor discounting the advantages of education. Discipline.

But Methodism has suffered from the two extremes. Methodism's most valuable contribution in the Some preachers have spent too little time in the "social crisis" will be the recovery of the evangelisstudy. Others have neglected more important mat- the spirit. That which saved England in the eighters for the pleasure of reading. John Wesley, tenth century will save America in the twentieth thought at one time that if he should get out from century. That was not soup houses, nor gymna-the classic shades of Oxford, he would lose his soul. siums, nor reading rooms, nor all the other parapher-
The likelihood is that if he had not gotten out from nalia considered essential in these days for the enter-Oxford he would have lost his soul. Certain it is tainment and uplift of the people. It was the preach-that there would have been no Methodist Church. ing of the gospel of "repentance toward God and Wesley had occasion, student as he himself always faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ." Where have was and strongly as he urged his preachers to study, the powerful preachers and the useful laymen come also to keep before them the more important work from but from the revivals and from the ministry of of saving souls. The following bit of counsel is to those men who "determined not to know anything the point: "But if you can do but one—either follow but Jesus Christ and him crucified."

your studies or instruct the ignorant. Let the studies Let the Methodist preachers of America preach alone. I would throw by all the libraries in the the gospel as it is believed among us, and Method-world rather than be guilty of the pollution of one ism will do for America in our day what it did for soul. England in Wesley's day. If the leaders among us Now it seems that many of our strongest men will lift up the ensign, the people will rally around have dried up in their studies or in the schoolroom it. The God of our fathers will come to our help.
When they preach, their sermons remind one of He will pour out such blessings upon us that our dried tongue. They seem to think that there is hearts will not be able to contain them. Then shall some strange inconsistency in the spectacle of a sinners come flocking into the churches "like doves learned man conducting a revival or leading a man to to the coles in the wilderness"—D. H. Kern, A.M., Christ. They would doubtless be amazed if a sin- B.D., in the Christian Advocate (Nashville).

ner should be convicted under their preaching. They evidently are not thinking of convicting men of sin, but of startling the multitudes by their wonderful display of wisdom. So universally is this true that the work of calling men to repentance is left almost entirely to the young, inexperienced, and fre- quently to the uneducated preachers. Now the work of saving the souls of men is surely the most important work of the ministry and ought not to be left to the most poorly equipped men. If the evangelistic campaign in our Church is to be a great success, it must have on it the stamp of our strongest men—our bishops, theological professors, and strong pastors of our great churches. That must have been a happy moment in the experience of Dr. Gross Alexander when, at the close of one of his lectures last summer at the Great Falls camp meeting, a young man arose and confessed that he had been convicted and converted under the influ- ence of the lecture. Whatever else John Wesley was doing, reading books or writing them, he never lost the power to preach the gospel so as to convict men. He aimed at this result. He considered it his all-important work to which everything else was secondary. If I am correct in my analysis of the situation, our great need is the recovery of this lost evangel on the part of our educated and leading men.

3. The effort to be popular by delivering a pleasant, harmless message that everybody, the devil in- cluded, will compliment, and to pass through their pastorate so as to have all men speak well of them, keeps some from preaching a convicting gospel.
That is a very strange question asked and answered by Mr. Wesley concerning popularity. How shall we avoid popularity? We mean such esteem and love from the people as is not for the glory of God.
(1.) Earnestly pray for a piercing sense of the dan- ger and sinfulness of sin. (2.) Take care how you interact.

teract. The friends of Mansfield College will be glad to know that her spacious buildings are in better repair than they have been for fifteen years. President Patty, of the Board of Trustees, has taken in charge the re-fitting and refurnishing of the kitchen and dining room. The result will be a delight to good housekeepers.
A deep well and new pump will furnish a plentiful supply of water. Well furnished rooms offer a comfortable college home to our girls. Most important of all, we have a faculty of which any college might be proud. We have not employed a single incompetent one.
Due to Brother Sheppard's labors, our prospects for a fine opening are unusually encouraging. Brother pastor, have you done your share in winning success for Mansfield? Fraternally yours,
W. L. WEBER.

MANSFIELD COLLEGE.

Dear Brother Meek: Mansfield College will open Sept. 7, 1910, with a fine faculty, buildings and grounds are in excellent condition, and everything propitious for a splendid school. I regret my inability to thoroughly canvass the State.

But after all, we must rely largely on the loyalty of our preachers and people to give us the patronage we justly want.

We have left nothing undone that we could do to make the coming session the very best in the history of the school. It is hoped that our friends throughout the State will rally to our school; especially since a few men have at no little sacrifice of time and money done so much to make Mansfield
College equal to the best schools for our girls.

Cordially,
J. L. P. SHEPPARD.

The friends of Mansfield College will be glad to know that her spacious buildings are in better repair than they have been for fifteen years. President Patty, of the Board of Trustees, has taken in charge the re-fitting and refurnishing of the kitchen and dining room. The result will be a delight to good housekeepers.

A deep well and new pump will furnish a plentiful supply of water. Well furnished rooms offer a comfortable college home to our girls. Most important of all, we have a faculty of which any college might be proud. We have not employed a single incompetent one.

Due to Brother Sheppard's labors, our prospects for a fine opening are unusually encouraging. Brother pastor, have you done your share in winning success for Mansfield? Fraternally yours,

W. L. WEBER.

Christian Advocate

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 112 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

THE WORLD MISSIONARY CONFERENCE.

By Rev. W. W. Pinson.

The whole of Christendom must inevitably be affected by the influence of the ten days spent in that upper chamber in Edinburgh by the 1,200 representatives from the world's vanguard of Christian workers. The Church can never any more be the same. To what extent and in what way this influence is to be felt depends on the response of the various Christian bodies. The Conference raised and discussed many far-reaching questions—to settle them was not its province. The practical outcome is yet to be determined. The whole subject of missions has received a new illumination. This illumination increases the possibilities of more intelligent progress and by so much it increases responsibility.

The reports of the eight Commissions which will be printed in the nine-volume report constitute the most thorough inquiry into the complex questions involved in the missionary enterprise ever undertaken. They draw their facts from a wider range and the conclusions are the result of more thorough investigation than was ever given the subject. This is light, but it is not light in which the intellectual curiosity is to revel, but light in which to work. God has again spoken to his Church. The cry of the prophet rings out again: "Awake, awake, put on thy strength, O Zion."

There were certain outstanding impressions that grew and ripened into convictions. Some things may still be matters of debate, others can wait further light, but some have now passed beyond the mere intellectual stage, and laid their grip on the conscience. They have become majestic imperatives.

1. The unoccupied fields must be occupied. The conditions demand it and demand it now. The one hundred and thirteen million who have now no possible opportunity to hear the gospel, no foot of whose land, and no syllable of whose language have ever been blessed by the name of Christ, must be reached. This call, together with that of the unnumbered millions yet unreached in lands already entered and for whose evangelization the present force is pitifully inadequate, are a pathetic spectacle to men and angels. The Church stands at the judgment bar of the twentieth century with these mute millions witnessing to its condemnation. The accessibility and ripeness of these fields in the light of recent developments, together with the changes and adverse influences at work, give emphasis to what Mr. Jno. R. Mott characterized as the "immediacy" of the situation. The harvest is too ripe to wait.

It is a comfort to realize that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is preparing to enter into Africa, one of the neediest and most neglected fields, and thus help reduce a little the dark area. To this belated movement we should give ourselves with all the speed that our faith and finances can command. In doing so we must not forget to strengthen the forces in other fields.

2. We must co-operate. On no subject was the Conference more earnest, eloquent and unanimous than on that of "Unity and co-operation." From first to last it was a constantly recurring key-note. It was over and over declared that the results of complete co-operation would be equal to doubling the force on that field. With all its variety of complexion, speech and opinion, there was but one mind on this matter of at once reducing waste and friction of the denominational competition. The same spirit that found the disciples of the first century "in one place with one accord and one mind" is in this twentieth century calling the Church to a "unity of the spirit in the bonds of peace." We are no longer making creeds, a process which divides, but we are seeking to remake a world, a task which unites. The principle of that unity, as announced by Dr. James Denny, is "Absolute loyalty to Jesus Christ."

It was a pleasing reflection that we, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had begun where charity is said to begin, "at home." The action of our last General Conference in unifying our forces, so that the Church could face her great task with a solid column, was a fitting illustration of the spirit of co-operation. During the Edinburgh Conference an agreement was reached for a joint theological school in Songdo, Korea, to be built and operated by the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Also the secretaries of the Baptist, Methodist and Presbyterian Boards met and started a movement for a united publishing house in Brazil. These are lines on which co-operation is not only feasible, but necessary to secure efficiency. In many cases one Church can command sufficient funds or patronage alone, and if it were practicable to do so it would be an unwise use of resources and an unnecessary multiplication of expensive machinery.

3. We must re-emphasize the fundamental and saving truths. It was made clear that they and they alone win and transform men of all sorts and conditions. Not abstract discussions, nor philosophizing about comparative religions, but proclaiming the love of God, the suffering and resurrection of Christ, the pardon of sin and the joy of salvation, reaches the heart of the most besotted savage and the most cultured Hindoo or Mohammedan. As one expressed it, "The controversy is not between Christ and Mahomet, but between Christ and the sinful heart." What are called the simple, but are really the profound truths of the gospel, were insisted on not only from the standpoint of their reality, but of their practical power and sufficiency.

Check should be given to our rationalizing tendencies and there should be a turning from our "new theologies" at home and abroad. Since what will reach the heart and meet the need of a sinner in Shanghai will do the same for a sinner in New York, may it not be that in this sense the heathen are saving the Church by putting in its hands anew "The sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God?"

4. We must study the home base with reference to the world's evangelization. The discussion of this subject was all too brief, it was sufficient to make clear the fact that "we have developed a science of foreign missions, but we have no science of dealing with the home base." There is a lack of comprehension and a weakness in method in leading, arousing and mobilizing the Church. The attaining and inspiring work is yet to be spoken in that line. It is not only the apathy and indifference of the Church, but the lack of any real, consistent and comprehensive method of overcoming them, to which we refer. The laymen of the United States and Canada brought the most illuminating contribution to this discussion, as they are leading most hopefully towards a successful solution of the problem.

If the problem of the world's evangelization is not in heathen lands, but in the home Church—and this was made clearer than ever—then it is time our leaders set about solving it. Is not this the great need of the Church? Does not the source of power lie in the spirit and motive of evangelization? Does not the Church die under a spirit of mere conservatism? If so, the rallying and uniting of the whole Church for missions involves not only the saving of the heathen, but the saving of Christendom from decay at the heart. The effort of our laymen and Board of Missions to so educate and organize the Church as to reach and enlist every member is in the right direction. The Department of Education with its far-sighted plans, the Laymen's Missionary Campaign in every Church, the Every Member Campaign, the average of two dollars a member as a worthy financial standard, are steps on the way to a higher ideal, for which nothing better has yet been suggested, and they should receive our active support.

5. We must perpetuate the spirit and purpose of the Conference at Edinburgh. It was no mere love-feast, nor temporary exploitation of ideas and theory. It was a council of war. It not only discussed problems—it developed a program. The Conference did not take itself too seriously, when by unanimous action it appointed a Continuation Committee to carry on its work. The marks of the Spirit's presence and leading, as well as the representative character of the Conference, justified this action. The term ecumenical has been denied to this gathering with emphasis by those who arrogate to themselves a monopoly of that term. Nevertheless, here were gathered the foremost representatives of Protestant Christendom, not to consider a universal statement, or which there can never be agreement, but to face a universal task on which agreement is the only rational position. The findings of the Conference are therefore authoritative to the extent that they point the way to the accomplishing of this common task with the least possible delay.

The Continuation Committee above referred to will stand as the clearing house for interdenominational ideas, methods and movements, and is one of the steps towards that unity pleaded for with such impressive eloquence and unanimity.

6. Those who would be abreast of the Missionary Movement should secure the Nine-Volume Report. The time for advance subscriptions at the low rate of $4 per set has been extended for the benefit of American subscribers to September 1st, 1910. After this date the price will be advanced. Orders should be sent to Mr. W. Henry Grant, 156 5th Avenue, New York.

At a meeting of fifty representatives of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, held during the Conference, a committee was appointed to suggest lines of work in harmony with the spirit of the Conference. This Committee consists of Bishop W. R. Lambuth, Miss M. L. Gibson, Dr. O. E. Brown, Rev. J. C. C. Newton, Miss Belle H. Bennett and the writer. Owing to circumstances, a meeting of this Committee has not yet been practicable.

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY.

By Mrs. M. W. Morrison.

The importance of a deep sense of personal responsibility cannot be overestimated. It is an inherent principle in every earnest, consecrated life; without it, there could be no development of active Christian usefulness or power to combat sin, and we should bestir ourselves in order to keep pace with the enthusiasm and activity of the present age, as it is so wonderfully revealed in the student bodies in our colleges and seminaries of learning, and which should certainly be an inspiration to the senior element of our Christian workers. We should, in season and out of season, endeavor to make a greater personal effort for the salvation of the perishing ones around us, as well as for the benighted millions in heathen lands.

How strange that we find some who do not believe in foreign missions! How can they oppose this grand and glorious work, when they read the great command, which fell from the lips of the blessed Son of God himself, "Go ye therefore and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even to the end of the world."

And what more exalted position can we occupy than to be co-laborers with God, through his blessed Son? Therefore, let us watch and be sober and walk as children of the light, that those who have been strangers and enemies to the blessed Christ may be allured by the light which has shined into our hearts; giving us the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ, for when we, as Christians, have the love of God in our hearts, it sweetly constrains us to a zealous obedience to his commands, and thus we are prepared for every joyous service. And how great are the needs! Earnest prayer from every Christian heart should ascend daily to the throne of God, that he would call a greater number of active, consecrated workers into his vineyard, both for the work at home and foreign field.

Let us not forget to plead most earnestly that God would put it into the hearts of some of his chosen ones who have much of this world's goods to contribute largely to the propagation of this glorious gospel of the Son of God. May we all be so imbued with his love, that we may be more self-sacrificing, and give not only the "tenth" which belongs to God and is not our own, but give besides, as God has prospered us, which alone is really a gift to his cause.

Shall we whose souls are lighted
With wisdom from on high,
Shall we to men benighted
The lamp of life deny?
Salvation! Oh, salvation!
The joyful sound proclaim,
Till earth's remotest nation
Has learned Messiah's name.

A HINT TO THE WISE STEWARD.

By An Ex-Steward.

It is eminently desirable that our charges meet in full their obligations, at least quarterly, to the pastors who serve them in the Lord. This is the true basis upon which the financial success of the Methodist Church rests. The term "quarterage" has become incorporated into the vernacular of Methodists, signifying a payment of claims for ministerial support by the quarter. The hardest time of the year on the preacher is now at hand, and a little strenuous and wise effort by stewards and chiefs of the commissary department in the army of the Lord—will readily relieve the acute situation. For instance, some of the members are able to pay all the balance of their individual assessment for the year right now, and will doubtless do so gladly if asked, and enable the preacher to tide over the difficult situation confronting him. Unless the steward shall undertake to do this, it may not be done. But it will be the courteous thing, indeed, if the member who can do so shall send or hand it directly to the pastor or steward. By the end of the next quarter current cash will be available from the harvest and make it easier to settle in full.

A faithful steward shall receive his reward.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure.

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McJesty, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynn, Gen. Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec.-Treas.
Geo. A. Hero

AUTOBIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

Chapter XXII. The Last.

In December, 1904, Conference met in Gulfport. Bishop Duncan presided. This was the first time our Conference ever met in full view of the "Mighty Deep." It was in many respects an interesting Conference; in fact, to some of us, Conference occasions are always interesting. At the close of the Conference my name was read in connection with Terry Circuit. W. A. Terry was there the year before, and the people of the charge did not seem to understand why he was not returned. In two days after Conference had adjourned I was, in Terry, ready for work. I had no home; my home was gone. Here I was, an "old" man (there were some who would call me "old"); 69 years of age, with no one to live with me in the parsonage, which was a good one, well furnished. I tried to get board, but failed. I undertook to "keep back," but, alas! never having lived by myself, I found it too lonely. I was at a loss to know what to do. I knew I was in the hands of God. He had guided me in all the past, why not trust him to guide me still? Relief came in a way I was not expecting. Vicksburg Circuit was left to be supplied. My son-in-law was at Washington Street Church, Vicksburg. Brother Huntley, the presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, and Brother Holloman, thoughtful men, knowing what a sad, lonely time I was having, got together and after advising with Brother Terry, arranged to have me transferred from Terry, in Brookhaven District, to Vicksburg Circuit, in Vicksburg District, provided Brother T. W. Adams, presiding elder on the Brookhaven District, would agree. Brother Huntley wrote me about the matter, and in a short while I wired him I would be in Vicksburg in a few days. Brother Adams, after providing for Terry Circuit, consented for me to go. I felt wonderfully relieved.

I spent two years very pleasantly on the work. My old friend and former co-laborer, W. W. Hurst, and his good wife and baby girl, lived on the work. Then there were the Stanfords, the Fortners, Ferguson, and many others, that proved helpful to me. The two years satisfied me I had best do one of two things, viz.: marry again or superannuate. To do the latter I was afraid; to do the former I hesitated. To marry one sixty years of age that had never been married, I was afraid; to marry a widow with children, I was afraid. So I prayed the good Lord to help me, and he did. It was in February, 1907, a good woman said to me: "Brother Lewis, Mrs. Langston would make you a good wife." I had heard of Sister Langston—yea, I had met her a few times, but had thought but little, if at all, about seeking a union with her; besides, she belonged to one of the first families in South Warren, and I was only an humble Methodist preacher. She taught school many years before she married the first time. She was a Miss Louisiana Gibson. In 1886 she married Rev. J. M. Langston, a member of the Los Angeles Conference. After spending nine years in the Los Angeles Conference, they were transferred to the N. W. Mexican Conference, and Brother Langston was in charge of the Mission School in Nogales, Arizona. His wife taught in the school. Here, after two years, his health failed and he was transferred to the North Texas Conference, where he died in 1903, in full assurance of a blissful immortality beyond the grave.

Some nine months after the death of Brother Langston, Sister Langston came back to her people in Mississippi, and in May, 1905, within a few miles of where she was born and reared, in Warren County, we met at old Asbury Church. In January, 1906, we began thinking of and writing to each other. Of course we were too far advanced in life to practice any foolishness about the matter, so in my second letter to her, I told her my business. It was in April before she gave her consent. In earnest about it? Of course I was. Why not? A man has no business trying to do good as a Methodist preacher without a wife. What are good women for, if not, among other things, to help some worthy man in the work of saving souls? Well, early in January, 1907, we were married in Crystal Springs, Miss. And in less than forty-eight hours we were in the parsonage in Liberty, Miss., where the Bishop said I must go. Dr. B. F. Jones was my presiding elder—a good one.

A funny thing happened. Some of the people, when they heard who was their preacher, said: "We will rent the parsonage and let the money go on the preacher's salary." "But he is going to marry," said some one. "Yes!" said a good sister, "he will marry a girl, and I don't like it a bit." She just did not know, you see. Suffice it to say, this same good woman proved one of the best friends we had. Thirty years before I was in charge of the same work. Most of those who were here then were gone. Ralford, Jagers, Wilkinson, Artie Whittington, Roberts, D. N. Butler, Smith, and many others, had passed over the river. I found, with few exceptions, a new people to preach to.

Nearly everything in the way of Methodism was dead in Liberty. The old church that had been standing more than half a century was in an out-of-the-way place and in a dilapidated condition. The Sunday school was small, and all were discouraged. We, however, had the sympathies of all the good people among the Baptists and Presbyterians. There are always some who are not "good." It is painful to true Christian men and women to see a church, among orthodox Christians, go down. My predecessor on the work undertook to build a new church. I took hold where he left off. We soon sold the old church, purchased a lot in a more eligible place, and by December we were reorganized. Sunday school and all, in our new church. In April, 1908, Brother Walter Harbin held a meeting for us which resulted in the conversion of quite a number, and ten or twelve new members to our church, besides several that joined other churches. Both church and Sunday school took on new life. My good wife organized the good women into an "Aid Society," which did much good.

In September, 1907, Luther Roberts held a successful meeting for me at Woodland. In 1909, my son, J. T. Lewis, of North Mississippi, held a successful meeting in Liberty. In August, my son, O. S. Lewis, held a good meeting at Glading, and Brother W. H. Saunders held a good meeting at Salem. During the three years we were on the Liberty Circuit about 60 or 65 joined our church.

The last day was one of the best. I had announced previously I would preach my far-well sermon. The day was beautiful. The largest congregation I had ever preached to in Liberty was out to hear my farewell talk. My text was "Finally, brethren, farewell. Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace," etc. (II. Cor. xiii. 11). We had a real spiritual service. Eight joined the church—5 women and 3 children. At 3 p.m. I administered the vows of the Church to them. At night we said "good-bye." The Tuesday following we left good old Liberty, and left many warm friends behind. May God watch over and take care of all good people everywhere.

And now, Mr. Editor, I thank you for publishing these reminiscences, and your readers for their patience. Good bye.

At Conference, superannuated.

A WORD TO MY FELLOW-WORKERS.

I hasten to avail of the courtesy of our Church papers to send a word of greeting to my brethren throughout the connection who are interested in the Laymen's Missionary Movement of our Church.

The call to the office of General Secretary comes to me as a gift from God, the responsibility humbles me, the opportunity for large and fruitful service inspires me and the difficulties to be overcome stir up the fighting blood inherited from my Scottish forbears. "On my knees, I cry, 'Lord, who is sufficient for these things?'" and the answer comes back "Lo, I am with you always."

Brothers, we have before us a big man's job. Let us undertake it in manly fashion. This is no time for idle dawdling or the discussion of trivial issues. With two-score perishing who never heard of Jesus Christ, and three-score going out into darkness without hope every minute, an hour becomes precious and the spending of a day without an effort to relieve the situation seems a crime. The supreme question is: What does Jesus Christ think of the thousand-million people in the world who have never yet heard the mention of his name, and those who call themselves his followers and dole out less than a penny a week to send the gospel to them?

O, the patience of Christ who waits and waits "To see the travail of his soul and be satisfied." The crying sin of Christendom is its indifference to a Christless world. Our only excuse is that the real situation has never been brought home to us. We are like the man at our Denominational Rally during the Laymen's Convention at Fresno: After an earnest presentation of the need of the mission field, he arose and said: "Why, I never dreamed of these things. I have been giving ten dollars a year for all the benevolences of the Church, including missions." No one asked me for more and I supposed I was giving my full share, but I want you to understand that from this time on, I give a hundred dollars a year for foreign missions alone.

It is the business of the Laymen's Missionary Movement to make people dream of these things and dream to some purpose. The movement has already made good, and is here to stay until its purpose shall be accomplished.

That twenty-one of the Southern Conventions of the recent campaign have reached, in actual subscriptions, the immediate standard of giving set, and several have passed far beyond, is a prophecy of ultimate victory throughout the land.

The action of our recent General Conference has placed upon the movement the authoritative seal of the Church and made it a part of the regular work of all our Conferences. It now only remains for us to carry it into effective operation throughout all our borders.

What five hundred thousand laymen want to do they can and will do. What a splendid army we are and what a glorious cause we have to fight for!

Let me suggest that the Conference and District Leaders make a special effort to attend their Annual Conference and during the session endeavor to arrange with the presiding elders to have the District Conferences follow one after the other at such convenient intervals that a thorough campaign of the Conference by districts may be had during the year. It would also be well to jointly make an attractive program for Laymen's Day at the District Conferences and to secure the best available speakers and workers for the addresses.

It shall be the business of the General Office to facilitate this work by supplying suitable literature for sale and free distribution and by suggesting programs when requested to do so.

Brethren, let us unite our prayers and join our hearts and hands to wipe forever from Southern Methodism the disgrace of only giving forty-eight cents per member to place within the reach of one thousand million people the knowledge of Jesus Christ.

In the fellowship of a great cause, I am yours sincerely,
C. F. REID.

THE OLD WAY.

Dear Brother Meek: In the Nashville Christian Advocate of July 22, there appeared an article from Mr. A. D. Betts, of Alabama, which struck me very forcibly. It dealt with the need of fasting and prayer in the Church to-day. The communication referred to contained the following pertinent observations: "When did you fast? When you joined the Methodist Church you promised to fast and pray on Friday, before each Quarterly Conference. Each pastor promised to remind his members of this duty. Where are we?"

When we read the brother's questions, we could not remember when we did fast. In fact, we now hear very little about fasting as it is taught both in the Old and New Testaments. Can we not get back to the old Scriptural way of doing things until we have a revival in the Church, which will last not only for a brief season, but throughout the whole year? Are we not drifting away from the time-honored teachings and practices of Methodism? May God help both the pastor and the pew to get back to old-time paths and power! Yours in his name, EFFIE PACE.

Athens, La.

A BOOK REVIEW.

By Rev. C. K. Dickey, M.A.

I have just finished reading the book, "Modes of The Heavenly Life," by Rev. Walter G. Harbin, Haynesville, La., and I have never read a more fascinating book of the kind. My heart was strangely warmed as I read the stirring messages from the graphic pen of this gifted pastor-evangelist.

The book is a series of five sermons on the work of the Holy Spirit. The author has given the world a small book that will long abide. It is truly said, "No one can read it without being stirred to holier aspirations," by Dr. H. A. Meek, in the introduction. The book may move you to tears as it did me. It is sure to make you want to be a better person and inspire you to greater and more heroic service for your Master.

The style is easy and inviting to all classes of readers. The English is good, the diction is pure and the illustrations are well chosen and captivating. The book is modern and yet sound and Biblical. The one sermon on power is worth the price of the entire volume. The book, which is neatly and well arranged on good paper, sells for seventy-five cents (75 cents) and can be had from the author, or the New Orleans Christian Advocate, New Orleans, La.

THANKSGIVING.

The greatest heights to which most Christians, in their short sightedness, seem able to rise is to strive after resignation to things that they cannot alter, and to seek for patience to endure them. The result is that thanksgiving is almost an unknown exercise among the children of God; and instead of giving thanks in everything many of them hardly give thanks in anything. If the truth were told Christians as a body must be acknowledged to be but a thankless set. It is considered in the world a very discourteous thing for one man to receive benefits from another man and fail to thank him, and I cannot see why it is not just as discourteous a thing not to thank God. And yet we find people who would not for the world omit an immediate note of thanks upon the reception of any gift, however trifling, from a human friend, but who have never given God real thanks for any one of the innumerable benefits he has been showering upon them all their lives long—Hannah Withall Smith in "Living in the Sunshine."

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH

LEON IRWIN & CO.FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 884.

Church News

Dr. Wilbur Chapman is laying his plans to conduct an evangelical campaign in Jerusalem next March.

Dr. Fitzgerald Parker has announced his purpose to give in the Epworth Era some studies in the history and text of the Methodist Ritual.

The Baptists of Missouri have succeeded in raising half a million dollars for William Jewell College, $200,000 of which will be put into buildings, and $300,000 added to the endowment.

Rev. M. J. Cofer, the assistant editor of the Wesleyan Christian Advocate, who has been seriously ill for some weeks, has sufficiently recovered to spend a little while in the mornings at his office.

During the past year the colleges of the Methodist Episcopal Church undertook to add to their several endowments an aggregate of $5,728,500. Of this amount, $1,232,000 has already been secured, and $2,563,700 pledged.

The late Mr. Henry Dexter, president of the American News Company, gave in his will $1,000,000 for charitable and benevolent purposes. $250,000 of this went to the Salvation Army, and $150,000 to the American Bible Society.

Miss Italia Garibaldi, granddaughter of General Garibaldi (the Italian Washington) and principal of a Methodist school in Rome, landed in New York City on July 25. She will remain in America about ten weeks, and will deliver a number of missionary addresses and lectures.

Rev. Charles D. Bulla, editor of the Baltimore Southern Methodist, has been chosen superintendent of the Wesley Adult Bible Class Department by the General Sunday School Board, and will enter upon his new duties Sept. 1. He is said to be admirably qualified for this important work.

In order to be present at the semi-annual meeting of the Bishops in New Orleans on October the 20th, Bishop Waterhouse has found it necessary to change the time of meeting of the Montana, Pacific, and Los Angeles Conferences. Each of them will be held a week earlier than was formerly announced.

Dr. James Alburn Chiles has been elected to the professorship of Modern Languages in the Southern University at Greensboro, Ala., to succeed Dr. Littlejohn, who resigned after eleven years of capable service. Dr. Chiles has studied at the Universities of Leipzig and Paris, and has a Ph.D. degree from the University of Illinois.

The three-year time limit still remains intact in the British Wesleyan Discipline, though much flexibility is allowed in the case of their city missions. At the recent session of the Conference a special committee was appointed to provide safeguards, after which certain changes proposed will be handed down to the synods for a vote upon them.

The August number of Go Forward says: "Among religious people in Edinburgh one hears the name of Mr. Moody more frequently than that of any other American. He held a memorable meeting here in 1875, and preached in the same hall in which the World Missionary Conference held its sessions. There are Christian workers still busy who received their first religious impress through that meeting. They still remember and quote his sayings."

In the last issue of the Nashville Advocate Dr. Ivey takes the editor of Zion's Herald to task for a partisan and misleading discussion of the Vanderbilt controversy. This New England sheet has for some time had a penchant for dipping into the affairs of Southern Methodism, about which in reality it knows very little. We heartily commend Dr. Ivey's dignified and complete reply to this officious intermeddler, who impliedly reflected upon Bishops Wilson and Hoss.

Canadian Methodism now has (including probationers) a membership of 340,091. The net gain for 1910 is 5,454, and for the last quadrennium 23,374. The number of Sunday school scholars is 377,400; of churches, 3,672; of parsonages 1,428, and of colleges, 12. The total valuation of all property is $28,389,115. God seems to be greatly blessing our sister Methodism of the far north since a union of the several Wesleyan bodies in the Dominion was effected.

Both the British and Irish Wesleyan Conferences at their recent sessions accorded women the right of membership in them. The vote in the former body was 179 for the measure, and 153 against it. Among those in opposition was Dr. Dinsdale T. Young, whose brilliant address at our Birmingham General Conference will long be remembered. He declared that if all the women in the Church demanded it, it should still be refused, for the proposal was unscriptural.

uneclesiastical, unseemly, and untimely. But his vigorous remonstrance appears to have had little effect.

Dr. E. G. B. Mann, of the Central Methodist Advocate, observes that some of his exchanges are just now publishing a notice of the unveiling of a portrait of Bishop Bascomb in the chapel of Transylvania University, with him as the principal speaker—an event which took place last May. We plead not guilty. We caught the item when it first appeared in the Central and started it going. We have noticed, however, that some of our confreres copied what we wrote concerning the occurrence and ascribed it to the Central Advocate. How Dr. Mann likes this we do not know, but, as for us, we shall register no complaint against them, though it would appear that some of our editors need to be more accurate as well as more wide-awake.

The New York Christian Advocate of August 11th says: "The newspapers tell of a pastor in the United Brethren Church, in Cleveland, O., who has just celebrated his golden wedding anniversary. He has been in the ministry for forty-six years, and the highest annual salary he has received is $600. Yet he has been able to give his six sons a college education, and the four daughters have been trained in various forms of usefulness which would enable them to earn their own livelihood." We doubt not that many cases similar to this might be discovered among the Methodist preachers of the South. As an economist and master of small finance, the circuit rider has never had an equal. But it is a shame that men who contribute so much to the upbuilding of society should be forced to live on salaries so meager.

From the Western Christian Advocate, of Cincinnati, we appropriate the following: "Dr. T. H. Lewis, president of Western Maryland College, Westminster, Maryland, and a most prominent minister of the Methodist Protestant Church, is probably the most effective pulpit orator in America, in the judgment of many. He is an enthusiastic advocate of Church union, and has made at least three most remarkable speeches in its favor; the first at the Conference of Congregationalists, United Brethren, and Methodist Protestants, at Dayton, O., where the delegates of all three pledged organic combination, which, however, was not consummated; the second, before the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1908, and the third before the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Asheville, last May, pleading for a union of all Methodist bodies. Although the great effect produced at the time faded away without action, such continued effort must eventually result in bringing something to pass."

OUR YOUNG PREACHERS AND OUR COLLEGES.

By Rev. H. B. Watkins.

It occurs to me that one of the weakest points in our present educational work is our failure to raise each year a fund to be devoted to the education of young preachers. The number of young preachers in Millsaps College is absurdly small, and by no means adequate to meet the growing needs of the Church for a well-equipped ministry. This is not because young men are not being called of God to preach, but it is rather because we, as a Church, are making no effort to aid them in attaining an academic education. I have been for the past five years on the committee for recommendation of young preachers to the Annual Conference from the District Conference. Each year we have recommended men who had very much better have gone to college four or five years before joining the Conference, but who could by no means see their way clear to do so.

There is a very limited field to-day for an illiterate ministry. There is hardly a congregation but what has splendidly educated people in it who cannot and do not enjoy hearing ministers without even the rudiments of an English education. The young preachers are hardly to blame. Most of them in God's providence come from the homes of the poor. We do them an injustice to take them into our Conferences and send them out to tasks they are not qualified to meet. They achieve marvelous success under the circumstances, to be sure, but nothing like they might achieve were they better equipped. We send out undeveloped men with latent powers that only a good college training can call out.

Our Conferences could raise with the smallest effort several thousand dollars per year for the training of young preachers. It is true that Millsaps College gives free matriculation to young preachers, but this is only a very small portion of the large expense incurred at college where board and books and clothes must be secured. With the Baptists the term "ministerial education" is familiar in every congregation. We know no such fund, and yet I know of none outside of the fund for the Orphans' Home and Conference claimants that would appeal more strongly to our people. They would actually love their preachers better and their schools better, did we but establish this sacred tie between them.

It is unfair to our young preachers who are to enter a non-compensation work, led by unselfish motives, to expect them to borrow money, and then come out to have the first years of their ministry hampered by debt, which none will condemn more quickly than the very people who take no part in assisting them. There are in our State, and in all our States, a number of private institutions of a religious character that are turning out more young preachers than our Conference schools, and too often they are schools whose very atmosphere breeds disloyalty to Methodist institutions. These young men go there not because they are disloyal, or because they come from disloyal homes, but because these schools are making an especial pull for them and are giving them help, without which they could not go at all.

I hope our Millsaps will begin the creation of a fund like that. I should welcome to my Church a representative of the college collecting a fund for that purpose, or I will join any number of churches in the beginning of such a fund, which I know is needed and which I know our people will readily respond to. It seems to me that our college, with a fund like that in hand, by consulting with the presiding elders, could take from our District Conferences each year young men whom we are now receiving, all too poorly equipped, for admission on trial. A few earnest years at Millsaps College would make very different men of them. Our people are demanding an educated ministry. Let our people help educate them. No denomination will have a plentiful supply of well trained men which doesn't furnish that training. Say not, "We have too many collections." Show me a single congregation in our Conferences that is paying one-tenth of their income to God before we begin to plead their poverty for them. We are able to do this, and we ought to begin at once.

Magnolia, Miss.

177 at Port Gibson Female College pays for a whole session's board, laundry, literary tuition, medical, library, lyceum, Gibsonian and outing fees. Music, Art, Expression, or Stenography, $15 extra.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location. Includes furniture. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

FOR SALE.—A sixty-dollar Stereopticon Outfit with fifty views, $30. A twenty-dollar Pope Bicycle, $12. A six-dollar Lawton Simplex Printer, ten by eight, 100 copies written matter, $3.50. A printing press and job outfit, $20. A fourteen-dollar writing desk, with five-drawers and cabinet, $8. A $400 piano for $250. Shipped at buyer's expense. Box 23, Montrose, Miss.

The Centenary College of Louisiana.

Fall Term will
open Sept. 14, 1910.

For Catalogues or other information write to

FELIX R. HILL, President,

or

JOHN S. JOHNSTON, Dean,

SHREVEPORT, LA.

Secular News and Comment

The Eighteenth Universal Peace Congress met at Stockholm, Sweden, on July 30th. Men and women of nearly every nationality, color, and language were in attendance. The gathering lasted about a week.

The press dispatches report James Whitcomb Riley, the "Hoosier poet," as seriously ill at his home in Indianapolis. He is in the fifty-sixth year of his age and is said to be suffering from a form of paralysis.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt is scheduled to visit Jackson, Miss., next spring. The citizens of that city were anxious to have him come this fall, but his engagements would not permit him to do so. He was in Vicksburg some three or four years ago, but this will be his first visit to the capital of the State.

Mayor William J. Gaynor, of New York City, who was shot by a discharged dock watchman on the 9th inst., continues to improve, but it can scarcely yet be said that his recovery is assured. Prayer was offered for him in all of the New York churches last Sunday. There has been talk of his attempted assassination being the culmination of a plot, but this does not seem to have been proven.

Dr. Thomas P. Bailey, superintendent of the Memphis Public Schools, has tendered his resignation to accept a position with the Bureau of Municipal Research of New York City. Dr. Bailey was born in South Carolina, but has had many attractive offers made him in the past by Northern educational institutions. Before going to Memphis, he was a professor in the University of Mississippi for several years.

Mr. Robert Treat Paine, president of the American Peace Congress, and a widely-known philanthropist, died at his home in Waltham, Mass., on Aug. 11. He was well known at The Hague, and was an earnest advocate of disarmament upon the part of the various nations. He was a thorough-going American, his grandfather having been one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. He was fifty-five years old.

Florence Nightingale, the organizer of nursing in the Crimean War and the most loved woman in Great Britain, if not in the world, died in London last Saturday. She was born at the Villa Columbia, near Florence, Italy, on May 12, 1820, while her parents were abroad, and was named for the beautiful Italian city. She was the only woman upon whom the Order of Merit in England was ever conferred, and the second woman to receive the freedom of the city of London. Her humanitarian services have never been surpassed.

While President Mr. Roosevelt inaugurated a movement for world-wide conservation, but, according to late reports, the scheme has met with little response upon the part of other nations. Of the forty-nine governments communicated with on the subject, it is stated that only nineteen have replied, and some of these quite indifferently. We think the ex-President's proposal an excellent one, however, as there are some world resources that can be properly safeguarded only by the powers acting in concert.

The late King Edward of England is said to have been a man of great kindness of heart, as is shown by the following clipping from the Times-Democrat: "Three examples of King Edward's practical sympathy with suffering were quoted by Father Bernard Vaughan in a sermon in London. The first showed his personal interest in the sickness of a domestic servant; the second, his care for a blind boy. The third was a pathetic story of a child—a little bread-winner in an East End slum. She was thrown out of work by lung trouble, and wrote to the King begging him to send her to some place for open-air treatment. The girl's home was visited by a friend of the King, who reported the genuine character of the case. The child was sent away by the King for six months and is now in good health and at work in a factory."

In the recent election in Tennessee, the judicial candidates put forward by the Patterson administration were defeated by a majority of approximately 40,000. This result has been hailed throughout the South as a great triumph for civic righteousness and the cause of good government. It was alleged by some of the supreme judges seeking re-election that the Governor had sought to coerce them into a decision favorable to the Coopers, who killed Senator Carmack, while their appeal was pending before that tribunal. Mr. Patterson, however, vigorously denied this, claiming that there was no foundation for the charge. Whether the anti-administration victory foreshadows the smashing of the Patterson machine in the Volunteer State is, of course, at this time largely a matter of conjecture, but it is certainly to be hoped that it does. There is, perhaps, not a more corrupt and conscienceless politician in the Southern States than Mr. Patterson. The fact that he possesses considerable ability and talents, the coarseness and vulgarity of many of the post-bellum demagogues who have been a curse to the commonwealths of Dixie, only makes him the more dangerous and influential for evil. He is believed to be thoroughly in league with the liquor traffic, his hasty issuance of a pardon to Col. Cooper, his political ally, before even an application had been made for it, was a scandal and disgrace. Especially was this true, as he and Mr. Carmack were not on good terms, and his connection with that respectable trader was sufficiently close to awaken suspicion that he knew see—the State of Polk, of Jackson, of Johnson, of Harris, and Bate, and other names whose names are written high upon the scroll of fame—return to the shades of private life this Catalogue of Southern politics, and the echoes of applause will reach them from every part of the Union. They may be assured that in the approaching contest the eyes of the nation are upon them.

DEDICATION AT PONCHATLOULA

The recently-erected Methodist Church at Ponchatoula was dedicated today at 11 a. m. Bishop W. B. Murrah, one of the Bishops recently elected at the General Conference held at Asheville, N. C., preaching the dedicatory sermon. The utmost capacity of the large, new church was taxed to seat the congregation which assembled from all parts of the parish. Besides Bishop Murrah, several other prominent ministers and church officials were in attendance. Among these were Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Rev. C. C. Miller, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District; Rev. J. P. Haney, preacher in charge at Ponchatoula; Rev. H. W. Bowman, T. V. Ellzey, State Superintendent of Sunday schools, and Dr. E. L. McGehee, of New Orleans.

The construction of the magnificent building which was dedicated today was begun early in 1907 under the efficient administration of the Rev. F. N. Sweeney, then preacher in charge at Ponchatoula, and under his faithful exertions, backed by the liberal financial aid of Ponchatoula's loyal Methodists, was completed late in the same year. The building committee was composed of Messrs. J. R. Abels, William Jackson, E. W. Vineyard and B. Spiller, which gentlemen are to be also commended for giving liberally of their means to further the enterprise. The church is of modern architectural design and built of brick. It has art glass mosaic windows, white plastered walls, bowl floor and slate roof. Its value is estimated at $12,000. Its auditorium is ample and the church contains five Sunday-school rooms, which are so placed that they may be made a part of the main auditorium. The contracting architects were Drago & Smith, of New Orleans. Chas. Strick deserves mention for his connection with the enterprise in the capacity of construction superintendent. The lots upon which the church is located and which are ideally situated were donated by Mr. and Mrs. E. Foster Hoyt, of Rochester, N. Y. Mr. Thomas C. Bates, late of the same city, being influential in securing their donation. The magnificent forty-eight inch bell was presented to the church by Mrs. J. R. Abels, of Ponchatoula. By the earnest efforts of the Rev. J. P. Haney, preacher in charge, $2,400 has been raised to meet the notes against the church, and the Rev. Mr. Haney announced today that all indebtedness against the church has been paid and that the last note was canceled and in his possession.

Following is the programme of the services: Opening Hymn No. 180, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name," vocal solo, "Hold Thou My Hand" by Mrs. Kingsbury; Hymn 661, "Come, O Thou God of Grace," prayer by the Rev. Sweeney; Scripture Lessons, Bishop Murrah, Genesis 28, verses 10 and 11; Hebrews 10, verses 10 and 20; Hymn 663; announcements by Rev. J. P. Haney; sermon by Bishop Murrah; taking of collection for improvement of parsonage; formal dedication of church, doxology and benediction.

Bishop Murrah selected his text from Matthew 13:33: "The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, until the whole lump was leavened." The Bishop did not speak from manuscript or from notes. His sermon though Ciceronian in style, was free from any ostentation or display. The audience was delighted with its rich spirit and splendid diction. The Bishop said in part:

"The kingdom of heaven is not the church, but the mission of the church is the promotion of the kingdom of heaven. If the church should successfully accomplish its object then the principles of the kingdom would become pregnant in society, and God's will would be done on earth as it is in heaven. The words to which attention is directed were spoken by Christ himself. They were not understood, however, when they were uttered. In the nature of the case they could not then be understood in their deep and thrilling importance. It required the developments and revelations of history to bring out and illuminate the significance of the passage, and interpret its profound meaning. The words are descriptive of the nature of Christ's kingdom, and they are prophetic of its ultimate triumph. Note the diffusive power of the gospel is strikingly illustrated. The leaven was small as compared to the mass so small, indeed, that it was hidden; but by a power essential to its nature, it pervades the entire mass until every atom is affected. The record of the gospel's progress is one of the marvels of history; it is indeed the marvel of history, and no profound thinker will ever claim to have satisfactorily explained it upon any other theory than that which puts a divine element into it. Gibbon's effort to explain by leaving out the supernatural was a signal failure. See what has come to pass. The world's thought of God changed.

The ethical religions, the religions of the races, denied list and passion. The Hebrew view, while noble, was inadequate. The man who would claim that the kingdom of heaven had not worked a transformation in this regard would display utter ignorance of history. Take the conception of man as held by the enlightened nations and contrast it with the view which prevailed before the leaven of the gospel was introduced into the world. Note the adaptation of the gospel to the needs of humanity. Some one has observed that you cannot leaven sawdust; you cannot leaven sand; you can leaven meal. See how the gospel in its principles supplies just what man needs. It gives us just the view of God which satisfies us. It answers the longing of the soul after immortality. It meets the demand for atonement, reconciliation, friendship with God. The forces of the kingdom work silently. The kingdom of heaven cometh not with observation. The mighty forces of the universe are the silent forces. The gospel makes society attractive. The meal is made palatable and wholesome by the leaven. Jesus Christ designs through his gospel to change the world, not a part of it, but all of it. The leaven keeps on working until the whole is leavened. The gospel is essentially missionary in its spirit.—New Orleans Picayune, Aug.

SPECIAL TERMS TO AGENTS.

I should like to make special rates with book-stores, drug stores, or persons that will sell my book, "A-le-the-ia." They may write me at Hammond, La. I am anxious to get the book into every city, town and village of Louisiana. One of the most popular and best-loved ministers of New Orleans writes me: "I have read your book. It is a fascinating story. It is a hard strike at the saloon and miscegenation. It will do good. I wish all our young people would read it." MRS. C. C. MILLER.

DEATH OF MRS. W. H. LEDBETTER.

Mrs. W. H. Ledbetter, the wife of our pastor at Colfax, passed from earth to heaven from the parsonage at that place, Saturday, Aug. 13, at 1 o'clock a. m. She leaves a husband and two daughters to mourn their loss. We ask the prayers of the Church in their behalf. PAUL M. BROWN, P. E.

(The press dispatches announce that the remains were carried to Simmsboro, La., for interment. Sister Ledbetter had been in failing health for some time. May divine grace sustain the members of this stricken household, and help them to bear up under the weight of this crushing sorrow. We hope to have a suitable memoir of the deceased in the near future.)

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

You Need the Leaders' Hand-Book.

The Most Complete Manual of the Laymen's Movement That Has Yet Appeared.

A hundred-page book full of practical plans and valuable suggestions for speakers, leaders, and committees, together with an appendix giving an account of the Dallas Conference, a copy of the National Policy adopted at Chicago, and a digest of the action of the late General Conference on the Laymen's Movement.

Price, 25 cents per copy, silver or stamps. Order on this coupon from

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT,

M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH,

810 Broadway,

Nashville, Tenn.

Name

Address

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

A MEMOIR.

Rev. Kenneth Alexander Jones, son of Rev. Ransom J. Jones, Sr., and Effie McInnis Jones, was born in Jasper County, Miss., Feb. 2, 1836, and died in the home of his son, Capt. Harvey J. Jones, Summer, Miss., Feb. 16, 1910.

He was licensed to preach Sept. 16, 1855, and in November of the same year, he was admitted on trial into the Mississippi Conference at Vicksburg, Bishop Kavanaugh presiding.

He was admitted into full connection at Brandon and ordained deacon by Bishop Early in 1857, and ordained elder by Bishop Paine at Canton, in 1861.

During the fifty-four years of service in the gospel ministry, his appointments were as follows: 1856, Paulding Circuit as junior preacher, with J. R. Thomas; his father, R. J. Jones, being presiding elder; 1857, Pearl River Circuit, with H. M. Youngblood; 1858, Brandon Circuit, with Jas. A. Godfrey; 1859, Philadelphia Circuit; 1860, local; 1861, Westville Circuit; 1862, Paulding Circuit; 1863, Augusta Mission; 1864, Beaver Dam Mission; 1865, Handsboro District; 1866-67-68-69, Starkville District; 1870, Starkville and Pierce Chapel.

At the close of this year the North Mississippi Conference was organized, of which he became a member and served the following charges, viz:

1871-72, Black Hawk Circuit; 1873-74-75, Yazoo District; 1876-77, Black Hawk Circuit; 1878-79-80-81, Winona District; 1882, Grenada District; 1883-84, Wood Street, Water Valley; 1885-86-87, Senatobia Station; 1888-89-90, Hernando and Coldwater; 1891-92-93-94, Crawford Circuit; 1895-96-97, McNutt; 1898-99, Okolona Station; 1900-01-02, Ripley and New Albany; 1903-04-05-06, Prairie Circuit; 1907-08-09, Sidon and Tchula.

At the close of 1909, being "worn out in the itinerant service" and in feeble health, he was granted an honorable superannuate relation by the Conference held in Okolona, and gracefully retired from the active ministry, after more than a half century of faithful service.

Though he had been for some time in declining health, little did we think that this would be his last meeting with us in Conference session on earth. But so it was to be. In a little more than two months' time the news was flashed over the country that our esteemed brother had suddenly and unexpectedly departed this life after a brief illness.

"The voice at midnight came;
He started up to hear;
A mortal arrow pierced his frame,
He fell; but felt no fear."

His last words were: "Oh, Lord, be merciful to your old servant. Take him and keep him." And our faith is that, as he rests from his loved employ, his soul enjoys the full fruition of the blessed Christian hope he so long and earnestly preached to others. His body was buried at Crawford, Miss., beside his wife and daughter, after funeral services conducted by Rev. T. H. Dorsey, assisted by Revs. T. C. Wier, R. M. Evans and N. G. Augustus.

Brother Jones was a good preacher and pastor, a faithful servant of the Church and of the Master who called him to the office and work of the ministry.

In all the conditions and relations of life, the spirit of kindness, gentleness and patience was manifested in his demeanor. With a sunny countenance and words of good-will, cheer and comfort for everybody, his presence, whether in the church, home or social circle, was ever pleasant and inspiring. He was of a family of preachers. His father, Ransom J. Jones, Sr., and younger brother, Ransom J. Jones, Jr., were prominent members of the Mississippi Conference, each one of them serving a term in the presiding eldership, and the youngest brother, W. B. Jones, is now presiding elder on the Seashore District.

Brother Jones was married Dec. 29, 1857, to Miss Lucinda McCormick, who died Oct. 10, 1906. To them were born five sons and five daughters, all of whom are yet living, excepting three daughters who preceded the parents to "the better land." May the whole family be re-united in the Father's many-mansioned house in heaven. We deplore the loss of our brother to our fellowship on earth, but hope to meet him in the Church triumphant in heaven.

G. W. BACHMAN.

Winona, Miss.

INTEMPERANCE.

(Sermon delivered by the venerable Rev. George Jackson at the recent Seashore Camp Meeting.—In two parts.)

Number II.

"Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken, also that thou mayest look on their nakedness."

Bottles Make Rags.

"Bottle and rags, bottle and rags," called the rag man as he plied his (trade) calling.

"Why do you always put these words together," asked the passer-by.

"Because, madam," said the rag man, courteously touching his hat to the lady, "wherever you find bottles you find rags."

Shrewd philosophy. It is a pity that our statesmen cannot see the thing as clear, and that for the good of prosperity, to say nothing of the moral happiness of the people, they do not stop the accursed liquor traffic, instead of putting in the way of Christian workers all sorts of handicaps.

Remember the shrewd words of the rag man, who sees things as they are. "Wherever you find bottles you find rags." And if you wish to save the people from coming to rags, you will banish the bottle. Let us all say, We shall not give over the fight until we succeed. Angelus.

A Word About a Drop.

"Come in Patrick, and take a drop of something," said one Chicago Irishman to another.

"No, Mike, I am afraid of drops ever since Tim Flaherty died."

"Well, what about him?"

"He was one of the likeliest fellows in these parts. But he began the drop business in Barney Shannon's saloon. It was a drop of something out of a bottle at first. But in a little while Tim took a few drops too much, and then he dropped into the gutter. He lost his place, he lost his coat and hat, he lost his money, he lost everything but his thirst for strong drink. 'Poor Tim! And the worst was to come; he got crazy with drink one day and killed a man. And the last time I saw him he was taking his last drop with a slipping noose around his neck."

"I have quit the dropping business, Mike. I have seen so many good fellows, when whisky had the drop on them. They took just a drop from the bottle, and they dropped into the gutter, and then dropped into the grave. No rumrunner can get a drop on me any more, and if you don't drop him, he will drop you."—Templar.

America's Curse.

By Rev. J. W. Tarsey.

(Copied from the Rip Saw, of April, 1907.)

"The saloon is a running sore on the body politic, a moral cancer on the conscience of the nation, an ulcer on the home. It is more destructive than the three curses of war, pestilence and famine."

"It is a cruel despot, a heartless master, and an insatiable monster. It respects no law, regards no person, worships no God but Mammon, defiles week days, and remembers no Lord's day. It makes sober men drunkards, rich men poor, honest men thieves, and business men rascals."

"It is a financial curse. It drains the pocket, diminishes comfort, and depletes the bank account; it makes business men bankrupts and its patrons paupers."

"It is dishonest. For your money it gives nothing but a maddened mind, a tyrant's temper, a devilish disposition."

"It is a domestic curse. It makes wives widows, fathers fiends, and children criminals. It deprives men of manhood, boys of brains, homes of happiness and lives of love."

"The evils of the saloon can never be exaggerated. Who can describe the drunkard's home? Who can paint the wife's misery, the widow's woe, the mother's broken heart, and the sufferings of orphan children? Who can picture the prison bars, the felon's cell, the ghastly gallows? Its history is a history of shame, sin and suffering; of cruelty, crime and corruption; of disease, death and damnation. It turns the home into a hovel, and the palace into a poorhouse."

"Dare the saloon-keepers go out on dress parade and exhibit samples of their degrading work. What a spectacle? Walking beer barrels, two-legged demijohns, lopsided whisky jugs, drunken debauchers, loathsome libertines, raving lunatics, ragged ruffians, thugs and thieves, brutes and burglars."

"Open the prisons and poorhouses and let their inmates increase their number. Let the sewers of society, the slime gates of vice, the barrooms and brothels, swell the procession. This is not all; following the rear, see the long procession of ruined homes, heart-broken mothers, wives, widows and orphans."

"AN ANIMATED DISCUSSION."

Readers of the Advocate who have read what I said about the Vanderbilt matter know what positions I took. Those who have not read what I said will get an erroneous idea from the statement in the Advocate of Aug. 4. They will be surprised to learn that I took two positions, viz:

1. The difference between the General Conference and the Trustees is purely a legal question, which can be settled by a law court only. Therefore, let the court settle it.

2. Pending that proper settlement, it is wrong for Methodists to abuse one another.

All else that I said was incidental.

The fact that Brother Meek seized upon merely incidental statements, confirms the opinion held and expressed by me, that my two contentions cannot be successfully controverted.

Here endeth the first lesson.

Who blundered?

Brother Meek says further: " * * * We feel sure that Brother Bingham will appreciate having his attention called to one blunder that he made in his reply to Dr. Featherston. He stated therein that the General Conference levied an assessment of $25,000 to defray the expenses of a lawsuit. That is not true. Pretty cool, that! His supposed quotation contains not one word used by me, except the amount stated. It is sufficiently accurate to represent my statement, but when one uses quotation marks it is well to be exact.

Now for the facts. I quote from the Daily Christian Advocate on page 132 and page 133: "The report No. 2 from the Committee on Education was, on motion, adopted. E. M. Glenn: The next report is a good long one, and I move that we consider it item by item. The motion prevailed."

"E. M. Glenn: I move to amend the report in the fourth line by substituting $75,000 for $95,000, and in sixth line, $5,000 for $25,000." Dr. Glenn discussed his motion, and was followed by Dr. Anthony.

Now I quote again:

"W. F. Dunkle: I move to amend, in line 7 of the report No. 2 strike out the words '$25,000 to be used at the discretion of this Board.'"

The presiding Bishop stated the question, and recognized Judge O'Rear, who spoke for the report, and against the amendments.

I quote that part of the Judge's speech which bears on the "blunder":

"You have, by resolution adopted the other day, called upon your Board of Education, if the emergency should arise, to defend what may be an expensive and protracted lawsuit over your institution which you have in charge, and laid upon this Board the responsibility of providing funds. Out of this item alone can funds be provided. Do you now propose to say that you will go into such a conflict without resources? (Black letters mine, J. R. B.)"

"E. M. Glenn: Did the Board of Education have in mind the contingency of that lawsuit when they considered this item?"

"E. C. O'Rear: The committee had it in mind when they voted it, undoubtedly, and it ought to be in the mind of the Conference now as you are face to face with that practical situation. My experience is, that you cannot run lawsuits without money. I hope you will not have to do it, and I am sure the Board of Education will need all the money it can raise that these youthful minds may be made ready for the responsibilities of life. The Church that does not educate, dies, and ought to die." (Black letters mine, J. R. B.)

After further discussion, both amendments were defeated, and the report was adopted.

Who blundered? Judge O'Rear ought to be an acceptable witness to Brother Meek.

It is true that Dr. A. V. Godbey said the statement that the $25,000 item was for the lawsuit might be misleading, that it was not for that purpose. I submit that the report of the committee not being at hand and not noting at the time Dr. Godbey's statement, I was justified in assuming that the statement of the chairman of the committee was correct, especially when made in such positive terms and when that chairman was Judge Ed C. O'Rear.

But granting that Judge O'Rear's statement was incorrect and did mislead the Conference and caused my "one blunder," Brother Meek knows perfectly well that the pith of my statement in reply to Dr. Featherston lay in the fact that the General Conference made provision for compensation for "hired attorneys," and not in the amount of the compensation.

This unnecessary and unkind agitation against the trustees, begun in personal resentment, has been conducted largely on suspicion and misrepresentation, till it appears difficult for good men, even so good a man as Brother Meek, to be fair.

J. R. BINGHAM.

The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.—Selected.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that
—Lasts a LIFETIME—
WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.
427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

SPEARING & CO.,

(Established 1817.)

SAIL MAKERS

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS and TENTS.

CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOU LAS STREETS
Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

The Home Circle

THE STARLESS CROWN.

By Rev. Wm. E. Belleisle.

In a dream there came a message,
Calling me to another land;
The message was borne by an angel,
With a sceptre in his hand.
He said to me, "Rise quickly,
I have no time to waste!
My Lord sent me here hurriedly,
Be quick, make haste, make haste!"

I asked him, "Can't you wait a while?
Let me tell my loved ones good-by;
Should they wake and find me absent,
Oh, how they would grieve and cry!"
He said, "No time for good-by now,
Don't you know what the Savior said
While he was on earth with men,
Let the dead bury the dead?"

He said, "Follow me, come quickly,
I will lead you all the way;
I'll carry you out of this dark world,
Into eternal day.
At once we came to a river,
Whose waters were strange to me;
I asked him, "Oh, pray tell me sir,
What can all this be?"

"The world calls this the river of death,"
He answered tenderly;
"Each soul must cross this river,
To spend eternity."
He raised the golden sceptre,
Which he held in his right hand,
Lo, the waters were divided,
We past over on dry land.

When we had reached the other shore,
Great glory I did behold;
My eyes beheld those pearly gates;
For me they did unfold.
We past through and I was greeted,
By the holy angels' round;
They were clad in robes white as snow,
With glory they were crowned.

The angel that was leading me
Still held me by the hand;
He said, "Behold the beauty,
Now you are in the glory land.
The walls were made of precious stones,
The streets were paved with gold;
The buildings were so very fair,
Most glorious to behold."

He led me on still further,
Till we reached the great white throne,
Where the King sat in his glory,
There to judge and crown his own.
Then I heard the angels singing,
They were singing, oh, so sweet,
While they sang they were bowing
Low about the Savior's feet.

While I listened I was silent,
I uttered not a single word;
No mortal ever made such music,
And I'll tell you what I heard:
"Praise the holy name of Jesus,
He is King, and he will reign!
He is worthy, let us praise him,
He was dead, but lives again."

While I stood, the King looking Steadily into mine eyes,
I found myself all trembling,
I could scarcely help but cry.
Then I found that I was speechless—
Just as though I had no tongue;
And the angels stood round me,
In my ears the music rung.

Then an angel took the record,
And with care he searched the roll;
Then he said, "My Lord, your honor,
He did not save a single soul;
Though he said he has been faithful—
The naked, clothed, the hungry fed—
The only thing there is against him,
Not one soul to thee has led."

The King then answered, "He's worthy
Just a naked crown to wear;
He shall dwell with me forever,
All my glories he shall share."
He commanded that they crown me
With a crown of common gold;
"For he fed my sheep when hungry, Clothed them when he found them cold."

Then they placed a crown upon me,
It was made of gold so pure;
There's none on earth to surpass it,
None to equal it I'm sure;
I looked to see the difference
In the other crowns and mine;
With stars I found each crown covered,
And each star did brightly shine.

Then I found my tongue was loosed,
That I, too, might speak a word;
Though I stood and kept all silent,
Cries of woe I thought I heard.
Then I turned and looked below me,
And I saw a mighty throng;
They cried for rocks and also mountains,
They did not sing a single song.

Then I turned and asked the question,
"What can all this passing be?
If they only knew the glory,
I am sure they'd come to thee."
Then he said, "Behold their faces,
And I saw my loved ones there;
Then with joy I would have called them,
But to call I did not dare."

Then I saw them plunging downward,
Where they went I could not tell;
Then I turned and asked the Savior,
And he said, "They are doomed to hell.
If someone had only told them
How I died on Calvary,
They would now have been in heaven,
Here to spend eternity."

Then he said, "Your crown is starless,
You might have had a starry crown;
If you had only told the story
To the ones that have gone down.
I found that I was only dreaming,
And I bowed to God in prayer,
That I might help to save some sinner,
And a crown with stars ever wear."

THE LONESOME DOLLIES.

One morning Isabel didn't want to go to kindergarten.

"I know my dollies are so lonesome without me," she whined.

"Don't you think that they can get along better without you than the little kindergarten girls and boys can? They will miss you in their pretty games."

That was what mamma said.

Isabel shook her head. "My dollies want me to stay with them," she insisted.

"All right," mamma told her, "you may stay at home to-day, and see how you like it."

At four o'clock in the afternoon Isabel's dearest friend, Constance, came to see if she was sick.

"No," laughed Isabel; "my dollies were lonesome, so mamma let me stay home with them."

"Oh, you ought to have gone!" cried Constance. "Teacher taught us a lovely new game. We all stood up in a row, and teacher dropped candy into our mouths!"

"O-O!" gasped Isabel.

"We all had our eyes shut," Constance went on; "and we had to guess what the candy was flavored with. It was splendid candy. I had lemon and chocolate and sassafras."

"Oh," said Isabel, "I'm going to-morrow."

"But what will your dollies do?" mamma asked, smiling.

"I guess they won't mind much," answered Isabel, hanging her head.

The next morning Isabel trotted off to kindergarten with Constance, but there was no candy game that day, or the next, or the next. In fact, it was a long week before the new game was tried again. Then Isabel enjoyed it as much as anybody.

"I'm not going to stay home from kindergarten any more," she said.

"Even if the dollies are lonesome," laughed her brother.

"I guess I wanted my dollies more than they wanted me," confessed Isabel shyly.—Emma C. Dowd.

THE BOY WITH A WILL.

"Come, boys; it's time to get ready for Sabbath-school," said mamma to Jimmy and Ned. "I told you once before."

"There's lots of time," said Jimmy, the biggest, but not the best, boy. "Here, Ned, look at this picture." But Ned was already upstairs, getting ready to start.

"Pshaw! what your hurry?" grumbled Jimmy, but proceeded to follow his younger brother's example; and they were soon on their way, gathering quite a small following of boys as they went along.

Between their home and the church was a large vacant lot where a crowd of boys of all sizes, ages and conditions were playing ball, in utter disregard of the day. There was much shouting and gesticulating, and the excitement was so great that our little band of Sabbath-school scholars was in danger of being broken up, they were so interested, nearly all wanting to stop and watch the game.

"Wait just a minute, boys," cried Jimmy, stopping still on the sidewalk. "There's lots of time."

"There's not lots of time, either," declared Ned. "We'll be late—we're late now."

"Well, what if we are?" demanded Jimmy; and "That's so," and "I don't care if we are," and the like came from the other boys.

Then some boys, standing near, who overheard them, began to call out in derision: "Good little boy!" "Mamma's dearie!" and "Sissy darling!" but Ned—though he hated above all things to be made fun of—started off determinedly, holding his head high in the air; his under jaw set, his eyes gleaming, saying to his chums: "You may do as you like, I'm going to Sabbath-school," and he walked on very fast all by himself.

"Ned is as stubborn as a mule," cried Jimmy wrathfully. "I never saw such a fellow. Come on, boys; I s'pose we'll have to go, too." So they all trailed along in the rear of Ned, whose pace increased as he neared the church. But this was not all; some boys belonging to the same Sabbath-school, who were on the opposite side of the lot, watching the game, when they saw our little party headed for the church, were suddenly reminded of their duty, and came running after them in a great hurry.

And so, just because one boy kept his mind firmly fixed upon doing what he knew was right, and could not be swerved from it, either by the pleadings of his friends or the jeers of his enemies, the faces of the almost disheartened superintendent of the school and the teachers brightened in pleased smiles when the crowd of boys came pouring into the school room, in spite of the fact that they were quite a few moments late. And it never once occurred to any of the boys—not even Ned—that very likely, if he had not been true to the right, not one of them would have been there at all, and every one of them the worse, not the better, for the way their Sabbath was spent.—Anna H. Wendruff in Exchange.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER,

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic
WELCOME RELIEF

Follows the use of Dr. Tichenor's

Antiseptic on the face after shaving.

Mix with five parts water and bathe the face well each time—and your shaving troubles will all be over.

No more Chafing, Stinging, Chapping or Soreness if you will do this.

"It's soothing coolness is delightful."

ALL DRUGGISTS • 25 AND 50 CENTS

ASK ANY ONE WHO HAS EVER USED IT!

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.
OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS:

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers
of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulter, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

A NEEDED MESSAGE.

We call special attention to Rev. D. H. Kern's plea for "A Lost Gospel," which appears upon our front page. A more impressive and needed message has not come under our eye in many a day. It ought to thrill and stir the Church like a trumpet call. The only gospel worth having is one that saves. This has been the distinctive glory of the gospel of Christ from the beginning, and if it lacks vitalizing, transforming power to-day, it is because it is not preached in its essence and purity. There has been no change in anything to prevent it accomplishing now what it accomplished in the past. Its great, fundamental truths—the fall, the incarnation, the atonement, justification by faith, the new birth, the judgment, the immortality of man, and future rewards and punishment—have not lost one whit of their tremendous significance. There has been no lessening of man's need, or of the sufficiency of Christ, or of the adequacy of the Holy Spirit's power; but there has been too much forgetfulness of the Church's true mission—too much reliance upon material means and methods—too much incertitude in the messages of the pulpit.

The recovery of its spiritual vision and evangelical spirit is the supreme need of twentieth-century Methodism. For these there is no substitute. Scholarship we must have, and it is incumbent upon every minister to acquire all of it that he possibly can (ignorance is never a help, but a hindrance), but education in its own strength is impotent to cope with regnant evil. With all their learning, how little progress the Congregationalists and Presbyterians have made in extending the sway of Christ's kingdom! Social reforms are well enough, but they cannot uproot the sin that is dominant in the soul. Soap may cleanse the body, but only the blood of Jesus can cleanse the heart. The soup kitchen can not take the place of the mourners' bench; the chief ministry of Christianity must ever be to the deathless spirit.

We heartily commend Mr. Kern's earnest appeal. We hope that every reader of the Advocate will seriously reflect upon it, and that it will set many lips to praying for the true prosperity of Zion. Pitiably poor is a church without spiritual, life-giving power. Only a Christianity that can make Christians is vital. Nothing beneath the stars is truly great except the soul of man. No matter how much noise and ado we may make about other things, if we do not win men for our Lord, we are trifling time and life away.

"The tumult and the shouting dies;
The captains and the kings depart;
Still stands thine ancient sacrifice,
An humble and a contrite heart."

IN REPLY TO BROTHER BINGHAM.

Elsewhere appears a communication from Mr. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., in which he finds fault with our recent editorial entitled, "An Animated Discussion." Apparently, by indirection, he charges us with having misrepresented the position which he has assumed in the present unfortunate controversy concerning Vanderbilt University. To the allegation which (by implication) he makes, we enter an emphatic plea of "not guilty."

Our brief editorial did not purport to be either a review of Mr. Bingham's articles in the Jackson Daily News, or in any sense a reply to them. It was merely a cursory glance at an interesting discussion going on in the secular press, which had attracted considerable attention in Mississippi. We attempted to do nothing more than to state the general attitude of the disputants and make one or two brief comments upon those features of the disputation which had impressed us most. There was not the semblance of a claim that we were setting forth Mr. Bingham's, or Mr. Barbee's, or Dr. Featherston's position in full.

But since he has raised the issue, let Mr. Bingham lay aside nebulous generalities and point out specifically one single affirmation that we made as to his attitude which is not true? We said, "He sides with the Board of Trust." Will he deny that he shares their views and is in sympathy with their contentions? In the face of his utterances he can not do so. What he has written has been little else than a plea in extenuation of the course pursued by the gentlemen on that side of the question. He has apologized for them, defended them, and smeared his "linked sweetness" upon them with a trowel. But for those in opposition to them he has had the spear-thrust and the sword. Not even our Bishops have escaped his ridicule, though they have sought only to carry out the positive instructions of the General Conference. If there is a single person who read Mr. Bingham's communications who does not think that he has shown himself to be in full accord with the Vanderbilt Board of Trust, we should like to know his name. The last paragraph of his present article is itself proof sufficient of all we have said on this point. Wherein, then, in stating a plain, indisputable fact as to where our brother stands, have we misrepresented him?

"And has taken the position that if the Church should control the institution, it will shrink into the proportions of a college." This was our other affirmation as to Mr. Bingham's attitude. Will he deny that this is his own expression? It stands in his article in bold and glaring letters over his own signature. Is it a misrepresentation of a man to define his attitude upon a question in his own language?

But Mr. Bingham complains that we did not state his two main positions, but dealt with things incidental. We submit that if this contention were true, it would furnish no just ground for complaint, provided we did not misrepresent his attitude concerning the alleged subsidiary issues. And that we have done this, we do not believe that even he will presume to contend. The truth is, the manner in which the good brother tries to nurse his two darling "positions," is to us not a little amusing. He seems to think that unless he formally declares his attitude upon a question, and numbers it, and labels it, and writes underneath it "these are my sentiments," that he has taken no position. But what he affirms concerning anything, is just as much his position as if he had oracularly declared it to be so. In the course of the discussion in which he has played a leading part he has taken a number of positions, for which by every law of logic he may legitimately be held responsible. He need not think, as he seems disposed to do, that he can set up two formal contentions and limit discussion to them; while he writes about everything else he pleases, remaining immune from attack at other points. No, no! his pronouncement that Church control will cause Vanderbilt University "to shrink into the proportions of a college," is just as much his "position" as his contention that "the difference between the General Conference and Trustees is purely a legal question." And we have just as much right to discuss the one as the other, if we choose to do so.

The fact is, Mr. Bingham seems to dislike to have his declaration concerning the blighting effect of Church control upon the university dwelt upon. Congressman Benjamin Humphreys, of the Third, Mississippi District, tells the story of an old negro who was arrested and hurried into court. In great distress, he sent for the lawyer who was in the habit of getting him out of trouble. Upon his arrival the attorney said, "Jake, what are you charged with now?" The darkey said in reply, "I dunno what dese white people is got me charged wid; I knows I aint done nuthin." "I'll look at the docket and see," said the lawyer. He did so, and, upon his return, said, "Jake, you are charged with stealing Bill Jones' pig." The old negro fell into a brown study, scratched his head for a few moments, and finally said, "Boss, I wish you'd go up dar, and see if you can't get dat judge to try me on somen else." It looks very much to us as if Brother Bingham is very anxious to have attention focussed upon some other point than the "position" which he has assumed concerning the influence of denominational control upon Vanderbilt University.

Brother Bingham says that our failure to notice his two main positions confirms him in the opinion that they cannot be successfully controverted. We are inclined to think it is not very difficult to confirm him in his own opinions. However, he is welcome to any crumb of comfort he may be able to extract from that circumstance. As a matter of fact, we do not agree with him in the contention that the issue involved in the Vanderbilt controversy is a legal one and nothing more. We do not doubt that the Vanderbilt Board of Trust and he, as their self-constituted defender, would like to make it that, but such they will not be able to do. There is an equity—a moral obligation—involved in the administration of this great trust, which, like Banquo's ghost, will not down, and Brother Bingham may as well make up his mind that it will have to be reckoned with. Space will not allow us to adduce argument to show this now, but we promise to discuss it at some length in the near future.

In Mr. Bingham's second proposition—that "pending proper settlement, Methodists should not abuse one another"—we most heartily concur. Our only objection to it is the "pending" limitation which he puts upon it. Why any such restriction? Why did he not say that Christians should never abuse one another? That is what we believe, and that is the way we should have expressed it. But between "abuse" and discussion, even though it be plain and pointed, there is a vast difference. If Mr. Bingham means that representatives of the Church may pursue any course they please, no matter how reprehensible, and that no word of remonstrance should be uttered, we beg leave to differ with him. This thing of a few members and outsiders slapping a great Church squarely in the face, and when the voice of protest is heard, contending that nothing at all should be said, is, we think, asking a little too much. Mr. Bingham claims the right of discussion for himself and vigorously exercises it. How then can he consistently deny that prerogative to others?

We come now to the last point in Mr. Bingham's communication—as to whether the General Conference levied an assessment of $25,000 to defray the expenses of a lawsuit. His attempt to "make good" this allegation, even after his error has been pointed out, is little less than pathetic. A brief review of that action will clearly show that he has no solid support for his contention. Before we give this, it may not be amiss to remind our readers that we were a member of the Committee on Education at Asheville, attended all of its sessions, and heard all of the discussions that took place therein. The facts in the case are as follows: The General Board of Education sent to the General Conference the following memorial (shown on Page 91 of the Daily Advocate):

"Whereas, the work of the General Board of Education has so enlarged in scope that it is impossible to carry it on with the greatest efficiency on the limited resources of the Board; and whereas, it is very important for the educational work of the Church at the present time to be pushed with great vigor; therefore, we memorialize the General Conference sitting in Asheville, in May, 1910, to add $25,000 to the annual assessment for education, to be used at the discretion of the Board of Education."

Let it be noted that this memorial was adopted and forwarded before it was known what the action of the General Conference would be concerning Vanderbilt University, or whether the matter at issue would be amicably settled. When this memorial, which was referred to the Committee on Education, was under discussion before that body, Dr. Hammond (the Secretary of the Board of Education) explained fully what was to be done with the money, even naming some of the institutions to which a considerable part of it had already been promised. The measure had the support of all the leading pro-Vanderbilt men on the Committee; what opposition there was came from those on the side of the Church. If memory serves us right, Judge O'Rear was not present when this debate took place. (He was kept so busy negotiating with Bishop Hendrix and Chancellor Kirkland and trying to settle the Vanderbilt controversy in a way that would obviate the necessity of a lawsuit, that he was frequently absent from the sessions of our Committee.) The Committee on Education recommended "concurrence" in the memorial of the General Board of Education. But to make this effective the new figures needed to be written in the Discipline, and this was undertaken to be done in report No. 3, submitted to the General Conference, which is shown on page 91 of the Daily Advocate. The proposed assessment was $95,000, which included $20,000 for the Vanderbilt Theological Department, the $50,000 which had been regularly levied during the past quadrennium, and the $25,000 "to be used at the discretion of the Board of Education" (the words in quotation marks being the very ones used in the memorial sent to the General Conference). This "discretion" was clearly meant to be exercised in promoting the work of educational extension, and limited to that.

Now it was on the question of incorporating these figures into the Discipline that the discussion from which Mr. Bingham quotes took place. Mr. Cannon, the Secretary of the Committee on Education, who had charge of the matter, had been providentially called home. Mr. Glenn, who had opposed so large an assessment in the Committee, carried the fight to the floor of the Conference. Judge O'Rear, naturally desiring the Committee's report to pass without alteration, made a speech in which he, not being fully informed, gave out an erroneous statement. Dr. Tillett, who followed him, clearly showed by the tenor of his remarks that he understood the money was for the work of educational extension. Then arose Dr. V. A. Godbey, one of the ablest members of the Committee, who plainly stated that Judge O'Rear's remarks were misleading, that no assessment had been recommended to provide money for a lawsuit. The fact that Judge O'Rear sat still and said nothing in reply to Dr. Godbey shows that he tacitly accepted the correction. How with the memorial and report plainly printed in the Daily Advocate and Brother Godbey's statement so clearly and emphatically made, can Mr. Bingham contend that the General Conference was misled? And it would seem that he yet holds that Judge O'Rear's utterance proves that the money in question was designed to be used in litigation. Such a claim virtually amounts to a contention that a single member, by a mere verbal utterance on the floor of a Conference, could change the formal and deliberate action of the entire Committee—a position wholly untenable.

But Mr. Bingham says that, in view of the circumstances, his statement that the money was for a lawsuit was "justifiable." Hardly that. We are willing "to excuse" him on the ground that he had not read his Daily Advocate and was not informed, but we think that when a brother presumes to make affirmations so sweeping and emphatic, he should be a little more careful about his facts. Who "blundered?" Judge O'Rear, in the first instance, and Brother Bingham in the second.

Mr. Bingham thinks our affirmation that his statement was "untrue" was "pretty cool." We had no thought of accusing him of prevarication. We think he is incapable of that. We only meant that he was incorrect. We have never called in question his Christian experience and character.

But finally, he says, "Brother Meek knows perfectly well that the pith of my statement in reply to Doctor Featherstun lay in the fact that the General Conference had made provision for the compensation of hired attorneys, and not in the amount of compensation." We beg to remark that we saw no "pith" in the brother's statement. Dr. Featherstun made complaint that the Vanderbilt Board of Trust had followed the advice of their own "hired attorneys" instead of that of the members of the Commission, who had sat as a court and rendered a gratuitous service, presumably, therefore, being unbiased. This related to past action. Mr. Bingham retorted that the General Conference had made provision for "hired attorneys." This relates to the future, and really was nothing more than a "side-stepping" of Dr. Featherstun's point. Moreover, Mr. Bingham does not know whether the attorneys for the Church will accept fees for their services or not. His pronouncement to that effect is purely an assumption upon his part. There are other uses for money in the conducting of a lawsuit than the payment of attorney fees.

A HOME MISSION PROBLEM.

The communication by "A Mississippi Methodist" under the caption, "Let the Church Show Appreciation," which appeared in last week's issue of the Advocate, dealt vigorously with a matter of great importance. The meager support given the men who serve the poorer charges in our Annual Conferences has long been a reproach. To require a preacher with a family, who devotes himself to the Lord's work, to subsist upon a salary of $300 or $400 a year is a rank injustice and a reflection upon our administration as a Church. It is no palliation to say that these are not our best men and that probably they could not earn more at any other employment. Measured by the effectiveness and fruitfulness of their ministry, many of them are among our very best workers. And almost without exception, they are true and faithful. If the Church uses them, she should provide for them a decent living. Our prosperous town and city congregations, which profit largely by the labors of these worthy toilers in the interior, ought to contribute more largely to their support. It is a wholesome doctrine that the strong should help the weak, and in this case there is a principle of reciprocity in it. Our home mission problem has in it no more vital feature than that of developing a method whereby every worker received and sent out by our Conferences shall be provided promptly with at least the necessities of life. We commend the consideration of this question to our various mission boards.

A RINGING DELIVERANCE.

Rev. J. B. Lawrence, the pastor of the First Baptist Church, of this city, preached a strong and forceful sermon last Sunday evening on "The Menace of Unpunished Crime," closing his discourse with the following ringing words:

"Now there are two things we want to say: First, the saloons are not closed in this city. They are running in open violation of the law. The authorities know it. It is a shame that this city should boldly and above board publish to the world that it will not try to obey nor enforce the laws of the land."

"Second, we are dead in earnest in this matter of contending for the enforcement of the law. No right-thinking man can deny that we are right. We propose to keep up the fight until the saloons are made to obey the law just as every other business is being made to obey it. We do not believe in giving the saloons immunity from laws when every other interest is made to submit."

We heartily applaud Mr. Lawrence for his courageous stand and fearless challenge. Unquestionably he is striking in the right direction. Lawlessness is threatening the very foundation of our social fabric. On the part of the millionaire and the thug, it should alike be stopped. Let all the moral forces of the city rally to the support of this aggressive advocate of reform, and co-operate with him in a movement to secure a proper enforcement of the law.

PERSONAL.

Rev. J. A. McCormick began a meeting at Greensburg, La., last Sunday. He is being assisted by Rev. A. Inman Towusley.

Marhaston, Miss., has recently enjoyed a series of union revival services. They were conducted by Rev. R. J. Smith, of Arkansas, a Presbyterian evangelist.

Rev. J. W. Rogers, of Coahoma, Miss., has recently been preaching for Rev. W. L. Broome, at Asbury, on the Waterford Circuit. His sermons gave great satisfaction.

Rev. A. S. Byrd conducted a revival at Sartartia, Miss., last week. The preaching, which produced a profound impression, was done by Rev. W. M. Sullivan, the pastor of Centenary Church, of McComb City.

Rev. W. E. Dickens requests us to announce that the Shiloh Camp Meeting, near Pelahatchie, Miss., will begin on Friday night before the first Sunday in September. The general public and all ministers are cordially invited.

Brother H. Swazie, whose renewal has recently been sent in by Rev. J. E. Gray, has been a subscriber to the Advocate for over thirty years. We are pleased to have him continue with us. There are no friends like old friends.

Dr. J. M. Sullivan, of Millsaps College, spent the first Sunday in August at Holly Springs. He occupied the pulpit of the Methodist Church of that city at 11 o'clock, and delivered a strong address on "Christian Education."

Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Holt, of Crowley, who are widely known in church and Sunday school circles in Louisiana, are visiting in Ardmore, Oklahoma. We regret to be informed that Mrs. Holt's health has not been robust of late.

Dr. H. C. Morrison, the editor of the Pentecostal Herald, has been elected president of Asbury College, at Wilmore, Ky., and will take up his new duties at once. He is widely known, and is just back from a missionary tour of the world. Doubtless he will put much vigor into his work.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, the capable young pastor at Holly Springs, is doing considerable evangelistic work this summer. He has engagements to hold a meeting in Yalobusha County, and one at Red Banks, and one at Charleston. He will return home each Sabbath, however, to fill his own pulpit.

Rev. A. H. Williams, of Mayhew, Miss., writes: "We have just finished a very excellent meeting at Artesia. Rev. W. E. M. Brogan, of Starkville, assisted, and greatly pleased the people. There were five additions to the church and the results generally were very fine."

Rev. H. T. Carley, the accomplished pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church of this city, is resting at Sartartia, Miss. He writes that Mrs. Carley, who is with him, has been suffering from an attack of malarial fever, but is better. They expect soon to visit New Augusta.

In a letter written to the office on the 10th inst., Rev. L. C. Wilson, of Angie, La., says: "We are having a good meeting at this place, in which I am being assisted by Rev. J. M. Alford, of Bogalusa. We thank Brother Wilson for keeping the interests of the Advocate in mind."

Rev. W. H. Rogers, of West Circuit, is pleased with the situation in his charge. He has recently held good meetings at West's and Bowling Green. He has had with him Dr. T. C. Wier, Rev. J. D. Simpson, and Rev. W. L. Stormont, each of whom wrought well.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt, of Oxford, Miss., was scheduled to occupy the pulpit of the Methodist Church at Como last Sunday. He was formerly the shepherd of that fine flock, and is there universally loved. The present pastor, the Rev. S. A. Brown, is rendering fine service in that interesting field.

Rev. Henry T. Young writes: "The physician formerly at Dixie, La., has moved away, and we are in need of another. It is a community of excellent people, and a good place for practice. A married man and a Methodist is preferred. Persons desiring to correspond concerning this opening may address Rev. Henry T. Young, 618 Olive Street, Shreveport, La."

"A Tribute of Love—The Wealth of Life" is the subject of an appreciation of the late Rev. W. B. Lewis, by Dr. L. W. Cooper, of Whitworth College. It is an eloquent and discriminating discussion of the character of a very rare and noble man. It is beautifully printed, and in every way reflects credit upon the distinguished author. We thank him for the copy sent us.

In a letter written on the 9th inst., from Rosetta,

Miss., Rev. H. W. Day, says: "Mrs. Harriet Jane Taylor (nee Lewis) died here yesterday evening at 9 o'clock. She was a member of the famous Lewis family which has given to the Methodist Church so many preachers." The Advocate extends sympathy to the sorrowing ones.

Rev. W. W. Holmes, of the Louisiana Avenue Church, this city, has been addressing himself vigorously to his work during the hot season, and the interest has held up well. The Epworth League, under the leadership of Miss Cora Perkins, a student at Sophie Newcomb College, has conducted some especially helpful devotional services.

Rev. A. G. Shankle, the popular pastor of our church at Ruston, La., is sojourning at Commerce, Ga. In a letter to the business manager of the Advocate a few days since he wrote: "I am having a quiet, delightful rest here at my old home. My family are with me. I hope to go back to my charge in fine shape for winding up the work of the year and quadrennium."

We were delighted last week to have a call from Mr. S. H. Porter, of Zwolle, La. He is a trustee, a steward, and the Sunday school superintendent of the Methodist Church at that place. He spoke in appreciative terms of his pastor, the Rev. J. C. Price, who, he said, had just closed a successful meeting at Bayou Sie, in which he himself did the preaching, and there were a number of accessions.

We chronicle with great regret the death of Miss Sue Reed, who was for many years a member of the Jefferson Street Church at Natchez, and for a long time agent for the Advocate. Our paper had no better friend, and we shall miss her faithful service. Rev. Robert Selby says of her, "She was a useful woman, and devoted to the Church as few are." We extend to the bereaved our profoundest sympathy.

The Sunday School Institute at the Seashore Camp Ground has been well attended and of exceptional interest. Both Mr. Thomas V. Ellzey and Rev. W. Fred Long have been present, as have also Dr. Lowrey, Dr. E. L. McGehee, and other prominent workers. A model Sunday school was conducted Monday afternoon by Mr. J. C. Cavett, of Jackson. It is the consensus of opinion that great good has been done.

Rev. O. L. Savage, who has a habit of doing things, thus reports from his new charge in the Delta: "I have just closed a great revival at Ruleville, preceded by one at Drew. We were led in the services by Rev. W. L. Graves, of Itta Bena. He won all hearts and had great success. We had twenty-four accessions at Drew on profession of faith and by certificate. We have had up to date five accessions at Ruleville, and both churches have been greatly blessed. The outlook is hopeful."

Dr. J. E. Walmsley, secretary of the faculty of Millsaps College, under date of the 13th inst. writes: "The prospect is for a great opening of the college in September. Every indication points to an enrollment of at least twice the number we had last session. From every place that President Hull visits where there are old students, I get letters telling me of the fine impression he has made." This is, indeed, good news. Let the Methodists of Mississippi rally to this growing institution, and make it second to none in the South.

It was our very great pleasure to meet Rev. W. J. Johnson, of the First Church, of Galveston, in the city on Tuesday, the 9th inst. He had been abroad since last May, being one of an interesting party of Texas tourists who accompanied the Rev. J. C. Mims. Mr. Johnson is a son of Col. J. M. Johnson, one of the best known citizens of Holmes County, Miss., and a grandson of the Rev. Stephen Johnson, who is well remembered in the central part of that State. His ministerial career has been a marked success and a source of great gratification to his friends.

The Sam Jones Camp Meeting is well under way, as the following dispatch from Gloster to The Times-Democrat of the 15th inst. shows: "The services at the Sam Jones camp meeting had a good start yesterday. There was a good attendance, and very interesting services. The Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Gulfport, preached at the three services. The meeting commenced Friday last, and will continue through this week, closing next Sunday night. The music is in charge of the Rev. H. W. Van Hook, of Woodville. The Rev. W. H. Huntley, pastor of the Gloster Methodist Church, is in charge of the camp meeting."

Mrs. Audley L. Shands, of Sardis, Miss., died suddenly on the Illinois Central train as it was entering Chicago, Ill., Aug. 12th. Her husband, a prominent attorney, had accompanied her as far as Memphis to see her on her way. She was not known to be ill to the slightest extent when he left her. She was accompanied by her four-year-old child and a negro maid, and was traveling in the state room, when an attack of heart failure terminated her life. The remains were brought to Sardis, where the obsequies were conducted by Rev. J. T. Murrain. May God sustain the bereaved ones, and gently lay his healing hand on every bleeding heart.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00
St. Louis, $26.00
Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares
To ALL Principal Points in the
United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD,
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 3618.

VISIT MINERAL WELLS

FOR HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND

WEST TEXAS

For
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS.
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE
DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,

General Passenger Agent,
DALLAS, TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a.m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS,
WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p.m.

FOR

NEW YORK,

CINCINNATI,

ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW
ON SALE.

Bowlden
CHURCH & SCHOOL
Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHEVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

Don't Wear a Truss

STUART'S PLAS-TR-APAS are different from the painful truss, being made self-adhesive purposely to hold the rupture in place without straps, buckles or springs—cannot slip,
so cannot chafe or compress against the pelvic bone. The most obstinate cases cured in the privacy of the home. Thousands have successfully treated themselves without hindrance from work. Soft as velvet—easy to apply— inexpensive. Process of cure is natural, so no further use for trusses. We prove what we say by sending you trial of Plapao absolutely FREE. Write TODAY.
Address—PLAPAO LABORATORIES, Box 112, St. Louis, Mo.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary.
That will save trouble all around.

From the home of her grandparents,
Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Staples, in Ruston, La., little MAMIE LEE went to her home in the Father's house of many dwelling-places, Sunday morning, June 5, 1910. She was the eldest child of Jesse E. and Emilie Staples Lee. For two years, four months and five days, she had been the joy of their home.
About her little life the tenderest affections of parents and grandparents had gathered, and to their hearts it was a severe blow when the sweet little one, after many days of suffering, breathed her last on that quiet Sabbath morning. But she has only taken her place in the home prepared by him who said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me," and there she awaits the home-coming of the loved ones left on earth. PASTOR.

Early on the morning of July 4,
1910, little ALVIN PARKER MASON was called to dwell in the beautiful city of God. I will not say that he is dead. He has just fallen "asleep in Jesus." We miss him—oh, how we miss him! We miss the bright smiles which would so often greet us, and the sweet voice which so often cheered our hearts, and filled the home with joy and sunshine. Little Alvin was born July 19, 1909. Our Father said,
"come up higher, and wear a crown."
Loved ones, weep not as those who have no hope. He is not dead, but sleepeth. We must look forward with the blessed assurance of meeting him beyond this vale of tears, where we will never say good-by.

"One precious to our hearts has gone,
The voice we loved is stilled,
The place made vacant in our home,
Can nevermore be filled.
Our Father in his wisdom called
The boon his love had given;
And though on earth the body lies,
The soul is safe in heaven."

A FRIEND.

DEBORAH MARY YOUNG, the eldest daughter of R. A. and Laura Young, was born July 29, 1886, and passed away in Monroe, La., on July 22, at 6:15 p. m. Her charming personality had endeared her to a large circle of friends. She completed her education at the Southern Seminary at Buena Vista, Va., and it was while attending school there, that she united with the Church. She suffered for months from a painful malady, but bore her affliction with marvelous Christian courage. She was young, and life held out the brightest prospects, but she said she was reconciled to going because of Jesus, sufferings for her. Her thoughts and prayers included every member of the family, and her dearest friends. She leaves a sorrowing mother, father, sisters and brother, who are determined to so "finish their course" in this life, as to meet her in the beautiful land, whose music she heard so distinctly and whose portals she beheld so clearly before she left us.

MRS. R. H. WYNN.

Mrs. SALLIE HOWZE, daughter of John and A. E. Simmons, was born near Brooksville, Miss., Nov. 19, 1845, and died at Pope, Miss., at the home of her only child, Mrs. J. E. Logue,
June 28, 1910. She was married to T.
C. Howze Dec. 23, 1869, and lived at the old Simmons homestead in which she was married, until fifteen years ago. She was left a widow in 1886.
She had two brothers and one sister, all of whom preceded her to the other shore, she being the last of the old Simmons family. She was thoroughly converted to God in 1865 and joined the Methodist Church, of which she was an exemplary member to the day of her death. She was modest and shrinking, but not too timid to shout the praises of God anywhere, at home, or at church, whenever she would get happy. She was a champion of the right, and was ever ready to lend a helping hand to the needy and to offer a consoling word to the distressed.

She was one of the best of women, and died as she had lived. She will be greatly missed in her home and her community. But their loss is her gain.
May God comfort her bereaved family is the prayer of her last pastor!
T. H. PORTER.

On July 13, 1910, Mrs. MARIE
KOCH BROWN passed from this life and entered the life beyond. For more than a year she had been a great, but patient and hopeful sufferer, and even those who loved her most and feel her loss most keenly realize that to her it was a sweet release. When quite young she united with the Methodist Church, under the ministry of Rev.
J. G. Galloway, which relation was continued till the end. Hers was a life beautiful because of its modesty and simplicity. She was held in loving esteem by everyone who knew her.
Just three years ago she was happily married to Mr. Wilson Brown, to whom she was a devoted and happy helpmeet for the short period of their wedded life. Naturally of a delicate frame, it was wonderful to see how heroically and hopefully she battled with disease. She was anxious to live for those she loved, but not afraid to die. Quietly, with bowed heads we laid her body to rest in the beautiful family cemetery on the old Koch homestead, but we confidently look forward to the time when, through him who "is the resurrection and the life," we shall meet again. A devoted husband, mother, brothers and sister mourn their loss, but their sorrow is tempered by the Christian hope.

H. J. MOORE.

ALLAN WARD, son of Mr. William
T. and Mrs. Mary Gray Cannon, was born in Selma, Ala., June 24, 1891.
Rev. Joseph C. Johnson baptized him in infancy, and he united with Church Street Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in his native city when he was twelve years old. Here he received his education up to his seventeenth year, when he was brought to his greatest sorrow and affliction in the death of his devoted Christian mother. Shortly after her death, his father, whose health was very infirm, removed to Pascagoula, Miss., hoping a change to the gulf coast would benefit him. The father, heart-broken and crushed in spirit, now looked to the promising son as a strong support upon which to depend in his old age. He had good reason for expecting much of Allan, for he was cheerful, hopeful, loving and ready always to do all he could to make his father's pathway brighter.
Allan's employers were well pleased with him for he was diligent, industrious, energetic, polite and intelligent. The friends of his parents, knowing what splendid Christians they were and how careful they were in giving their children the best advantages, anticipated a successful and useful career for Allan. An inscrutable Providence ordered otherwise, so far as this world is concerned, for on the 9th of June, 1910, after a few weeks' sickness of typhoid fever, he went to his eternal home. Everything that skillful physicians, tender hands and loving hearts could do was done for him. Thank God for the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ which sustains his noble, Christian father. His remains were carried from Pascagoula,
Miss., to Selma, Ala., for interment.
L. A. DORSEY.

The goodness of God is more illustrious in His conduct towards those who fear Him; these are the objects of His special favor; he delights in them, and is always ready to hear their prayers.—Neal.

comprises a tea and coffee,
each supreme in its respective field, each characterized by exquisite quality, distinctive flavor, palate-delighting tang and dainty packing.

VOTAN COFFEE is a special importation from Central America and Southern Mexico, where the world's highest grade coffees are now produced, straight to New Orleans, one of the world's greatest coffee importing ports—a city long famous for its good coffee.

And there, in one of the most modern, sanitary and perfectly equipped establishments of the kind in the country, Votan Coffee is sorted, selected, cleansed, blended, roasted and packed with all the care, skill and science known to human experience.

We offer the VOTAN LINE to the consumer as embodying the very ultimate degree of coffee and tea perfection;
and our guarantee of money refunded if it fails to please, stands back of every can and canister.

VOTAN TEA, like Votan Coffee, is the best to be had. It is a skillful blend of the most superior and satisfying teas grown. Its very appearance is an indication of its quality—leaves full, clean and free of dust;
When brewed it is of crystal-like clearness, handsome to look upon. Its taste and mildly stimulating properties are all that the most fastidious can desire.

There is an exclusive agent in your town (if not, write to us).

The Votan Tea & Coffee Co.
NEW ORLEANS, U. S. A.

Progress Self-Tramping
COTTON PRESS
3 Horse Power Mill Operate. Capacity 25 bales. Write for prices.
Manufactured by
C. J. HYDE, MERIDIAN, MISS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
BLYMYER BELL
BELL
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

BATH TUB
Weight 14 lbs. Cost little.
Some used for 5 years, still good. Write for special offer
N. Y. BATH MFG. CO.
(Established 1900)
104 Chambers St., N. Y. City

You need not Worry About

How to raise money for a good organ.

If you have the money; if you're raising it, or only planning—write for helpful suggestions.

ESTEY, Brattleboro, Vt.

I Was Deaf 25 Years

NOW I HEAR WHISPERS with my artificial Ear Drums in my ears. I never feel them—they are so perfectly comfortable, and no one sees them. I will tell you the true story of how I got Deaf—and how I made myself hear. Address your letter to me personally. Put July 15, 1908, at the top of the letter. St. This is important, as letters sent to other addresses often do not reach me. I send book of every claim made for my drums. GEO. F. WAY, 8 Adelaide Street, DETROIT, MICH.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

WOMAN'S BEAUTY

A woman's beauty is dependent on her health. To keep her beauty, she must keep her health. Sickness and suffering leave their trace; pain leaves its marring imprint. Ladies have come to realize that to be beautiful and attractive they must give attention to physical fitness and health.

Countless women suffer from ailments designated generally as "female complaint," thinking it is the natural lot of their sex to suffer.

This is a mistaken belief. Nature invariably has a cure for her children's ills. Thousands of women have found permanent relief for their sufferings by using that natural, herbal medicine—Wine of Cardui. Cardui is a pure, non-intoxicating remedy, specifically for women, which has grown steadily in favor during the past fifty years. Letters pour in every day, expressing the gratitude of the writers, who have been relieved of their misery and restored to health.

When you are nervous or sick, get Cardui from your druggist, and try it.

N. B. Upon request, we will send you, free of charge, our valuable, illustrated 64 page book "Home Treatment for Women." In it you will find valuable information regarding the treatment of female troubles.

Address: Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

FINE POST CARDS FREE

A Big Package Sent to All Our Readers Who Write at Once.

To any reader of this paper who writes immediately and encloses 2 cents stamps we will mail a set of five most beautiful post cards you ever saw. Ten very finest Floral Birthday and motto cards, all different, in exquisite colors; silk finish, beautifully embossed, etc., for only 10 cents. Thirty cards, all different, 25 cents. With each order we include our plan for getting 50 choice cards free. Address The Art Post Card Club, 703 Jackson St., Topeka, Kan.

Marriages

July 12, 1910, at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. D. F. Vaughan, Magnolia, Miss., by Rev. Jas. G. Galloway, Mr. CLAUD L. LAMPTON and Miss LUCIE VAUGHAN.

Nov. 28, 1909, at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. J. W. Thompson, Mr. E. E. MCGOWAN to Miss LELA HARDEE, of Clark County, Miss.

Dec. 25, 1909, at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. J. W. Thompson, Dr. WATKINS to Miss RACHEL FATHERREE, of Clark County, Miss.

June 12, 1910, at the parsonage, Tachuta, Miss., by Rev. J. W. Thompson, Mr. CHARLEY COOLEY to Miss MAUDE SMITH.

July 10, 1910, at the home of the bride's parents, by Rev. J. W. Thompson, Mr. T. C. BAKER to Miss GERTRUDE DAVIDSON, of Clark County, Miss.

July 12, 1910, in the parsonage at Heidelberg, Miss., by Rev. J. W. Thompson, Mr. EDWIN THORNTON to Miss EFFIE EVANS, daughter of Rev. C. C. Evans.

A GREAT MEETING.

Mr. Editor: We have just closed the greatest meeting in the history of Duncanville, Texas. Rev. R. A. Clark, of Okolona, Miss., did the preaching. He certainly did it well. All denominations of the community rallied to him, and such a spiritual upheaval has never been witnessed in this community before. As a result of the meeting, there were more than forty additions to the church, and others will yet come in. The number of conversions and reclamations were many, and the Christian people were raised to a higher plane of spirituality and made more active in Christian work. Brother Clark won the hearts of all the people in the community, both saints and sinners. When you get through with him in Mississippi, we would be delighted to have him in Texas; for we realize that such men are greatly needed in this growing country.

SUPERANNATE,
North Texas Conference.

THE RUSTON ORPHANAGE AND ELSE.

The Louisiana Orphanage Visitor, filled with hopeful items, is before me. Brother Vaughan is exceedingly anxious that the debt on our institution for needy little ones be liquidated—and that at once, so that the interest on said debt can be used to help equip the home for further usefulness. The resolutions passed at the various District Conferences was a move in the right direction. Brethren, let us do something else besides "resolute." Let us act, and, with one united pull, we can free the home from debt.

The orphans' cry is ever heard and people will listen and help support them. The Zachary Charge, with her 253 members, has paid this year $170 for our Orphanage. As pastor, I had but little trouble to get that amount; the cause was presented and the people willingly and gladly responded. So then I know from actual experience that it is an easy matter to collect money for the Orphanage. Furthermore, above amount came from a section of country that is financially demoralized because of boll weevil ravages and unsettled conditions. Other sections should easily do better.

In other respects we are moving on nicely on our work. The Sunday schools have taken on new life, and with good superintendents and teachers, we are destined to do a great work for the children. Trusting that our Conference may come to the help of Brother Vaughan in his sacred and noble work, I am sincerely,

W. D. KLEINSCHMIDT.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS
RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!

NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00

Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

Hot Sun— Dusty Roads

By the time you reach town and light you'll be hot and tired and your throat dry with dust and thirst. Hunt up a soda fountain and treat yourself to

A Glass or a Bottle of

Coca-Cola

Just as cooling as the bottom step in the spring house. You'll find it relieves fatigue too, and washes away all the dust and thirst as nothing else will. It touches the spot.

Delicious-Refreshing-Wholesome

5c Everywhere

Our Free Booklet

"The Truth About Coca-Cola" tells all about Coca-Cola—what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial. It gives analyses made by scientists and chemists from coast to coast, proving its purity and wholesomeness. Your name and address on a postal will bring you this interesting booklet.

THE COCA-COLA CO.,
Atlanta, Ga.

3-R

Whenever you see an Arrow think of Coca-Cola

Tidings from the Field

Rienzi Circuit:

Things are progressing nicely on the Rienzi Charge. We serve a good people who stand by us in every department of church work. As this is in the midst of our revival season, we can't write at length just now. We preach to good congregations and hope to close the year with many notes of victory.—E. H. Cunningham.

New Albany Circuit:

Our third Quarterly Meeting was held at Ecru last Saturday and Sunday. Brother B. P. Jacob, our presiding elder, preached two sermons that did much for Methodism in that new field. Brother J. H. Ingram came in Sunday night and did the preaching till the close on Friday. The people were delighted with his preaching and the Lord honored it. Several souls were saved and nine were added to the church. Our cause was much strengthened by the meeting in many ways. The membership is active and we will soon have a strong, influential church at Ecru.—A. W. Langley.

Red Banks Circuit:

I want to give you an account of our meeting at Victoria. We had Rev. J. H. Bell, of Potts Camp, with us, who preached with great power. The whole church was revived, backsliders reclaimed, and sinners converted. Twenty-five were added to the church, which almost doubled the membership. The power of the Spirit was with us from the beginning; at the close of the last service there was not a sinner left. The only way for them to escape was not to come at all. We go with Brother Bell to Caseyville this week. Pray for us.—E. Blizard, P. C.

Branch, La.:

On Monday night, Aug. 1, a very successful meeting was closed at the M. E. Church, South, at this place. Rev. H. B. Vandenburg, the preacher in charge, conducted the services, assisted by Rev. A. J. Gearhead, of Gueydan. The meeting lasted ten days, during which time there was preaching both morning and night. Brother Gearhead's sermons were convincing, filled with plain logic and enjoyed by all who heard them. A good crowd was in attendance daily, and several members were received. Both pastors worked earnestly, and much good was the result of their efforts.—H. G. Childs.

Grenada Circuit:

On last Friday night, Aug. 5, we closed a very successful meeting at Old Bethel. We had fourteen conversions, nine of whom joined our Church. It seems that the Lord moved mightily upon the people of that community, for men prayed who never prayed before, and people attended the services who had not done such in many years. The register showed fifteen on the roll for that church when meeting began. But God's Spirit moved so powerfully upon those who had gone back to the world that enough were reclaimed to increase our roll to sixty-six. God is to be praised for his wonderful love to us, who are so unworthy of it.—Jas. D. Wroten.

Meadville, Miss.:

We observed Children's Day the third Sunday in June, at Meadville. We had a good day. The children had been well trained, and they all did their parts well. I think everyone was delighted and benefited by the service. We observed the fourth Sunday, June 26th, at McCall's Creek. We had a good day there also. We organized the church at McCall's last fall and this was the first Children's Day service ever held in the new church. We were very proud of the success that attended the efforts of those who had the work in hand. As a result of the two services, we sent $15 to the Sunday School Board. We feel that our Sunday schools have done their part towards raising the $35,000 endowment fund. There is one other item of interest I want to mention. That is, the recent storm we have had at Meadville. On the evening of June 30, between sundown and dark, there came up from behind the northwestern horizon a cloud. It was not a very bad looking cloud; therefore, we did not apprehend any danger. But it was thundering and lightning some, and about 8:30 o'clock p. m., the storm began. Our attention was first attracted by the sound of familiar voices—then the tramping of feet. Here they come, some fifteen or twenty strong. The front gate is thrown open and they march in just as if everything belongs to them. Of course, we thought they would wait to be invited in, but not so. They marched in and when the storm was over, the hall of the parsonage had the appearance of a small grocery store. We found everything needed to replenish the pantry at the parsonage from extracts up to a half barrel of flour. Now, Mr. Editor, I would, indeed, be unworthy if I did not appreciate these expressions of appreciation on the part of my people. I do not know how much they appreciate me, as a man, but I do feel that they love me for my work's sake, and are going to see to it, that the family in the parsonage does not suffer for temporal things. This gives us a new feeling towards our people. May God richly bless everyone who has been kind to us! Our meeting for this place will begin on the third Sunday in August, if not providentially hindered. Rev. J. W. Campbell, the pastor at Fayette, Miss., is expected to help in the meeting. Pray for us, that we may have a great revival. I am yours, fraternally.—Jas. L. Red.

REVERENCE IN THE PULPIT.

There is no place on earth where human feet stand so burdened with fearful responsibilities to God and to man, as the pulpit of salvation. "Put off thy shoes from thy feet," said God to Moses in the presence of the burning bush, "for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground." "Keep thy foot when thou goest to the house of God," said Solomon. Invisible angels stand around every pulpit, and the Son of God is there looking on, and sees and hears. No monarch of earth admits his subject to his throne-room so heedlessly as some candidates for the ministry enter the pulpit—the throne-room of God. They enter the pulpit as if in haste, and without a pause, lay hold of the Bible—God's own book—and rudely turn over its sacred leaves as if it were a ledger or a commonplace day-book. Most of our pastors, however, as they enter the pulpit reverently bend the knee in silent prayer. This is suited to inspire a holy reverence in the hearts and minds of a worshipping assembly. It seems to give assurance that every thing is being done "decently and in order," becoming the house of God.—Southern Churchman.

LAKE CAMP MEETING.

Lake Camp Meeting begins Aug. 26, and runs through Sunday, Sept. 4. Rev. W. C. Swope, of Charleston, Mo., will be in charge of the preaching. There will be good music. The grounds are ideal. Accommodations adequate. Come and have a good rest physically, and a refreshing and helpful time spiritually. We extend a hearty invitation to all preachers and laymen, especially of Newton District. Our presiding elder has already arranged to be with us, bringing his good wife and children. Let the rest of the preachers follow in the tracks of our worthy leader. Remember the dates, and come.—H. F. TOLLE, P. C.

EDUCATIONAL.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE JACKSON, MISS.

Rev. David Carlisle Hull, M. S., President.

A high-grade College, situated at the Capital of the State. Location high, dry and healthful. Entrance requirement and Curriculum same as in other leading colleges and universities, North and South. The very finest Moral and Religious Influences. Extraordinary Advantages in

LITERARY AND LAW DEPARTMENTS

Courses Leading to A. B., B. S., A. M., M. S., and LL. D. Degrees.

NINETEENTH SESSION BEGINS SEPTEMBER 28, 1910.

For Catalog and other Information address

J. E. WALMSLEY, Secretary, Jackson, Miss.

The Mississippi Conference Training School MONTROSE, MISS.

This School has the largest and most competent Faculty in its history. Our pupils are prepared for Sophomore Class in high-grade Colleges. Our Musical Directress is in a Northern Conservatory, adding to her already splendid equipment for Piano and Voice Culture. We will build a Mission Hall on the School Campus, and have added the subject of Missions to our Curriculum. Our rates for board and tuition are reasonable.

Write for catalogue to

Rev. WALDO W. MOORE, A. M., President.

MERIDIAN WOMAN'S COLLEGE.

One of the Nation's Leading Schools for Young Ladies and Girls.

Sixty-acre campus for out door life. Boating, Fishing, swimming, Basket Ball, Tennis, swings, Beautiful Military drill, happy, healthful surroundings.

Excellent Faculty of Christian Teachers. Special advantages in Art, Music, Domestic Science, along with the highest Literary Training.

AN IDEAL UNION OF HOME AND SCHOOL.

A vegetable Farm, Scientific Cooking, Excellent Board. Special Dormitory for young girls in lower grades.

See full particulars in our beautiful illustrated catalog. Write to Pres. J. W. BEESON, "Dept. D," Meridian, Miss.

SOUTHEASTERN DENTAL COLLEGE

This school offers advantages excelled by no other school. Excellent building, superb equipment and strong faculty. Individual instruction given each pupil. Session opens Oct. 4th. For catalogue, address

DR. C. L. STOCKS, President, 427-8 Austell Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

RANDOLPH-MACON COLLEGE FOR MEN. ASHLAND, VIRGINIA

Branch Memorial Dormitory Our Newest Building

One Teacher to Every Ten Students

R. E. BLACKWELL, A. M., LL. D., President WM. S. BROWN, Sec'y and Treas.

ATHENS COLLEGE

FOUNDED 1843 ATHENS, ALA. FACULTY OF TWENTY

Governed by Women for Girls and Women. Merit not Money; Polish not Varnish. Member of Ala. Assn. of Colleges. Preparatory School in connection, students enjoying equal opportunities with college students. Boarding Department enrollment quadrupled in five years. Excellent advantages in Music, Oratory, Art, Normal Training and Domestic Science for those desiring special courses. Graduate nurse, sterilized drinking water, Chemical fire extinguishers. Rates, nine months: Board, Laundry, tuition in Regular Course, Physical Culture, Chorus Singing, Medical Fee and Handsome Uniform (made to measure by New York tailor) hat and gloves to match $205. Sixty-eighth session begins Wednesday, September 20, 1910. For catalog apply to MARY NORMAN MOORE, President.

EDUCATIONAL

Port Gibson Female College,
PORT GIBSON, MISS.

71st session opens Sept. 14th. Literature, music, art, elocution, stenography, bookkeeping, sewing. Physical culture and chorus work free. Special attention given health and morals. Confers degree of A.B. Preparatory department. Students can reduce expenses by taking duties. For catalogue, address
REV. H. G. HAWKINS, A. B., Pres.

Whitworth College.

Twenty carefully selected teachers and officers. More than two hundred students last session. A most excellent literary course leading to the degrees of L.B. and A.B. Departments of Music, (including piano, violin and voice culture) expression, art, commerce.

Next Session begins Sept. 8, 1910.

For Catalogue, address,

WHITWORTH COLLEGE
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

RANDOLPH-MACON ACADEMY For Boys and Young Men.
Fits for college, scientific schools or business. Work endorsed by over 30 colleges and universities. Beautiful and healthful location. Athletic grounds, gymnasium. Terms only $230. No extras. For catalogue, address E. SUMTER SMITH, Principal, Bedford City, Va.

PEABODY COLLEGE FOR TEACHERS.
NASHVILLE, TENN.

Only Teachers' College in South of recognized College Standard. Three groups of 4-year Degree Courses. Two-year "Diploma" Course. Degree or Diploma insures easiest entrance into best positions. Recent magnificent endowment. Tuition $10.00 a quarter.
CHAS. E. LITTLE, Ph. D., Ph. M. of Faculty.

Campbell-Hagerman College

Resident school for girls and young women. Board and tuition, $300. New buildings. Every convenience. English College Preparatory, Junior College Courses. Music, Art, Expression. Physical Culture. Students the past year from 16 states. For year book apply to G. P. SIMMONS, Associate President, LEXINGTON, KY., 437 West Second St.

Vanderbilt University

NASHVILLE, TENN.

1007 STUDENTS 100 TEACHERS
CAMPUS OF 80 ACRES

New College Hall and Chemical Laboratory Just Completed

Expenses low. Literary courses for graduates and undergraduates. Professional courses in Engineering, Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, Theology. Send for catalogue, naming department.

J. E. HART, Secretary.

Belmont College

For Young Women Nashville, Tenn.
IRA LINDRITH, D.D., LL.D., President
MISS HOOD and MISS HERON, Principals
College and Preparatory Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Modern Languages, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Matchless location. Athletic, Horse-back Riding. Register now. For catalogue, address
BELMONT COLLEGE, Box 7.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS
UNBREAKABLE POINTED
TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage.

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
LE PAGE
INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO
TORONTO - CANADA

ESTABLISHED 1858
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

THE ADVOCATE CAMPAIGN.

Dear Mr. Editor: I am glad to say that you are giving me the best paper that I read, not excepting my Georgia paper. The Wesleyan Christian Advocate. I see no reason why it should not be in every Methodist home in the State. Your brother,

T. J. WARLICK

Shreveport, La.

Dear Brother: I appreciate your efforts to improve the Advocate and am convinced that you must receive the help of the preachers before the best results can be obtained. You may depend on me to look up the renewals and search for some new ones. We are delighted with the Advocate. Yours sincerely,

W. L. GRAVES

Itta Bena, Miss.

Dear Mr. Editor: I am trying to get up a club for the Advocate at Prairie. It is getting better all the time, and there is not an Advocate anywhere that can compare with it, and some of the people here who have read the Nashville Advocate thirty years, say that our Advocate is right up with it. We are all proud of it here, and if those people at Prairie could see it once, I think they will subscribe to it. So I send you a list of names and ask you to send each one a copy, and I will do my best to get the money for a year's subscription. If they take it a year, they will continue their subscriptions, especially if the paper improves all along as it has in the past few months. With best wishes,

JAS. S. DUKE

Strong, Miss.

Since our last report we have received nice lists of subscriptions, with the cash, from the following friends:

Miss Ada De Wees, Brandon, Miss.; Rev. H. B. Watkins, Magnolia, Miss.; Rev. J. W. Dorman, Lexington, Miss.; Rev. O. L. Savage, Hattiesburg, Miss.; Rev. J. E. Gray, Benton, Miss.; Rev. J. S. Purcell, Florence, Miss.; Rev. D. L. Cogdell, Lula, Miss.; Rev. D. M. Geddie, Winona, Miss.; Rev. E. L. Cargill, Wilson, La.

Others who have sent in one or more subscriptions or renewals, with the cash, are:

Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.; Rev. A. L. Davenport, Rara Avis, Miss.; Rev. W. J. Wood, Paris, Miss.; Rev. R. A. Davis, Bienville, La.; Rev. F. O. Bell, Bounds, Miss.; Rev. W. A. Betts, Montrose, Miss.; Rev. F. L. Applewhite, Monticello, Miss.; Rev. F. N. Sweeney, Baker, La.; Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir, Lake Arthur, Rev. W. M. Langley, Carrollton, Miss.; Rev. G. A. Morgan, Glenmora, La.; Rev. E. Blizard, Myrtle, Miss.; Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, Forest, Miss.; Rev. D. C. Foust, Ashland, Miss.; Rev. D. C. Langford, Taylorsville, Miss.; Rev. J. C. Ellis, Gallman, Miss.; Rev. F. P. Moss, Polock, La.; Rev. W. A. Bowlin, Smithville, Miss.; Rev. W. S. Shipman, Cleveland, Miss.; Rev. G. G. Yeager, Merrill, Miss.; Rev. J. W. Raper, Byhalia, Miss.; Rev. T. J. O'Neil, Newton, Miss.

Lists of renewals received this week will be acknowledged in our next report.

Hear the pledge of Jesus Christ: I will not leave you comfortless; I will come unto you. Lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world.—Selected.

Many a seeming defeat may force us to retreat to higher ground, where we may stand in stronger array, re-trenched, re-inspired—to fight harder than ever.—Selected.

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.

Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Courses. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE.

THE OLDEST COLLEGE FOR WOMEN IN AMERICA—THE RECOGNIZED STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE FOR THE WHOLE SOUTH—NOTABLE PROGRESS AMONG SOUTHERN INSTITUTIONS.

Splendid plant—worth $350,000—with all modern comforts, on an eminence in the best residential district in Macon. $200,000 now being raised for improvements and endowment.

One of less than a half dozen colleges for women in the South, on a full fourteen units basis. Courses leading to A. B. and B. S. degrees. Faculty of thirty-nine officers and teachers. Nearly 3,000 alumnae throughout the Nation. The Wesleyan's diploma is the highest academic honor open to a woman in the South.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, employing fourteen officers and teachers, is the Mecca of artists and those preparing to teach. Schools of Art and Expression at the same high standard. Diplomas and teachers' certificates are conferred.

The moral and physical health of Wesleyan young ladies is safeguarded at every point. The discipline and training are non-sectarian, but Christian to the core. Wesleyan's high aim is to send out young women of genuine Christian culture. Health record without a parallel. Serious sickness has been rare, and not a single death has occurred at the College in many years.

Rates within reach of all. The College is not conducted for money making, but to bless the world. Apply for catalogue and information in detail to REV. W. N. AINSWORTH, D.D., President, Macon, Ga.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jackson, Tenn.

Next School Year begins Wednesday, September 14. Every facility offered for a thorough education for girls and young women. All departments taught, including besides regular Classical and Literary Courses, Music, Art, Expression, Stenography, Typewriting, Business course, Etc. Charges reasonable. For catalogues, etc., apply to

REV. A. B. JONLS, Jackson, Tenn.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute is one of the oldest female colleges in the South, having been chartered in 1843. The college has 250 attendants and 125 of them are boarding pupils.

THE TEXAS DENTAL COLLEGE
HOUSTON, TEXAS

THE SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION BEGINS OCTOBER 4th, 1910.

Offers to the prospective dental students unsurpassed clinical advantages and teaching facilities for the study of the most modern and up-to-date dentistry. Ideal winter climate; Reasonable living expenses, and the most wholesome moral influences.

For full information and catalogue, address the secretary, CHAS. H. EDGE.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

A home school for girls. 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful hill country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue. Address, Pres. E. E. BROWNLEE, CLINTON, LA.

Ward Seminary Nashville, Tennessee

FOR GIRLS AND YOUNG WOMEN

46th year. Seminary and Special Courses. Conservatory of Music—Emil Winkler, Director; Signor Campobello, Voice; Fritz Schmitz, Violin. 175 Boarding Pupils. Complete appointments. City advantages. Beautiful campus for outdoor sports. For catalogue address J. D. BLANTON, President.

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McCord, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."

C. G. Butler, Argenta, Ark., wrote: "Used 4 bottles and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per cent better."

Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever Tonic Co.
Savannah, Georgia.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

One grows tired of rich pastries, but never of "Crystal" jellies. They are rich and appetizing, but pure, wholesome and easy to digest.

Delicious with fruit. A great number of dainty dishes can be prepared quickly from Crystal Gelatine at a very slight expense. Thousands prefer it to all other kinds.

Ask your grocer. Sample free.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.
121 A Beverly St.
BOSTON, MASS.

THE BOAT FUND.

Following amounts have been received since last report:

Eunice, Mrs. T. J. Adams $3.10
Lake Charles, W. W. Drake 5.00
Jeanerette, Mrs. E. R. Jackson 3.25
Houma, C. V. Breithaupt 3.50

Let the other subscribers send in their amounts as soon as possible.

J. E. DENSON, P. E.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Shreveport Dist.—Third Round.

Campiti, at St. Maurice Aug. 20, 21
Ida, at Munlin's Chp. Aug. 24, 25
Greenwood Aug. 27, 28
La Chute, at Taylortown Sept. 3, 4
Pelican, at Bethel Sept. 6, 7
Pleasant Hill, at Robelline Sept. 10, 11
Mooringsport Sept. 13, 14
Bossier City Sept. 16
Zwolle, at Bayou Scie Sept. 17, 18
Many, at New Hope Sept. 20
Hornbeck, at Holly Sept. 22
Leesville Sept. 23
Bon Ami Sept. 24, 25
DeRidder Sept. 25, 26
Langville Sept. 27, 28
Noel Memorial Sept. 30

T. J. WARLICK, P. E.

New Orleans Dist.—Third Round.

Felicity a. m. Aug. 21
Algiers p. m. Aug. 21
Carrollton Aug. 28
Second Church Sept. 4
First Church Sept. 11
Rayne Memorial Sept. 18

F. N. PARKER, P. E.

Lafayette Dist.—Third Round.

Prudhomme, at C. P. Aug. 20, 21
Rayne Aug. 27, 28
Jennings Sept. 3, 4
Lake Charles Sept. 10, 11
Sulphur, at Sulphur Sept. 11, 12
Eunice, at L. P. Sept. 17, 18
Bell City, at B. C. Sept. 24, 25
Lake Arthur Sept. 25, 26

J. E. DENSON, P. E.

Monroe Dist.—Third Round.

Downsville, at Willhite Aug. 20, 21
Waterproof, at Wesley Aug. 25
Floyd Aug. 27, 28
Eros, at Indian Village Aug. 31
Lake Providence Sept. 3, 4
Merrouge Sept. 7
Brookland Sept. 10, 11

S. S. KEENER, P. E.

Ruston Dist.—Third Round.

Bernice, at Summerfield Aug. 20, 21
Ringgold, at G. B. Aug. 27, 28
Gibbsland, at O. G. 11 a. m. Sept. 1
Jonesboro, at Wyatt Sept. 3, 4
Winnfield Sept. 4, 5
Houghton 11 a. m. Sept. 8
Lisbon, at — Sept. 10, 11
Minden Sept. 17, 18
Cotton Valley, at — 11 a. m. Sept. 19
Lanesville, at P. G. Sept. 24, 25

R. W. TUCKER, P. E.

Baton Rouge Dist.—Third Round.

Zachary, at Ethel Aug. 20, 21
Baton Rouge, Second Ch. Aug. 21, 22
E. Feliciana, at C. G. Aug. 26
Pine Grove, at C. G. Aug. 26
Tickfaw, at Red Oak Sept. 3, 4
Baton Rouge, First Ch. Sept. 5
Pt. Vincent, at Huffs Chp. Sept. 10, 11
Den. Sps., at Palmetto Sept. 17, 18
Hammond Sept. 18, 19
New Roads Sept. 24, 25

C. C. MILLER, P. E.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

The roll of the great leaders in human thought and effort have not been those who had the best opportunities, but those who made the best of those which they had.—Selected.

Quenches Thirst—
Horsford's Acid Phosphate
It makes a refreshing, cooling, beverage and strengthening Tonic—superior to lemonade.

I H C GASOLINE ENGINES GIVE MOST POWER AND USE LEAST FUEL

YEARS of hard everyday work have proved that I H C gasoline engines furnish the best power for farm use. Then why run any risk when you can be sure? Why buy some unproved, little known, engine when you can get a proved I H C with a world-wide reputation? Don't be misled or over-persuaded by extravagant words or claims. Investigate thoroughly before you buy.

Go to the I H C local dealer and see for yourself. You can see at a glance how simple an I H C engine is—how few parts it has. You can see at a glance how strong each of these parts is. This is a great advantage, for it is plain that the simpler a machine—the fewer and stronger the parts—the less liable that machine is to get out of order.

Then look into the special I H C construction. See how easily any part, from the ignitor plug to the fly wheel, can be removed—how the whole engine is so constructed that all of it can be kept clean and in perfect condition with the least trouble. This is a great advantage, for it eliminates trouble and repair bills and means added power—added satisfaction—added years of service.

Simplicity and easy access to every part—so that the whole engine can be easily kept in perfect working order—are only two of the many important advantages of I H C engines.

In every other feature an I H C shows the same superiority. Special I H C cylinder construction brings all gasoline vapor to a high compression and gets the maximum power out of the least fuel. A special I H C check keeps excess fuel from being admitted into the cylinder and wasted. Another special I H C feature eliminates the waste and danger of any gasoline overflow. In short, an I H C gasoline engine has proved that it will give you most power—with the least fuel—with the least trouble—for the longest use—and these are the qualities you want in your engine.

I H C engines are made in all styles and sizes from 1 to 25-horsepower—vertical or horizontal—stationary, portable, or tractor—to fit every need in every section. The I H C line offers you the widest selection from which to pick just the engine for your needs.

Talk it over with the I H C local dealer next time you go to town. Or, if you prefer, write direct for catalogue and full information.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY OF AMERICA
(Incorporated)
Chicago, U.S.A.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA, SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL, General Passenger Agent.

New Orleans to California and Pacific Northwest and Points Intermediate.

California $32.00 one way; Pacific Northwest $46.85 one way
Via SOUTHERN PACIFIC

THE SCENIC ROUTE.

TICKETS ON SALE DAILY, AUGUST 25th to SEPTEMBER 9th, 1910.
Inclusive, OCTOBER 1st, to 15th, 1910, Inclusive.

SUNSET EXPRESS

Only Train New Orleans to San Francisco Without Change

OIL BURNING LOCOMOTIVES; PULLMAN STANDARD and TOURIST SLEEPERS; OBSERVATION CAR—CHAIR CARS and COACHES; ELECTRIC LIGHTED—ELECTRIC BLOCK SIGNALS; DINING CAR SERVICE BEST IN THE WORLD.

RATE per DOUBLE BERTH in TOURIST SLEEPER, NEW ORLEANS to SAN FRANCISCO — $5.75

For Further Information, Tickets and Reservation, Call or Write
J. H. E. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt., C. W. MURPHY, City Pass. Agt.,
NATCHEZ and MAGAZINE Sts., 227 ST. CHARLES ST.
NEW ORLEANS, LA. NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Epworth League

By Rev. H. B. Watkins.

TOPIC FOR AUGUST 21.

A RIGHTEOUS LIFE AND ACCEPTABLE SERVICE.

References: Amos v. 1-9, 14-15; James 1: 25-27.

Let us notice that Amos, the author of that prophecy which we study today, is another of those characters called of God from his daily vocation to do for him a definite work, to be for him a voice of warning to the people of Israel primarily and in a general way to Judah and to the nations about them.

Let us note that like David and other prominent Old Testament characters, he was a shepherd and that it was from the keeping of his flocks that he was called. Have some one read Amos i. 1, and vii. 14-15.

The reign of Jeroboam II in Israel seems to have been one of great material prosperity, but unfortunately as too often occurs, prosperity, instead of turning men's hearts toward God, had made them forget him, and Amos cries out against a catalogue of sins which were fast bringing upon Judah and Israel God's destructive wrath. What those sins were is easily seen by a scanning of these few chapters. Idolatry, drunkenness, dishonesty, oppression, uncleanness, bribery, fratricide are prominent among them. Years have passed by, but sinful hearts and sinful nations still bring forth the same transgressions, and God's servants must still cry out against these things.

I think God's goodness has hardly been shown better than in his faithful warnings, and no ministry reflects the faithfulness of God which doesn't hold up the sins of its time and declare God's displeasure, and his certain punishment of them. It doesn't require a prophet, in the sense of one who, by inspiration, foresees future events, to tell that calamity, sorrow, ruin, death, hell, will follow in the wake of individual and national sins of our day.

The general propositions of our lesson today is that worship separated from righteousness is hideous, instead of pleasing to God. The more the Israelites associated with the neighboring peoples, the more likely were they to forget this, for these peoples had entirely divorced their worship from righteousness and joined it to unrighteousness, so that their very worship was composed of and mingled with uncleanness. With the worship of Jehovah the apostle has been true. The devotion to God which produces real worship will also produce real righteousness. No one who knows his Spirit will ever attempt to substitute worship for righteousness, nor righteousness for worship. It remained for the practical James in his first chapter to put into a nutshell that the religion that didn't produce righteousness was worthless.

Amos viii. 3, teaches that so far from the songs of the unrighteous being pleasing to God, that in the day of his vengeance he will break in upon their temple songs because of their sins, and by violence will turn them into howlings. Verses 4-6, in the same chapter, show that these people were eager for their worship days to be over so that they might hasten back to money-making by dishonest practices. In the meanwhile, what must God have thought of their worship? We must not suppose from these statements that God doesn't love worship that comes from a sincere heart. The kind of worship he loves is shown in Luke xviii. 9-14, where a man, repenting of his past sins and, without doubt, eager to live a new life, worshipped God acceptably.

It is shown in John iv. 20-24, where Jesus teaches that it is worship of the spirit that God wants, a spirit that will also follow God's law.

In Luke xix. 1-9, is shown that the same devotion that really worships Christ will produce penitence, restitution, and goodness. I Corinthians xiii. 1-3, teaches that no form of worship even to the burning of one's body can take the place of a throbbing love which will produce a righteous life.

Turn back now to Amos v. 8, and plead that our people, by a heart-felt need and devotion, seek in worship the personal God, the God who made the seven stars and Orion and turneth the shadow of death into the morning. "The Lord is his name." Personal devotion to a Personal God, will produce at once acceptable service and a good, true life.

THE DISORDERLY HOME.

Have you ever visited a home where you found conditions that caused you to say: "I feel so sorry for that mother. It keeps her busy picking up after those half-dozen children?"

Undoubtedly there are many mothers doing that very thing, but we are not sure as to their deserving the sympathy often given them. It is remarkable how easy the very small child can be trained to habits of order and neatness in his play which will develop to his good as he grows older.

To insist that the block house is made just right, that all the playthings are put away when not in use, is to start the child in a habit that will bring him lasting respect and benefit. It is not necessary for a mother to tire herself picking up after the children, if she begins right with them; and in caring for their own belongings, children take more care and pride in them. The little boy who would not go to bed until the animals were all in his ark, his other toys put carefully away, his shoes and clothing in their proper place, grew to be a man whose farm machinery is carefully housed, his barn lots in perfect order and his work done systematically and well.

Remember, mothers, while you are dodging that gathering up, this and that, you are not doing it to help the child, but to spoil him.

In every year is recognized more and more the need of orderly, systematic farm life. Begin at once to instill work, and the children should be started early in the right direction. The day is passing when farm work is done and order come in as requisite characteristics in a slipshod way and the children after it. —Southern Churchman.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection; beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders, a specialty. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hemlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

YOU CAN AFFORD

a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person. FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL. Round or Shape Notes, for $3 for 100. Words and music. 33 very best songs. Sample copy 5 cents. E. A. K. HACKETT, 109 North Wayne Street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Methodist Benevolent Association

Ministers and Laymen of Southern Methodist Church. Benefits at Death, or Old Age, or Disability. Over $30,000 paid to Widows, Orphans, Disabled. Insurance at cost. If in good health, write for rates and other information. CARE METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE

NASHVILLE TENN.

The Biggs Treatment

The most successful and best known method in the South for the cure of chronic ailments. No drugs. If you are afflicted with Paralysis, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Nervous Debility, or some other disease that medicine has failed to cure, write for our free book which tells about all this new and better way.

Ideal climate, home-like conditions, complete sanitarium equipment; low charges, liberal guarantee of satisfaction.

Write to-day for the book and diagnosis blank—both free.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM,
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

QCKWORK METAL POLISH

This marvelous new polish produces a brilliant and lasting surface in a few seconds. It contains nothing injurious. Fine for brass fixtures, signs, automobiles, yachts, golf sticks, faucets and all metals. Qckwork eliminates all drudgery, turns work into play. Accept no substitute.

IN 25c. TINS EVERYWHERE

Manufactured by Kettler Brass Mfg. Co. Houston, Texas.

You Look Prematurely Old

Because of those ugly, grizzly gray hairs. Use "LA GREYLE" HAIR COLOR RESTORER. Price $1.00, retail.

The Sunday School Lesson

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

THIRD QUARTER. LESSON VIII. AUGUST 21, 1910.
JESUS NEARING JERUSALEM.

Matthew xx, 17-34. Parallel Passages: Mark x, 32-45; Luke xviii, 31-34.

17. And Jesus going up to Jerusalem took the twelve disciples apart in the way, and said unto them.
18. Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death.
19. And shall deliver him to the Gentiles to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify him; and the third day he shall arise again.
20. Then came to him the mother of Zebedee's children with her sons, worshipping him, and desiring a certain thing of him.
21. And he said unto her, What wilt thou? She saith unto him, Grant that these my two sons may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left, in thy kingdom.
22. But Jesus answered and said, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto him, We are able.
23. And he saith unto them, Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with; but to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.
24. And when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation against the two brethren.

Golden Text: "The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." (Matt. xx, 28.)

I. The Lesson's Meaning.

Christ was now within twenty-one miles of Jerusalem. At the beginning of our lesson we find him still beyond Jordan in the borders of Perea; at its close we see him, having crossed the Jordan, leaving Jericho, and only six hours' walk (fifteen miles) from the stronghold of his enemies. Jesus was going before them. Mark tells us, and the significance of the journey and the boldness of Jesus evidently now greatly impressed the disciples, for "they were amazed; and some that followed were afraid." (Mark x, 32.)

So we find Jesus taking the disciples apart in the way probably before reaching Jericho, and telling them again, "Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests and scribes; and they shall condemn him to death, and shall deliver him to the Gentiles to mock, and to scourge and to crucify; and the third day he shall be raised up." But being occupied with preconceived ideas and hopes, and having unbounded confidence in the miraculous power of their Master, they could believe none of these things; and doubtless answered, as Peter before, "Be it far from thee, Lord; this shall never be unto thee." So Luke tells us, "They perceived not the things which were said."

They remembered well, however, that he had spoken shortly before, in answer to Peter's question, "What shall we have of their sitting on twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel; so it seems that their thoughts were divided between physical fear, as they faced existing conditions, and confidence and expectation that soon miraculous changes were to be effected, and Christ unanimously acclaimed and exalted as the Messiah of Israel.

So we find James and John and their mother, full of vain hopes and selfish ambitions, coming to Jesus with the request that a certain favor be granted; and upon Christ's asking, "What wouldst thou?" Matthew states that the mother answered, Mark that the brothers answered, that the two sons might sit, one on his left hand and one on his right hand in his kingdom; might in short be given the chief places, and so have pre-eminence above all others. There is pathos in the reply of Jesus, and evidently his heart was heavy as he said, "Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink the cup that I am about to drink? or be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?" And with still greater blindness and presumption they answered, "We are able." Christ then, with prophetic vision, affirms, "My cup indeed ye shall drink; but to sit on my right hand and on my left is not mine to give," as a matter of personal favoritism, but it is for those found worthy of it.

But the ten hear of this on the sly attempting to get ahead of them, and having identically the same selfish and ambitious spirit, they were moved with indignation toward the two brethren. So the whole twelve were in an uproar. Jesus stops them in his journey, calls them all to him again, and patiently seeks to instill into their hearts the old lesson—so hard to learn—that the worldly conception of greatness, having dominion over others, is not the true one; but that true greatness is to be found only in abundant service, "even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many."

Following this he passed through the city of Jericho, and surrounded by a great multitude proceeded on his way to Jerusalem. The lesson closes with the plea of the blind men, as Jesus passed by, that he should have mercy upon them, and his gracious granting of their request.

II. The Lesson's Message. Points to Impress.

1. "A man convinced against his will, is of the same opinion still." It is futile to speak of the anxiety for self-sacrifice and the greatness of service to those filled with such ambitions and hopes.

2. Place-seeking is unbecoming and unworthy everywhere; but above all, in those professing to be followers and ministers of Jesus Christ.

It is fundamentally un-Christian, and in the sight of God we feel confident nothing is baser than to seek self-aggrandizement by personal conference with those in power. It were well that all those who have attained greatness through service should answer all such advances as did Jesus here, calling men to prove their worth by self-denying service rendered; for place must be won by merit, not given upon request. The mother of James and John was Jesus' aunt (his mother's sister). Doubtless they expected this fact to have weight with him.

3. The great ones in the sight of God, and those only whom men really revere as truly great, are those lofty in purpose, unselfish in effort, rejoicing in ministries to others' good. Whether honored by men or not, their place is secure, and they that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever.

4. Place seeking results always in envy and discord. "And when the ten heard it they were moved with indignation against the two brethren." Bishop Chandler aptly says here, "Selfishness always affects to despise selfishness; covetousness hates its competitors; wire-pullers want no wires pulled but those which they themselves handle. In Church and State the men who talk most of 'rings' and 'cliques' are those whose combinations have been defeated."

5. "Ye know not what ye ask." How often is it that our desires and even prayers are uttered in ignorance of our real needs, and in selfish desire only for our own advancement. We may well be careful for what we pray and make request of Jesus.

6. Contentment and peace of heart are found only as we renounce selfish ambition, cease looking upon life as a ladder to be climbed, but as an opportunity not to be missed of doing some worthy work well. These lines express the true spirit of a Christian and its reward most beautifully, entitled "Of One Who Was Unselfish."

"Because he did not ask a name, They gave their smiles and tears and crowned him; And since he did not seek for fame, Contentment came, and put her arms around him."

IN HIS PLACE.

One stormy night some children in an educational institution were sitting down to supper when the teacher said their usual grace, "Come, Lord Jesus, and be our guest."

Looking up into her face, a little boy said: "You always ask the Lord to come, but He never does. Do you think He will ever really come?"

"O, yes," replied the teacher, "He will come."

"Then," said the boy, "I will get a chair at the table, so as to be ready for Him."

Soon there came a knock at the door, and a poor man entered, dripping with rain and very hungry. They did what they could for him, and then led him to the vacant seat by the child. Instantly the boy's eyes were opened, and perceiving the truth, he said, "I see it all now; the Lord couldn't come Himself, and so He sent this poor man in His place. Isn't that it?"

"Yes," replied the teacher, "that is it."—Selected.

Nothing on earth, not even the worst relationships of capital and labor, can ever excuse half-hearted work.—G. H. Morrison.

"THE SCHOOL THAT CARES."

Not Crowded
Takes only 200
Controls entire Village
No football or tobacco

SAFEST PLACE IN SOUTH.

Free Cats.
Ask Pres. E. E. SMITH, Ruskin, Tenn.

RUSKIN CAVE COLLEGE

THE BOYS OF TO-DAY ARE THE MEN OF TO-MORROW.

One of the greatest factors in training the boys of to-day to fight successfully the battles of to-morrow, is Prof. M. A. Beeson, B.S., President of the Meridian Male College, Meridian, Miss. Probably nowhere in the world can be found an institution that covers so thoroughly every detail of training that stands for real manhood, as at the Meridian College. Here the boys are surrounded with every comfort and convenience, completely equipped gymnasium and outdoor recreation, such as boating, fishing, swimming, etc., and a religious atmosphere that instills into them the higher ideal of life and true manliness.

M. A. BEESON, B.S., President Meridian Male College. The education is complete in every respect as regards business, physical development and spiritual instructions. Prof. Beeson should indeed be proud of his achievement in this school, and deserves the support and co-operation of every father and mother. If you have a boy that you want to educate right, ask Prof. Beeson about the Meridian Male College, addressing Prof. M. A. Beeson, President, Dept. D, Meridian, Miss. Meridian Woman's College and Conservatory of Music, Department of Art and Eloquence, a quarter of a mile away, furnishes a safe place for the boy's sister or cousin or friend.

Mansfield Female College.

Next Session begins September 7.

For Catalogue and other information, address,
President W. L. WEBER,
MANSFIELD, LOUISIANA.

Murfreesboro School for Boys.

Murfreesboro, Tennessee.

Are You Anxious About That Boy?

Investigate the claims of the Murfreesboro School for Boys.

ANDERSON CRAVENS CARTER
MURFREESBORO, TENNESSEE.

The Woman's College of Shreveport.

A high-grade College for Girls and Young Ladies. Ideal location. Steam heat. Modern improvements. Non-sectarian. Faculty of specialists. College and Preparatory Courses. Music, Art, Expression, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Session begins Wednesday, September 21, 1910. Write for catalogue. GEORGE L. HARRELL, President, Shreveport, La.

CHAMBERLAIN-HUNT ACADEMY Port Gibson, Miss.

Reduced Rates—$180.00 pays all Expenses

This includes board, tuition, light, fuel and all fees—NO EXTRAS. Port Gibson is located among the highest hills of the State—exceptionally healthy and free from malaria. Military features abolished. Competent experienced instructors in every department. Modern up-to-date equipment. Splendid discipline. Beautiful campus, athletic fields and gymnasium for physical development. Here the boy is thoroughly instructed, morally, mentally and physically.

Cats og giving detailed information will be sent upon request.—It tells you things you ought to know before sending your boy off to school.
CHAMBERLAIN-HUNT ACADEMY, Box 900, PORT GIBSON, MISS.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 57—No. 33.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2846.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, THURSDAY, AUGUST 25, 1910.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

THE MISSION OF GREATER METHODISM.

(Fraternal address delivered by Rev. H. M. DuBose, D.D., before the General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada at Victoria, B. C., August 24, 1910.)

Mr. President and Brethren of the Conference: To a Briton has been left the task of interpreting to the world the constitution of the American Republic, and this is not on the ground that the makers of history can be neither its writers nor expounders, but because Runnymede and the American Revolution belongs to a concrete story, and because Magna Charta and the Constitution were inspired by a common racial love of freedom. Ambassador Bryce made himself an American, but became no less an Englishman, in the vast preparation which fitted him to write "The American Commonwealth." In this achievement he manifested the instinct of citizenship in that commonwealth of sympathies and ideals whose boundaries are coextensive with those of the English-speaking races, and which has become the most splendid prophecy of universal fellowship and co-operation yet produced in the ages of history.

In that great realm, that empire of thought and action built upon the English Bible, English learning, and English confessions and constitutions, there is indeed a common citizenship, as there is a common suffrage, which describes privileges and responsibilities the most tremendous that have yet fallen to the lot of mankind.

Within this realm of race and thought, Methodism, the offspring of the Wesleyan revival, has had its chief manifestation. In the English tongue it found for its message such a vehicle as no other language of the earth could have afforded. Its greatest miracles have been wrought in the English heart, and to the larger English faith and zeal it looks for its future propagation in the earth.

This call of Methodism upon the English-speaking races is not a confession that Methodism is a race cult or even a form of race religion. No aspect or interpretation of Christianity since the apostolic evangel has carried more truly than has Methodism the pledge of world adaptation. The universality of its terms of salvation and its freedom from liturgical influences and enslaving traditions stamp it as an emanation from that Light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

And yet, after all, Methodism is the theology of a people rather than of a school. It is the last and sublimest output of the faith of the English race. Methodism can no more be separated in thought from the English consciousness than it can be separated from English morals and the English interpretation of the gospel.

Nor is it to be forgotten that the spirit of the great Anglican Confessions is a theological element of Methodism. That and its passion for evangelism make it the oldest, as also the newest, of all the Protestant interpretations of Christianity.

The origin and affinity of Methodism being thus found to be so distinctly English, it follows logically that upon the citizens of the greater commonwealth of English sympathies and ideals, so far as they have become Wesleyan, rests the responsibility of maintaining Methodism in its purity of statement and interpretation, and also of imparting its blessings to both kindred and alien races.

It is as the representative of a very large segment of the citizenship of the greater Wesleyan realm within this English race and thought empire that I am in this august presence tonight, charged with an embassy of fellowship and fraternity and burdened with a message which I am sure will appeal to your interest and elicit your sympathy.

Canada and the South.

I have the honor, Mr. President and brethren, to bear to you the formal and fraternal greetings of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a Church the stock and body of whose adhesion is closely allied in blood and ideals to the people of Canada. Indeed, I have found it a pleasant task to trace the many particular and general points of resemblance between the life of this Imperial Dominion and the life of my own happy section.

In the first place, it is noticeable that the spirit and original impress of the motherland have been persistent at both ends of the English-speaking American Continent. This is testified to in each case by a verile native English speech, by habits of social quietness, and by a concentration upon the home of the affections and loyalty of all classes. Nor is this other than a logical result of race seed-sowing. The cavaliers and English gentry who early acquired estates in the virgin South differed in no intellectual or social wise from the English and Scottish freeholders who built and are still building on so enduring a foundation the Canadian commonwealth.

Nor is the record of blood, speech and social ideals the only pre-eminent likeness subsisting between your people and mine. It reaches into the realm of religion. The Wesleyan spirit of simplicity in worship and doctrine which has so largely obtained in the Dominion from the beginning is one, as I rejoice to believe, with the religious habits of my own people.

In this connection permit me to express the great pleasure which I have had in learning from a volume by one of your Canadian Methodist historians, Dr. Sanderson, that a British province in North America was so near the point of time to holding the primacy in the introduction into the New World of the Wesleyan evangel. Laurence Coughlan, the Irish local preacher, who began his mission in Newfoundland in 1765, preceded by one year the preaching of Philip Embury in New York City.

But it is now established beyond a reasonable doubt that Robert Strawbridge, another Irish local preacher, sowed the seeds of the Wesleyan revival in the province of Maryland as early as 1760. Thus is the rivalry in this happy history found to lie between the Methodism of the South and the Methodism of British North America. This contest of the maple leaf and the palm can only render more fragrant the memory of those apostolic men who, in the beginning of our separate eras anticipated that "last for which the first was made."

Having thus been, from our separate beginnings, in blood and character English and Celtic, you of the Canadian North and we of the South could have but obeyed the streaming tide of life and tradition behind us. This obedience is cause of thanksgiving for our present and becomes a prophecy and a guarantee for our future. It is occasion for a mutual congratulation in which I am come to engage and to express the fraternal good will and lively interest of the great brotherhood whose representative I have the happiness to be.

The Methodism of the South.

It will not be news to you, Mr. President and brethren, but I am sure it will not prove an unwelcome reiteration to hear that the Church which I represent is the second largest body of Methodists in the World; that is a Church whose history is a unique and significant chapter in the ever-wonderful story of American Protestantism; that it not only occupies the territory, but also boasts and cherishes the traditions of original American Methodism; indeed, that its claim is no less than that of being in a particular, though not exclusive, sense the original Methodist body as organized in the New World in 1784.

But there is no issue between the two great Episcopal Methodisms in the States as to their historic and ecclesiastical parity. In such just and generous statements as those contained in the Cape May Commission's settlement of forty years ago this doctrine is mutually admitted, and is furthermore acted upon in each household. In a joint hymn book, a joint catechism, a joint order of service, and in many co-operative plans this mutuality and parity are accepted; and, what is more, these two Methodist households have won each from the other a love which seals the heritage of the past and secures the hope of the future.

The Church in the South, Mr. President and brethren, has won its place of prestige and influence amongst the Churches of Protestantism through an experience of sufferings and sacrifices blessed of divine grace. The civic heroism which restored in so brief a time the material waste and wreck of our once war-blighted land has been more than equalled in the zeal of Methodism which has already retrieved tenfold and more the years which were wasted by war and misfortune.

But, brethren, it is far from my purpose, as it would be contrary to the spirit of my commission, to indulge in boastful sentiments. Be it far from me to seek to aggrandize or extol after the manner of this world the sacrifices for conscience's sake, the zeal and the abundant victories of the fathers and defenders of the Methodism of the South. The story of what our fathers have wrought and of what we, their sons and successors, have sought to complete is broadly written in the books of Methodism; and it would be an affront to your cosmopolitan intelligence to assume that you do not know of the facts in the depth and breadth of their range.

Nevertheless you will, I am sure, be pleased to learn that the number of communicants in our great connection is now but little short of two millions; that the children and youth in our Sunday schools are nearly an equal number; that the young people enrolled in our Epworth Leagues and missionary organizations are hundreds of thousands; that an era of surpassing prosperity in Church extension, missionary enterprises, and other enlarging movements have been on with us for several decades past; and that the increase in our membership for the past year was greater than that of the enrolled membership of several active Protestant bodies in that section of the Republic in which we have our chief representation.

But I purposely do not indulge in statistical totals. At best religious statistics serve to emphasize our shortcomings; at their worst they are a mask of pride. A respectable and pious king of antiquity got into serious trouble through an overweening concern about the Church census; and certain modern table makers are, I suspect, possessed of the same hallucination concerning the logic of numbers. I have no mind just now to take chances in that line.

Besides, Mr. President and brethren, I confess to a preference for those candid figures of speech which walk in the paths of a healthy inspiration as compared with those too often subservient numerals that are found reposing in the statistical columns. Furthermore, I crave your good opinion while I am with you, and shall take care that there is no occasion for a subtraction when I am absent from you in the body.

Sentiment, History, and Progress.

Mr. President and brethren, you will hear at my lips no undue appraisal of the history of that section of the great Republic from which I come; nor will I obtrude upon you any exploitation of our sectional sentiments, new or old. I do not believe in a sectional literature, nor in a sectional history, nor yet a sectional religion. I am an American, a citizen of the great English thought commonwealth, and a member of the brotherhood of mankind.

And yet I but speak my own sentiments when I say for the people of the Southern half of the American Republic that we do not seek to compound with history for our past, nor do we find in the record which even unfriendly hands have written for us any chapter which we would wholly rewrite. For our mistakes and sins we have penitence; for our lacks we have regrets and a purpose to amend; and for our merits we have due appreciation. Of our judges we have asked justice—that is, when our judges have had that commodity to spare. Charity we have asked—not for ourselves, but for those more in need of it. Indeed, in a land so naturally genial and fruitful as ours there is little appreciation, as there is little need, of either actual or sentimental alms.

So we have felt constrained to say even to some of our nearest of kind: "Offer your physic to those who are sick, and bestow your alms upon the impoverished." And why beholdest thou with a microscope the hookworm that is in thy brother's capillary when, lo! a school of octopi disport themselves in thine own plethora?"

The eyes of my people are not on the past, but on the future. Industrially and religiously we look forward. Inter-oceanic canals, deep waterways, great factories, great cities, great Churches, and great colleges and universities, with a great people dominated by the old-time faith and by exalted ideas of honor and purity, are now the dream of the Southland; and we believe the day of the realization has dawned.

I indulge in more than a speech of courtesy when I say that we of the Southern extremity of the continent are regarding with interest and wonder the expansion of material wealth and social life going on in the Canadian Northwest. The tides of life pouring over our own borders into Manitoba, Assiniboia, Saskatchewan, and Alberta, to say nothing of Imperial British Columbia, give even a Southerner a homelike feeling in your midst.

Your middle continental provinces are destined to be the Mesopotamia and Egypt of the Western world; and I am sorry, Mr. President and brethren, that we have not a million Southerners to spare you as settlers and home makers in these fertile principalities. But we have need of every man and every household of the old stock to hasten our institutions and our faith against the millions of aliens who are even now beginning to pour in upon us from Sabbathless and Christianless Continental Europe; but our prayers are with you that in getting home makers for your virgin plains you may get only men and women who fear God as you and your fathers have feared him, and who will uphold and not trample upon your laws and traditions.

Methodism and Protestantism.

Mr. President and brethren, I have interpreted my commission and the most significant hour of its discharge for shaping to my hands both an opportunity and a duty—namely, the opportunity and the duty to discuss a few of the militant matters that should instantly engage the thought and the sympathy of the universal Methodist mind. This it is that has led me to name my message "The Mission of Greater Methodism."

As a means of approach to my subject, will you indulge me while I seek to briefly interpret the relation of Methodism to the whole body of Protestant Christianity? If I shall be able to discover to you that Methodism is the ultimate or even the highest existing form of Protestantism, it will then be easy for us to accept together the conclusion that Methodism has a special mission to the Protestant nations over and above the one admittedly contained in its evangelistic message.

In its widest definition Protestantism is the liberation of both thought and faith from the bondage of dogmatism. But Protestantism is specifically the identification of the results of both thought and faith when moving in reverent and enlightened processes. Indeed, in the purview of Protestantism faith is only the highest form of reverent thought. It is thought validated in spiritual relations.

Protestant theology may be briefly described as the restoration of the Christian priesthood to the individual believer, the rediscovery of the doctrines of justification by faith and the witness of the Spirit, and the separation of the tenets of the great Catholic creeds from their false association with the dogmas of Rome. This statement describes the order of the theological development of Protestantism.

Methodism in its original statement and interpretation is an intensification of these points of Protestantism. It is an intellectual spiritual system in the truest sense. Its appeal is to reason and faith sitting in reverent unity. It was born amid the agencies of classic thought and culture, overshadowed by the spirit of devotion and prayer. It sprang from the midriff of the greatest Protestant university in the world—a university in which thought and faith were the tenets of an indivisible creed; where the churchman was not more devout than the philosopher; indeed, where the philosopher was a churchman and the churchman a philosopher, and where arose the belief that "An undevout astronomer is mad."

But Methodism, in response to its true Protestant impulse, went out of the university into the open light to write the statement of its evangelical doctrines in the hearts of the people. Yet even there it exhibited its nascent intellectual impulse. It appealed to the intellect and to the heart jointly. In England it lifted up socially and intellectually a neglected substratum of the people and really created a great middle class which is now the strength and hope of English society. In other lands it has shown itself equally a social and intellectual leaven, as also a call to universal salvation; and so has intensified the spirit of Protestantism wherever it has been preached.

These, Mr. President and brethren, are my reasons for holding that Methodism has a special testimony to bear in the world. The nature of this testimony now concerns me.

Doctrinal Mission of Methodism.

Amongst the matters that should constantly engage the larger Methodist thought and conscience the foremost are the defense and perpetuity of our doctrines, the maintenance of our ideals and authority in education, and the validation of our sentimental relations to questions of public morals and the world's peace. There are other questions before ecumenical Methodism and before its separate jurisdictions, but none which approaches these in urgency and importance.

First, then, what is the doctrinal mission of greater Methodism? Plainly, it is to maintain and propagate that catholic doctrinal heritage which has come to us from antiquity, as also those mighty experimental interpretations of the gospel established during the eighteenth century revival. Thus, broadly stated, Wesleyan theology consists of two elements—namely, the Anglican confessional doctrines and the Arminian experimental doctrines. These two agree.

The Anglican element in Wesleyan theology is described in the Twenty-Four Articles of the Wesleyan recension of the Edwardine Confession, common to all the American Methodist Churches, of the abbreviated offices and rubrics of our Ritual, and in a certain Anglican spirit in our worship.

Through the Anglican Confession, or the Thirty-Nine Articles, Methodism has inherited its formulated Articles of Religion from the most ancient sources—that is, from the Nicene Creed and from the Apostolic Scriptures. The Forty-Two Articles of Cranmer, afterwards reduced to the Thirty-Nine Articles of Archbishop Parker, were taken in their important statements, and almost literally, from the Augsburg Confession prepared by Luther and Melancthon, which in turn was directly inspired and determined by the Nicene Creed, which was itself an expansion of the confessional elements found in the New Testament.

Both the Augsburg and the Edwardine Confessions were attempts to restore the pure doctrines of the early Church by separating them in distinct formula from the body of Romish errors. In a large measure, this task was successful in each case, more largely in the Edwardine than in the Augsburg tenets; but the recension of Wesley eliminated the remains of Romanism from the Thirty-nine Articles and gave to Methodism a body of tenets which more completely express the theological spirit of Protestantism than does any other formulary in existence.

In the Edwardine Confession there existed, in addition to its minimum of Romanism, a pronounced leaven of Augustinianism, sometimes erroneously described as Calvinism. It was also the office of the Wesleyan recension to purge out this hurtful scholasticism.

Thus was the work of the Wesleyan recension done in a time both historically and providentially appointed; and it was so completely done that it will not likely need to be done again, especially since the age of creed-making is confessedly past.

Anglicanism and Arminianism.

The Wesleyan confessional articles, representing the chief Anglican element in Methodism, expound in their first section the spirituality and unity of the Godhead, the divine-human personality of Jesus Christ, the atonement made in his blood, the resurrection of the Crucified, the divinity and inspiration of the Scriptures, and the constitution of the Church in the priesthood of believers. In their second section these articles deal with the essential errors and intransigence of Rome. In the first section the language is in the terms of the Nicene Creed, and in the latter section the language is that of the Reformation at the hour of its emergence into completeness. In each case the forms of statement bear the stamp of fixity.

Methodism is set for the defense of these confessional doctrines which it has inherited from so glorious an antiquity.

There is a dearth of doctrinal preaching in Methodism to-day which bodes evil to the universal body. It contradicts the habits of our fathers. The heroic days of Methodism were marked by mighty pulpit statements of the cardinal doctrines of Christianity. In the Pauline epistles these doctrines stand out like sinews and muscles upon the body of an athlete. The great revivals have all been undergirded by strong doctrinal statements.

In the first place, then, Methodism must in the interpretation of its confessional heritage stand up in defence of the doctrine of both the immanence and the transcendence of the divine Creator and Ruler of the universe.

Belief in the being of God is not waning; the absurdity of infidelity is a proven conclusion in the thought of mankind. But the doctrine of the spirituality and omnipresent power and authority of Jehovah impinges but vaguely upon the thought of the civic world to-day and that largely through a lack of stalwart preaching on these points.

This great, wise, rich world needs to have the truth concerning the living God presented to it in the terms of a child's catechism and yet in the spirit and with fiery vehemence of Jewish prophecy: "God lives; God rules; God is moved by prayer; God is angry with the wicked every day; God is love; God judges the world now, and will judge it in the great assize," are truths which Methodism, by reason of its confessional faith and its living experience grounded in the Scriptures, should make with a new confidence every day.

Such close confessional preaching is not inconsistent with the newest and truest learning. True learning is only confirmed in the reiteration of these revelations. The immanence of God in nature explains the miracle of nature's order and continuity. It is the final element in the philosophy of the Christian evolutionist.

A fire mist and a planet,
A crystal and a cell,
A jellyfish and a saurian,
And the caves where the cave men dwell,
A sense of law and beauty,
A face turned from the sod—
Some call it evolution,
But we call it God.

Belief in the transcendence of God in spirit is the validation of the fond belief of mankind in its own divinity. A race of spiritual men is the proof of the transcendence of the Spirit who rules in the universe. This Spirit—the eternal, invisible, and only wise God—our Savior—we must preach until the nations learn to worship him in spirit and in truth.

The divine-human personality of Jesus Christ and the atonement made in his blood for the sins of the whole world are the overtopping doctrines of Christianity. They are the supreme elements in both the confessional and the experimental tenets of Methodism. They must be the burden of Methodist preaching throughout the world.

The doctrine of the virgin birth of Jesus Christ is the keystone of Christian theology. Remove or invalidate that doctrine and the whole fabric of Christianity as a miracle of spiritual power collapses. This view of the birth of Jesus Christ it is that makes it the sublimest event in the history of the world and his personality the sublimest fact in the universe.

As an experimental faith Methodism rests absolutely on the truth of the doctrine of the virgin birth of Jesus. The virgin birth and the new birth are inseparable in the theology of life.

Of all the Churches in Christendom, it is especially the mission of Methodism to preach the humanity of Jesus Christ as a cognate of his divinity. To no other school of Christianity is the doctrine of the humanity so necessary as to Methodism. The experimental doctrines of Methodism are the heart of its theology, and these doctrines are built on the idea of a miraculous humanity in the Son of man.

Jesus came not only to the gates of the cities of men and to the doors of their houses, but he entered into the blood and consciousness of the race. A human heart has become the center of the universe, and that heart is in the bosom of the Son of Man seated on the right hand of God the Father. He is absolutely necessary to the world's life—he is the world's only life.

We must not heed the skeptical vagaries of the age, whether these be found in the books of the aliens or in those of so-called Christian critics and theologians. There may be brightness in the literature of these skeptical speculations, but it is the phosphorescent glow of a decadent faith and conscience—the fox fire found upon the hunting ground of the adversary of souls. O Jesus, thou art my Lord and my God.

The death of Jesus Christ is the sublimest act of the universe, for it was a voluntary resignation to become a sacrifice. But Jesus did not die as a martyr, nor is he to be preached or believed on as the first and most self-devoted of the world's heroes. His death was the rounding out, the completion within itself of the divine consciousness, which consciousness is to be shared by men redeemed. It was the atonement in which the heart of God broke not only in compassion for the world's sin and spiritual poverty, but also in giving birth to a sympathy which opened the life of God to the life of men. The New Testament gospel—the Methodist gospel—is a gospel of blood. "This is my blood of the New Testament which is shed for you and for many for the remission of sins." Let us preach it despite the cavils and contradictions of men; despite the fogles and vagaries of the critics. A gospel without an atonement is no gospel at all.

Likewise should Methodist preachers everywhere accept the joyful burden of proclaiming the resurrection of Jesus in the unequivocal language of Scripture and the terms of our confession.

Both the birth and the resurrection of Jesus Christ are transcendent. They lie beyond the reach of the syllogisms of logic and the homologies of science, but they find their answer and their proof in the spiritualized consciousness of humanity.

The doctrine of the resurrection of Jesus is the doctrine which is to quicken and renew human society. With him the whole world rose in the hope of a perfect renewal. The beauty and form of the world are not to perish any more than perished the beauty and form of the Galilean Son of man, though for a time they were hidden by the tomb. The beauty and form of the world are to live through the power of a Christly resurrection.

It was the very body of our Lord that came out of the grave. Another doctrine I will not have. The world will heed this, and this only, concerning the divine-human Christ who has gone away in triumph to his throne.

The doctrine of the divinity and inspiration of the Scriptures was accounted by our Methodist fathers a thing most precious. By our confessional faith and by our experimental teachings we are bound to defend it. An inspired faith calls for an inspired Book: an infallible law must be infallibly stated. The Scriptures bear the stamp of divinity: they have been tested by the ages, and they endure and will endure forever. Methodism must go to the nations not only with an open Bible, but also with a Bible not one jot or tittle of which is marked to fail or pass away.

Methodism must hold up to the world its confessional and scriptural ideal of a Church whose constitution is in the priesthood of believers—a congregation of faithful men in which the pure word of God is preached and the sacraments duly administered according to Christ's ordinance in all those things which of necessity are requisite to the same.

The ages may well be challenged to put into speech a statement of the Church's rights and obligations surpassing this in clearness and cogency. Upon it Methodism can well afford to stand as a Church of Jesus Christ.

The experimental doctrines of Methodism, which have been described as the Arminian section of its theology, are its peculiar heritage. It rests, therefore, as a peculiar obligation upon Methodism to preach these doctrines.

The experimental doctrines of Methodism are: (1) An unlimited atonement, or salvation in Christ for all men who repent; (2) justification by faith; (3) the direct witness of the Spirit to the heart of the believer; and (4) holiness or sanctification, or as it is still more Methodistically stated, Christian perfection, attained by the believer in this life.

These doctrines have never been and never can be adequately stated in the terms of a confession. Arminianism is a method of interpreting the Scriptures in the light of an unlimited atonement, and not a credal theology. Arminianism emerged after all the great dogmatic creeds had been written, and was the pledge to Christianity of that newer day when doctrines are to be written on human hearts, and not in the order of scholastic formularies.

With these experimental Wesleyan teachings goes the scriptural doctrine concerning the Holy Ghost. Our preaching must be in the Holy Ghost and of the Holy Ghost. The Spirit of God is not a doctrine, but a divine person—the Paraclete. He alone can convince the world of sin; he alone can sanctify those who believe. So long as he is absent from our preaching, we need not wonder at its barrenness; so long as he is left out of our experiences, we need not wonder at our lack of spiritual power.

Our call is to preach old Methodism—a free, full gospel, salvation on the spot, holiness to the Lord in life and walk, and eternal felicity after death—

"A bleeding Savior seen by faith;

A sense of a pardoning love.

A hope that triumphs over death.

Methodism and Education.

Next to the call to Methodism to defend the purity and orthodoxy of its doctrines, the call to maintain its ideals and authority in education is important. This importance is predicated not alone of the innate significance of the matter, but of the organized movement which seeks to practically drive the Church from the field of higher education.

An effort is making in our day to enslave the public opinion and the intellectual conscience of the future generations through a money control of the educational systems of the world. To the promoters of this movement the brains of youth are as so many measures of wheat, so many carcasses of swine and oxen, or so many tons of steel or barrels of oil to be cornered in the market for individual advantage and gain.

This movement has assumed two shapes. First, it has created colossal foundations and sustentation funds for the giving of a purely secular education, and for the pensioning of such teachers as can show certificates freeing them from the taint of connection with religious education; and second, it deliberately in many instances—in most instances, in fact—plans to undermine and render ineffective the whole scheme of higher religious education, encouraging revolt and disloyalty amongst the fiduciary boards and faculties of the schools and colleges of the Church. To such an extent has this gone in the States, and especially in those of the South, that not a few Methodist teachers, on the way to the financial salt licks of the millionaires, have been known to sneer at "Methodist colleges" and the idea of Church education in general. So quickly does the meat of Caesar breed a strut in the gait of the lifetime boarder.

This matter, which a little while ago was observed as a mere symptom, is now a disease, deep and virulent; and one that threatens to strip the Churches of Protestantism of half their potency as witnesses to the truth.

No such evil as this has before emerged in our times. The ascendancy of the papacy in the Middle Ages was not so fatal to religion and truth as is this threatened ascendancy of mammon. The dogmatism of dollars is more to be dreaded than even the dogmatism of the papacy.

Plus IX, in his encyclical of 1870, did two things: First, he made himself a vice god to the Romanist world, assuming infallibility, an attribute of the God-head; then he undertook to tie up the progress of the world by demanding that men think only the thoughts of Rome. But the money power of today has gone beyond this: it not only proclaims itself a god, but it proposes to "settle the destinies of mankind" by buying up the schools and colleges of the land and suborning the teachers and faculties of the same so far as this may be possible.

Against this most insidious movement the Methodists of the world must for their own part, concert and organize.

It is a profitable study—this of looking narrowly into the purpose of this movement of hostility to the Church's educational ideals; this cult of the priesthood of the gold and silver idolon.

As to motive. Beyond a doubt this so-called educational movement is a scheme of predatory wealth to settle its dominion over the race of the immediate future. Its thought is that by means of cruel tariffs, conscienceless exactions upon the toilers and the common ranks of life, it may not only maintain its boards intact, but increase them to still more enormous figures.

But in an age and a land in which all men are deluded with the false belief that they are free, this can be done only through falsely stimulated sentiment which crystallizes in ballots and the acts of assemblies. Hence the effort to enslave public sentiment in the public school, the college, and the university. A generation educated under such conditions will make a subservient citizenship and return a public opinion enslaved and supine to the last degree.

This movement regards as education only that rote of instruction in the primaries and in the higher studies as disallows both the authority and the presence of the Church in the work of intellectual enlightenment. It harks back to the tenet of the old Alexandrian ethical school of Zeno, that virtue and morality can be uncovered in the life by a purely secular education.

What is more, this movement misrepresents the Church's attitude in the matter of education by asserting that the Church desires to supplement what is considered a secular training of the intellect with a special system of religious training. The truth is quite the contrary. The Church has but one standard of education; and while it admits nothing imposed in the standards of secular education, it insists that training to be thorough should be religious—that is, that it should be reverent toward revealed truth.

The truth concerning this whole matter is that religious education is an education which is imparted in a religious atmosphere, and this atmosphere is unfriendly to the schemes of the money lords of this world. Hence their Ishmaelish diplomacies.

Methodism and the Nations.

I come now to consider the duty of universal Methodism to validate its sentimental relations to questions of public morality and to the world's peace.

The plain meaning of this proposition is that the attitude of Methodism toward civic matters and public morals in the lands where it is represented is not to remain one of passive protest against evil, but is to become one of active opposition. Methodism is militant; its mission is not only to preach against evil, but also to fight against it.

The Wesleyan revival created a new society in eighteenth century England partly by overflowing with spiritual power the artificial barriers separating the classes, but more largely by opposing and eliminating those vices which particularly afflicted and kept in moral bondage the industrial classes. This is an opportunity of Methodism which has increased with the new age in many new lands.

This raises the old question of the relation of the preacher to the political body. In all the countries represented in the great English race empire the preacher is a citizen, endowed with all the rights and privileges of citizenship. But for reasons of expediency he must often abstain from the exercise of some of his political rights; as, for instance, his right to speak on the public hustings and hold public office; but his political obligations he cannot lay down, nor permit himself to be absolved from them by others. Those obligations are increased, not lessened, by reason of his religious leadership.

It is not a matter that I desire in any way to disguise that the world-wide destruction of the traffic in alcoholic and other intoxicating liquors is coming to be considered as very largely a Methodist question. As the representative of the second largest Methodist body in the world, I boldly affirm it to be such. It has been so from the beginning. John Wesley and Francis Asbury were types of prohibitionists as astute as any that can be found to-day in any part of North America.

Down in my State of Tennessee, in the great Republic, the vital issue before our people is what we term the State-wide prohibition of the liquor traffic. We hope ere many years shall have passed to have the joy of seeing every State of the South under a no-license law. The States of the old Cotton Confederacy are fast becoming the new Confederacy of Prohibition. And we even indulge the dream of seeing in our day the reign of national prohibition. It thrills me, soul and body, to be able to stand to-night upon a platform from which I can preach the hope of world-wide prohibition at least so far as fifty million Methodist citizens of the English-speaking countries of the world can make it possible.

In the Motherland, England, some years ago, when the temperance agitation was on with unusual liveliness, a great fear was born of the fact that the number of additions to the Churches had decreased during the agitation. We have passed beyond that fear in the Southland. An army in hostile contest with an enemy must needs suffer losses; but we count only on victory, and then our augmentation will be ten-fold our losses. Prohibition in the South has progressed to the point where it fills our churches, recruits our membership, and also puts the generations of the young into our hands, with enlarged hope of their salvation. The attitude of the two great Methodist Churches in the United States is one of organized and unqualified support of the war against alcohol. It is the Methodist spirit.

As to the world's peace. If there should ever again be war and bloodshed between two English-speaking peoples it would be to the charge and disgrace of Methodism; for Methodism has acquired the power to prevent it.

The last war between England and the United States—the melancholy struggle of 1812—was useless and ruthless, and will remain disgraceful in history so long as history shall be written; but Methodism can comfort itself with the thought that it was then too feeble a force to be counted. The present and the future constitute a different obligation.

The center of the world's peril is now in the Orient—the world's greatest mission field. To the Christian optimist there are two grounds of hope for a peaceful solution of the disturbing problems of the East—those of China and Japan—and these are: First, the Christian conscience of the English-speaking world, the moderation and Bible justice of the diplomacies of England and America; and second, the rapid Christianization and enlightenment of the Eastern Asiatic nations.

And does it not fall to Methodism as the typical religion of the English-speaking peoples to meet in this matter a call at home and abroad? By our preaching, by our living, and by the impact which we make upon society we are deepening that English-speaking conscience which holds the balance of diplomatic power in the world; while in meeting our missionary opportunities in Mongolian lands we shall be augmenting the power of "the Churches of Asia" to offer a complementing influence in preserving the world's peace and bringing nearer the day of the perfect triumph of Jesus Christ our Lord.

And now, brethren, may grace, mercy, and peace from the Lord Jesus Christ be with you all! And may the Holy Ghost guide and keep you and all the Churches of his favor, even to the consummation of the ages!

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

You Need the Leaders' Hand-Book.

The Most Complete Manual of the Laymen's Movement That Has Yet Appeared.

A hundred-page book full of practical plans and valuable suggestions for speakers, leaders, and committees, together with an appendix giving an account of the Dallas Conference, a copy of the National Policy adopted at Chicago, and a digest of the action of the late General Conference on the Laymen's Movement.

Price, 25 cents per copy, silver or stamps. Order on this coupon from

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT,

M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH,

810 Broadway,

Nashville, Tenn.

Name

Address

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure.

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McClosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec.-Treas.
Geo. A. Hero.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH

LEON IRWIN & CO.

FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 596.

Church News

In a recent letter to the Southern Christian Advocate, Bishop Hendrix said, "Zion's Herald is perhaps the most ably edited Methodist journal in America."

Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald celebrated his eighty-first birthday on Wednesday of this week. He and Mrs. Fitzgerald are now on a visit to their son, O. P. Fitzgerald, Jr., at Charleston, W. Va.

Twenty-five years ago there were in existence only 253 Christian Endeavor Societies; now there are 73,000. This organization has become a tremendous force for righteousness around the world.

There resides at Downey, Cal., a well known physician who bears the familiar name of A. G. Haygood. He is reported to be much like his honored father, the ascended Bishop, and an ornament to his profession.

The General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada met in Victoria, B. C., Aug. 15. The number of delegates is 320. Dr. Albert Carman, the General Superintendent, who is seventy-seven years of age, will preside throughout the entire session.

Dr. S. M. Godbey, who was assistant editor of the Nashville Christian Advocate during the eight years that Dr. Winton edited our general organ, has been elected Professor of Mathematics in Hendrix College, at Conway, Ark.

The Episcopalians of Mississippi have established an industrial school for negro boys at Vicksburg. It will be in charge of H. W. Marshall, a negro priest, who is a native of the West Indies and has had considerable experience in that kind of work.

Dr. J. W. Lee, now abroad, in visiting the various literary shrines in England, made a short time since a visit to the Stoke Pogis Church, the scene which inspired Gray's famous elegy. Writing to a friend concerning that interesting spot, he said, "There is not a distinguished person buried in the Stoke Pogis churchyard, and so it is the nameless and obscure that Gray celebrates in his poem."

The late Professor Borden P. Bowne, of Boston University, who was widely known as a thinker and theologian, in discussing the doctrine of the trinity said: "I accept it, and I do not think modern Biblical study in any way undermines it." There never was a more complete misconception than profound scholarship tends to make men skeptical. It is a little learning that disposes them to disputatious unbelief.

The Northern Presbyterian General Assembly requested the churches under its jurisdiction to observe Sunday, Oct. 9, as memorial day in honor of the late John H. Converse. This attests the high esteem in which that great layman was held by the denomination of which he was a member. He did much to promote the cause of aggressive evangelism in the Church, being chairman of a committee constituted to direct that work.

The editorial in the Pacific Methodist Advocate of August the 11th on the "Chico Normal School Scandal" was fearless, able, and timely. Trustees, who under the conditions there existing could apply the whitewash brush to such a man as Van Liew, certainly deserve public rebuke and execration. The protest of Editor Vaughan was in every way worthy of the organ which speaks for Southern Methodism on the Pacific slope.

There are three changes of ministers in New Orleans that will be necessary at the next Annual Conference by virtue of the time limit. Dr. Parker, the gifted and beloved presiding elder of the district, Dr. J. A. Rice, the brilliant and versatile pastor of the Rayne Memorial congregation, and Rev. A. S. Lutz, who has served the Felicity Street Church with such marked acceptability, are in their fourth year and will have to be assigned to different fields. The places of these brethren will be hard to fill.

A current press dispatch from Leavenworth, Kan., says: "Never again will religious services be held in the old First Methodist Church here, which is known throughout the State as the 'Cradle of Prohibition.' Recently fire destroyed a part of the structure, and the trustees decided to abandon it. In the early 70s the prohibition movement, which eventually drove the saloons out of Kansas was given birth in this edifice. A saloon just across the street kept open on Sundays, its owner defying the church members to make him close. His defiant attitude caused the first prohibition campaign in the State to be started." The Methodist Church has played an important part in the temperance reform movement throughout the world.

The Christian World speaks thus of John R. Mott in reference to his presidency of the World's Missionary Conference: "Dr. John R. Mott would, as every one knew, make an extraordinary business-like chairman of the Conference. He is parsimonious of even seconds. To see him rise at the seven minute bell to cut short the Bishop of Birmingham or the Hon. W. J. Bryan is a sight not to be forgotten. But where he has surprised even his friends is in the flashes of humor that have lightened up the serious business of the Conference. 'I have to ask speakers,' he said, 'to break the habit of a lifetime, and not turn their heads from side to side. They can only be heard all over the hall if they face the clock all the time. There are other manifest advantages in facing the clock.'

ABERDEEN DISTRICT NOTES.

I am looking for the postcard reports that the brethren promised to write. Only a few are responding.

F. C. Bell bids fair to finish the year in good shape both as to the man and the charge. He has had but little experience, but the brethren say he can preach, and that is the chief business of a preacher. The Pittsboro Circuit has as fine a citizenship as will be found in these parts.

W. C. Carlisle is hitting about the same gait that has characterized him all these days. That means that he is busy and succeeding.

R. A. Clark is at home again. He reports a fine revival at Dunca, Texas. He found everything moving like "clock-work" in his charge on his return. What a delightful charge Okolona has become! There were some 75 people at the business session of the third Quarterly Conference—and every steward in his place save one. That one was too ill to be present. Finances "up to date and down to date."

Had the pleasure of holding prayer-meeting for Brozan, at Starkville, recently. His people like him, and he likes them. It seems to be a kind of mutual admiration society. My good friend, J. E. Thomas, is in high favor in that city as presiding elder. It was to be expected. What an opportunity the pastor has there. The A. and M. makes that one of the most responsible places in the Conference.

W. L. Duren and H. S. Spragins go to Winona Lake, Aug. 20. Two choice spirits—and they will get all there is going in that rare assembly. How I long to be with them—but presiding elder after a man's name means no vocation and plenty of work. It is a blessed thing that the Bishops are declining to appoint a man to district work more than one quadrennium. They might cut that half, and I know some men that would not be aggrieved.

There is a saying going the rounds in these parts that an auto is like a man—the cheaper it is the more noise it makes. Of course this does not apply to presiding elders, college presidents, editors of papers or the Vanderbilt question.

President Hull has made a most favorable impression in these parts. I am hearing "he is the man for Millsaps" on every hand. The people at Okolona say he is a great preacher. That may be accounted for by the fact that they have been hearing Felts and Clark, but really, I think he has made good in the field in every particular. There is mourning in Starkville over his departure. It is a significant fact that his wife is loved there even more than the husband. This does not mean that he is less in favor. May an era of great prosperity come to Millsaps.

Many of the brethren are in meetings at this time. It is a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Reports to date are more satisfactory than at this time last year in that the net results are better. The district will have a larger net gain than last year.

While many men in these parts have lost almost all—the district as a whole is beginning to be cheerier as to crop outlook. More corn and as much cotton as last year seem assured. Great crops in the hills.

I hear only good words of the Advocate. It is growing in favor. May her shadow never grow smaller in these parts. In the language of our own inimitable Shipman, "She is the Chief Head-buster" of them all in this district. JAMES H. FELTS.

WINONA DISTRICT.

We are now approaching the end of the third quarter. It has been a period of remarkable activity on the part of our preachers and our people. An optimistic spirit prevails everywhere. Crop conditions, for the most part, are hopeful. I have never seen such fields of corn, especially in the Delta. So much more corn than usual has been planted and hogs are more plentiful than heretofore. The boll weevil scare is bearing good fruit in that attention is being turned to other things than cotton. An era of larger material things is dawning and the call comes to the Church to go up at once and possess the land. If when men secure larger returns from investments they do not respond more liberally to

Tis often said
to make a sale
"It's just as good as LUZIANNE"
Let no such argument prevail, to wean
you from your time-tried friend, LUZIANNE
COFFEE
The Kelly Taylor Co.
New Orleans, La.

the calls of and the common cause of our humanity. It shall be that the prosperity will result in a dwarfing of our humanity rather than an enlargement of our sympathies.

We are having many splendid meetings throughout the district. At Drew, Brother Savage, assisted by Brother Graves, had a great meeting, adding twenty-four to the church. They also had a good meeting at Ruleville with five additions. Brother Geddies had a gracious revival at New Hope last week, being assisted by Captain H. H. Estes, of Greenwood. There were eighteen additions. At Bentley, Chapel Hill, Tom Nolan, Bialne, Sunflower and numerous other places good meetings have recently been had. Many others are in progress now. Our men are helping one another, going out by twos in true apostolic style. The Lord is graciously blessing our people, for which we are profoundly grateful.

As to the material side of our church life, our people are moving with commendable energy. We have plans on foot to build a church at Sumner and at Lambert, these being the largest towns in the district where there is no Methodist Church. At Sky Lake, Quiver, New Hope and Bentley, we have a good portion of the necessary funds in sight, with which to build. The people at New Hope raised $800 in one day toward replacing their old house with a larger and more modern one. Improvements to the amount of $500 have been put on the parsonage at Itta Bena, and about the same upon the parsonage at Webb. Both houses have been greatly improved. Brother Gaines will soon be relieved of the necessity of packing his water, as he has a good subscription in hand for an artesian well.

Both Prof. Hull and Brother Countiss have done work within the district, both giving great satisfaction and pleasure. Rev. Sam Miller, of Texas, who many years ago was a member of our Conference, has been back on a visit. He has the true evangelistic gift. He told this scribe to-day the story of the conversion of Paine Mitchell and his brothers, two of whom are honored members of our Conference yet. Amos Kendall and Brother Miller were holding the meeting together. What honor to be a soul winner!

E. S. LEWIS, P. E.

THE SOUTHERN WOMAN.

As we mention the South, we think of her women, endowed, envied, enthroned as no other women in the universe. Her soft voice, softer than Southern zephyr, her sunny smiles stolen from her sunny skies, queen of the home where, as the Roman matron of old, she displays her jewels—her children—(not her poodles). With the dignity of the Colonial dame, she wins the admiration and love mingled with respect of men, not by bon-comradeship—not as a bluestocking, nor by the other extreme, flippancy and slang, but by queenliness of character, modesty in dress and deportment, and her magnetic, lily-white purity.—S. A. Steel.

Modes of the Heavenly Life.

A series of five sermons on the work of the Holy Spirit.

By REV. WALTER G. HARBIN.

Price, 75 cents.

Send to CHAS. O. CHALMERS, 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

Secular News and Comment

The Hayard Observatory announced on the 9th inst. that Rev. Joel H. Metcalfe had discovered a new comet. Nothing concerning it except its position in the heavens had at that time been determined.

A replica of Houdon's famous statue of George Washington was presented to France by the State of Virginia on August 18th. It was set up with appropriate ceremonies in Napoleon Hall at Versailles.

It is reported that the 282 postal banks in the Philippine Islands had on deposit on June 1, $1,648,024. Filipinos constituted 65 per cent of the depositors; Americans, 29 per cent; Europeans, 4, and Asiatics, 2.

The H. S. Renshaw Company, of New Orleans, have had printed in Spanish an illustrated catalogue of 108 pages for distribution in Central and South America. It is said to be the first ever issued in the United States in that language.

Asiatic cholera is prevalent in Russia and Italy. In the former country there have been more than 20,000 cases and nearly 9,000 deaths since August 6th. In the latter Kingdom it has assumed proportions so alarming that King Victor Emmanuel has canceled his engagement to attend the Montenegro festivities and will keep in touch with the situation. The type of the disease is said to be most malignant.

Mississippi College will not for the present at least take over the Vicksburg Medical College, which was abandoned by the trustees of the University of Mississippi because the Legislature made no appropriation for its maintenance. Dr. Lowry stated, however, that it might be possible for the Clinton institution to assume control of it a year hence. It is said that this means that the medical college will be closed for twelve months, if not indefinitely.

Emperor Francis Joseph, of Austro-Hungary, celebrated his eightieth birthday on the 18th inst. Te Deums were chanted throughout the dual monarchy in honor of the aged monarch; military reviews were held, and dinners for the poor were given by the municipalities and many villages. Large sums were contributed to charity, the Emperor having signified his desire that the funds which would otherwise have been spent on formal celebrations should be employed in that way.

The Confederate Veterans of Louisiana will hold their annual reunion at Opelousas the latter part of September. Preparations are under way to give them a great reception. They deserve it. The world has never had any heroes to surpass those who wore the gray and followed the flag of the stars and bars. Those who survive are getting old, and the people of the South should lose no opportunity to show them gratitude and honor. Soon they will cross over the river and rest with Jackson, Lee, Johnson, Forrest, and other leaders under the shade of the trees.

Is English to be the world-tongue of the future? Possibly so. At any rate, it is making progress in that direction, as is shown in the following interesting observation of the Pacific Methodist Advocate: "A statistician who has been figuring the matter up reports that of 12,000,000,000 letters written in a single year by the peoples of the earth, 3,000,000,000 are in English, 1,200,000,000 in German, and 1,000,000,000 in French." These are the leading languages of the world, and this estimate plainly indicates the far-reaching supremacy of English in the thought and activities of mankind.

At Wallace, Idaho, the other night, at a reception, Senator Heyburn of that State ordered a band to stop playing "Dixie" with the remark: "This is a Republican meeting. We want no such tune here." Senator Heyburn's political experience must be as slight as his musical culture and taste. We have heard "Dixie" played at Republican national conventions to more vociferous applause than "Yankee Doodle" or "The Star-Spangled Banner" elicited from the same body. The applause had no reference to the sentiment of the song, or its political significance. Indeed, it is not political at all; but is pure negro folk lore. But, the tune. Who can hear it well played without a quickening of the pulse, without an almost irresistible desire to jump from his seat? And that without knowing anything of its origin, its politics or its geography. It is American, not Southern, and it is the best bit of music ever composed on this continent. It will be played and enjoyed by all parties, races and ages, as long as good music is played in America and as long as there are warm-blooded people to listen to it.—Detroit Free Press.

The special session of the Louisiana Legislature called to provide an extra tax for the Panama Exposition Fund was of one mind and purpose. Great enthusiasm is being manifested in the fight to capture the celebration for the Crescent City. Following the example of the Pelican State, Gov. Gillette is reported to have announced his purpose to assemble the California Legislature, that a special tax may also be provided in that commonwealth. The Baltimore News has recently declared in favor of having the Exposition at New Orleans in the following impressive words: "We have no hesitancy in saying we favor the Southern city. We noted with gratification that when Congress fixed the requirement for entering the contest at $5,000,000, or some other big figure, the Crescent City not only came in but insisted on boosting the amount. It is playing a brave game. It is so much nearer the great mass of the people who would be apt to visit an exposition that there is no room for question that thousands more would be drawn there than to the far West. We are for New Orleans, moreover, because we believe it would do a great deal to attract Northerners to the South, and in that way prove a benefit to the whole country."

The era of sectionalism seems to be surely passing. The decision given out by Attorney-General Wickersham that there is no legal obstruction to placing a figure of Lee in Confederate uniform in Statuary Hall at Washington is quite significant. Such an opinion two decades ago would have aroused a storm of protest from all over the North, but when it was announced a few days since scarcely a voice was heard in criticism. On the contrary, Mr. Wickersham, President Taft, Mr. Roosevelt, and other Republican leaders have paid high tribute to the character and genius of the great Virginian. Some have suggested that this opens the way for Mississippi to place a statue of Jefferson Davis in the national hall of fame. That he is well worthy of a place in that or any other Pantheon, is beyond question, but we hope that a movement looking to that end will not yet be inaugurated. It could probably not be done now without bitter things being said. Let Mississippi reserve one of her niches for the chieftain of the lost cause and await the passing of a few more years, and the feat can be accomplished with the approval of the entire nation. When the mists of prejudice have fully lifted and the world gets a correct view of him, there is no doubt that Mr. Davis will be regarded as one of America's foremost orators and statesmen and a pure and incorruptible patriot.

THE HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Hattiesburg District Conference met at Lucedale, July 14, 1910, with Bishop E. D. Mouzon presiding.

Brother W. B. Alsworth was licensed to preach. There were quite a number of visiting brethren present: Rev. D. C. Hull, the new president of Missions, who gave us a very fine talk; R. S. Gale, of the Seashore District; T. J. O'Neill, presiding elder of the Newton District; W. A. Betts, the former president of the Mississippi Conference Training School; G. W. Bachman, colporteur; M. M. Black, secretary of the Board of Missions; W. M. Williams, manager of the Orphanage; H. G. Hawkins, president of Port Gibson Female College; and W. W. Moore, president of the Mississippi Conference Training School.

The New Orleans Christian Advocate was given a good hearing by the Conference and very complimentary resolutions were passed.

The reports of the pastors showed a quickening spirit throughout the district. The revival fire was burning, and from everywhere came tidings of victory. While in some respects the various works were behind last year, there seemed to be a large ingathering.

A memorial was adopted by the Conference memorializing the Annual Conference to grant to each Church at least one delegate in the district Conference—that they should have a delegate for each one hundred members or fraction of two-thirds thereof, provided that each church should have at least one member.

The Conference also elected a committee to see after the work of the Epworth Leagues of the district, with Rev. J. A. Moore as chairman.

The district lay leader read a very complete report of his work, and he was unanimously elected to serve the district for another year.

Brother W. S. F. Tatum was unanimously endorsed as arbitrator for the Hattiesburg District in adjusting the district parsonage matter with the Seashore District, and was elected to serve till the question should be straightened out.

The ad interim committee for the coming year is, A. F. Watkins, M. L. Burton, G. H. Thompson, and M. P. Meadow.

The names of the local deacons were called and their characters passed: W. P. Meadow, J. A. Bishop, and C. O. Miller.

The names of the local deacons called and their characters passed: W. P. Meadow, J. A. Bishop, and C. O. Miller.

The names of the following local preachers were called, and on motion their characters passed and their licenses were renewed: H. M. Ellis, R. A. Al-lums, H. P. Gilmore, H. C. Norsworthy, W. T. Roberts, J. O. Winborne, and G. P. Fikes. The name of R. P. McGowen was called, but no motion being made in his case his license was not renewed.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: J. A. McCleod, W. A. Easterling, M. L. Ward, and E. F. Ball. L. R. McGilvery and W. S. F. Tatum were declared alternates.

The following did the preaching during the Conference: Rev. H. G. Hawkins, A. F. Watkins, Robert Selby, Geo. H. Thompson, and J. C. Chambers. Bishop Mouzon preached Friday night, Sunday morning and Sunday night. The preaching of the Word was attended with power. It was very much more like a big meeting than a District Conference. The last sermon by the Bishop resulted in the conversion of six. Ten joined the church during the District Conference, and a class of twenty were taken in the last night.

The Bishop dedicated the beautiful new church for the people of Lucedale Sunday morning, while the writer preached for the Baptists. In spite of the rain, there was a large crowd out to hear the Bishop and the service was a great one in every respect.

Brother J. J. Golden makes a delightful host and we will all be glad of an opportunity of paying him and his delightful people another visit.

The Conference fell in love with Bishop Mouzon. He did us all good. His expositions of the Scriptures at the morning services were just fine and in every way he endeared himself to us all.

The great success of the Conference was due largely to the wisdom and good management of the presiding elder.

SECRETARY.

To the Preachers of the Hattiesburg District:

Please send me the licenses of your local preachers if they have not been properly signed for this year at once. Also a stamp for their return. Give this matter your prompt attention.

J. C. CHAMBERS, Secretary.

THE PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHT.

I gratefully acknowledge kindness received at the hands of my brethren of this Conference and of the people of the different charges where I have presented the claims of the Mississippi Conference Training School. We started less than ninety days ago to raise twenty-five hundred dollars with which to build a home for the president of the school and to build a mission hall on the school grounds. We have raised in good subscriptions, notes, and cash, eighteen hundred of the twenty-five hundred dollars. Some of the best business men of the State have contributed liberally to this cause. Later, with their permission, I expect to give a list of the contributors. Having moved yesterday, we are occupying the home bought for the president. I feel like a Methodist preacher to-day, as I am occupying one of the educational parsonages. Several young men have already applied for a part of the forty-five acres of land which we purchased with this home. We expect this to be a helpful factor to many worthy young men. We let them use the land without rent to assist them in paying expenses while here at school. We will have a liberal patronage this fall. The Lord is with us in this great work.

WALDO W. MOORE,
Montrose, Miss.

$177 at Port Gibson Female College pays for a whole session's board, laundry, literary tuition, medical, library, lyceum, Gibsonian and outing fees. Music, Art, Expression, or Stenography, $45 extra.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location. Includes furniture. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

The Centenary College of Louisiana.

Fall Term will
open Sept. 14, 1910.

For Catalogues or other information write to FELIX R. HILL, President,
or
JOHN S. JOHNSTON, Dean,
SHREVEPORT, LA.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd
Manufacturer of Lumber
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

method

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS and TENTS.
CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOULAS STREETS
Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

The Home Circle

UNCLE PHIL'S STORY.

"Tell us a story, Uncle Phil," said Bob and Archie, running to him.

"What about?" said Uncle Phil, as Rob climbed on his right knee and Archie on his left.

"Oh, about something that happened to you," said Rob.

"Something when you were a little boy," said Archie.

"Once when I was a little boy," said Uncle Phil, "I asked my mother to let Roy and myself go out and play by the river."

"Was Roy your brother?" asked Rob.

"No, but he was very fond of playing with me. My mother said yes, so we went and had a great deal of sport. After awhile I took a shingle for a boat and sailed it along the bank. At last it began to get into deep water, where I couldn't reach it with a stick. Then I told Roy to go and bring it to me. He almost always did what I told him, but this time he did not. I began scolding him, and he ran toward home."

"Then I was angry. I picked up a stone and threw it at him as hard as I could."

"Oh, Uncle Phil!" cried Archie.

"Just then Roy turned his head and it struck him."

"Oh, Uncle Phil!" cried Rob.

"Yes, he gave a little cry and lay down on the ground."

"But I was still angry with him. I did not go to him, but waded into the water for my boat."

"But it was deeper than I thought. Before I knew it I was in a strong current. I screamed as it carried me."

"But as I went down under the deep waters something took hold of me and dragged me toward shore. It was Roy. He saved my life."

"Good fellow. Was he your cousin?" asked Rob.

"No," replied Uncle Phil.

"What did you say to him?" asked Archie.

"I put my arms around the dear fellow's neck and cried and asked him to forgive me."

"What did he say?" asked Rob.

"He said, 'Bow, wow!'"

"Why, who was Roy anyway?" asked Archie in great astonishment.

"He was my dog," said Uncle Phil, "the best dog I ever saw. I have never been unkind to a dog or to any other animal since, and I hope you will never be."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

AN INCIDENT.

It was a hot, dusty day, when two or three passengers entered the train on the Iowa Division of the Chicago and Northwestern Road at Bridge-water. Among them was a stylishly-dressed young man who wore a stiff white hat, patent-leather shoes, the neatest of cuffs and shiniest of stand-up collars. He carried a cane, and carefully brushed the dust from the seat in front of me before he sat down.

Just across the aisle, opposite him, sat a tired woman, holding a sick baby. I never saw in my life a more discouraged, worn-out, despairing look than that on the mother's face. The baby was too sick even to cry. It lay moaning and gasping in its mother's lap, while the dust and cinders flew in at the open doors and windows. The heat and dust made travelling, even for strong men, unbearable.

I had put down the stylish young man in front of me as a specimen of the dude family, and was making a mental calculation on the probable existence of brains under the new hat, when, to my astonishment, he leaned over the aisle, and said to the woman: "Madam, can I be of any assistance to you? Just let me hold your baby awhile. You look so very tired."

The woman seemed much surprised, though the request was made in the politest and most delicate manner.

"O, thank you, sir," said she, tremulously. "I am tired," and her lips quivered.

"I think the baby will come to me," said the young man, with a smile. "Poor thing! It's too sick to make any objection. I will hold it carefully, madam, while you lie down and rest awhile. Have you come far?"

"From the Black Hills."

"What, by stage?"

"Yes; but the baby was well when I started. I am on my way to friends in the East. My, my husband—my—"

"Ah, yes; I see, I see," continued the young man in a sympathetic tone, as he glanced at the bit of crape in the little travelling hat. By this time he had taken the baby and was holding it in his arms.

"Now you can lie down and rest a little. Have you far to go?"

"To Connecticut," replied the woman, almost with a sob, as she wearily arranged a shawl over a valise, and prepared to lie down in the seat.

"Ah, yes; I see. And you haven't money enough to go in a sleeping car, have you, madam?" The poor woman blushed faintly, and put one hand over her face, while the tears dropped between her worn fingers.

"I looked out of the window, and a mist came over my eyes, while I changed my calculation of the young man's mental ability. He looked thoughtfully and tenderly down at the baby, and in a short time the mother was fast asleep."

The woman sitting across the aisle from me, who heard as much of the conversation as I had, came and offered to relieve the young man of his charge. "I am ashamed of myself for not offering to take the baby from the mother before. Poor little thing! It's asleep."

"So it is. I'll surrender it to you now," with a cheerful smile.

At this point the train stopped at a station, and the young man rose in his seat, took off his hat, and said in a clear, earnest voice: "Ladies and gentlemen, here is an opportunity for each one of us to show that we have been brought up in a Christian land, and have Christian fathers and mothers. This poor woman, pointing at the sleeping mother, 'has to go all the way to Connecticut. Her husband is dead, and her baby is ill. She hasn't money enough to travel in a sleeping car, and is all tired out and discouraged; what will you do about it?'"

"Do!" cried a big man down near the water-cooler, rising excitedly. "Do! take up a collection—the American citizen's last resort in distress. I'll give $5."

The effect was electrical. The hat went around, and the way the silver dollars and quarters and ten-cent pieces rattled in it would have done any true heart good.

I wish I could describe the look on the woman's face when she awoke, and the money was given to her. She tried to thank us all and failed; she broke down completely. But we didn't need any thanks.

There was a sleeping car on the train, and the young man saw the mother and the child transferred to it at once. I did not hear what she said to him when he left her, but it must have been a hearty "God bless you."

More than one of us in that car took a little lesson to himself, and I learned that even stylish, as well as poor, clothes may cover a noble heart.—Selected.

The best thing to take people out of their own worries is to go to work and find out how other folks' worries are getting on.—Selected.

GRENADA COLLEGE.

Students in this school have enjoyed perfect health for several years. Brother Countiss has sought to maintain this record for the coming session. Paperers, plasterers and kalsominers have put all the rooms in prime condition.

New furniture has been put in. Every student will have a comfortable and an inviting room.

Miss Durlin, of the Domestic Science Department, has been giving to Brother Countiss special and valuable assistance in these particulars.

The excessive wet weather has not been permitted to affect unfavorably the buildings and premises. The campus presents a much more inviting appearance. More than eighty girls have engaged rooms. No one doubts the presence of 100 boarding pupils the first day. Some who expect to get in, but have not engaged rooms, will be disappointed. Better attend to this at once.

J. R. BINGHAM,

President Board of Trustees.

ORIGIN OF "HOBSON'S CHOICE."

"It is a case of Hobson's choice" is a phrase that is used by many people without knowing exactly what it means. As a matter of fact, this adage has been handed down to us from the seventeenth century, and had its origin in the eccentricities of one Tobias Hobson. This worthy was a carrier of Cambridge, who died in the year 1630. In addition to his ordinary business, he kept a stable and let out horses to the students at the university. He made it an unalterable rule, however, that each animal should have an equal period of work and rest, and would never let one out of its turn. Consequently, instead of being allowed to select the steed they most fancied, his customers had to take the one that stood next to the door. If it did not meet with their approval, they had to do without a ride. Hence the proverbial expression, "Hobson's choice," used to signify a choice without an alternative.—Strand Magazine.

The man who lives to please himself will find that he has a hard master.—Ram's Horn.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER,

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

DR. TICHENOR'S ANTISEPTIC

And the life or usefulness of a valuable animal is ruined, unless Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic is applied promptly—if this is done, the wounds will not inflame and will heal promptly leaving but little scar.

Always keep a bottle in the stable.

At all Druggists
25 and 50 Cents

Also in quart bottles.

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 513 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulton, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragina.

Editorial.

OUR EDUCATIONAL CRISIS.

That our Methodist schools, along with those of other denominations, are face to face with a grave crisis is plainly apparent to everyone who is informed as to the present situation. The competition with State institutions, which have behind them the public treasury, is constantly becoming keener and more difficult to meet. The great funds constituted by the millionaires of the North, particularly the Carnegie Foundation, which discriminate against denominational institutions, are already a serious menace, and their adverse influence must be felt more powerfully with the passing years. "Indeed, the prophecy has been made that within a generation half the denominational colleges of America will be wiped off the slate." There are two ways in which Mr. Carnegie's benefaction tends to destroy them: One is by holding out such inducements as will appeal to them, wherever possible, to repudiate denominational control, and the other is by discrimination against them creating such conditions that they cannot maintain their existence in the unequal struggle.

In view of the existing situation, there are several things which it behooves us as Methodists to do, since the future welfare and prosperity of our Church depend very largely upon the character and strength of its institutions of learning:

1. We must have a more comprehensive and aggressive educational policy. Our colleges must be more largely endowed and more adequately equipped. Especially must we devise some method whereby our teachers can be better paid. The insufficient salaries of professors in our church schools—smaller in many instances than that received by the average preacher—have long been a reproach to us. Not a few of the brightest and best of them have gone from us, accepting more remunerative positions in State institutions. This constant leakage in our teaching force has been a weakness to us for years, and promises to be a still more serious problem in the future. It must be stopped, and there is but one way to do it—to provide a better support for these faithful men. We have no right to ask them to continue to serve us at an unceasing sacrifice. We must manage in some way to raise more money for educational purposes. We must burn into the hearts of our people such a conviction as to the imperative necessity of Christian education that they will loosen their purse strings and make more liberal contributions to this cause. And it may become necessary in order to offset the influence of the Carnegie Foundation to inaugurate a connectional movement to provide means for the pensioning of our aged instructors, as we are now undertaking to do for our worn-out preachers.

2. We need to stop hurtful competition and unnecessary wastage in our educational work. Our various institutions should be correlated and brought into helpful relations with one another. If we have too many in certain parts of the field, they should be thinned out; if we have not enough, others should be entered. We should have some equal in curricula and accommodations to any in the land, because some of our people demand this; and we should have others where the standard of instruction is not high and board and tuition are cheap. It will not do to project our educational work too far in advance of the ideals of the people. We should, to be sure, seek to go steadily forward in the development of our plans and methods, but not at so rapid a rate that we cannot take them with us. If we get too far in advance of their conceptions as to prices and courses of instruction, they will send their children elsewhere, and that is what we do not want. We must keep them in our own schools if the interests of Southern Methodism are to be conserved. In other words, it is incumbent upon us as a Church to provide a complete and practical educational system which will accomplish the best possible results for our membership and constituency.

3. We need to strengthen the denominational influence in our institutions of learning. As far as is possible, the teachers should be Methodists. The Church should be honored and exalted, and its claims put properly forward. We would not have our colleges offensively sectarian, but we do think they should have an outspoken appreciation of the denomination which brought them into being, and maintains them. Surely, it is not unreasonable to demand that they shall be so conducted as to make them a factor in the upbuilding of Methodism.

4. The Church needs to be certain of its grip upon all of its educational institutions. Charters and titles should be carefully examined, and they should be made so full and explicit that no controversy as to ownership or government can arise in the future. After the experience we have had in the case of Randolph-Macon College and that of Vanderbilt University, we certainly ought not be slow to learn this lesson. The late General Conference, fully realizing the importance of guarding against other troubles of this character, outlined a course of procedure, which, if carried out, will make similar controversies impossible. The action of that body bearing on this question was as follows:

Report No. 5 of the Committee on Education.

"Your Committee has carefully considered the Memorials of the Virginia, the Baltimore, the Texas and the Louisville Conferences, requesting such action as will clearly define the relation of our educational institution to the Church, and we respectfully submit the following report:

First. Insert the following paragraph in the Discipline between paragraphs 200 and 201.

Ans. 2. Trustees of our Schools, Colleges and Universities must be at least twenty-one years of age, and three-fourths of said trustees must at all times be members of our Church, and all of said trustees must be confirmed, nominated or elected by some governing body of our Church, or by some Board or officers of the Church to which the power to confirm, nominate or elect trustees has been delegated by the governing body of the Church, provided that this provision shall not take effect until July 1, 1912.

Second. In view of the great unrest and dissatisfaction because of the uncertain legal relation of some of our institutions of learning to the Church and for the purpose of restoring confidence where it is now disturbed; and for the protection of our people and to assure those who respond to the appeals of the Church for gifts to the cause of Christian education that their gifts will be used by the Church for the benefit of institutions which are firmly bound to the Church, we recommend the adoption of the following resolutions:

Resolved first, That the Boards of Trust of all the schools, colleges, and universities which are morally the property of the Church, but whose trustees are not selected in conformity with the method proposed in the first item of this report, are hereby earnestly requested to conform the method of the selection of their trustees to the proposed provision, and unless prohibited by the laws of the state from so doing they are urged to secure such amendments to their charters as will conform them to the proposed law, and unless prohibited from so doing by the laws of the State they are urged to have inserted in their charter a trust clause declaring that the property is held in trust for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to be used for educational purposes.

Resolved second, That our Annual and District Conferences, and our General and Annual Conference Boards of Education, when making appropriations to any institution, are advised to consider carefully the legal relations of such institutions to the Church.

Whenever the trustees of any institution, for whose benefit an appropriation is made, are not selected in conformity with the methods proposed in Part I of this report, it is strongly advised that the Boards of Trust of such institutions be requested by the various patronizing Conferences to conform to the proposed method in the selection of trustees, and wherever the laws of the State will permit, that they be requested to secure such amendments as will conform their charters to the proposed law and as will secure the insertion in their charters of a trust clause specifying that the property is held in trust for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to be used for educational purposes, so that the gifts of our people and the rights of the government and control of said institutions may be thoroughly safeguarded.

It is scarcely necessary to remark that it is now the duty of our Annual Conferences, our boards of education, and the trustees of our various colleges to set themselves about the execution of this declared policy of the General Conference as soon as is practicable. To ignore its urgent suggestions and not seek to carry them out, is to show a lack of regard for the authority of the Church. Instead of being silent and inactive concerning educational matters, it is now incumbent upon loyal Methodists to inform themselves and go industriously to work to meet the perplexing problems by which we are now confronted in this essential sphere of service. As one of our newly-elected Bishops expressed it in a letter to the editor a few days since, "The Church must fight for a place in the field of education."

Incidentally, it may not be out of place to call attention to the fact that at the meeting of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust in June, Dr. V. A. Godbey called the attention of that body to the request of the General Conference that all institutions which are morally the property of the Church should secure such amendments to their charters as will allow their trustees to be nominated, confirmed, or elected by some governing body of the Church, and pleaded with them to defer action concerning the three trustees sent up from Asheville, and go before the Tennessee Legislature and ask that such amendments be made to the charter as would permit them to carry out, in a manner legal beyond question, the instructions of the supreme law-making body of Methodism. But Brother Godbey's earnest appeal fell upon deaf ears. As an interpretation of the spirit and purpose of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust, this incident in their meeting is worthy of consideration.

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE.

Our issue of last week contained a brief notice of the death of this noble woman, who rose superior to the allurements of wealth and won immortality in the lowly fields of service. It was our purpose in this number of the Advocate to pay a more extended tribute to her character and career, but the following beautiful and brilliant editorial in the Memphis Commercial Appeal so impressed us that we decided to reproduce it for the benefit of our readers. Instead of attempting to give them an appreciation from our own pen:

"Once more England's flags have been half-masted, once more the note of national sorrow has risen above the national laugh, and the clang and clasp of national commerce. This time it is not royalty that has answered the beckoning call of the death angel, but a woman so far down the social scale as to be untitled in Burke's book of earthly peerages, but whose name must lead all the rest in the white annals of an everlasting heritage. For the woman is Florence Nightingale, the 'Angel of the Crimea,' as the wounded and dying soldiers of that war called her.

"She was a young woman when, in 1854, France and England joined forces with Turkey to beat back the Russian invasion of the Danube provinces in the latter country. She had just finished a term of study with the Sisters of Mercy in a German hospital, and was equipped with all the knowledge of nursing and camp sanitation which the times afforded. From the Crimea there came the usual war tales of suffering among the disabled soldiers, and Florence Nightingale, the first woman to respond personally and professionally to such a cry, gathered a corps of nurses about her and set sail for the little peninsula in the Black Sea which had become the seat of war.

"The history of that campaign is written red with the mingled blood of four nations. And Florence Nightingale went from battle field to battle field, unwearied, unquestioning, always unafraid. She witnessed the slaughter at Alma; she gathered up the wounded about the walls of Sebastopol; her watching eyes, at Balaklava, saw the 'noble six hundred' ride on a charge that thrilled the pulses of the world; and no doubt it was her hands that bound up the gaping wounds, when they came back, but not the six hundred. It is possible that the eyes that closed in London last week were the last human eyes that witnessed that magnificent martial tragedy.

"When the final climax of the war came in the storming of the Malakoff and the Redan, and the French flag went up over the former and the English were hurled back from the latter, when dead men lay in windrows and wounded men prayed for water or for death, Florence Nightingale was there—the 'angel of the Crimea!'

"No wonder England loved her, no wonder the flags are at half-mast, and that in every soldier's home there is a badge of mourning. She it was that opened the way for the Red Cross with its mission of mercy; she it was that taught camp sanitation, robbing disease of its victims; she it was who carried the first torch of helpful humanitarianism to war's red fields.

"Ninety years she lived; ninety years, and every hour a benediction to her fellow-man. Today, beside her bier not only England's martial array, but the soldiers of the whole world, stand to join in the magnificence of the requiem: Requiescat in pace!"

DR. DU BOSE'S ADDRESS.

We print this week Dr. Du Bose's fraternal address just delivered before the General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada. Viewed from any standpoint, it is a notable utterance, and was in every respect worthy of the man and the occasion. Brilliant in conception, comprehensive in scope, and eloquent in diction, it will in the years to come take high rank among the orations of this character made by representatives of Southern Methodism. Dr. Du Bose is possessed of most extraordinary versatility. He is a poet of power, an orator of commanding speech, a writer of genius, and an administrator who turns things to account in a forceful and effective manner. He has succeeded in every sphere of service into which he has been called, and is known and loved throughout the entire connection. Still higher honors in the Church await this distinguished Mississippian.

A WORTHY WORK.

The Helping Hand Mission of this city celebrated its eleventh anniversary on August the 24th. Under the capable direction of Rev. J. I. and Mrs. Minnie Weaver Hoffman, this arm of service is making its influence forcefully felt for good. Like the Master, these devoted servants of his are laboring among the poor and outcast—sowing precious seeds of truth and kindness, as it were, by the wayside. That some of them will bear fruit unto eternal life, there is no doubt. This mission is located at 610 Baronne Street, and Mr. Hoffman would be glad to have visitors call and observe the character of the work done. The services are held at 7:45 p. m., and are conducted on week days as well as on the Sabbath. Those who contribute to the maintenance of this mission may be sure that they are assisting a deserving and useful cause.

A BEAUTIFUL BEQUEST.

The will of the late Mrs. Mary Pauline D'Latre Greenleaf was probated in New Orleans on the 19th inst. After making a number of minor personal bequests, she directed that the bulk of her estate shall be used to construct drinking fountains for animals in the out-of-way places of the city. She declared her desire that these fountains should not be fancy, but made serviceable and durable and so arranged that small animals, such as cats and dogs, may have easy access to them. After this has been done, any money remaining is to be used for the general protection and relief of animals. We think this is a beautiful and needed benefaction, and we heartily applaud the kindly spirit that prompted it. Christian love in its widest sweep not only embraces all humanity, but every living thing and even the foliage and flowers of earth. Coleridge properly interpreted the spirit of the religion of Christ when, in "The Ancient Mariner," he wrote:

"He prayeth well, who loveth well
Both man and bird and beast.
He prayeth best, who loveth best,
All things both great and small.
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all."

A NEW INTERPRETATION.

The religious world is fast becoming accustomed to new and startling interpretations of Scripture. The effort to naturalize all of the recorded events of the Bible goes steadily on, and the expedients adopted to accomplish this result are sometimes grotesque and ludicrous in the extreme. An illustration of this is seen in an article which recently appeared in a German magazine, said to be from the pen of an accomplished engineer of that country. Discussing the cure of the Israelites when bitten by the fiery serpents, he says: "The brazen serpent that Moses set up was nothing else than a lightning conductor, and the serpent against which it guarded the children of Israel was the lightning itself. The Ark with its metal plates was a huge Leyden jar charged with electricity, and its discharge was powerful enough to kill a man. Only the initiated could approach it with impunity, and that impunity was obtained by the metallic robes of the priests, which reached down to the ground and carried off the discharge of electricity."

This explanation is certainly brilliant and ingenious. We heartily commend it to those who live in a perpetual chase after the latest Biblical theories and facts as thoroughly novel. True, the author of it adduces no proof of its correctness, but does it not harmonize with the modern science of electricity? Is not that enough to make it pass current? At any rate, it is not more improbable than many other things which have been given out oracularly under the sanction of boasted scholarship within recent years.

PERSONAL.

Rev. Paul D. Hardin, the pastor at Wesson, Miss., conducted a meeting at Silver Creek, in Copiah County, last week.

The North Wesson Methodist Church was blessed with a gracious season of refreshing a few days since. The preaching was done by Rev. J. Loyd Decell, and there were 50 accessions.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley was called to the Seashore Camp Ground by the illness of Mrs. Townsley the latter part of last week. His pulpit was filled last Sunday by Mr. M. B. De Pass.

Keithville, La., has just had an excellent meeting conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. R. Harvell. Brother W. F. Henderson, Jr., has kindly sent us an account of it, which will appear in our issue of next week.

Rev. W. F. Rogers, of West, Miss., did some effective preaching at Haddon Church, on his charge, last week. Much interest was manifested in the services, and there were four applications for membership.

Mr. J. B. Sreater, of Black Hawk, Miss., will spend the next three or four weeks on the great lakes of the Northwest. He is a sufferer from hay fever and finds it necessary to seek annually another climate at this season.

The work at Coffeeville, Miss., is prospering under the guiding hand of the industrious young pastor, Rev. E. Nash Broyles. He is having full congregations and there is a general manifestation of interest on the part of the people. Up to date, there have been 22 accessions to the charge.

We regret to learn that Mrs. J. W. Price, of Clarksdale, has been seriously ill with typhoid fever. We are pleased to be informed, however, that the worst seems to be past, and that she is now improving. Dr. Price is our pastor at Hillhouse and Benoit, but resides in his own home in the capital city of "sweet Coahoma."

Rev. J. W. Homoll will be in the hill section of Mississippi for the next two or three weeks, assisting the brethren in their evangelistic work. This is his usual way of taking a vacation. His work is progressing favorably at Tunica. His missionary assessments have already been met, and the charge has had a net gain of 24 members.

We thank that worthy Christian gentleman, Dr. T. M. Dye, of Clarksdale, Miss., for a renewal of his subscription and words of commendation. He adds: "Brother John Tillery Lewis is moving in and out among these people most graciously. He is keeping well in hand the noble work done by Brother Duren. These Clarksdallians are good people."

Mr. J. D. Barbee, of Greenville, left Wednesday of this week to join Mrs. Barbee at Monteagle, where she has been spending the summer. He expects to be gone about ten days. He is a native of the Volunteer State, and thinks there is no section of the country comparable to Middle and East Tennessee. He will not even except the good old county of Carroll, in Mississippi.

Despite the warm weather, the institutional work at the First Methodist Church of this city is reported to have progressed remarkably well. The various classes have been well attended, and the interest is said to be increasing. Dr. Werlein and his corps of consecrated assistants are much encouraged by what has been accomplished and the promising outlook for the future.

Brother and Sister Randle, of Gilbert, La., have lately been looking after the interests of the Advocate in their charge, for which service they have our hearty thanks. For some time this faithful pastor has not been in robust health, but he has recently had a much needed rest, which has refreshed and strengthened him. We trust that the opening autumn will find him in good shape for rounding out the work of the year.

A dispatch from Shannon, Miss., to the Commercial Appeal on Aug. 17th says: "Rev. J. J. Garner, pastor of the Methodist Church at this place, assisted by Rev. J. Armour, of Buena Vista, has just closed a most successful revival at Pleasant Grove, a few miles west of here, with twenty-three additions. Mr. Garner is much beloved here. He is a strong preacher, a Christian gentleman, and his influence for good is being felt every day."

In a letter to the office, Brother H. Whitehead states that the brethren have been working him since his arrival at Birmingham. He has preached every Sunday, but has managed to keep from being pressed into service more than once each Sabbath. He thinks that is enough for a man who has been undergoing the "grind" of getting out a paper all the week. He is right. If those who think there is no work in issuing a paper could only wear the harness a bit, they would be effectively cured of that notion.

Rev. F. N. Sweeney sends us the following interesting and encouraging news from Baker, La.: "We have just closed a great meeting at Blackwater. Rev. P. H. Howse, of Carriere, Miss., did the preaching. His sermons were forceful and to the point. There were 30 accessions, and the members of the church were revived. Our meeting at Baker resulted in 12 accessions, and a general quickening of the membership. Brother Lutz, of New Orleans, did the preaching. I go next to Deerford, with Brother Howse to assist me. Pray for us."

The Times-Democrat of the 22d inst. gave the following account of the evening service at Felicity Street Church: "A large crowd attended the song service at the Felicity Street Methodist Church last night. Stereopticon slides were used to illustrate the songs. Mrs. W. B. Kernan sang 'Abide With Me,' and Mrs. H. Barnes, 'Lead Kindly Light.' The pastor, the Rev. Albert S. Lutz, made a short talk on the Life of Christ, using stereopticon slides to illustrate it. These services have been under the auspices of the Epworth League, and have proven successful."

Rev. Franklin Moore, pastor of the West End Methodist Church, of San Antonio, Texas, writes:

"At 8 o'clock p. m., on the 16th of this month, I joined the hands and hearts of Rev. J. Loyd Decell, of Osyka, Miss., and Miss Bertha E. Whitley for the life journey. Brother Decell is in charge of the church at Osyka, Miss., and is a young man well equipped for the work of the ministry. Miss Whitley is cultured, capable, and consecrated. The marriage took place in the home of Rev. and Mrs. F. A. Grimes, uncle and aunt of the bride. If these young people do not take first rank in the Mississippi work, I will miss my prediction; and I shall not be surprised if the Mission Board presses them into service for the foreign field."

Rev. C. F. Staples is making a fine record on his charge at Gibsland, La., as is shown in the following brief summary sent in on the 19th inst.: "I am just back from my meetings at Mount Moriah and Oak Grove, where I preached twice a day for fourteen days in succession. The churches were revived, backsliders reclaimed, and sinners converted. There were 35 accessions to the church—31 by vows and baptism, and 4 by letter. We baptized 13 children. We had a good meeting at this place in July. Our meeting is to begin at Athens next week. We have had 51 accessions to the church up to date, baptized 18 children, and secured 32 new subscribers to the Advocate. To God be all the glory." Were we a presiding elder, we would make a vigorous fight to get Brother Staples into our district. One who thus toils and succeeds is a worthy successor of the heroic men who planted Methodism in the Old World and in the New.

PURPOSE TO SERVE GOD.

"Daniel purposed in his heart." That's the trouble with a great many people; they propose to do right, but they only propose in their heads and that doesn't amount to much. If you are going to be Christians you must purpose to serve God away down in your hearts. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness."—D. L. Moody.

IS IT SO EVERYWHERE?

A well-known journal recently called attention to the fact that the authorities of the United States Military Academy at West Point dismissed two cadets in the term just closed for lying. The men had been guilty of minor infractions of the rules, for which the punishment would have been slight. One of them was charged with chewing gum, and the other with having citizen's clothes in his room. But in order to escape the annoyance of confinement to which they would have been subjected, each of them denied the facts, which were known, and both were immediately dismissed. The further statement is made that lying is condemned, not only by the officials, but by the cadets themselves; and that while there is no explicit regulation covering this matter, it is understood both by the officers and students that any cadet who is discovered in a falsehood will not be permitted to remain in the Academy. It is regarded as despicable to tell a lie to escape punishment for breaches of discipline. Nor are the cases numerous in which it is necessary for the authorities to take the drastic action indicated. The dismissal of two men in a single term for this offense had not occurred before in the history of the school. Lying is uncommon and unpopular at West Point. It cannot be said, perhaps, to be popular anywhere; but, alas, there are not many places where it can be said to be rare. If prompt dismissal from business, political and social circles for the always contemptible act of which a soldier may not be guilty were to be adopted as the policy and practice of such circles, there would be a large exodus from them to begin with, but would not the quality of the circles be vastly improved, and would not lying and perjury come to be regarded for what they really are, despicable and short-sighted crimes? The history of one cadet who several years ago was caught cheating in examination, denied the charge, and was dismissed from the Academy, was afterward traced, and it was found that he had appeared as a tramp at a number of army posts, and at the last account was working as a common laborer on the Panama Canal under the direction of two of his former classmates. Does lying ever or anywhere pay in the end?—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

"A-LE-THE-IA."

The following words are from one of the leading ministers in Mississippi; they refer to Mrs. Miller's book which she has written and is selling to get money for the orphans in the Ruston Orphanage: "I have read the book with interest and with pleasure. It is a good story, and will doubtless accomplish good wherever read. It deserves an extensive circulation, and I shall be pleased to do what I can to this end."

The book can be had from the office of the N. O. Christian Advocate; from Mrs. C. C. Miller, Hammond, La., and from Rev. G. W. Bachman, Colporteur for Mississippi Conferences; his address is Winona, Miss. Price of the book is 25 cents.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00
St. Louis, $26.00
Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares

To ALL Principal Points in the United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD,
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 3618.

VISIT

MINERAL WELLS

FOR HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND

WEST TEXAS

For
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS.
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE
DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,

General Passenger Agent,
DALLAS - TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves 8:00 a.m.
Instead of at 9:20 a.m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS,
WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves 7:30 p.m.

FOR

NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW
ON SALE.

Bowlden
CHURCH & SCHOOL
Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

Don't Wear a Truss

STUART'S PLAS-TRAPPS are different from the painful truss, being made self-adhesive purposely to hold the rupture in place without straps, buckles or springs—cannot slip, so cannot chafe or compress against the pelvic bone. The most obstinate cases cured in the privacy of the home. Thousands have successfully treated themselves without hindrance from work. Soft as velvet—easy to apply—inexpensive. Process of cure is natural, so no further use for trusses. We prove what we say by sending you Trial of Plaspad absolutely FREE. Write TODAY. Address—PLASPAD LABORATORIES, Box 132, St. Louis, Mo.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

Just as the month of July, 1910, was slipping away into history, the spirit of another sweet and beautiful mother was being ushered into the presence of her King, at a time those who loved her felt that she was so very necessary to her devoted husband, daughter and two sons, but her King had better things for her in the beautiful beyond. The subject of this sketch, SISTER MARY E. ABER THOMPSON, was born of good, pious parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Aber, at Summerville, La., on Dec. 18, 1863, and at seven years of age joined the Methodist Church. She early manifested right conceptions of duty and willingness to do her best to make the world better, and no one doubted that she was converted. This religious characteristic marked her beautiful life. Soon after entering her teens she became a teacher, in which vocation she delighted in brightening the lives of others. She was married on the 12th of April, 1888, to Mr. Erastus R. Thompson, of Harrisonburg, La., which proved a delightful union of hearts to the very last. She united with the Methodist Church there, throwing into all its departments her wise, untiring and zealous efforts in making its work effective. Here was given them a little daughter, who only remained long enough to draw out intently their hearts' best, as the Lord, in her infancy, took her home. Harrisonburg, La., was her home until two years ago, when she removed with her dear family to reside permanently in Biloxi, Miss.; but, for eight years prior to coming to Biloxi, she had suffered greatly from an inward malady, which finally made necessary two severe surgical operations. During all this time, with unflinching attention to the wants of her household and neighbors, she persistently sought to carry out her early conceived idea of Christianity, which was devotion to others, and evinced patient submission to the will of God, while, using every means for her recovery. As soon as she came to reside in Biloxi, she, with her entire household, united with the Main Street Methodist Church, where she became a member of the Bible Class, the Ladies' Aid and other organizations, which she attended while her strength permitted. In July of this year, thinking that the mountain air would benefit her, she with her family went to Winchester, Va., but instead of getting better, she rapidly began to sink, and on June 25th there was a surcease of all pain and she went to join the little angel who had gone years before and who was waiting to receive her. The end was calm and peaceful. With all of her faculties keen and alert, knowing that the death angel was hovering over her, she turned to her loved husband and said, "I am at peace with everybody, I am not afraid to die," and then, as the death dew gathered on her brow, with one more effort she said, "See the ship," and the broken-hearted ones who stood about her bed knew that it was "the old ship of Zion" which was to hear her across the river of death, and then she sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. Her remains were brought to Biloxi and the sad funeral service held in the church she loved and her body was interred in the Biloxi Cemetery. The writer, who has known her from early childhood, looks back with pleasure at the true and beautiful and devoted Christian life. The society into which she entered was made purer and more elevated by her presence, for she has maintained a life of Christian integrity from the time when she so early united with the Methodist Church. She is also survived by her mother, four sisters and a brother. May the dear ones who loved her so, be able to look up through their tears and say, "The Lord gave, the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord."

Let us who are sad take heart again. We are not alone in our hours of pain.

Our Father stoops from his throne above.

To soothe and quiet us with his love. He leaves us not when the storm is high.

And we have safety, for he is nigh. Can it be trouble which he doth share?

Oh, rest in peace, for the Lord does care.

Her old friend and counsellor,

DAVID B. MITCHELL.

At the family residence, near Alexandria, La., July 22, 1910, Mrs. ALICE HUNTER, beloved wife of B. H. Hunter, aged 51 years. She was a devout member of the Methodist Church, and her religion was the vital principle of her life, her daily walk and conversation giving proof that she loved and served Jesus, her Savior. Her lamp was ever filled with oil, and she was always ready to meet the bridegroom; and now we feel assured that she has entered the heavenly city, and wears the victor's crown. The week before her death, she attended and enjoyed a revival meeting, and on that last earthly Sabbath, she knelt at the altar and partook of the Lord's Supper with her loved ones and God's people. She was a devoted wife and mother, and her home was a model of neatness and contentment. She visited the sick, helped the poor and distressed and was first in every good word and work. Verily, her works do praise her, and she will be sadly missed in her home and neighborhood. She leaves a husband, four sons, and two daughters, all members of the church she loved so well. May the Lord comfort their hearts in this sore bereavement. One who loved her. E. L. BROWN.

My friend and brother, J. D. MILLSAPS, SR., of Hermanville, Miss., was born March 3, 1853, and died March 8, 1910, aged 57 years and 5 days. He leaves to mourn their loss one daughter and three sons. He was twice married, the second time being married to Miss Lelia Clark, of Copiah County, Dec. 27, 1897. Only one child was born by the first wife, who is now the wife of John H. Clark, the cashier of the Hermanville Bank. He had three boys by the second marriage, all of whom still live to mourn the loss of a devoted father. The wife and children mourn not as they who have no hope, but they expect to meet him in that bright world above. Brother Millsaps joined the M. E. Church, South, when quite young; he loved his Church and always contributed liberally to its support. When the people of Hermanville were struggling to build a church, after they had collected all they could, he let them have one thousand dollars with which to finish, and waited on them until they were able to finish paying for it. The day I collected the last dollar due I went to him, took up all the papers, had them canceled, he took me by the hand with a brotherly grip and said, "Now I want you to repaint the parsonage and church when you get ready let me know." On Wednesday, July 29, 1908, he was most gloriously blessed when his little boy, J. D., joined the church. After this it was never so cold or hot, or he was never so busy that he could not attend church, when services were held. I was his pastor four years. I found him to be a true and tried friend to his pastor. The morning we left Hermanville he threw his arms around my neck and wept, and said "God bless you, my brother, you have been worth more to me than any living man." I loved Brother Millsaps. A good man is gone. May God abundantly bless the wife and children left so lonely at home! Children, remember papa is rejoicing with the angels on high waiting and watching for his loved ones. His former pastor,

J. H. FOREMAN.

Votan, the new Coffee from the South, stands out in bold relief through the Delightful, Lingering Taste AND Distinctive, Characteristic Flavor that is to be found only in this rare and perfect blend.

Votan is recognized as the world's choicest coffee. It is a special importation from Central America and Southern Mexico, the world's greatest coffee-growing regions, where dwell the ancient Maya Indians, who worshipped Votan as their God. Meticulously packed in 1 lb., 2 lb., and 3 lb. cans. Never sold in bulk.

Coffee

The Votan Line Tea

Votan, the superlatively aromatic, fragrant tea, is known for its Distinctiveness AND Palate-Delighting After-taste.

There's no other tea in all the world just like Votan, because in this famous brand alone, are blended several of the dearest and most delicious teas that nature produces. They are specially selected for their own individual "goodness."

Particular tea drinkers should always take Votan, because in it only will they find their favorite flavor. Comes in quarter, half and one pound canisters. It's extremely fancy. There is an Exclusive Agent in your town.

The Votan Tea & Coffee Co.
Importers, Roasters and Packers,
New Orleans, U. S. A.

Progress Self-Tramping COTTON PRESS

3 Horse Power Mill Operate. Capacity 25 bales. Write for prices. Manufactured by C. J. HYDE, MERIDIAN, MISS.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage. WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE. LE PAGE INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO. TORONTO, CANADA.

Hot Sun—Dusty Roads
By the time you reach town and light you'll be hot and tired and your throat dry with dust and dirt. Hunt up a soda fountain and treat yourself to a glass of a bottle of Coca-Cola.

Coca-Cola
Just as cooling as the bottom step in the spring house. You'll find it relieves fatigue too, and washes away all the dust and thirst as nothing else will. It touches the spot.

Delicious - Refreshing - Wholesome
5c Everywhere
Our Free Booklet
"The Truth About Coca-Cola" tells all about Coca-Cola—what it is and why it is so delicious, wholesome and beneficial. It gives analyses made by scientists and chemists from coast to coast, proving its purity and wholesomeness. Your name and address on a postal will bring you this interesting booklet.

The Coca-Cola Co., Atlanta, Ga.
Whenever you can, write think of
Coca-Cola

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

HOME REMEDY

Mrs. Temple Clark suffered for years, before she found relief in that popular, successful woman's medicine, Wine of Cardui.

Mrs. Clark, who lives in Timberville, Miss., writes: "Cardui has been worth more to me than a carload of silver. If it had not been for Cardui, I would have been dead. I love a dollar, but I have never seen one that I do not think as much of, as I do of a bottle of Cardui. I now keep it in my house, as regularly as I do coal oil or coffee, and have done so for years.

"Some years ago I jumped off a horse and had a mishap, and for about four years after that I suffered in terrible agony. At last I was induced to try Cardui, which cured me, and now I am well and happy.

"I am sure Cardui will cure other sick ladies as it has me."

Cardui is for women. It acts specifically and in a natural manner on the womanly system and has been found to relieve pain and to restore woman's health.

If you are nervous, miserable, or suffering from any form of female trouble, try Cardui. What it has done for other sick ladies it surely can do for you. Sold by all first-class druggists, with full directions for use.

FINE POST CARDS FREE

A Big Package Sent to All Our Readers Who Write at Once.

To any reader of this paper who writes immediately and encloses 2 cents stamps, we will mail a set of five most beautiful post cards you ever saw. Ten very finest Floral, Birthday and motto cards, all different in exquisite colors, silk finish, beautifully embossed, etc., for only 10 cents. Thirty cards, all different, 25 cents. With each order we include our plan for getting 50 choice cards free. Address The Art Post Card Club, 703 Jackson St., Topeka, Kan.

Marriages

July 14, 1910, at the parsonage, Pachuta, Miss., by Rev. J. W. Thompson, Mr. R. B. PRICE to Miss NELLA REDDEN, of Clark County, Miss.

June 15, 1910, at the residence of the bride's parents, near McHenry, Miss., by Rev. R. S. Gale, Mr. E. J. COOPER and Miss LURA E. WHITTENDON, all of McHenry, Miss.

Aug. 3, 1910, at the residence of the bride's parents, McHenry, Miss., by Rev. R. S. Gale, Rev. A. W. WARNER, missionary to India, and Miss GERTRUDE LEGGETT.

July 27, 1910, at the residence of Mrs. Kerley on Fair Field Avenue, Shreveport, La., by Rev. H. J. Boltz, Mr. JOHN E. IRVINE and Miss ANNA LEE WHITE, all of Shreveport, La.

Aug. 13, 1910, at the residence of Mrs. Mary R. Hales on Maple Street, Shreveport, La., by Rev. H. J. Boltz, Mr. DAVID E. SHAW and Miss GIBBY VICE, both of De Ridder, La.

WORDS OF APPRECIATION.

Dear Brother Meek: Our mutual friend, Dr. W. P. BARTON, died at the old homestead, eight miles east of Memphis, on the 4th day of this month. We held the funeral service at the old home on Saturday at 2 p. m. Dr. Baskerville, an old friend of the family, and Brother Pope, one of his former pastors, took part in the service. Quite a number of friends were present. We consigned his body to its long resting place in the cemetery at Memphis at 4 p. m. I have known him for twenty years, and, as you know, was his pastor three years out of the last five, and a better man I have never known. He was one of the brightest and the best. He was certainly the most universally popular man in the community in which he had lived and practiced medicine for twenty-two years I have ever known. During the three years I was his pastor, I never heard his name mentioned except with high praise. He was one of the most liberal supporters of the church in this Delta country. He was a man of strong faith, of unusual intelligence, of moral courage, and could always be depended upon to do the right thing. I heard Brother Pope say that he always reminded him of what Christ said of Nathaniel, "Behold an Israelite in whom there is no guile." This district is the poorer by his going away. I never expect to see his like again. One by one we cross the river. J. W. HONNOLLY.

Tunica, Miss.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

Dear Brother Meek: Please announce that there will be a District Laymen's Missionary Meeting at Winona, Oct. 18 and 19. Bishop J. H. McCoy will preach on the evening of Oct. 17, and will remain with us till noon of the 19th. Hon. Thos. B. King, Prof. D. C. Hull and the leading laymen and preachers of the Winona District will speak on the liveliest topics of the day. We expect a great attendance. E. S. LEWIS, P. E.

If Tired, Restless, Nervous, Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate. It quiets and strengthens the nerves and brain, and induces refreshing sleep.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by U.S.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!

NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00

Assets.....470,860.00

No. 303 Camp Street,

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

The EDISON PHONOGRAPH

would still be the greatest sound-reproducing instrument without the Amberola.

The Amberola would still be the final and greatest expression of the Edison Phonograph without Amberol Records.

Amberol Records would still be the greatest triumph in Record-making without Slezak and the other Grand Opera stars.

But when you can get Mr. Edison's own Phonograph invented and perfected by him, and when you get in addition to that the Amberola, the finest form of the Edison Phonograph, and when you can have to play upon the Amberola, or any type of the Edison Phonograph, the Amberol Records, that play twice as long as Edison Standard Records, that are the clearest and best playing Records, and when you can get upon Amberol Records such singers as Slezak, the giant tenor of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and other stars, can you think of buying any sound-reproducing instrument until you have thoroughly investigated the Edison, the Amberola, Amberol Records and Edison Grand Opera Records?

The Amberola $200

There are Edison dealers everywhere. Go to the nearest and hear the Edison Phonograph play both Edison Standard and Edison Amberol Records. Get complete catalogs from your dealer or from us.

Edison Standard Records 35c
Edison Amberol Records (play twice as long) 50c
Edison Grand Opera Records 75c to $2.00

NATIONAL PHONOGRAPH COMPANY

149 Lakeside Avenue, Orange, N. J.

You can dictate to the Edison Business Phonograph twice as fast as any stenographer can take it.

Other Styles $12.50 to $125

We are Headquarters for

Edison's Phonographs, Records and Supplies

—CASH OR INSTALLMENT—

We pay transportation charges on purchase of one dozen records or more.

NATIONAL AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM CO., OF LA.

614 GRAVIER STREET . . . NEW ORLEANS.

Tidings from the Field

Shannon, Miss.:

We have just closed a fine meeting at Pleasant Grove on the Shannon Charge, with twenty-three additions to the Methodist Church. Rev. O. P. Armour did the preaching after Monday at noon. He is a good preacher and good help in a meeting. An Epworth League was organized with twenty-nine members.—J. J. Garner, P. C.

Slate Springs:

On the night of July 17, we held a fine Children's Day service here, Miss Minnie Russle and the writer having charge of the program. We have some very bright boys and girls in our Sunday school. We are glad to report that Slate Springs Charge is not at a standstill at present. We have just closed a meeting at Bentley. The preaching was done by Brother J. N. Flinn, excepting the last two sermons, which were preached by the pastor. Brother Flinn is a godly man who is filled with the Spirit. The old-time power was felt at most every service. We received six members, and at the last service a committee was appointed to build a church (we are now worshipping in the Baptist Church). We have bought an organ for Cross Roads, and have repaired the parsonage so that it is now nice and comfortable. We also have some money in hand toward painting the Slate Springs Church. We expect to have it painted by Conference. Our protracted meeting will begin at Spring Hill Sunday the 14th. Pray for us that we may have much success in winning souls for Christ.—Mrs. J. C. McElroy.

Aug. 12, 1910.

Como, Miss.:

Yesterday was a pleasant and profitable day with us. Rev. J. M. Wyatt preached for us at 11 o'clock. Brother Wyatt was at one time pastor here and his many friends were delighted to have him among them again. His sermon did us all good. Last night we heard with much profit Prof. J. M. Sullivan in an address on the "Laymen's Movement and Christian Education." His utterances on the character of work God is calling men to do and the preparation needed for the workmen were masterful and strong. We are indeed fortunate in having such a man as Prof. Sullivan in the faculty at Millsaps College and representing the institution in the bounds of our Conference. Rev. J. W. Dorman passed through here this morning, on his way out to Fredonia, to assist Brother Rook in a meeting this week. It was my pleasure to spend last week with Brother Rook at Loxahoma. Brother Rook is doing a splendid work on Tyro Circuit and is very popular. So far as I can learn, conditions throughout the district are encouraging, preachers are holding meetings and co-operating with the presiding elder in his endeavor to make this the best year in the history of the district.—S. A. Brown.

Vimville Circuit:

We are moving along very nicely with our work on the Vimville Charge. We have made some improvement along all lines. We are at this time engaged in our revival meetings, having closed out two, and are in the midst of the third. We began at Toomsaba the third Sunday in July with Brother W. H. Lewis, our presiding elder, to do the preaching. The meeting was not a failure by any means; though we did not accomplish what we had expected owing to the shortness of time. The visible results were the conversion of one bright young man who united with the church, and the uplifting of the church. From here we went to Why Not, beginning the fourth and running through the fifth Sunday. There were something like twelve to fifteen conversions, four accessions to the church by faith, and the church greatly revived. Some say that it was the best meeting that the church has had in quite a while. It was a success in every sense of the word. The preaching was done by the pastor. We opened up the fight at Coker's Chapel last Friday night with Brother Sampley, of Rocky Springs, to do the preaching. We had a hard pull for several services, but our God answered by fire, and the victory is ours through Christ Jesus, something like twenty having been saved, and some four or five definitely sanctified. Conviction is on the people, altar is full to-day, and the Lord is blessing in a marvelous way. It is an old-time Methodist meeting. Pray for us.—H. J. Maddox.

Aug. 10.

Okolona, Miss.:

In keeping with a resolution passed at our District Conference in June (to send you monthly reports of our work), I am giving you a brief account of my stewardship, and I assure you I gladly do it. I got home a week ago to-day, the 6th, from my Texas meeting, where we had a great meeting. Between 50 and 100 conversions, and nearly a half hundred united with the churches. In my absence, Lowe, Felts and Hull filled my pulpit and filled it so well that I am told, at the services on Sunday nights the Sunday school room as well as the main auditorium was filled. Brother Lowe gave the congregation a fine sermon which was appreciated by all. Felts always gets a good hearing in Okolona and is loved by all. Hull made a fine impression on every one who heard him. He is certainly making good for Millsaps College. Last Monday night, the 8th, I had my third Quarterly Conference, and every official was present, with about fifty others. Think of this, every official present at a Quarterly Conference in August! The presiding elder said it was a rare case that you see such, and as many as fifty other members of the church there. All the machinery of my church is in good working order. My people read the Advocate with much pleasure. We hope to dedicate our church some time this fall with a clean sheet. No man need complain if he is read out for Okolona in the future. Many of us have dreaded it in the past, but it is a new Okolona as far as the church life is concerned. May God bless you, Brother Meek!—Robt. A. Clark.

Louin, Miss.:

During five days, beginning the 7th of August, it was the pleasure of the writer to aid the Rev. W. A. Hays in a meeting at the live little town of Louin, Miss., situated on the New Orleans, Mobile and Chicago railway at the point where the new Trunk Line from Natchez is to cross. The services began in the hall of the academy, where the pastor has hitherto preached to his congregation. In the afternoon of that day, to our complete surprise and gratification, a committee of representative members of the Missionary Baptist Church waited on the pastor and courteously tendered the use of their beautiful new house of worship for the meeting. Such fellowship of believers easily made possible the presence of the Holy Spirit to a gratifying degree throughout the meeting. The Lord's people were greatly strengthened in their spiritual life, upon their own testimony, and doubtless lasting good was done. Four accessions to the score and five members composing the Methodist Church was some of the fruitage. An elegant and eligible location has been secured upon which the plucky little band are to build right away. Brother Hays evinces the true pastoral instinct in seeking to encourage the faithful and in searching out the lost sheep of the Methodist fold.—W. A. Betts.

EDUCATIONAL.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE JACKSON, MISS.

Rev. David Carlisle Hull, M. S., President.

A high-grade College, situated at the Capital of the State. Location high, dry and healthful. Entrance requirement and Curriculum same as in other leading colleges and universities, North and South. The very finest Moral and Religious Influences. Extraordinary Advantages in

LITERARY AND LAW DEPARTMENTS

Courses Leading to A. B., B. S., A. M., M. S., and LL.D. Degrees.
NINETEENTH SESSION BEGINS SEPTEMBER 23, 1910.

For Catalog and other Information address

J. E. WALMSLEY, Secretary, Jackson, Miss.

The Mississippi Conference Training School MONTROSE, MISS.

This School has the largest and most competent Faculty in its history. Our pupils are prepared for Sophomore Class in high-grade Colleges. Our Musical Directress is in a Northern Conservatory, adding to her already splendid equipment for Piano and Voice Culture. We will build a Mission Hall on the School Campus, and have added the subject of Missions to our Curriculum. Our rates for board and tuition are reasonable.

Write for catalogue to

Rev. WALDO W. MOORE, A. M., President.

Port Gibson Female College

"The ideal school for girls."

Situated in one of the healthiest sections of the United States—Port Gibson, Miss. Large, comfortable, airy buildings. Beautiful campus, shaded by stately oaks and pecan trees. Everything for the advancement of our students, physically as well as mentally. Excellent physical culture course without cost. Unexcelled literary courses: Art, Elocution, Music, etc. Thorough instruction by competent, experienced faculty. The best of foods—milk and butter from herd of Jersey cows.

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOG

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE
PORT GIBSON, MISS.

STEWART HOME and SCHOOL FOR BACKWARD CHILDREN AND ADULTS.

Expert training and care by specially trained teachers and experienced physicians. An individual plan for each child. Home independent, 300 acres of beautiful land and woodland for pleasure grounds. Cottage system. Electric light, electric bell, electric light and steam heated. Highly endorsed and recommended by prominent physicians, ministers and patrons. A beautiful book will be mailed upon application.

DR. JOHN P. STEWART, Box 4, Farmdale, Ky.

ATHENS COLLEGE

FOUNDED 1843. ATHENS, ALA. FACULTY OF TWENTY.

Governed by Women for Girls and Women. Merit not Money; Polish not Vernish. Member of Ala. Assn. of Colleges. Preparatory School in connection, students enjoying equal opportunities with college students. Boarding Department enrollment quadrupled in five years. Excellent advantages in Music, Oratory, Art, Normal Training and Domestic Science for those desiring special courses. Graduate nurse, sterilized drinking water, Chemical fire extinguishers. Rates, nine months: Board, Laundry, tuition in Regular Course, Physical Culture, Chorus Singing, Medical Fee and Handsome Uniform (made to measure by New York tailor) hat and gloves to match $205. Sixty-eighth session begins Wednesday, September 20, 1910. For catalog apply to

MARY NORMAN MOORE, President.

BELHAVEN COLLEGE FOR YOUNG LADIES

JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI

Departments: Piano, Art, Elocution and Physical Training; Voice Culture; Violin and Guitar; Photography and Typewriting; Modern Languages and Organ—each under talented and experienced instructors. Boarding students have all comforts, safe guards and cultivating influences of refined homes. Three broad and thorough literary courses. Seventeenth session opens September 14, 1910. WRITE FOR CATALOG.

BELHAVEN COLLEGE FOR YOUNG LADIES, JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McCord, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."

C. G. Butler, Argenta, Ark., wrote: "Used 4 bottles and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per cent. better."

Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever Tonic Co.,
Savannah, Georgia.

POTTS CAMP, MISS.

The following is a report of some meetings: We closed our meeting at Bethlehem Friday, July the 29th. It was one of the most gracious revivals I was ever in. We had something like fifty conversions, most of whom were hardened sinners. We received thirty into the church; some joining other churches. Brother Will Shearer did the preaching for us. He is a spirit-filled man who lives at the feet of Jesus. His eloquence is in his tears, and his power is in his earnestness. On Wednesday night he preached a sermon on "The wages of sin is death," and before the sermon was finished, men were on their knees crying aloud for God to spare the sinners. The result was that people made friends who had not spoken for years, several men, case-hardened sinners who had never made any profession, were saved. One old lady (73 years old) was converted and joined the church. At the close of the meeting, we raised $55 for Conference collections, whereas they have never paid more than $15. God bless Will Shearer; he is my boyhood friend and I love him because he is living so close to God. Let all who read this offer a prayer for this dear boy that God will continue to use him for the salvation of souls.

We have added about one hundred to the church on Potts Camp Circuit, raised about twelve or fourteen hundred dollars for all purposes. We have bought three new organs, built one new church and repaired two. We have two Home Mission Societies, two Epworth Leagues and have had an average attendance of forty-five at prayer meeting at the Potts Camp Church. Now, just a word about our presiding elder, Brother Cunningham. God bless him! He is one of the dearest men I have ever known. If it had not been for him and the way he has stood by me, several times I would have gone down. Several times the enemies of the church and of God tried to crush me. But every time he was by my side. He is as true as steel. If all the brethren of the Oxford District will work and pray, we will have the best report that will be made by our district at Conference—J. H. Bell.

Mothers, Protect the Little Ones.

Sometimes a splinter gets in the flesh, deep and festers; a "skeeter" bite is scratched and makes a big, ugly sore; poison oak or some disgusting skin disease breaks out on one of the little ones. Don't let it run on without the proper attention—the result is disastrous. Stop these little eruptions of the skin, such as boils, bruises, burns, cuts, poison oak and sores of any kind, with "Gray's Ointment." You can rely on it for a speedy, permanent cure. For sale by your druggist for 25c per box. If not, write us for free sample box, addressing Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 809 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn., and it will be sent to you postpaid.

Mr. E. B. Virgin, of New Orleans, La., writes: "We have been using Gray's Ointment in our family for 25 years, and can recommend it for anything in the line of cuts, bruises, nail punctures, boils, carbuncles, skin bruises and splinters in the flesh."

Columbus Dist.—Fourth Round.

Starkville	Sept. 3, 4
Crawford, at Shaffers	Sept. 10, 11
Brooksville	Sept. 17, 18
West Point	Sept. 23
Macon	Sept. 24, 25
Mayhew, at Curtis' Chp.	Oct. 1, 2
Winstonville, at Mt. Hebron	Oct. 8, 9
Columbus, First Church	Oct. 15, 16
Columbus, Second Church	Oct. 16, 17
Starkville Ct. at Sessums	Oct. 22, 23
Sturgis, at Bevills Hill	Oct. 29, 30
Shugualak	Nov. 5, 6
Hebron	Nov. 12, 13
Mathiston, at Cumberland	Nov. 19, 20
Old Bluff	Nov. 20, 21
Columbus Circuit	Nov. 26, 27

J. E. THOMAS, P. E.

Aberdeen Dist.—Fourth Round.

Aberdeen	Sept. 17, 18
Tupelo	Sept. 25, 26
Verona, at Verona	Oct. 1, 2
Montpelier, at Fosters C.	Oct. 8, 9
Houston	Oct. 9, 10
Okolona Ct. at M. Chp.	Oct. 12
Palestine, at Palestine	Oct. 15, 16
Pontotoc, at Pontotoc	Oct. 16, 17
Beuna Vista, at	Oct. 22, 23
Prairie, at	Oct. 23, 24
Tremont, at	Oct. 29, 30
Fulton, at	Oct. 30, 31
Greenwood Sps, at	Nov. 5, 6
Smithville, at	Nov. 6, 8
Shannon, at Shannon	Nov. 12, 13
Okolona, at	Nov. 13, 14
Houlkar, at	Nov. 17, 18
Derma, at	Nov. 19, 20
Pittsburg, at Pleasant G.	Nov. 20, 22
V. and C. City, at C. City	Nov. 23, 24
Nettleton Ct. at	Nov. 26, 27
Anory and Nettleton, at A.	Nov. 27, 28

Some slight changes may be made. Due notice will be given. The Conference for Okolona Circuit, No. 2, will be held some time in September in connection with revival services. The date will be given without newspaper notice. The third round has been most encouraging. Fine revivals, good financial reports, "third round questions" all answered satisfactorily—and it is confidently expected that the brethren will be ready to answer questions 14, 16, and 29 promptly and satisfactorily this round.

JAMES H. FELTS, P. E.

Unfortunate Slave to Drugs.

If you happen to know of any one dear reader, whose life is being destroyed by addiction to morphine, cocaine or liquor, you can do him a favor by telling him of Dr. B. M. Woolley, the specialist in Atlanta, who is so successful in treating and curing such cases. Dr. Woolley has a record of over thirty years' continuous practice in his field and he succeeds in many instances where relatives—and the patient himself—had given up all hope of reformation. Perhaps there is some one in your town or neighborhood who would be overjoyed to know that there is a specialist in the South who can cure. Dr. B. M. Woolley and his son, Dr. Vassar Woolley, conduct the Victor Sanitarium in Atlanta. An able corps of nurses under the resident physician is maintained and all the appointments of the establishment are conducive to tranquility of mind and physical rejuvenation. Communications will reach Dr. Woolley at his office, No. 21-1, Victor Sanitarium, Atlanta, Ga.

LAKE CAMP MEETING.

Lake Camp Meeting begins Aug. 26, and runs through Sunday, Sept. 4. Rev. W. C. Swope, of Charleston, Mo., will be in charge of the preaching. There will be good music. The grounds are ideal. Accommodations adequate. Come and have a good rest physically, and a refreshing and helpful time, spiritually. We extend a hearty invitation to all preachers and laymen, especially of Newton District. Our presiding elder has already arranged to be with us, bringing his good wife and children. Let the rest of the preachers follow in the tracks of our worthy leader. Remember the dates, and come.

H. F. TOLLE, P. C.

AGENTS! STORES! New Improved Kerosene (coal oil) Mantle Lamp! 100 candle-power! 1-4 oil used! Best on American market without exception! Greatest Campaign bargains Ever Offered! If you are a user or distributor of mantle lamps and mantles, don't fail to get our prices. Your chance! Establish business! Control territory! Sell on sight! Agencies wanted everywhere! Webster Specialty Co., Waterbury, Conn.

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.

Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Courses. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

WESLEYAN FEMALE COLLEGE.

THE OLDEST COLLEGE FOR WOMEN IN AMERICA—THE RECOGNIZED STANDARD OF EXCELLENCE FOR THE WHOLE SOUTH—NOTABLE PROGRESS AMONG SOUTHERN INSTITUTIONS.

Splendid plant—worth $350,000—with all modern comforts, on an eminence in the best residential district in Macon. $200,000 now being raised for improvements and endowment.

One of less than a half dozen colleges for women in the South, on a full fourteen units basis. Courses leading to A. B. and B. S. degrees. Faculty of thirty-nine officers and teachers. Nearly 3,000 alumnae throughout the Nation. The Wesleyan's diploma is the highest academic honor open to a woman in the South.

The CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, employing fourteen officers and teachers, is the Mecca of artists and those preparing to teach. Schools of Art and Expression at the same high standard. Diplomas and teachers' certificates are conferred.

The moral and physical health of Wesleyan young ladies is safeguarded at every point. The discipline and training are non-sectarian, but Christian to the core. Wesleyan's high aim is to send out young women of genuine Christian culture. Health record without a parallel. Serious sickness has been rare, and not a single death has occurred at the College in many years.

Rates within reach of all. The College is not conducted for money making, but to bless the world. Apply for catalogue and information in detail to REV. W. H. AINSWORTH, D.D., President, Macon, Ga.

Memphis Conference Female Institute, Jackson, Tenn.

Next School Year begins Wednesday, September 14. Every facility offered for a thorough education for girls and young women. All departments taught, including besides regular Classical and Literary Courses, Music, Art, Expression, Stenography, Typewriting, Business course, Etc. Charges reasonable. For catalogues, etc., apply to

REV. A. B. JONES, Jackson, Tenn.

The Memphis Conference Female Institute is one of the oldest Female Colleges in the South, having been chartered in 1843. The college has 250 attendants and 125 of them are boarding pupils.

THE TEXAS DENTAL COLLEGE

HOUSTON, TEXAS

THE SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION BEGINS OCTOBER 4th, 1910.

Offers to the prospective dental students unsurpassed clinical advantages and teaching facilities for the study of the most modern and up-to-date dentistry. Ideal winter climate; Reasonable living expenses, and the most wholesome moral influences.

For full information and catalogue, address the secretary, CHAS. E. EDGE.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

A home school for girls. 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful hill country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue.

Address, Pres. H. H. BROWNE,

CLINTON, LA.

Ward Seminary Nashville, Tennessee

46th year. Seminary and Special Courses. Conservatory of Music—Emil Winkler, Director; Signor Campobello, Voice; Fritz Schmitt, Violin. 175 Boarding Pupils. Complete appointments. City advantages. Beautiful campus for outdoor sports. For catalogue address J. D. BLANTON, President.

EDUCATIONAL.

Port Gibson Female College,
PORT GIBSON, MISS.

11st session opens Sept. 14th. Literature, music, art, elocution, stenography, bookkeeping, sewing. Physical culture and chorus work free. Special attention given health and morals. Confers degree of A.B. Preparatory department. Students can reduce expenses by taking duties. For catalogue, address:
REV. H. G. HAWKINS, A. B., Pres.

Whitworth College.

Twenty carefully selected teachers and officers. More than two hundred students last session. A most excellent literary course leading to the degrees of L.B. and A.B. Departments of Music, (including piano, violin and voice culture) expression, art, commerce.

Next Session begins Sept. 8, 1910.

For Catalogue address,
WHITWORTH COLLEGE
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

RANDOLPH-MACON ACADEMY For Boys and Young Men.
Fits for college, scientific schools or business. Work endorsed by over 30 colleges and universities. Beautiful and healthful location. Athletic grounds; gymnasium. Terms only $230. No extras. For catalogue, address E. SUMTER SMITH, Principal, Bedford City, Va.

"THE SCHOOL THAT CARES."
Not-Crowded
Takes only 290
RUSKIN CAVE COLLEGE
Controls entire village.
No football or tobacco
FINEST PLACE IN SOUTH.
Free Cats.
Ask Pres. E. E. SMITH, Ruskin, Tenn.

Vanderbilt University
NASHVILLE, TENN.

1007 STUDENTS 100 TEACHERS
CAMPUS OF 80 ACRES

New College Hall and Chemical
Laboratory Just Completed

Expenses low. Literary courses for graduates and undergraduates. Professional courses in Engineering, Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, Theology. Send for catalogue, naming department.
J. E. HART, Secretary.

Belmont College

For Young Women Nashville, Tenn.
IRA LINDRITH, D.D., LL.D., President
MISS HODGSON and MISS HERON, Principals
College and Preparatory Courses.
Music, Art, Expression, Modern Languages, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Matchless location. Athletics, Horseback Riding. Register now. For catalogue, address
BELMONT COLLEGE, Box 7.

TULANE
UNIVERSITY OF LOUISIANA
210 Teachers NEW ORLEANS 2470 Students

EDWIN S. CRAIGHEAD, LL.D., President
Tulane University is located in New Orleans, the metropolis of the South. Modern dormitories, extensive laboratories, libraries and museums.
Ten departments comprising:
College of Arts and Sciences, College of Technology, Newcomb College for Young Women, Teachers' College, Graduate Department, Law Department, Pharmacy Department, Medical Department, Post-Graduate Medical Department, Dental Department and Summer School.
Expenses Low. Low Dormitory Rates. For Catalogue, Address: LOUIS HATZ Secretary.

BLMYER
BCHURCH
BELLS.
UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DURABLE,
LOWER PRICE.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

ESTABLISHED 1858
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 67
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Natchez Dist.—Third Round.

Gloster, at Woodland.....Aug. 27, 28
Nebo, at Ebenezer.....Sept. 3, 4
Bayou Pierre, at Sweet Water.....Sept. 10, 11
Barlow, at Rehoboth.....Sept. 12
Wilkinson, at Friendship.....Sept. 17, 18
Scotland, at Galatia.....Sept. 24, 25
H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN,
Gloster, Miss. P. E.

Jackson Dist.—Third Round.

Eden, at Phillips.....Aug. 27, 28
Benton, at Tranquill.....Aug. 29
Flora, at Livingston.....Aug. 31
Harrisville, at Poplar Sps. Sept. 3, 4
Jackson, Cap'l St. 7:30 p.m. Sept. 5
Jackson, Galloway Church, 7:30 p.m. Sept. 7
Deasonville, at Dover.....Sept. 10, 11
Jackson, First Church, 7:30 p.m. Sept. 12
Fannin, at Holly Bush.....Sept. 14
Canton.....Sept. 18
J. R. JONES, P. E.

Vicksburg Dist.—Third Round.

Satartia, at Satartia.....Aug. 27, 28
Anguilla, at Sunflower.....Aug. 31
Chapel.....Aug. 31
Hermanville, at Carpenter Sept. 3, 4
G. H. GALLOWAY, P. E.

Meridian Dist.—Third Round.

De Kalb, at De Kalb.....Aug. 26
N. Kemper, at Mt. Zion.....Aug. 27, 28
Buckatunna, at Chicora.....Sept. 1
Enterprise and Stonewall, at Concord.....Sept. 3, 4
Porterville, at P.....Sept. 10, 11
Vimville, at Pleasant Hill.....Sept. 13
Meridian, 5th St., 11 a.m. Sept. 18
Meridian, 7th Ave., 8 p.m. Sept. 18
W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

Newton Dist.—Third Round.

Laurel, Kingston.....Aug. 20, 21
Laurel, 6th Street.....Aug. 22
Newton.....Aug. 23
Lake, at Lake.....Aug. 27, 28
Hillsboro, at Lane's Chapel Sept. 3
Forest, at Coutrel.....Sept. 3, 4
Homewood Circuit.....Sept. 5
Montrose.....Sept. 6
Chunkey, at Lost Gap.....Sept. 10, 11
Decatur, at Union.....Sept. 15
Neshoba.....Sept. 16
T. J. O'NEIL, P. E.

Hattiesburg Dist.—Third Round.

Leakesville, at Adam's M.....Aug. 24, 25
New Augusta, at N. A.....Sept. 4, 5
Eastabuchie, at E.....Sept. 10, 11
Magee, at Rials.....Sept. 15, 16
Bethel, at Summerland.....Sept. 17, 18
Seminary, at S.....Sept. 19
Lucedale.....Sept. 21
Collins, at Ora.....Sept. 24, 25
M. B. SHARBROUGH, P. E.

Seashore Dist.—Third Round.

Long Beach.....Aug. 26
Lumberton.....Aug. 27, 28
Vancleave, at Red Hill.....Aug. 31
Wolf River Mission, at Beulah.....Sept. 1
Moss Point.....Sept. 2
Americus, at Big Point.....Sept. 3, 4
Stallo, at Cook's Chapel.....Sept. 17, 18
Philadelphia.....Sept. 19
Hickory, at Spring Hill.....Sept. 24, 25
Indian Mission, at Talla Chulah.....Sept. 30
Edinburg, at Scotland.....Oct. 1, 2
Pascagoula.....Sept. 5
Escatawpa, at Orange Gr.....Sept. 6
Gulfport, 25th Avenue.....Sept. 10, 11
Biloxi.....Sept. 14
W. B. JONES, P. E.

Brookhaven District—Third Round.

Wesson, at W.....Aug. 28, 29
Bogue Chitto and Norfield, at Bogue Chitto.....Sept. 3, 4
Prentiss, at Santee.....Sept. 10, 11
Buford, at Sandy Hook.....Sept. 16
Tylertown, at Tylertown.....Sept. 17, 18
Pearlhaven, at Pleas. Grove Sept. 25, 26
Brookhaven.....Sept. 25, 26
J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA
AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children. 50c.

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection: beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders especially. All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hamlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

BOSTON
CRYSTAL
GELATINE

Superlatively pure, appetizing and healthful.

Boston Crystal Gelatine is rapidly coming in-to favor as the prime dessert in thousands of homes. Its simplicity of preparation, adaptability and economy, make its ultimate selection as the best gelatine inevitable.

Crystal Gelatine makes the tenderest jellies and the greatest variety of dishes. Will not curdle milk or cream.

Being nutritious and easy to digest, it is taking the place of heavier desserts. Try it on your table to-day.

EACH PACKAGE MAKES TWO FULL QUARTS.

Ask your grocer.
Sample package free.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.,
121 A Beverly St.,
BOSTON, MASS.

QCKWORK
METAL POLISH

For all household purposes, brass jardinières, brass beds, faucets, lamps, door knobs, tinware, etc., Qckwork is just the thing. It produces a brilliant and durable polish in a "jiffy." Fine for automobiles, yachts and everything that shines. No acid - no grit. Qckwork is the new - the quick way.

IN 25c. TINS EVERYWHERE

Manufactured by

Kettler Brass Mfg. Co., Houston Tex.

FRECKLES
TAN. SUNBURN

Quickly removed by WILSON'S FRECKLE CURE. Guaranteed for freckles, sunburn, tan, moth, pimples. Postpaid 50c a box. Trial size 25c—postage, 5c. Dealers and agents write for special offer to Wilson's Freckle Cure Mfg. Co., Charleston, S. C.

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

The following information was obtained from the records of the United States Department of the Interior, Bureau of Land Management, and the United States Geological Survey, and is being furnished to you for your information.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 57—No. 34.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE NO. 2847.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, SEPT. 1, 1910.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

THE PROGRAM OF THE UPPER ROOM.

The upper chamber in Jerusalem was the first cathedral of the Christian church. There was no altar, no choir, no nave, no crucifix, no gothic arches, no steepled splendor—just four walls of a common room, but never was there built a house which held more of divinity than that plain room. It was the room in which Christ had instituted the Holy Supper. There on the night of the betrayal, he had washed his disciples' feet. After Christ's crucifixion, it was in this room that his disciples abode. They made it their home. There the early church tarried and prayed, waiting for the endowment of power from on high. In that room they elected the successor of Judas Iscariot. There took place the descent of the Holy Spirit, and baptism with tongues of fire. There, too, more than once, the risen Christ showed himself to his friends, and from that room was to pass the movement which was to change the history of the world, and determine the destiny of mankind.

The people in this room consisted of Jesus and the Eleven and a few believers. They are the friends who had followed Christ through the three strange and eventful years of his earthly ministry; but how things have changed since then. They have seen their Master arrested and crucified; they have watched him stagger and fall beneath his heavy cross on the way to Calvary; they have seen the soldiers drive the nails through his hands and feet; they have heard his cry on the cross, and watched him die. With their own hands they have wrapped his body in grave-clothes, and laid it in Joseph's tomb; yet there he is with them again, risen and triumphant. They cannot doubt his identity. He shows them the print of the nails in his hands and feet, and the wound of the spear in his side. He talks to them, and eats with them. They have their Lord once more, and these men are all a-tremble with the ecstasy of that hour.

Jesus said: "Peace be unto you." That thrilled them; that was their ecstasy. What cared they then for the great hostile world whose tides of unbelief and persecution broke and beat without? The door was shut and they were within with their Lord. What did they care for the soldiers, for the priests, for the angry mob, with its cry of "Crucify him, crucify him?" His enemies might raise the cross and nail Christ's body to it, they might slay their leader, but they could not keep Christ in the tomb. What do these disciples care for the world?

Ah, but they must care. That is their mission. They must care for that cold, hostile, persecuting world. Next to their Lord, they must care for nothing quite so much as for the world. They must not care for themselves, for their ease, their peace, their joy; they must hold all cheap, that they may bless the world God loved and Christ came to redeem.

The needy world is waiting outside the door, and those disciples, ravished with the sight and fellowship of their Master, who had come back to them from the grave, must not think about their ecstasy, but arrange to save the world. There are rooms in which the destinies of nations have been decided, where the map of the earth has been changed. There in that upper room the destiny of the race was to be decided. But how? What shall be the program? What shall be the plan of campaign? Christ is going away, but his work is to go on. There in that upper room was to be formulated the scheme which was to issue in the world's redemption. From that room was to go forth the power which was to change the world. Through that door directly will pass the force incarnated in the personalities of eleven men which will shake down every despotism, terminate every tyranny, overthrow every barrier of hate, wipe out every line of caste, cure every wound, comfort every sorrow, and atone for every sin. It is all there in that room.

Stop for a moment, and consider the undertaking.

It was stupendous. The world is to crown Christ King. The cross is to triumph. The Sermon on the Mount is to be translated into the practice of men. It meant a complete upheaval. Reflect on what has already been accomplished; on the transformations which have already taken place in the earth through the influence of the gospel; on the way the Spirit of Jesus has affected civilization, government, education, and every kind of human activity. All that has been done was through the operation of the forces represented in that upper room. There was not a sword, nor a school, nor a hospital—noting but what was in that room. Yet all the needed materials were there. There was the dynamo, and it was sufficient.

Christ announces the program. He sums it up in a single line: "Ye are witnesses of these things." That was all. Those men were to file out of that room into the world, and become witnesses. Nothing could be more practical. They were to translate their ecstasy and mysticism into service. They did. In the gray dawn of the day of service they opened the door of the upper room, and allowed the tides of the hostile, persecuting world to break over them. They faced the line of battle, and gave their testimony. They laid down their lives on the field, but the victory was theirs.

The program of the upper room is for Christ's disciples to be witnesses. It is for those who sat at Jesus' feet and learned of him to tell others what they have learned. It is for those who have learned the good news to publish it. It is for those who have been made partakers of the gospel to proclaim the glad tidings. That is all. Could anything be simpler? People must believe in order to be saved, but how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard?

The program of the upper room was not for Christ's disciples to appeal to force, to raise an army, to unsheathe the sword. No world-forces were mentioned. Nothing was said about money, scholarship, influence, position, for those disciples had none of these. They were to be merely witnesses.

The plan was not for them to answer arguments, reply to criticisms, and explain away difficulties. They were not to be judge or jury or advocate, but witnesses. They were not even to form a church. The church has come, but rather as a by-product. Nothing was said about priesthood, or ordinances, or a number of other things which we have added to the program of the church. These things are useful; they are important; but they are not in the original draft, which said: "Ye are witnesses of these things."

It seems so simple, almost too simple. It sounded inadequate. It seemed as if it might be doomed to failure. What would the world care for their testimony? It would, despite their witnessing. It would impeach them, silence them, ridicule them, refuse to listen to them, perhaps thrust them into prison. Nevertheless, Christ did not revise the program. He said: "Ye are witnesses of these things," and let it stand at that. He staked his cause on that issue. He went into battle with no arms, no ammunition, no following save eleven men who had nothing in the world but a story of their faith in their leader.

This is still the program. Since that night long ago in the upper room we have gotten many things together. The earth is filled with magnificent cathedrals and splendid churches. The Church is rich, learned and influential. The foremost nations of the world call themselves Christians, yet, after all, it is not these things that win. The program is still the program of the upper room. The world is to be saved as Christ's disciples become his witnesses. There is where the tide turns. Witnessing is what we have to do, and nothing can take its place.

The assets of the witness are threefold: His experience, his testimony, and his character.

The value of a witness depends upon his experience. He must know what he knows. It is not enough for him to know what someone else knows. It will not answer for him to report what he has heard others say that they have heard or seen or felt. He must have an experience himself. To be a witness he must be a Christian. He must know Jesus in the forgiveness of his sins. He must be converted. An unconverted man may hold office in the church; he may contribute money to religious purposes; he may found charities; he may teach in the Sunday-school; he may even preach the gospel; he may do a lot of good things, but he cannot be a witness. He cannot get into the program of the upper room. To do that one must have an experience which enables him to say, "I know whom I have believed."

The value of a witness depends upon his testimony. It is not a question of his nationality, or of where he lives, or of whether he is rich or poor. It is a question of what he knows. It is not a question of what he knows about legislation, and trusts, and the conservation of natural resources, but what he knows about Jesus Christ as a Savior. The mission of the church is definite. The trouble nowadays is that too often the church attempts to give an opinion about every little question which arises in human society. Its mission is spiritual, and its specialty is Salvation.

The Christian's business is to tell men what he knows of Jesus Christ, of redemption, of the gospel, of God's cure for sin.

The value of the witness also depends upon his character. He must make his testimony credible. He must be trustworthy. If people are to believe us, we must be believable. Perhaps nowhere is the character of a witness of such absolute importance as in matters of religion. One must be what he proclaims. He must possess, and not merely profess. He must bear the stamp of Christ upon his life. He must be no pretender, but genuine and true.

Christ leaves his work with us. His cause stands or falls, wins or fails, with our testimony. The world judges Christ by us. It is not a case of the inspiration of the Bible; it is not a question of the miracles; it is not a case of the church, but of the Christian. It is a question of you and me. Are we good witnesses? An unbeliever and a professing Christian were, in conversation one day, and the Christian was urging the unbeliever to accept Christ and become a Christian. The unbeliever said to his companion: "Are you an average Christian?" And he said: "Yes, I think I am up to the average." "Then," said the unbeliever, "I do not want to be a Christian." God save us from such a condemnation!

The responsibility is tremendous. The salvation of the world depends on those of us who know Christ. Thank God for an impossible task. It throws us back on him. Let us catch the spirit of those men in the upper room, and of those of Christ's followers who in every age have turned the tide of battle. Some Christian lads in Uganda had their arms cut off and were thrown into the fire. As the flames leaped and crackled about them they raised a hymn, and sang until their shriveled tongues could not form the sound. Oh, for enthusiasm like that! Then the world will hear us.—Rev. J. I. Vance, in Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

The movement to establish a Methodist mission in Africa seems to be getting well under way. It will be jointly enterprised by our Church and the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. A conference between representatives of these two bodies was recently held in Atlanta, and Professor Gilbert, of Paine Institute, at Augusta, Ga., was selected to be the pioneer in the inauguration of this work. He will have the counsel and valuable assistance of Bishop W. R. Lambuth.

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS.

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

THE MINISTER AS A GENTLEMAN.

Is there any danger that a minister of all men should ever forget the common courtesies of life? Ever danger that he seem rude and unrefined? Any danger that he hurt his influence, or cause others to doubt his fidelity to the Master? May he quite unconsciously fall into the habits of obtrusiveness, rudeness, carelessness? May he become obnoxious, self-assertive, or domineering, or take for granted that his calling permits some things, that would not be permitted in others? More than one good man has impaired his influence for good by his ungentelemanly conduct in small things; by neglecting the delicate rules of propriety.

Even in so small a matter as dress, where lies danger, it is not regarded, neatness is not regarded, or even the sober colors are not regarded. A short man seldom looks well in large check. No man looks well in a "baggy," slipshod garment. The shoes unpolished will detract from the polished discourse, and the shine worn from the shoe, takes the shine from the preacher often.

We knew one pastor of a large and aristocratic church, and that church in a college town, not of our denomination, whose shoes were never brushed, and always ill-fitting. His hair never combed, always tousled and in rebellion. The ladies of his church presented him with a box of combs, as a mere suggestion. All in vain. Finally he was asked to resign, and the bewildered man wondered why! The man was a good man of more than ordinary culture, but he simply would not care for the little things that make up so large a part of life.

Another instance. This man had for many years been pastor of the most wealthy church in the city. He was popular and his popularity was deserved. Finally he accepted the presidency of a college, but was very frequently "called back to attend weddings, funerals, and to be present at other functions at the old church." When he came, he did so with an air that said all too loudly, "I am pastor of the church." Other men were called to the pulpit one after another, but each one made a failure, because the former popular pastor ignored them, or snubbed them or did not try to help them in recognizing the fact, that they, not he, held the position of leader in that church. Why did he act in this way? He had been so long accustomed to having his own way, been flattered and fawned upon so long, until he assumed too much and became rude and offensive. Had he been more modest, more careful, more like the Master, he could have helped that church and those pastors, instead of proving as he did a great hindrance to the church and a terror to the several men who followed him.

Are there not others like him? They are perhaps unconscious of their influence, and know not what they do. They have not the grace that delights to see others advanced and honored. They are jealous, and do not know it. They can not give honor where honor is due. They court and invite the tendency to "call them back" for any and all things, and they industriously keep in touch with the congregation, especially the wealthier part of it "for revenue only." These things ought not so to be.

At times men become so anxious to see their own churches grow and increase in numbers and popularity that they ignore the rights of other men. They call at all homes, they ingratiate themselves into the good-will of men and women; they invite "to our church," to "our Sunday schools," to "our prayer meetings," to "our social functions," and in hundreds of unmanly and contemptuous ways they override and trample upon the rights and flocks of other and more careful and courteous men. No real gentleman can permit himself to stoop to such methods.

Speaking of how former pastors "cling" sometimes, reminds me of a case. The man had really outlived his usefulness on that charge. He had been let down gracefully and with no noise; but he could not stay let down. He kept writing back, and coming back and telling how lonely and unhappy he was; finally saying that he would take the "dear old church" again, for several hundreds of dollars less than that church was paying the present pastor. The most disgraceful part of the story is, that church took him back, and let him wither and die on their hands. He is not gentlemanly who will not "let go," who plays his hand to get back for weddings or funerals or other functions as often as he can!

There is another form of rudeness all too common, and that is in the familiar and shocking manner in which many ministers presume upon their privileges in entering homes of friends without the ceremony of a tap at the door or a ring of the bell. They open the door, bolt in and make themselves at home, with not the slightest thought that they have no right to do so, and that they are intruding upon the most sacred rights of others. Said an intelligent lady: "Are you acquainted with the Rev. Mr. So-and-so?" "Yes, I am quite well acquainted with him." "Well, I do wish that man had better manners. He comes bolting into my house at any and all times. He whistles and sings and walks about in the most careless manner. I do wish some one would tell him a few things. I would myself, but I do not wish to offend him, and he really does not know any better!" This phase of the topic would not have been spoken of, did not the writer know that it is alarmingly frequent on the part of ministers, who assume rights that can not by any possibility belong to them in the name of the friend or pastor. A school of methods as to how to leave and how to enter a room, would be a most excellent thing for many good men who are now much less efficient than they otherwise would be, with just a little touch of polish here and there in their sacred and wonderful work.

It would hardly seem possible that a Christian gentleman would permit himself to reach so low a level as to indulge in telling a story of questionable morals or of the vulgar type. Have we not all known brilliant men, gifted men, prominent men, and eloquent men who were not above this corrupting and corrupt practice? There is one man whom the writer will never hear preach without having brought to his mind the propensity in that preacher. His message, to me, has a mal-odor. There are certain marks of the Christian gentleman in the house of worship that tell as the fragrance of the rose tells. They are reverent, they are kindly, they are watchful, they are earnest, they are refined. They walk up the aisle quietly and with the sense of the divine in the soul. They can not afford to be uncouth. They are careful of attitude and gesture. How often a splendid appeal or beautiful thought has been dissipated by some inharmonious gesture, like jabbing the hands into the trousers pocket, or doubling the fist in a fighting posture. The pockets are not the place for the hands in public addresses, especially in an address from the pulpit on a sacred theme. If the message be freezing cold and the hand freezing cold, then there may be some sort of excuse for putting the hands into the trousers pocket, and not otherwise. I once heard a pastor preaching on the "Love of God," and he screamed, scowled, shook his bushy hair and fought the air like a caged hyena.

It would seem that even ministers of the gospel have yet a long way to travel before they will understand the import of the beautiful words of him who spake as never man spake: "Follow me, follow me," and "Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you." Here was the perfect gentleman. Here was one who never hurt the feelings nor disregarded the delicate sensibilities of those about him. How easy it was for him to notice the children in the street! How easy to notice the aged and infirm and the unfortunate! How easy it was to shield from rudeness the sinful, even be it the "woman of the street!"

He who is the minister that is the gentleman, is the one who has a tender and conscientious regard for the feelings of others, rich and poor, in all conditions and circumstances in life.—Rev. C. W. Stephenson in Methodist Recorder.

THE SIGNS OF THE TIMES FROM THE MISSIONARY STANDPOINT.

By Rev. M. M. Black.

In our day the world is pulsating with a nobler, more vigorous life than ever before in the history of the race, and on every hand may be read the signs that point to a still more glorious time, when "the nations shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning-hooks; and they shall not learn war anymore." The old days of the selfish isolation of kingdoms and peoples are nearly at an end, and the Orient as well as the Occident is beginning to keep step to the march of progress. The Church of to-day occupies a point of vantage as regards missionary enterprise such as she has never had before.

1. All parts of the world are now accessible. Steam and electricity have annihilated space, as it were, and have within recent years brought the very ends of the earth together. News of any important event that happens across the seas is flashed over the oceanic cables almost as soon as it occurs. The far East has indeed become the near East. Modern civilization with its great steamship lines reaching to every great port in the Orient and the Occident, with its ocean cables linking the world together, with its universal postal union, with its daily newspapers going everywhere, is wonderfully and rapidly promoting a world-consciousness and cosmopolitanism. The puffing of steamboats may now be heard on the lakes and rivers of central Africa, and the shriek of the locomotive awakens the echoes on the vast plains of central Asia. Within a few years more a ribbon of steel will run the entire length of the Dark Continent, from Cape Town to Cairo, and more than half of this transcontinental line has already been completed. In 1848 it took Dr. Chas. Taylor, the first Southern Methodist missionary to China, five months to go from Boston, Mass., to Shanghai. The trip can now be made in five weeks.

More than a century and a half ago Sir Isaac Newton, the great astronomer, made the following startling prophecy: "I believe," he said, "from the study of God's Word, that in the future he will greatly accelerate the movement of converting the world, and accomplish the work suddenly. But I am convinced also, from the study of the Word, that before that comes to pass there will be a marvelous increase in the speed of transportation on the earth. I believe that in the providence of God, though the method be now entirely hidden, men will yet travel on the earth at the rate of fifty miles an hour." Because of his daring prophecy he became the butt of ridicule. The brilliant and caustic Voltaire said in scorn: "One can see how stupid the old Bible is in that it has added the intellect of Sir Isaac Newton, the most acute on the earth, until he talks like a fool. He says the time will come when a man will be at one point on the earth's surface at the beginning of an hour, and fifty miles away at the end of it. Absurd. Unthinkable." But in this day the prophecy of Newton has been most wonderfully fulfilled both as to the rate of transportation and as to the rapid progress of missionary effort.

2. The world-wide extension of the English language. It is a fact of providential significance that the English language has become the medium of communication between natives and foreigners in well-nigh every land. In fact, an American may make the circuit of the globe and be understood everywhere without knowing any other language than his own. Once the French language held the place of supremacy in diplomatic affairs, and this is still true in Europe, but not elsewhere. It is a fact of momentous significance that in the schools of India, China, and Japan, English is the chief foreign language which the natives are most eager to learn. As Mr. W. T. Ellis wisely remarks: "It means that the ideals which the English language embodies, the ideals of Christian and Protestant nations, are to be dominant in the reshaping of these civilizations of antiquity."

3. One of the most encouraging signs of the times is the spirit of brotherhood that is spreading round the world, and drawing the nations together into the bonds of fellowship as well as of commerce and industry. The dawning of this general consciousness of the oneness of the world, of the identity of human interests has been happily termed by ex-Mayor Jones, of Minneapolis, "the standardization of the world." It is a remarkable fact that in every land the railroads are being run according to the standard gauge, so that locomotives made in Philadelphia travel across the plains of Siberia, through China, and through the heart of the Dark Continent. International conferences in the interest of science, commerce, statesmanship, education, and missions are the order of the day, and give substantial and striking evidence of the growing sense of the unity of the race, and of the community of human interests. Co-operation and fellowship are the watchwords of the hour. The dominant note of the great world's missionary conference held in Edinburgh recently was unity. How numerous are the signs which indicate that, despite racial and denominational differences, "by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free." As Emerson forcefully said: "The nineteenth century made the world one neighborhood; the twentieth century must make it one brotherhood."

4. The Bible and the printing press. In our day the printing press has become a mighty aid to the Church in the dissemination of truth, and in the evangelization of the world. In the early days of Christianity the Old Testament Scriptures were rarely found outside the synagogue, and even in the Middle Ages, "to own a Bible was the privilege of churches, princes, and monasteries." A copy of the whole Bible can now be obtained for the price of one meal, and the Word of God is brought within the reach of the poorest family. The Bible societies of to-day, of which there are no less than eighty, constitute the strong right arm of the Church in missionary enterprise, and without their aid the various denominations of Christendom would find it well-nigh impossible to carry on their work in the foreign field. A hundred years ago the Bible had been translated into only sixty-six languages and dialects, which were spoken by about one-fifth of the population of the globe. There are now 456 missionary versions of the Word of God, 446 of which were made during the nineteenth century.

5. There has never been a time since the days of the Apostle Paul when the opportunities for evangelizing the world were so numerous or so urgent as to-day. With scarce an exception the doors of every heathen country are wide open, and from sea to sea extends the thrilling cry for the Bread of Life. Barriers of prejudice and superstition hoary with age are rapidly crumbling before the onward march of civilization and the gospel, and all the signs indicate that the psychological moment has come for the churches of Christendom to unite in a great crusade against heathenism. As we look abroad it is day-break everywhere.

(a) The startling and radical changes that have occurred in Japan during the last forty years furnish one of the greatest marvels of history. For centuries classed as one of the "hermit nations," Japan, the little island Empire, ranks as the foremost nation of the Orient in industrial and commercial enterprise, in military prowess and in intelligence. Fifty years ago comparatively few of the Japanese could read and write; now it is stated that the illiterates number less than ten per cent of the population. According to the last report of the Department of Education, the attendance of Japanese children at public schools is, in most prefectures, ninety-five per cent, and in some cases as high as ninety-nine and seven-tenths per cent. A little over thirty-five years ago an imperial edict threatened death to any native of Japan who dared to change his religion, and bulletin boards with this warning upon them were posted upon every road throughout the Empire. A few years ago this harsh decree was abrogated, and Japan guarantees religious liberty to all her subjects, and missionaries are free to go to any part of her territory.

(b) China, which for over two thousand years has had her face toward the past, is now looking to the sunrise, and is undergoing a transformation unparalleled in history. It is more marvelous than that of Japan, as Dr. A. P. Parker tells us, because it is on a grander scale, and is even more rapid. First and foremost is the anti-opium crusade, which in its vigor and extensiveness furnishes a striking parallel to the crusade of our land against the rum traffic. About three years ago an imperial edict was issued providing for the complete abolition of the opium traffic in ten years, and the government has shown by its efforts that it means business. Western science and literature have been substituted for the old Chinese classics in the government examinations, thus changing at one stroke a system that had been in vogue nearly three thousand years. By imperial decree Sunday has been made a legal holiday; but more wonderful still, provision has been made for a constitutional government to be put into operation in nine years in that land where, for centuries the Emperor's will was law. Thus China is at last reaching out her hand for the torch of truth and liberty.

(c) Korea, the Land of the Morning Calm, is witnessing a revival movement of marvelous sweep and power, in which many of the scenes and experiences of early Methodism are being repeated. The watchword this year among the Churches and native Christians of that idol-cursed land is "a million souls for Christ." It is confidently predicted that if the Church will immediately send adequate reinforcements the whole nation can be evangelized in ten years.

(d) The open door set before us in Latin America, especially in the lovely island of Cuba, and in the Republics of Mexico and Brazil, should arouse our great Church to more vigorous effort and to larger plans for the evangelization of the rich but undeveloped lands that lie under the Southern Cross. Southern Methodism has a God-given opportunity to be a mighty factor in the social and religious development of Mexico and South America, known, alas, as the neglected Continent.

(e) During the past three years both Turkey and Persia have witnessed revolutions in which despotism has gone down to final defeat, and constitutional monarchies have been established. The spirit of freedom is in the air everywhere, and the watchwords, "Liberty, equality, fraternity," are resounding round the globe. All through its dark and bloody history Mohammedanism has been the bitterest foe of the gospel of Christ, but during the past two or three years, the most astounding changes have taken place in the Mohammedan world. Rev. B. J. Sarnist, a native Southern Methodist Missionary in Persia, in a stirring article in the Nashville Christian Advocate not many weeks ago, said:

"The whole situation is radically transformed, and Christianity has about as much freedom and protection now, under the government of Turkey and Persia, as Mohammedanism itself. . . . In April 1909, there were about 30,000 Armenian Christians slaughtered by the Mohammedans in Turkey. Some time after that fifteen Mohammedans were put to death by the Turkish government for leading in this slaughter. Then last December twenty-six other Mohammedan Turks were tried and found guilty of taking a part in the slaughter of these Christians, and were publicly put to death by the Turkish government, with great crowds of people witnessing the execution. Such a thing as a Mohammedan being put to death, publicly executed by the Turkish or Persian government for the murder of a Christian, has never been known before—not for a thousand years. People are permitted to attend Christian churches, and to hear the gospel preached, and to send their children to Christian schools without being persecuted or killed, as they had been before these things."

6. How wonderfully significant it is in this day of world-wide commerce and whitened fields, the Student Volunteer Movement and the Laymen's Missionary Movement have arisen in the providence of God, both having for their watchword and aim, "the evangelization of the world in this generation." Under the blessed influence of the one, hundreds of splendidly equipped young men and young women are ready to go to the Christless lands as "evangelists of the cross; while under the influence of the other, the great army of Christian laymen at home are catching the vision of the world's supreme need, and are consecrating their abundant wealth and energy and superior business skill to the sublime task of evangelizing the whole world in a generation. Hence the old motto, "We can do it, if we will," has been changed to, "We can do it, and we will."

The development of manufacturing industries, the rapid growth of our cities and towns, the presence of the negro among us in his degraded and half-evangelized condition, together with the rapid influx of foreigners, who, as the tide of immigration sets Southward, are destined to come among us in large numbers, present grave problems for both Church and State, and also enlarged opportunities for the proclamation and application of the gospel in the home land. The new fields of conquest before us should arouse the Church to renewed diligence and to larger plans and efforts for the extension of the Master's kingdom.

Christendom has sounded the bugle call for an advance along the whole line for the spiritual conquest of the world. Let the cry ring through the Church: "The whole business of the whole Church is to give the whole gospel to the whole world."

A DUTY TO OURSELVES AND TO THE NATION.

By Bishop W. A. Candler.

Let not our people forget the building of our representative church at Washington, D. C., our national capital.

There is not a capital in Christendom in which the churches are as poor when compared with the other public buildings.

The splendid structure in which Congress assembles is one of the finest of all the parliament houses in the world. The new library is without a superior of its kind anywhere. But there is not at Washington a real, first-class church building comparable to the public buildings of the city. This blemish upon our national capital discredits us as a people and damages the cause of Christianity among us. It impresses visitors to the city, both foreigners and our own people, that religion holds a secondary place in the thought of the nation. It may account in part for the failure of many of our public men to attend public worship and live godly lives during their stay at the capital. The constant impression of great buildings for political uses and poor edifices for religious purposes is not calculated to stimulate piety and stir religious zeal.

In Edinburgh is St. Giles, in London St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey, in Paris Notre Dame, in Mexico City the great cathedral near the palace; but in Washington City there is not to be found a church that approaches the buildings of the Federal government in impressiveness. This fact is partly explained by the separation of Church and State under our system of government. It is also in part attributable to the fact that our national capital is not a wealthy commercial metropolis like London and Paris. The people of Washington are people of small means, many of them engaged in the service of the government on small and uncertain salaries; and hence they are unable to build there such churches as befit the place. This means that if ever such houses of worship adorn the national capital, they must be erected largely by the liberality of Christian people throughout the Republic. Every great denomination in the land owes it to itself and to the nation to build at least one representative church in Washington.

This duty has been recognized by thoughtful people in most of the great churches. The Episcopalians have begun a movement in this direction, and recently a large bequest was made for the building of their Washington cathedral. The Presbyterians are moving for such a house of worship there, as the Northern Methodists and Lutherans and Baptists did years ago. Of course, the Roman Catholics are alive to the needs and opportunities of the situation.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, rests under a similar obligation to the nation. The second largest Methodist body in the United States and in the world, our church must do its part at the national capital of our country. Our duty and our interest coincide in this great matter.

Accordingly our General Conference which met in Birmingham, Ala., in 1906 took steps for the erection of a representative church at Washington, and our General Conference which met in Asheville, N. C., this year took still more advanced action on the subject. We cannot turn back from the task—a task which is not a heavy one for so strong a Church as ours. To delay the work will discredit us; to fail in it would disgrace us. But we will not, we must not fail.

Let all our people respond liberally to the appeals of Rev. George S. Sexton, D.D., the agent appointed by the General Conference to prosecute this important work. Under the plans of the national building committee subscriptions may be made payable in annual installments running through as much as five years. In this way most any member of the Church who cares for this work may have a part in it, and every one among us should wish to have a part in it.

This church will in time become one of the historic structures of the national capital. Let us make it worthy of our great Church. Its foundations ought to be laid at an early day, and then the work should go on without interruption until the capstone is brought forth amid the rejoicings of all our people.

As chairman of the committee appointed by the General Conference to direct the canvass for funds, I ask all our members and friends to give prompt and generous assistance to this important enterprise.

A TRUE STORY AND AN APPEAL.

There was a sick woman lying on a bed. It was twilight and the room was filled with gloomy shadows. The room was bare, and indicated severe poverty. Two children, a small boy and a little girl, stood beside their sick mother, who was too weak to get up. A long illness had reduced her to emaciation. Why was there such poverty in this home? It is the same old pitiful story; the husband drank whiskey; his money, when he earned any, bought rum, and the children went without bread, and the sick wife needed nourishing food. The little girl stands caressing the white, thin face of her mother; the boy looks on with his eyes filled with a tender, deep love. The faces of mother and children are agony-stricken as they recognize a staggering step; the drunken father enters, and stumbles over something. This enrages him. He seizes the little girl, and begins to beat her furiously; the boy interferes, and the father then beats them both. The weak, feeble mother pleads for her children. The drunken man takes a heavy boot, and beats the mother until she is dead, and afterwards kills himself. Oh, what a scene! Alone there in the dusk of that room—alone with their murdered mother. Oh, what a scene! Alone there in the gloom! Alone with their murdered mother—and murdered father, yes murdered by rum. Oh, what a scene! those little children made orphans by the demon rum—left to the care and mercy of a thoughtless, but not pitiless world. They were taken to the Ruston Orphanage. They and others now cry to you for bread; and Christ commands you "Feed my lambs."

There are over thirty thousand Methodists in Louisiana. Brother Vaughan pleads with you for help. Will you not send him twenty-five or thirty cents apiece? See what a blessing these quarters would be to those orphans. You would never miss the two dimes and five cents; and Christ commands you: "Feed my lambs."

MARTHA CAROLYN KELLER MILLER.
Hammond, La.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure.

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francois Martin, Pres. John McGlosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec.-Treas.
Geo. A. Hero

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH

LEON IRWIN & CO.

FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 525.

SPEARING & CO.,

(Established 1817.)

SAIL MAKERS

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS and TENTS.

CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOUS STREETS

Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

Church News

Fifty-three ministers were ordained at the late session of the British Wesleyan Conference. Among them was a son of Gipsy Smith, the famous evangelist.

The National Convention of the Swedish-Finnish Missionary Society was held at Worcester, Mass., Aug. 18-22. Delegates were present from all parts of the United States.

Dr. Gross Alexander is in great demand as a lecturer on Biblical themes. He has engagements to give a series of studies at the Moody Bible Institute and McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago.

Rev. W. J. Dawson, of England, is contemplating the acceptance of a church at Vancouver on the Pacific slope. It is to be an up-to-date institutional church under Methodist auspices.—Alabama Advocate.

Mrs. Jane McTyeire Baskerville, a daughter of Bishop McTyeire, is the new editor of the Woman's Missionary Advocate. She is a brilliant writer, and doubtless will ably fill this responsible position. The editorial gift should be hers by inheritance.

The Nashville Advocate is authority for the following statement: "The Baptist denomination in this country visits 465,000 homes with its religious journals every week, while the Methodist Church sends to its homes weekly 750,000 Methodist Advocates."

Bishop John C. Kilgo spent last Sunday in Birmingham, preaching at Ensley at 11 o'clock, and laying the corner-stone of the handsome new Methodist Church there in the afternoon. At the evening hour he occupied the pulpit of the First Church, delivering an eloquent and impressive sermon.

Rev. John R. Stewart, agent for the Superannuate Endowment Fund, has tendered his resignation, and will return to the pastorate in the Tennessee Conference. He has filled the position which he is now giving up for five years with marked success. It is announced that his successor will be chosen at an early day.

The International Eucharistic Congress of the Roman Catholic Church will be held at Montreal, Canada, in September. This is the most important assembly of that great denomination except the College of Cardinals, and in the discussion of matters of world-wide import to the Catholic Church, it is even more important than that. It will be the first time that this influential body has ever assembled in the Western Hemisphere.

The American Purity Federation will send out distinguished representatives on a continental tour Sept. 30th. The leading cities of the United States and Canada will be visited, and the White Slave Traffic, the Suppression of Vice, Law Enforcement, and Educational and Religious Methods will be the themes discussed. There will be about twenty in the party, most of whom are speakers and workers of national note. The tourists will reach New Orleans Oct. 26, and remain two days, delivering a series of public addresses in the city. Coming upon such a mission, they will be given a most cordial reception.

The Presbyterian Hospital Board of this city has purchased the New Orleans Sanitarium, and will come into possession of this property, which is valued at $200,000 on Oct. 1. They will maintain a free clinic and a training school for nurses. This denomination is fast extending a chain of hospitals throughout the South, having such institutions in Atlanta, Memphis, and other Southern cities. The lack of hospital facilities has long been a weakness of Protestantism, but its deficiency in this respect is fast being remedied. No Church that aspires to play an influential part in the future can afford to neglect this field of service.

The Presbyterian of the South makes the following observation concerning the denominational affiliation of leading English statesmen: "The members of the British cabinet are nearly all dissenters. The Prime Minister, Mr. Asquith, is a Congregationalist; Mr. Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, and Mr. Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, are Baptists; Mr. Runciman, President of the Board of Education, is a Methodist; Solicitor General Isaacs is a Jew. Mr. Balfour, leader of the opposition, is a Presbyterian, as was also the late Premier." This showing, together with the fact that the occupant of the throne may now belong to any Protestant Church, indicates that the nonconformists are making good headway toward the acquisition of their full rights in the United Kingdom.

"OUR YOUNG PREACHERS" AND OUR COLLEGES."

By Rev. Robt. Selby.

Under the above caption, Rev. H. B. Watkins gives an article that is worthy the attention of every reader of the Advocate, which article appears in the issue of Aug. 18. It is worthy because it deals with a very vital question to every man and woman of our Church who believes in a better prepared ministry for the pulpits of our Church. This is a matter to which I, as Conference secretary of education for several years, have given special attention; or, at least, as much as I could give under the circumstances.

Possibly Brother Watkins does not know that we have a fund that is known as the "Ministerial Educational Fund" in our Conference, and it has been administered by Major Millsaps and myself for the past several years. In 1901 I was authorized to communicate with every subscriber to this fund, and every young man who had been a beneficiary at any time and who was in arrears with the fund, in order to collect subscriptions and amounts that were due from these beneficiaries. This work was kept before those who were indebted to the fund in any way for several years, and some of the money was collected, some of the brethren paying all they owed. I have notes in my possession now that have long been due, and they would have been collected had the persons been able to pay, and in some cases, possibly, had they been disposed to pay.

The fund to which I have referred was, of course, inadequate to the great demand that is upon the Church for a better educated ministry, and yet no young man who has applied, complying with the conditions, has failed to get help from this fund. I recall several of our best young men who were the beneficiaries of this fund, and but for it they could not have finished their college course. There are young preachers in Millsaps College who are being helped in this way; but we need to enlarge the fund very materially, and it is to be hoped that this may be done in the near future. I am in sympathy with Brother Watkins' suggestion that the matter should be put before our congregations, and with some agitation the Board of Education might be encouraged to give it some definite form at the Annual Conference in Hattiesburg next winter.

There is only one objection that anyone might make to the plan, and that is that we have so many collections; but none would appeal to the people who are interested in this cause with more force than this, which deserves as much as any other. The people who are demanding a better equipped ministry should be (and they are) willing to assist where a young man is not able to pay his way through school.

Of course, this fund would be used as a loan at a reasonable rate of interest, as the present fund is used; for in this way no young man would feel embarrassed in applying for it.

As to the specific plan that Brother Watkins sets forth, namely, that the money should be contributed as a gift without any expectation of return, it seems to me that the present plan would be better. Any young man should at least pay the interest, and I believe most of them would not be willing to use money without returning the whole amount in time.

It strikes me that meeting this sort of an obligation would be good business training for the average young man, and not only so, but he would think more of himself when he has finished paying this debt.

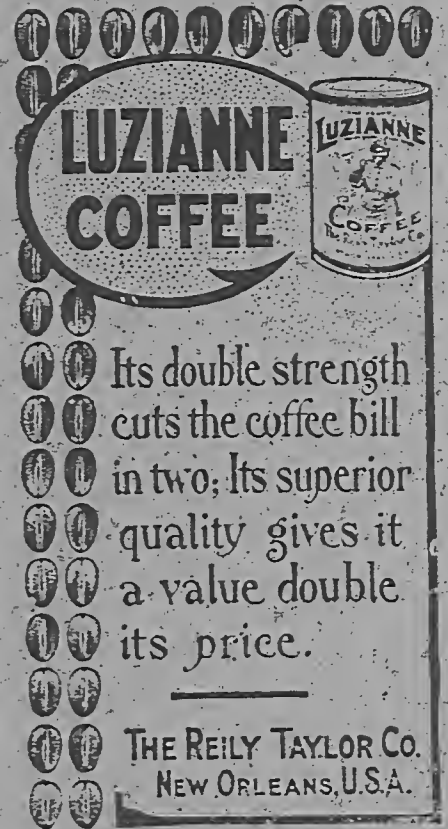

There may be a congregation, or congregations, that would be glad to pay outright the expenses of a young preacher through school; in such a case as this it would be commendable, and I am with Brother Watkins in pressing it. At the same time let us renew the interest in the fund to which I have already referred, as being in operation, and increase it until it shall accomplish what its founders designed for it.

Natchez, Miss.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE OPENING.

It gives us great pleasure to announce to the friends of Whitworth College that the improvements on the buildings have been completed, and the material conditions are better than ever before in the long history of the college. Each of the dormitories has a new roof and all of the rooms have been renovated and repaired. The doors and windows have been screened.

Fresh paint, kalsomine, and paper have added greatly to the appearance and comfort of the dormitories. The president has spent $2,000 making these improvements. The rooms have nearly all been engaged for the coming session. Students are coming from Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana, and Mississippi. The session for 1910-11 will open Sept. 18. Students are expected to arrive Wednesday, Sept. 1.

LUZIANNE COFFEE

Its double strength cuts the coffee bill in two; Its superior quality gives it a value double its price.

THE REILY TAYLOR CO.
NEW ORLEANS, U.S.A.

Rev. Chas. W. Crisler, of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss., will preach the opening sermon, Sept. 11th.

A plan has been projected to erect a new central building at a cost of $40,000. The prospect for this new building is splendid. Dr. I. W. Cooper is doing a great work for Whitworth College and Christian education.

J. T. LEGGETT,
Member Board of Trustees.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE

Dr. I. W. Cooper, the diligent and progressive president, has given Whitworth College buildings a thorough overhauling during the past summer at an expense of fully $20,000. New roofs have been put on two of the largest buildings, new windows in the Johnson Hall, and the dormitory rooms have been beautified with new paper, kalsomine and paint. The dormitories are being screened at every opening for thorough protection of students from flies and mosquitoes. Everything is as neat as the proverbial new pin.

The faculty, which will cost nearly $2,000 a session more than any previous one, is the special pride of the institutions. No pains or money have been spared to secure the best instructors for each and every department, and better work is planned than even the best high school in the class rooms. The specialties—music, art, expression, commerce—are all in the hands of artists and experts.

The health conditions of Whitworth College are excellent. As far as I have been able to learn, there was not a case of fever in the College last session which lasted twenty-four hours. There was no serious sickness of any kind. The college physician had almost nothing to do.

But, while the mental education is faithfully achieved, the chief glory of Whitworth is its religious tone and atmosphere and the fact that the spiritual nature of the student is sacredly guarded and developed. The young lady at Whitworth is under as wholesome spiritual influences as the best Christian home affords, and in as inspiring religious activities as the best church knows.

The prices at Whitworth are as low as work of equal character or quality can be secured anywhere. There are prices that become the guarantee of inferior work. Whitworth is not a competitor of such institutions. Her President and faculty do their work "as unto the Lord," and they fix the prices by the same rule.

Fortunate indeed is the young lady who is numbered among Whitworth students, and happy the parents whose daughter is in such safe hands.

H. M. ELLIS.

The Centenary College of Louisiana.

Fall Term will
open Sept. 14, 1910.

For Catalogues or other information write to

FELIX R. HILL, President.

JOHN S. JOHNSTON, Dean,
SHREVEPORT, LA.

Secular News and Comment

The pencil manufacturers of Nuremberg, Germany, are said to use annually 700,000 tons of American cedar.

Ex-Senator Wilkinson Call, of Florida, died of cerebral hemorrhage in the Emergency Hospital at Washington on the 24th ult. He served in the upper branch of Congress from 1879 to 1897, making a creditable, though not a brilliant record. He was 76 years of age and a Confederate soldier.

The Farmers' Union of Alabama, in session at Montgomery on the 19th ult., went on record as being opposed to a return to the open saloon in that commonwealth. Good for the Yeomanry of our sister State! They showed wisdom in that action. The whisky traffic hurls every worthy occupation, and contributes absolutely nothing to the public weal.

Dr. Albert Wellbourn Calhoun, the eminent Atlanta oculist, passed away in that city on the 21st ult. He had been engaged in the practice of his profession for forty years, and his reputation extended throughout the entire South, from all sections of which he commanded patronage. He was in the sixty-sixth year of his age when the summons came.

Britannia rules the waves. Her vessels, now carry a little less than sixty per cent. of all the freight transported over the seas of the world. The following figures show how the world's ocean tonnage is distributed among the several nations: The British Empire, 13,162,354; German Empire, 2,825,404; Norway, 1,569,616; France, 1,472,407; Italy, 1,020,062; United States, 940,068.

The New York Independent of the 25th inst. says: "The study of the Norwegian novelist, Bjornstjerne Bjornsen, in his country house near Hildhammer, has been turned into a museum of relics. His death mask, many of his books, with his own annotations, and other souvenirs have already been placed there. A tribute to this distinguished author from the pen of William Morton Payne, LL.D., associate editor of the Chicago Dial, has just been issued by A. C. McClurg & Co. It is a neat little volume of less than a hundred pages."

It has been announced that ten and a half miles of the Panama Canal are already in actual service. Five and a half miles on the Atlantic side are open to the sand and rock fleet used in constructing the great water way, and five miles on the Pacific side may be used by any kind of vessel. The part just put into service on the Atlantic side is not completed yet, but has a depth of fifteen feet at the shallowest point, and a width of a hundred feet at the narrowest point. When finished, it is expected to be a hundred feet deep and five hundred feet wide.

The popcorn center of the world is said to be Odebolt, Iowa, where 1,600 farmers are reported to be engaged in the industry, raising annually within a radius of fifteen miles 15,000,000 pounds of this cereal. In 1909 there were more than 150 carloads of popcorn shipped from this village. This large industry began a few years ago with the planting of twenty-five acres by Mr. A. H. W. Rouben, whose success influenced the neighbors to follow his example. There are now reported to be enough popcorn cribs in and near Odebolt to take care of 7,000,000 pounds of the grain.

Minnehaha, laughing water—what prettier name in sound and in sense, could there be? But the saddest thing about American nomenclature is the way in which languages have been cross-bred, with deplorable results. All these Indian "Mingo" names are delightful when left alone; and the white man did well in naming the State of Minnesota after the river, which, being interpreted, is "sky-thunder water." But then he must go and contrive "Minneapolis" for its chief town—a shocking mixture of Indian and Greek. What lovely names they must have missed when they imported their Jacksonvilles to dispossess the red man's language!—London Chronicle.

Perhaps the most cosmopolitan university in the world is that of Calcutta, India. It is a great institution, modeled after the University of London, and splendidly equipped. Students go there from Hindu, Mohammedan, Christian, and other colleges. Examinations for degrees are conducted upon the following important subjects: English, Bengali, Hindi, Urdu, Assamese, Burmese, Persian, Sanskrit, Hebrew, Classical Armenian, Arabic, Persian, Sanskrit, Greek, Latin, French, German, history, political economy and political philosophy, mental and moral philosophy, mathematics, physics, chemistry, physiology, botany and zoology.

Managua, the capital of Nicaragua, has been captured by the revolutionists, and Dr. Madriz, who succeeded to the presidency when Zelaya was deposed, has fled the country. Jose Dolores Estrada, a brother of General Juan Estrada, the leader of the insurgents, is temporarily at the head of the government. He has issued a proclamation declaring his brother, whose armies have at last been successful, president of the United Republic of Nicaragua. An election allowing the people to choose an executive is to be held within six months. Gen. Estrada seems to be bearing himself well in the hour of his triumph, and has set free a number of prisoners already.

President Pedro Montt, of Chile, died at Bremen, whither he had gone in search of health, on Aug. 16, of angina pectoris. He was in the United States the early part of last month, visited President Taft at Beverly, Mass., and was on board the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse when Mayor Gaynor was shot on the deck of that steamer. His term of presidency would have expired in June, 1911. He entered public life as a member of the lower House of Congress in 1878, and his career was distinguished and successful, contributing not a little to the upbuilding of his country. He was sixty-four years old. Elias Fernandez, Minister of the Interior, will serve as chief executive until a president is chosen next November.

The scientists and medical men of the world deserve much commendation for their never-ceasing fight to conquer the diseases which afflict mankind. In this contest they have achieved noble triumphs that were ever won upon bloody battlefields. Among the latest researches of this character we note the following: A Cape Colony (South Africa) doctor has recently been experimenting with a new drug in the treatment of typhoid fever. It is an extract of the plant called Mimosa bi flora, and contains, besides tannic and gallic acid, an active principle or principle which Dr. Maffey has named entericin. The results of the doctor's experiments seem to indicate that entericin may be a useful remedy in typhoid, but his cases have been too few to justify any definite conclusions.

In the election held in Georgia on the 23d ult. the Hon. Hoke Smith defeated Governor Joseph M. Brown, who was seeking re-election by a large majority, thus reversing the verdict of two years ago, when Smith was the chief executive and was refused another term. Mr. Smith has stood fearlessly for various civic and moral reforms, and there is reason to believe that the Empire State of the South has acted wisely in again vesting him with the power of office. Congressmen Livingston and W. H. Howard, who stood against the overthrow of Speaker Cannon last December, were defeated in the primaries. Mr. Livingston has long been regarded as an extremely artful politician, quick to discover and ride popular waves, and that he should have allowed himself to be beaten in the game of demagoguery is not a little surprising.

SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT FUND.

The following letter was recently mailed to the preachers of the eight Conferences which have no assessment for the Superannuate Endowment Fund:

"Dear Brother: We take for granted that every Methodist preacher is interested in the success of the Superannuate Endowment Fund, either on his own account or on behalf of others. Your Conference being one of the few not having assumed an assessment for this fund, we appeal to you personally to observe the duty cited in the inclosed separate paragraph, which will be Paragraph 479 of the new Discipline—the law touching this fund. We feel that it is unfair to the assessing Conferences for your Conference to receive the pro rata of yearly interest without contributing to the enlargement of the Fund. Doubtless you think so. Pardon us for making this a personal matter with you, as we are doing with all the preachers of the non-assessing Conferences. We respectfully but earnestly request that you reply at once on the inclosed card, giving us your word that you will present this cause to your people before Conference, D. V., and receive voluntary offerings for the same. Please write us promptly, as this is a very important matter, and greatly oblige. Your servants in a worthy cause.

A. J. LAMAR, Pres.
J. R. STEWART, Sec.

The following is Paragraph 479 in the letter quoted:

"That it is made the duty of the preacher in charge of each station, circuit, and mission in the Church to call attention annually in each congregation to this Endowment Fund, and ask a voluntary contribution from the congregation for its enlargement; all money so secured shall be sent at once to the treasurer of the Joint Board of Finance of the Annual Conference, to be by him transmitted to the person authorized to receive such funds."

Many of the preachers have already replied to the request contained in the letter above, and with rare exceptions have said that they will be glad to present the cause and take collections, for the same, before the coming Conference. The question for each Conference to determine is one of method simply. How shall this collection be taken? Shall it be an assessment added on to the assessment for Conference Claimants, or a voluntary collection? I think most of the preachers would prefer to make a brief explanation and take the collection as an assessment, rather than make a special appeal yearly and take this collection separately. This latter method would yield larger returns, doubtless, if faithfully presented, but the Board of Trustees is very willing for the brethren to put it in with the assessments, as this gives everyone a chance to contribute. The point to be emphasized is, that each preacher should feel that he has the duty of taking a collection for this fund placed very distinctly upon him by the law of the Church.

I do not mean to assume that I am more interested in this great work than are my brethren of the itinerancy. Co-operation is of prime importance. We can by working together make this a great fund in a comparatively short time. It is already yielding nice returns and is doing good. It is growing; but it should grow faster.

I close with the request that each preacher who received one of the above printed letters, and who has not yet replied, will please do so at the first convenience. It means much. Cordially,

J. R. STEWART, Sec.

Nashville, Tenn., July 23, 1910.

THE ENCIRCLING GOOD.

How instinctively the lower animals are able to find and appropriate to their own use the things they need, choosing and selecting with discriminate care the materials best adapted to their peculiar mode of living! No matter what is required for the nest-building or homemaking, they seem to procure just the proper articles, and fashion them in such a clever manner that man often marvels at their admirable architecture.

Did you ever watch a bird building a nest? How it flies about, gathering up whatever offers itself as a desirable addition to the dainty little structure! And each different kind of a bird making its own special kind of a nest, taking exactly what it needs for that purpose from the encircling good.

Isn't it the same in plant life? We put a seed in the ground, and soon it begins to absorb such elements as will help it fulfill its mission, sending down little roots to drink up the minerals essential to its growth. By and by appears a little head above the ground, and immediately commences to take advantage of the benefits derived from sunlight, dew and air. Knowing what is necessary for its growth, beauty and fruition, it eagerly accepts what is held out by the encircling good.

But man, whom God has made but "little lower than the angels," man, with his high order of intellect, his advantages, experience, his boasted supremacy; man, made in God's own image, does he recognize the encircling good? To our shame we must say, "No." We say that God's Spirit fills the universe, and that "God is good to all, and his mercy covereth all his works," yet the idea that his goodness and compassion encircles us, and we take all we want of it, does not appear to impress humanity. If the plants and animals can find this goodness, why is man so stupid?

"Why are we weighed with heaviness,
And utterly consumed with sharp distress,
While all things else have rest from weariness?
All things have rest; why should we toil alone?
We only toil who are the first of things,
And make perpetual moan,
Still from one sorrow to another thrown,
Nor ever fold our wings
And cease from wanderings."

Do we not often have a wrong conception of the promise that "no good thing will he withhold from those who walk uprightly?" Our desires turn to material blessings, such as wealth, renown, health and pleasure. Does it mean that? Rather isn't it a promise of beneficent gifts which will make us worthy of his love? We are encompassed with his goodness. "No good thing will he withhold"—no quality or attribute which will assist in our development; no beautiful equipment for fighting life's battles. We are not like the birds and flowers, gratefully accepting these provisions for our welfare. We fold our hands behind our backs, and say: "That isn't what I want." It is our own fault that we do not use the good so bountifully given; our own fault that we are nervous and afraid of the evil, for, "as the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people from henceforth even forever." "The angel of the Lord encampeth around about them that fear him, and delivereth them."

"Let us be like a bird, for a moment perched
On a frail branch while he sings;
Though he feels it bend, yet he sings his song,
For he knows he has his wings."

We could do more singing and be more at rest if we would realize we are encircled by the everlasting arms of God.—Nellie Carter Tyler in Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

W. H. M. S.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

At the last annual meeting, the office of Press Superintendent was united with that of Conference Corresponding Secretary, and our former efficient Press Superintendent, Mrs. A. C. McKinney, was made District Secretary on the Ruston District.

We are reaping the benefit of her thorough work, and are happy to report progress in many of the auxiliaries. Recent letters tell us of Reading Circles formed, and the free use of the secular press for announcing the regular meetings of the society, and giving reports of these meetings. Other plans for enlisting interest and promoting good have been reported, and we would be glad to aid those auxiliaries which are still struggling with this problem. Write and learn some of the methods others are using. We would suggest a more frequent use by the auxiliaries of this column in the New Orleans Advocate, which has been so kindly given for Home Mission items. Let us hear through this means, what you are doing, and perhaps it will encourage and stimulate others to greater activity.

Mrs. E. R. Kennedy, President of the Louisiana Conference, W. H. M. S., is spending a month or six weeks in New York, with her daughter, Mrs. S. R. Olliphant. Her address is 228 Rich Avenue, Mt. Vernon, New York.

Mrs. M. N. James, District Secretary, Alexander District, is doing a fine work. A recent letter tells of a new auxiliary of eighteen members at Rochelle, and outlines her plan of work for the fall. She makes it a rule to visit each auxiliary on her district at least once a year, if possible.

Our new District Secretaries on the Shreveport and Monroe Districts have proven themselves worthy of the trust, and we are expecting encouraging reports when we meet in our next Annual Session at Monroe.

The third quarter of this year has been fixed for a "Membership Campaign." Literature will be furnished the auxiliaries, outlining plans for this campaign. We are praying for and expecting a large increase in interest and membership. Let each do her part, and work and pray, for it is the Master who bids us go forward. There is no place in His Kingdom for an idler, and it is the individual work that is the most fruitful.

The Week of Prayer will be held during the first week in October. Plan to hold it just at that time, if possible. We are asking for $20,000. The collection is to go toward erecting a large chapel and class room building at the Ruth Hargrove Institute, Key West, Florida. The foundations of the building, which is to cost $18,500, are laid, and by October we trust the work will be nearing completion. The furnishing will cost $1,500 or more, so it is seen how necessary it is that the full $20,000 be collected. The property is now valued at $15,000. Last year 375 students were enrolled, the largest number in its record. The course of study was enlarged by the addition of a Commercial Course, which will mean much to the life of the school. The Principal and teachers are now much handicapped for lack of room. The campus has been enlarged by the purchase of four lots. Repairs to the extent of $600 were necessary on account of the storm last October. We must "go forward," and our faith is in God, and the women of the Home Mission Society. Let no one fail to do her part.

MRS. CROW GIRARD.
Press Supt. and Cor. Sec.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Conference press superintendent has been out of the State for the summer. Her address has been constantly changing as she has moved from place to place. Owing to this fact, it has been difficult for her to keep in touch with conditions, and this explains why this column has not been used oftener during the past three months.

Some of the Conference officers have not reported this quarter, but those reports that have been received are most encouraging.

Our Conference treasurer, Mrs. Dunn, reports the whole amount for this quarter sent to the treasurer $1,162.84, and amount spent for local work $2,906.06, making a grand total of $4,068.90.

Mrs. J. R. Ellis, who has charge of the department of tithing, writes us that the number of tithers reported at the close of the first quarter was very gratifying, though the number of auxiliaries heard from was not satisfactory. Several have sent in reports that have never been heard from before, and others have reported quite an increase of those who have adopted "God's financial plan." The Hattiesburg District leads in number of tithers, also in the number of auxiliaries reporting. The Long Beach auxiliary has the largest number of tithers: Broad Street, Hattiesburg, follows closely. Our second vice-president pleads earnestly with each and every member of the W. H. M. Society, and also with the pastors that they will unite with her to make the Mississippi the banner Conference in the tithing department.

Our President, Mrs. T. B. Holloman, wrote us some weeks ago that a W. H. M. Society had been organized at Scranton in June by the Ladies Aid Society. The members gave as their reason for the change that they wished to get into the current of church life.

Miss Dragoo, our deaconess at Biloxi, has doubtless by this time turned the Wesley Home over to her successor, Miss Jeter, and left for her new field of labor in Texas. We all wish her success and godspeed in her new work.

Mrs. S. B. Flynt, the secretary of the Meridian District, writes us that each of the auxiliaries in her district is holding its own, though not doing much aggressive work. The deaconess for Meridian will not come to them before Sept. 1. Mrs. Flynt informed us in her letter that Mrs. Whitaker, president of the C. M. Board, has returned from a visit to Little Rock, Ark., and is, if possible, more enthusiastic than ever.

The secretary of the Newton District, Mrs. J. B. Hobbs, sends us the splendid report of eight new auxiliaries having been organized since last summer. At the June meeting of Main Street Church, Laurel, there were about fifty present, including twelve or fifteen visitors. The ladies of this society are engaged in making dresses and aprons for the little girls at the orphanage.

I wish to call the attention of the Home Mission workers to a book written by Mrs. Cora Gannaway Williams, entitled "The Morning Glory," showing the work of the Deaconess in the life of Miss Mae McKenzie, who served at Crossett, Ark. Bishop Hendrix says in the introduction: "I have read with delight 'The Morning Glory,' and recognize under its slightly changed name the life-story of Miss Mae McKenzie, the deaconess of the lumber camp of Crossett, Ark., of whose beautiful life I had known. I commend the charming and inspiring story which must make all our pulse-beats quicken with a desire to wisely invest our lives."

It is truly a Home Mission book and will do more to influence young women to take up the work than anything else on the subject. It is Mrs. Williams' desire to make a deaconess scholarship from the sales of the book, so we do not hesitate to ask our Home Mission readers to get it before the people. The price is 75 cents net, postage 6 cents, and may be bought of Smith & Lamar, Nashville, Tenn.

It is indeed encouraging to note favorable comments on the new plan of missionary operation that come from both men and women throughout the church. These new plans for our missionary work have the advantage of presenting a solid missionary force to the world. They also eliminate the dividing lines of home and foreign missions and furnish opportunity of concerted action between the men and women of the church in the mission fields. The June and July issues of Our Homes, as well as Mrs. MacDonell's circular letter, give us a clear idea of our relation to the new Board of Missions. We should assure ourselves that no hurt has come to us, only an enlargement and a wider field of service with a stronger backing than we have ever had before. Our work has now become an integral part of the work of the church, which it has not been in the past.

Mrs. Luke Johnson, our general superintendent of literature, urges in her circular letter that we begin at once to arouse interest in the membership campaign, and also to plan for our week of prayer. The literature for these two objects can be ordered from the office at Nashville any time after Aug. 20. "900,000 women and girls in our church, and only about $0,000 in the Home Mission Society!" The success of this work depends upon the zeal and enthusiasm of each auxiliary and of each member in the auxiliary. Let us all pull together and make this year the greatest in our history.

MRS. M. W. SWARTZ,
Conference Press Superintendent,
Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT LEAGUE CONFERENCE.

The Epworth League Conference of the Shreveport District was held at Grand Cane, La., on Sunday and Monday, June 12 and 13. It was a very enthusiastic crowd of young people, and from the opening song, "Onward Christian Soldier," to the closing, "Blest Be the Tie that Binds," not a dull moment was spent. A number of Leagues were represented, but there were also a number that were not. Taken altogether, it was a fair representation, as we only organized about a year ago. Prof. J. S. Johnston, the Dean of Centenary College, was present and was very helpful. Nearly all phases of League work were ably discussed, quite a number of the Leaguers taking part in the discussions of the papers read and addresses made.

We were royally entertained by the people of Grand Cane, where they have one of the best Leagues in the district.

League work in the Shreveport District is moving upward, and we are planning and praying for a great awakening among our young people.

The next League Conference goes to Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, where they have the very best band of Leaguers in Louisiana.

It is the hope of some of the leading Leaguers in the district to have a meeting place for the League, where institute work may be done for the League and Sunday School, and at the same time give a pleasant outing for the young people. Our church already owns 160 acres of land near the model road being built from Shreveport to Mansfield that was formerly used as a camp ground. It is an ideal place, and with abundant spring water and, with fairly good fishing could be made just what is needed.

We would be very glad to hear from Sunday school workers and others throughout north Louisiana. There is nothing of the kind in this part of the State; we feel the need of it. We hope to have something definite to offer at the next League Conference. Let us hear from you. Miss Evelyn R. Price, of Lake Charles, and Miss Lillie Wells were present on invitation at the Conference for the purpose of organizing a State Conference, which was done with Rev. Hugh W. Jamieson, of Shreveport, president; Mrs. S. J. Lingle, Shreveport, secretary; and Miss Evelyn R. Price, Lake Charles, treasurer. They are planning for a Conference of all the Leagues in the State early next year.

The district officers are as follows: W. F. Henderson, Keithville, president; T. S. Neal, Bossier City, first vice-president; Chas. O. Beauchamp, Shreveport, second vice-president; Miss M. Bryson, Greenwood, third vice-president; Mrs. Johnson, Mansfield, fourth vice-president; Mrs. W. S. Phillips, Grand Cane, secretary; J. S. Cox, Shreveport, treasurer; H. W. Bogley, Shreveport, Era Agent; W. F. Henderson, Keithville, district reporter.

Much of the success of the Conference was due to the former secretary, Mrs. S. J. Lingle, of Shreveport.

"We're pressing on the upward way,
New heights we're gaining every day;
Still praying as we onward bound,
Lord, plant our feet on higher ground."

Yours "all for Christ,"

W. F. HENDERSON.

Keithville, La.

FOR SALE.

The Bleker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location. Includes furniture. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

You Need the Leaders' Hand-Book.

The Most Complete Manual of the Laymen's Movement That Has Yet Appeared.

A hundred-page book full of practical plans and valuable suggestions for speakers, leaders, and committees, together with an appendix giving an account of the Dallas Conference, a copy of the National Policy adopted at Chicago, and a digest of the action of the late General Conference on the Laymen's Movement.

Price, 25 cents per copy, silver or stamps. Order on this coupon from

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT,
M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH.

810 Broadway,

Nashville, Tenn.

Name

Address

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that
— Lasts a LIFETIME —

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd
Manufacturer of Lumber
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Home Circle

LOVING SERVICE.

Protestations of willingness to "die" for a loved person or cause are common enough. A young man has been heard to say: "My mother! She is the best and dearest woman in the whole world. Let anyone dare speak a word against her. My mother, I would die for her!"

Would he? But the dear old woman does not want her boy to die for her. She only asks him to come home earlier at night to go with her to church, and sit by her side—to show her some slight attention. Such simple acts display love for a mother much more sincerely than any amount of cheap heroics.

And, too, the Lord Jesus does not ask his disciples, except in rare instances, to die for him. He asks them to live for Him day by day in patient, uncomplaining, self-denying service for others: service which if done to the lowliest "in His name," He will accept as done to himself. Only service must be the expression of love.

Doing good is not the whole of duty, nor is it the most difficult. What we are tells upon others far more effectually than what we say, or what we do.

Love which does not lead to service is always sentimental, artificial. Feeling must be translated into action. But service which does not spring from love is likely to be perfunctory, mechanical, lifeless.

The blessed Jesus wants our love. He stoops to ask it: to each He puts the question:—"Lovest Thou Me?" What is our response?—Holy Cross Magazine.

THE GLOW-WORM'S LESSON.

By "Fernview."

Beatrice was spending her holiday with her grandmother, who lived in the country. She had a delightful old garden, that the little girl loved to linger in. At the foot of the tall elm there glided a brook, calm and clear as the sunshine that glittered on its waters. The clouds mirrored themselves on its surface, and the swallows from the old barn dipped their joyous wings in its tiny waves. To this quiet spot Beatrice now came. The drowsy murmur of some late-working bee, and the scent from the spicy plum tree near, seemed to challenge her attention, and over all was the golden glow of the setting sun.

She leaned back against the lofty elm and gradually became unconscious of the sights and sounds about her. Presently a tiny voice close to her startled her. "Of what use is my light, or who sees it down here in the grasses?" it said in a discontented tone. Beatrice carefully turned her head to see who was speaking. There, curled up near, lay a little glow-worm. "If I could shine up there in the sky now, like that beautiful moon or the stars, or even if I could fly about in the air as the fireflies do, I might brighten the world a little, but what good can I do here?"

"Why," thought the little girl, "I know just how the poor thing feels. I've often felt that way myself."

"I will curl myself up here and sleep, and nobody will miss me," went on the sad little voice. Ah, children, the little glow-worm was very wretched just then. Then, to the watching girl, it seemed as if the worm slept for hours and hours. Then she heard a confusion of sounds. Listening attentively for some time, she at length became able to distinguish some of the words:

"I wonder where he is?" said one.

"This is the garden he has always lived in," said another. "I wish he would come," and so on.

Whom were they speaking about? Who was missed so much?

At length she heard the sleepy voice close to her say: "Helgho! I am tired of this. I believe I will light my lamp and go out once more for a stroll." Then, after a little stretching and yawning, the worm started off.

"Oh, here you are at last," cried the cricket. "Wherever have you been? I can't enjoy my practicing half as much as usual, when your light is not showing."

"Glad to see you," called the daisies and grasses. "The fireflies flit over our heads, but none but yourself thinks of lighting our feet. Where have you been so long?"

The glow-worm flushed at this praise, and was beginning to falter a reply, when he was saved the necessity of an explanation by the lilies who called out cheerily "Oh, we are so glad that you have come," and they rang a merry chime to welcome him. "We are so glad you are here."

"Why, you have the moonlight and the starlight and the fireflies to give you light: you surely do not miss my humble glow," said our friend, who in spite of his former depression was beginning to feel that the world was not a bad place, after all, and that he had many friends, where he had thought no one cared for him.

"Yes, we know that the stars and the fireflies are overhead, but we cannot see them, for we cannot lift our heads, our necks are so slender. So you see, we always watch for your cheery light down in the grass." And all the lily bells pealed another chime, gay enough for a fairy wedding.

"Well, well!" thought the glow-worm. "I will let my light shine after this. I will teach the world to trust, to hope, to work on, to thrust self aside, and my name may be handed down as one who has at least done his duty."

Just then Beatrice awoke with a start, for grandmother was calling her. "Yes, I'm coming," she said. "What a nice dream I've had!"—Christian Guardian.

"THE SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD."

A correspondent writes to know "what are the Seven Wonders of the world." This is a very difficult question. We have not the confidence to attempt an answer. True, it was answered by the ancient Greeks to their own satisfaction apparently; but that answer was made long ago, shortly after the time of Alexander the Great, when the world had become fairly well known to them by reason of his conquests. What were regarded as the Seven Wonders of the ancient world were described by Philo of Byzantine, and his book was edited and republished by Orelli in 1816. These Wonders, as most schoolboys and girls have learned, were the Pyramids of Egypt, the Hanging (i. e. terrace) Gardens of Semiramis at Babylon, the Temple of Diana at Ephesus, the Statue of Jupiter at Athens by Phidias, the Mausoleum at Halicarnassus, the Colossus at Rhodes, and the Pharos, or light-house, at Alexandria.

But if those old Greeks were to come upon earth in this day, and become better acquainted with the larger world than they were with the smaller one of their age, as they easily might in a brief time, it is altogether likely that they would revise their list of Wonders. They would certainly be greatly surprised with many things in the world of to-day which had not even been dreamed of in their day. Some things would seem very wonderful to them which have become so familiar to us that we take them as a matter of course. It would be hazardous to make a guess even as to what the ancient Greeks would choose out of all the wonders of the modern world in making up a new list of world-wonders. They would probably be disposed at first to substitute some new wonder for each of the seven old ones. Upon maturer reflection they might be inclined to allow some one or more of the ancient wonders to remain among the seven of the revised list. It is quite certain that no modern Philo could select seven inventions or achievements of men to-day, and describe them in a book as the Seven acknowledged Wonders of the world. No committee of wise men could make a selection which would command general assent, and this editor would not aspire to a place on such a committee, much less would he presume to point out the Seven Wonders.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

THE BOARD OF TRADE'S COMMENDATIONS OF WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

For over fifty years Brookhaven has enjoyed the uplifting influence of Whitworth College. It is very patent, however, that the College has never made such rapid advancement as within the last few years under the presidency of Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D. He has gathered around him a corps of teachers who, in their respective departments, are all graduates of leading institutions and have proven their worth as teachers.

We consider the location ideal. While convenient to the depots, churches and stores, yet they are so secluded as to be a little independent community to themselves. The various buildings set in a grove of oaks and elms are connected with granolithic walks and are equipped with all modern conveniences. The steam heat and hot and cold water systems are of recent installation. And Dr. Cooper is a believer in fresh paint, paper and kalsomine.

The health conditions of Whitworth are perfect; and when it is recalled that Brookhaven is the highest point on the Illinois Central R. R., between New Orleans and Cairo, Ill., it can be readily understood why its past health record is so good, and why Whitworth's record is not surpassed by that of any other school in any Southern State.

Without going into details, let us just say that the curriculum compares favorably with the best schools in Mississippi, male or female.

Any other information regarding Whitworth, Brookhaven or Lincoln County will be gladly furnished on enquiry to the Brookhaven Board of Trade.

Very truly yours,

W. H. SEAVEY, Pres.

J. W. McGRATH, Vice-Pres.

HENRY GREENWOOD, Vice-Prest.

J. B. NALTY,

W. M. TURNBOUGH,

W. E. PRICE,

F. F. BECKER,

L. COHN,

S. E. MORETON,

O. H. HARTMAN,

T. H. PERKINS,

W. D. DAVIS,

G. LEWENTHAL,

A. C. McNAIR.

F. O. CONANT, Secretary Board of Directors Brookhaven Board of Trade.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER,

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

COLIC,

CRAMPS and DIARRHOEA are both painful and dangerous.

Prompt and permanent relief follows one or two doses of Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic. You should never be without it.

At all Druggists
25 and 50 Cents

Dr. Tichenor's
Antiseptic

With the passing of the year 1930, and the return of normal conditions, let us rally our forces and, by wise management and an aggressive evangelism, make the remaining months of nineteen hundred and ten rich in achievements for our ascended and reigning Lord.

PERSONAL.

Dr. John W. Boswell began a series of revival services at Sardis, Miss., last Sunday. He is being assisted by Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of West-Point.

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., have been spending some days in Chicago. They were expected home Wednesday of this week.

Bishop and Mrs. W. B. Murrah have been sojourning on the great lakes of the Northwest. They were guests of the Chicago Beach Hotel a few days since.

After a month's vacation spent with relatives in Mississippi, Rev. H. T. Carley, of the Carrollton Avenue Church, has returned to the city. His family came back with him.

In a business letter to the publisher of the Advocate, Rev. F. M. Freeman, of Bunkie, La., adds: "My work is in good condition. We are advancing along all lines, and the outlook is bright."

At the Zachary (Louisiana) parsonage on Aug. 22d, a son was born to the Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Kleinschmidt. At the time this information reached us both the mother and babe were doing nicely. The Advocate rejoices in the good fortune of these friends.

Miss Maggie Tate, who for some years has been a teacher in Blue Mountain Female College and who has been spending most of the summer at New Albany, has recently been visiting in Corinth. We heartily thank her for words commendatory of the Advocate.

Kilmichael has just had an interesting meeting in which Brother Wilson was assisted by Rev. W. L. Graves, of Itta Bena. There were twenty accessions to the church, fourteen of them on profession of faith. A more extended account from the pen of the pastor will appear next week.

Mr. J. M. High, of Greenville, Miss., has just returned from Birdie, Quitman County, Miss., where he led the singing in a meeting conducted by Rev. T. M. Bradley. He reports that Brother Bradley did some earnest and effective preaching, and that the people evinced much interest in the services.

The next session of Whitworth College will begin September 8th. We are pleased to know that the outlook promises the largest attendance in the history of the institution. The opening sermon will be preached by the Rev. C. W. Crisler, of the Capitol Street Church of Jackson.

On Aug. 1, 1910, at the residence of the bride's parents (Caddo Parish, La.), Rev. Robert J. Harp united in marriage Mr. Lorne Denver Nickerson, of Lafayette, La., and Miss Nellie Alice, daughter of Judge and Mrs. William A. Ellett. The young couple will reside in Lafayette. The Advocate extends congratulations and best wishes.

A correspondent suggests Dr. S. A. Steel as a suitable successor to Rev. J. R. Stewart as agent for the Superannuate Endowment Fund. We think this is a capital nomination. With such a theme, Dr. Steel would electrify the Church. But whether he would accept the place, if it were tendered him, we do not know.

Rev. J. A. Burrow, formerly editor of the Midland Methodist, but now the popular pastor of the Methodist Church at Abingdon, Va., recently had the misfortune, while fishing, to fall and fracture his arm and dislocate his shoulder. His injuries are reported to be painful, but not at all dangerous. We wish him a speedy recovery.

Rev. L. R. Roberts who is now serving the American Circuit (Mississippi Conference) is meeting with gratifying success in his labors. He has had good meetings, and is faithfully conserving all the interests of the Church. A letter received at the Advocate office highly commends him both as a man and Christian worker.

The Nashville Advocate of Aug. 26th contained the following item of news which will be of interest to many of our readers: "Dr. C. W. Carter, a widely known superannuate of the Louisiana Conference, has recently been visiting his son, Prof. Thomas Carter, on the Vanderbilt Campus, and on Aug. 14 preached a very able and interesting sermon at McKendree Church."

Mrs. M. N. James, the efficient secretary of the Woman's Home Mission Society of the Alexandria District, in renewing her subscription speaks in terms of appreciation of the Advocate. We thank her for her interest and good wishes. We are in hearty sympathy with the great work being done by the womanhood of the Church, and it is a genuine pleasure to render them any assistance in our power.

It was the editor's pleasure to conduct services at the Prytanla Street Presbyterian Church last Sunday at 11 a. m. This is perhaps the leading church of that denomination in the city, and a fine congregation, indeed, it is. The building is a large stone structure, spacious and beautiful, with all of the modern conveniences. The pastor, Dr. W. McE. Alexander, is resting and recuperating in the Northeast.

The Inter-State Newsboy, of Logansport, La., of the 19th ult., says: "Last Sunday at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m., Rev. Elton Wilson, the pastor, occupied the pulpit at the Methodist Church, and both of the sermons delivered by this able minister were listened to with deep interest by good-sized congregations. He is working untiringly for the rebuilding of the church here, and his efforts are giving evidences of fruit."

The Nashville Tennessean of August 22 contained an interesting account of a sermon preached in the First Presbyterian Church of that city the evening preceding by Dr. Thomas Carter, of Vanderbilt University, who is a member of the Louisiana Conference. His subject was "Christ's Challenge to Our Faith," and the text used was Luke xxiv. 39, "Handle me and see." The discourse is reported to have produced a profound impression.

It was our pleasure to receive a card from the Rev. T. B. Clifford, of Yazoo City, written from Chicago, on Aug. 25th. He was visiting his cousin, Dr. George H. Simmons, of that city, who is editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association and its General Secretary. He was having a great time sight-seeing in a magnificent automobile, and thoroughly enjoying the many courtesies shown him.

The last number of the Advocate contained an announcement of the marriage of Rev. J. Lloyd Decell, of Osyka, Miss., and Miss Bertha Whitley, of San Antonio, Texas, sent us by Rev. Franklin Moore, the officiating minister. Brother Hardin, of Wesson, writes that the happy couple reached the home of the groom's grandparents in that town on the 19th ult., where they were given a cordial reception by their host of friends.

Rev. A. W. Turner, of Mansfield, La., informs us that the Protestant Churches of that city will begin a union revival on October 1, which is expected to continue fifteen days. The preaching will be done by Dr. S. A. Steel. Preparatory to the meeting, union prayer services will be held weekly until it begins. It is needless to say our Mansfield friends will hear the essential truths of the Gospel presented with stirring eloquence and power.

A telegram from Ponchatoula to the city papers on the 19th ult. says: "News has just reached here that the Rev. J. H. Montgomery, of Hammond, and Miss Jennie Cosbey, of Ponchatoula, were married recently in New Orleans, and are spending a few days at the Seashore Camp Ground, and that they expect to return to Ponchatoula before breaking the news to relatives and friends. The groom is a popular minister of the Methodist Church, South."

Writing from Arcadia, La., under date of Aug. 25, Rev. R. O. Weir says: "We will hold service in our new church for the first time to-morrow night, when we will begin a meeting. Rev. W. G. Harbin will assist me. We are expecting a revival; pray for us. Our new church is a beauty. It is not quite complete, owing to the delay in getting the windows. When finished, including the furnishing, it will be valued at $5,000. We have a new organ that cost $350. The pews and pulpit furniture were saved from the fire."

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Washington Street Church, Vicksburg, writes: "I have been in some good meetings this summer, notably at Hermanville and Pleasant Valley. The latter is the home church of that greatest of Mississippi preachers, Dr. J. J. Wheat, and also of Major Millsaps and Rev. Wm. G. Millsaps. I spent a night with Brother William Mullens, who is ninety-one years old. He told me of a meeting conducted at this church which lasted thirty days, in which these men were converted, and out of which came nine preachers."

Rev. and Mrs. James M. Lewis, of Vancleave, were honored by the arrival of a fine boy in their home on July 18th. We extend heartiest felicitations. Brother Lewis is pleased with the progress of the work under his supervision, and thinks his present charge bids fair to become one of the best circuits in the Mississippi Conference. He has several local preachers among his membership whom he highly appreciates. He states that the New Prospect Camp Meeting will begin October 20th, and continue six days. The preachers of the coast section are cordially invited to attend.

From a dispatch to the Times-Democrat, dated at Harrison, Miss., Aug. 29th, we appropriate the following: "The Rev. J. L. Neill, pastor of Harrison Circuit, assisted by the Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, a former pastor here, began a meeting at Cane Ridge yesterday. Mr. Sharbrough preached in the morning. After dinner, served on the ground, Miss Janie Watkins, a native of the vicinity and a missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in China, at home on a furlough, gave an interesting talk on her five years' experience as a missionary among the heathen."

Under date of the 22d ult. Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, of Zachary, La., wrote as follows: "Miss Della C. Brown, daughter of the Rev. J. M. Brown, of the Louisiana Conference, died at the parsonage in Clinton on Thursday, Aug. 18th, and the remains were interred in the Clinton cemetery the day following." This sad news reached us too late for insertion in our issue of last week. We deeply sympathize with this stricken household, and pray that God may lay his healing hand upon every bleeding heart. In such an hour how unspeakably precious are the promises of the Gospel of Christ!

The Victoria Daily Times (British Columbia) makes the following comment upon the sermon preached in the Metropolitan Methodist Church of that city by Dr. H. M. DuBose, our fraternal messenger on Aug. 21: "In the evening the Rev. H. M. DuBose, D.D., representative of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, preached from the text Eph. i. 4. His subject was 'The Spiritual Man' and his sermon was a magnificent example of pulpit oratory. From first to last there was no hesitancy of speech, but the language flowed on in a steady stream. His illustrations were apt and told in a remarkable way upon the congregation. Dr. DuBose was never at a loss for a word and his thought was clothed in language which showed his complete command of the English tongue."

Rev. N. E. Joyner, after an absence of nearly four months abroad, returned to New Orleans on Aug. 25th. He attended the World-Missionary Conference in Edinburgh, and after its adjournment visited and studied the famous missions conducted by the Wesleyans of England. Thence he went to Germany, where his chief interest was in the matter of immigration; he witnessed the "Passion Play" at Oberammergau; journeyed to Italy, where he visited Rome, Venice, and Naples, and touched at Algiers in Africa, and at the Azores Islands when homeward bound. Mr. Joyner is one of the best-posted men on missionary work in the Church, and doubtless his observations abroad will be of much value to him in conducting the affairs of the important mission under his supervision in this city.

ST. MARK'S HALL.

(Reported for the Advocate.)

Miss Roberta Baker, superintendent of the department of Domestic Science of the Wesley House in Louisville, has been transferred to St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans, where she will have supervision of a similar work. Miss Baker has arrived at St. Mark's Hall and seems to be well pleased with the outlook in her new field. She takes the place left vacant by the resignation of Miss Alberta Kelthly, which was due to the failure of health.

Miss Daisy Duncan, the nurse-deaconess of St. Mark's Hall, has resigned her position as District Nurse and will ask the Board of Missions for a year's rest on account of failing health. Miss Duncan has wrought a good work by her friendly visiting among the poor, and by her fine work in the dispensary for women and children. Let prayer be made for the restoration of the health of this trained worker in the Master's vineyard. Miss Duncan enjoys the distinction of being the first nurse-deaconess that was graduated by our Training School at Nashville.

Miss Margaret Ragland, head resident deaconess of St. Mark's Hall, after a strenuous service during the long, hot summer, is taking a much needed rest during the month of September. She will enjoy the bracing mountain air in the "Tar Heel State."

Miss Mary Frankland, one of the deaconesses of Rayne Memorial church, has been assisting Dr. W. W. Butterworth, Professor of Pediatrics, Tulane University, in collecting and compiling statistics and other valuable information concerning infant diseases. The result of her labors will be published later, and it will be a unique and valuable contribution to medical science. There is much talk recently about paralysis in infants. Many of the leading specialists are giving themselves to the study of it.

Miss Virginia Ragland, teacher of music in the Wolff Mission School, Tampa, Fla., has been spending her vacation at St. Mark's visiting her sister, Miss M. Ragland, and supplying the place of Miss Duncan.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, the versatile superintendant of St. Mark's Hall, has returned from an extensive tour of the European cities, where he inspected the great mission halls of London, Manchester, and other cities. He was also a delegate to the World's Missionary Conference at Edinburgh. He saw the world-famous Passion Play at Oberammergau. He obtained much valuable information, which he will adapt to his growing work in New Orleans.

Montenegro is about to become a full fledged independent kingdom, to be known as "Zeta." It will be a petite monarchy, being only 100 miles long and eighty wide, with a population of 250,000. Prince Nicholas, who will assume the title of king, is in the sixty-ninth year of his age, and his consort is sixty-three. Queen Helen of Italy is their eldest daughter. It is said that after his coronation Nicholas will visit the various European capitals.

DON'T SEND ME A CENT

when you answer this announcement, as I am going to distribute at least one hundred thousand pairs of the Dr. Haux famous "Perfect Vision" Spectacles to genuine, bona-fide spectacle-wearers, in the next few weeks—on one easy, simple condition. I want you to thoroughly try them on your own eyes, no matter how weak they may be, read the finest print in your bible with them on, thread the smallest eyed-needle you can get hold of and put them to any test you like in your own home as long as you please.

Then after you have become absolutely and positively convinced that they are really and truly the softest, clearest and best-fitting glasses you have ever had on your eyes and if they honestly make you see just as well as you ever did in your younger days you can keep the pair forever without a cent of pay and by showing them around to your neighbors and friends and speak a good word for them everywhere, at every opportunity.

JUST DO ME A GOOD TURN

Won't you help me introduce the wonderful Dr. Haux "Perfect Vision" Spectacles in your locality on this easy, simple condition?

If you are a genuine, bona-fide spectacle-wearer (no children need apply) and want to do me this favor, write me at once and just say: "Dear Doctor:—Mail me your Perfect Home Eye Tester, absolutely free of charge, also full particulars of your handsome 10-karat gold Spectacle Offer," and address me personally and I will give your letter my own personal attention. Address:—Dr. Haux, (Personal), Haux Building, St. Louis, Mo.

NOTE:—The above is the largest Mail Order Spectacle House in the world and is perfectly reliable.

VISIT
MINERAL WELLS
FOR HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND
WEST TEXAS
For
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS.
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE
DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,
General Passenger Agent,
DALLAS - - - - - TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a.m., as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville
THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS,
WEDNESDAYS and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati
Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p.m.

FOR
NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI,
ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW
ON SALE.

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

Died in Memphis, Tenn., July 15, 1910; buried at Mayhew, Miss., July 16; JOHN UPHATUS TATE was born in North Carolina in 1872; came to Mississippi at eighteen years of age; lived almost continuously in Lowndes County; joined the Presbyterian Church while a youth, but after locating at Mayhew, Miss., he became to be a member of the Methodist Church. Brother Tate was married sixteen years ago to Mary E. Brown, then of Columbus, Miss., and now of Mayhew. There are five children, all living. This is presented as the merest reference of the life and death of an upright gentleman and Christian citizen who "served his generation by the will of God" and has fallen on sleep.

A. H. WILLIAMS.

Miss SUSIE H. REED, daughter of Thos. and Mary Forman Reed, was born in Jefferson County, Miss., Dec. 11, 1858, and passed into the better world, July 28, 1910. At the age of fourteen years she became a member of the M. E. Church, South, at Natchez, Miss. She continued to the end of her earthly life a member of the church she originally joined. Her father was a prominent lawyer in the section of country embraced in Jefferson, Adams and adjacent counties, and he was also prominent in the church. Miss Susie was a devoted member of the church. For thirty years she was an earnest, successful Sunday school teacher, rarely ever missing a Sunday. She was lady manager of the Trueheart Torch-bearers for the last fifteen years. How she loved the work! She was in her element with the little boys and girls, teaching them to do missionary work. Who will take her place? She has been the faithful agent of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. She loved the Advocate. While Miss Susie loved all the churches, and saw good in them all, she loved devotedly her own Jefferson Street Methodist Church, where for so long and happily she wrought and worshiped. She was untiring in her efforts to sow good seed in the waste places. Her delight was to visit and help the poor and carry light and comfort to darkened lives and homes. Her face will be seen no more by those she loved and helped. She will be seen no more in the home and in her place in the church, but we know where to find her. She rests with her Lord. God comfort the bereaved ones.

R. D. NORSWORTHY.

At 1 o'clock in the afternoon of July 21, 1910, the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. A. Huff and took little JOHN BROWN home to dwell with Jesus and the heavenly host. He was a very bright and promising little boy and was loved by everyone. His age was 3 years, 6 months. He left a father and mother, three little sisters, and one little brother to mourn their loss. We cannot call him back to us, but we can go where he is. What a blessed thought that we shall meet him in heaven where there is no pain or sorrow and we shall part no more! Heaven should continue to become more attractive to us. We should be more determined to go there, where we shall have a great family reunion. Sorrowing ones, be of good cheer; it will not be long before the Master will open the crystal gate for your weary feet to enter in. It may be nearer than you think; only bear patiently your crosses and in time you shall wear the crown prepared for the faithful.

H. M. YOUNG, P. C.

On July 23, 1910, God called home to himself the spirit of a faithful laborer in his vineyard, that of Rev.

M. L. TUCKER, whose funeral service we conducted at Pisgah the following day. One of the greatest assemblies of people I ever witnessed on a like occasion in the country met us there that afternoon to pay their last tribute of respect to him who was held in such high esteem by all. Brother Tucker was born in Nashville, Tenn., coming with his parents within the bounds of the North Mississippi Conference when but a child. He became a member of the M. E. Church, South, when about thirteen years of age; at the time of his death he was eighty-three years of age. He had been a local preacher the last thirty years of his life. On account of age and the state of his health, he had been able to preach but little for several years preceding his death. Yet, at heart, he was loyal to his Church and its people. He told me just before his last illness he hoped to attend our services some, but we never had the pleasure of seeing him out any more. His was the highest type of Christian citizenship—a pure, consecrated, holy life, such as made the world better by his having lived in it. A host of relatives and friends are bowed down in grief, but to him death was only a transition to the heavenly home, where his immortal spirit shall dwell forever in the realm of God's eternal love. ELIJAH H. CUNNINGHAM.

Just as the month of July, 1910, was slipping away into history, the spirit of another sweet and beautiful mother was being ushered into the presence of her King, at a time those who loved her felt that she was so very necessary to her devoted husband, daughter and two sons, but her King had better things for her in the beautiful beyond. The subject of this sketch, SISTER MARY E. ABER THOMPSON, was born of good, pious parents, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Aber, at Summerville, La., on Dec. 18, 1863, and at seven years of age joined the Methodist Church. She early manifested right conceptions of duty and willingness to do her best to make the world better, and no one doubted that she was converted. This religious characteristic marked her beautiful life. Soon after entering her teens she became a teacher, in which vocation she delighted in brightening the lives of others. She was married on the 12th of April, 1888, to Mr. Erastus R. Thompson, of Harrisonburg, La., which proved a delightful union of hearts to the very last. She united with the Methodist Church there, throwing into all its departments her wise, untiring and zealous efforts in making its work effective. Here was given them a little daughter, who only remained long enough to draw out intently their hearts' best; as the Lord, in her infancy, took her home. Harrisonburg, La., was her home until two years ago, when she removed with her dear family to reside permanently in Biloxi, Miss.; but, for eight years prior to coming to Biloxi, she had suffered greatly from an inward malady, which finally made necessary two severe surgical operations. During all this time, with unflinching attention to the wants of her household and neighbors, she persistently sought to carry out her early conceived idea of Christianity, which was devotion to others, and evinced patient submission to the will of God, while using every means for her recovery. As soon as she came to reside in Biloxi, she, with her entire household, united with the Main Street Methodist Church, where she became a member of the Bible Class, the Ladies' Aid and other organizations, which she attended while her strength permitted. In July of this year, thinking that the mountain air would benefit her, she with her family went to Winchester, Va., but instead of getting better, she rapidly began to sink and on July 25th there was a surcease of all pain and she went to join the little angel who had gone years before and who was waiting to receive her. The end was calm and peaceful. With all of her faculties keen and alert, knowing that the death angel was hovering over her, she turned to her loved husband and said, "I am at peace with everybody; I am not afraid to die," and then, as the death dew gathered on her brow, with one more effort she said, "See the ship," and the broken-hearted ones who stood about her bed knew that it was "the old ship of Zion" which was to bear her across the river of death, and then she sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. Her remains were brought to Biloxi and the sad funeral service held in the church she loved and her body was interred in the Biloxi Cemetery. The writer, who has known her from early childhood, looks back with pleasure at the true and beautiful and devoted Christian life. The society into which she entered was made purer and more elevated by her presence, for she has maintained a life of Christian integrity from the time when she so early united with the Methodist Church. She is also survived by her mother, four sisters and a brother. May the dear ones who loved her so be able to look up through their tears and say: "The Lord gave, the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord!"

Let us who are sad take heart again: We are not alone in our hours of pain.

Our Father stoops from his throne above

To soothe and quiet us with his love. He leaves us not when the storm is high

And we have safety, for he is nigh. Can it be trouble which he doth share?

Oh, rest in peace, for the Lord does care.

Her old friend and counsellor,
DAVID B. MITCHELL

Whitworth College.

Twenty carefully selected teachers and officers. More than two hundred students last session. A most excellent literary course leading to the degrees of L.B. and A.B. Departments of Music, (including piano, violin and voice culture) expression, art, commerce.

Next Session begins Sept. 8, 1910.

For Catalogue address,

WHITWORTH COLLEGE,
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

"THE SCHOOL THAT CARES."
Not Crowded
Takes only 200
RUSKIN CAVE COLLEGE
Controls entire Village
No football or tobacco
SAFEST PLACE IN SOUTH.
Free Cats.
Ask Pres. R. E. SMITH, Ruskin, Tenn.

Belmont College
For Young Women Nashville, Tenn.
IRA LADDY, D.D., LL.D., President
MISS MOOD and MISS HILSON, Principals
College and Preparatory Courses.
Music, Art, Expression, Modern Languages, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Matchless location. Athletics, Horseback Riding. Register now. For catalogue, address BELMONT COLLEGE, Box 7.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSEHOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

You are buying for your church

DO Right

About that Organ.

If you have the money; if you're raising it, or only planning—write for helpful suggestions.

ESTEY, Brattleboro, Vt.

A REAL BLESSING

What a blessing is perfect health! What enjoyment there is in feeling well! Life is all pleasure, and work is but play. But if one is continually ailing, life seems scarcely worth living.

Thousands of women suffer, continually or periodically, from the ills or weakness peculiar to their sex. Pain kills pleasure, hinders the performance of their daily duties and makes them most wretched.

Countless women, suffering such ills, have found relief or cure in that old, reliable medicine, especially prepared for women,—Wine of Cardui. Thousands of these grateful ladies write to tell what Cardui has done for them.

We recently had this letter from Mrs. Annie Vaughan, of Raleigh, N. C.: "I cannot find words to express my deep gratitude for what your wonderful medicine, Cardui, did for me, for I sincerely believe it saved my life. I was sick and worn out, almost unto death. My sister finally persuaded me to take Cardui. Before I had taken 5 bottles I was well and strong."

Cardui is a pure, vegetable remedy, which acts gently and naturally on the womanly system. If you are nervous, weak or sick, try Cardui. Get it at once. It will help you.

At all drugists in $1.00 bottles.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00

St. Louis, $26.00

Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares

To ALL Principal Points in the United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD,
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 3618.

BLMYER
CHURCH
BELLS.

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWEETER, MORE DUR-ABLE, LOWER PRICE.
OUR FREE CATALOGUE
TELLS WHY.

ESTABLISHED 1858
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

Bowlden
CHURCH & SCHOOL
Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, MORTONVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

Marriages

Aug. 15, 1910, at the Court House, Meridian, Miss., by Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, Mr. GEORGE LESTER to Miss WINNIE HAYES.

Aug. 15, 1910, at the residence of Brother S. E. Guess, Meridian, Miss., by Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, Brother H. H. HUDSON, of Natchez, to Miss MAT-TYE ELOM, of Meridian.

Aug. 23, 1910, at the Methodist parsonage, Meridian, Miss., by Rev. Isaac L. Peebles, Mr. R. L. CHADICK, of Whistler, Ala., to Miss MARY A. COLLIER, of Meridian, Miss.

Aug. 11, 1910, at the Methodist Church, in Artesia, Miss., by Rev. A. H. Williams, Mr. CAS. T. WRIGHT to Miss OLLIE B. LOCK.

FROM REV. R. E. DUKE

Editor Christian Advocate: It may be that some of the Mississippi brethren would like to know our whereabouts and what we are doing. I can only say we are filling the difficult role of a superannuate, having surrendered my work and gone on the sick list just after Conference two years ago. The little help received from the superannuate fund has not yet come to hand; while we possibly have been more provident than some, and while we have been steady at work all the time, the little pittance we had saved is about gone; yet I am glad to say that my health is much improved and it looks as though I should be able from this on to engage regularly in some remunerative service, though because of the condition of my lungs I can only do light active out-of-door work; so this makes it hard to find a job, especially one that does not involve Sabbath work. But we are now at home in West End, San Antonio, in a good large house, only a short distance from San Antonio Female College and in full view of the beautiful West End lake. Now, wife and I had a plan like this in our minds: We have room for four girls in our home and are located in one of the most healthful, invigorating climates in the United States. Now, there may be four girls in Mississippi or Louisiana who would be glad to attend a good Methodist College with the care and protection of a Methodist preacher's home, and at the same time enjoy the health-giving climate of sunny, semi-tropical San Antonio. We have bathrooms, artesian water, and are one block and a half from car. We are in easy reach of church and school. If there are those to whom this appeals, let us hear from them. We will send college catalogue. Yours in Christ.

923 E. Va. Ave., San Antonio, Texas.

FROM THE COLPORTER.

The Publishing Agents now say that they expect to have the new Discipline ready by Dec. 1. Those who have given their orders and others concerned will take due notice and exercise patience.

I am prepared to furnish the newly revised Ritual, Morocco, net, 60 cents, cloth 15 cents; postpaid.

The Pastor-Preacher, by Bishop Quayle, and Twice-Born Men, by Harold Begbie, are the two most popular books of the day with the preachers. They are fine summer reading. Price of first named, $1.50; of the second, $1.25, postpaid.

Revival Praises is going rapidly. It is easily the best and most popular book for revival work. Let your orders come thick and swift. After several months of strenuous travel and toll, I am taking a few days vacation and rest at home, where I shall be delighted to hear from friends and customers. G. W. BACHMAN.

Winona, Miss., Aug. 18, 1910.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS
RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED by U.S.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY!

NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

IHC GASOLINE ENGINES

MOST POWER AT LEAST COST

WHEN you decide to buy a horse you don't take just any one. You first determine what kind of a horse you want—how heavy—and other particulars. Then when you find one that seems to meet these requirements you give him a thorough examination. If after that you are satisfied and know the seller is honest and reliable—then you buy.

A gasoline engine is even more important to you than a horse and should be selected just as carefully.

You should decide first just what kind of an engine is best suited to your needs. Here the IHC line offers you a great advantage. IHC engines are made in all styles and sizes from 1 to 35-horsepower—vertical or horizontal—stationary, portable, or traction. It offers you just the engine you want.

After you have decided on the best type, the next thing is to get the best engine of that type. If you will make a thorough investigation you will find that here again an IHC is just what you want—an IHC will give you the maximum power—use the least fuel—cause you the least trouble—and last the longest. There are reasons for this and you should not overlook them.

First: All IHC engines are conservatively rated—each engine easily developing 10 to 30 per cent more than its listed horse power. In other words, when you buy an IHC engine you get 10 to 30 per cent more power than you pay for.

Second: The IHC is simple—its parts few and strong. This makes it easy to clean and keep in good condition and gives it lasting qualities that more complicated engines do not possess.

Third: All IHC engines are so perfectly constructed—even to the minutest details—and so thoroughly inspected, that the liability of missing fire or otherwise wasting power is practically eliminated.

In fact from all points of view an IHC engine is just the engine for your needs.

The next time you go to town stop at the IHC local dealer's. Investigate and prove these points of advantage. Ask him to explain these things in detail—he will be glad to. Or, if you prefer, write us for catalogue and full information.

INTERNATIONAL HARVESTER COMPANY OF AMERICA

Chicago

(Incorporated)

USA

THE I-H-C LINE

USE THE L. and A. RAILWAY,
"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

Tidings from the Field

Cotton Valley, La.

We are having a great revival at Cotton Valley, conducted by Dr. A. C. Holden. We have already had about thirty conversions. Dr. Holden is stirring this place up. Let prayer be made for him. He will be paid for the work—R. H. P. P. P. P.

Dumas Circuit:

We have had three revivals at our church, much good results. We are in a very good position at this time, with Revs. W. D. and J. H. Bassett doing the preaching. They are doing it well. We had twelve conversions last time and eleven this time. The church is full and the results are good. —R. M. Hoyt

Port Allen, Miss.

Things are going on very well at Port Allen. We are having a revival here. The Rev. S. L. P. and of Southern with us in our morning here. He is in earnest, in both preaching and work, and we had a meeting which accomplished much good for the church. We have recently organized a Women's Home Mission Society and a large Junior Epworth League. Our Senior League is growing and doing well. We are looking for a great revival at the Autumn. —R. M. Hoyt

North, La.

On Sunday night, Aug. 14, the great revival here was over. It was a great success. The preaching was done for eight days by Rev. W. B. Harvell. The Holy Spirit was manifest from the first service. Many were brought to a saving knowledge of Christ Jesus for the first time. Several were re-baptized and the faith of the believing ones was strengthened. Brother Harvell had the pleasure of baptizing an infant, the child of Baptist parents who got a new vision during the meeting. Five adults were baptized and seven received into the church. Bro Harvell preached with great power, and is one of the most powerful preachers we have ever heard. He is doing a great work here. He is greatly loved by all the people of every denomination, and we are waiting for the full millennium, this being his first year here. We are moving in the upward way. Glory to God in the highest. —W. F. Henderson Prichard, Miss.

We have made some progress on the Prichard Circuit during the seven months past. We have put a new roof and front porch on the sanctuary and added some to the interior furnishings. The Ladies of Branch Church on the 10th of August collected $75 and are using the money to paint the exterior of our church. The church has been made with the paint and they are not work. When completed, the church will have a beautiful appearance. This is the largest of our churches. We have also organized a Women's Home Mission Society, both of which are doing well. We are looking for a great revival at the Autumn. —R. M. Hoyt before the close of this year. In some respects, this is a difficult field. The Roman Catholics are largely in the majority. The people speak the French language, especially the native Creole. There is a vast field for missionary work. Our church will make but slow progress until the Mission Board has money enough to put men in the field who can speak and read to the people in the French language. —H. B. Vandenberg

Seventh Avenue, Meridian:

Dear Advocate: Since my last communication our Heavenly Father has taken our only baby to heaven. He was so dear, and we miss him so much. Yet we have been given a new one, and we are rejoicing. The Lord is doing a great work here. We are in a very good position at this time, with Revs. W. D. and J. H. Bassett doing the preaching. They are doing it well. We had twelve conversions last time and eleven this time. The church is full and the results are good. —R. M. Hoyt

Rose Hill, Miss.

I had the pleasure to attend the Laymen's Meeting at the Rose Hill College of which my son, W. H. Lane, is pastor. It was my first visit to that part of Jasper County, and I can truly say that in doing there the meeting was a great success. A great number of people were brought to a saving knowledge of Christ Jesus for the first time. Several were re-baptized and the faith of the believing ones was strengthened. Brother Lane had the pleasure of baptizing an infant, the child of Baptist parents who got a new vision during the meeting. Five adults were baptized and seven received into the church. Bro Lane preached with great power, and is one of the most powerful preachers we have ever heard. He is doing a great work here. He is greatly loved by all the people of every denomination, and we are waiting for the full millennium, this being his first year here. We are moving in the upward way. Glory to God in the highest. —W. F. Henderson

EDUCATIONAL.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE JACKSON, MISS.

Rev. David Carlisle Hull, M. S., President.

A high-grade college situated at the Capital of the State. Location high, dry and healthy. Entrance requirement and curriculum same as in other leading colleges and universities. North and South. The very finest Moral and Religious Influences. Extraordinary Advantages in

LITERARY AND LAW DEPARTMENTS.

Courses leading to A. B., B. S., A. M., M. S., and LL.D. Degrees.

NINETEENTH SESSION BEGINS SEPTEMBER 23, 1910.

For Catalogue and other information address

J. E. WALMSLEY, Secretary, Jackson, Miss.

Mansfield Female College.

Next Session begins September 7.

For Catalogue and other information, address,

President W. L. WEBER,

MANSFIELD, LOUISIANA.

Murfreesboro School for Boys.

Murfreesboro, Tennessee.

Are You Anxious About That Boy?

Investigate the claims of the Murfreesboro School for Boys.

ANDERSON CRAVENS CARTER
MURFREESBORO, TENNESSEE.

BELHAVEN COLLEGE FOR YOUNG LADIES

JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI

Departments: Latin, Greek, English, and Physical Training. Voice Culture and Art. Music and Piano. French and German. Modern Languages. The college is a high-grade institution with a liberal curriculum. It is a boarding school with a large campus and a beautiful location. The college is a high-grade institution with a liberal curriculum. It is a boarding school with a large campus and a beautiful location. The college is a high-grade institution with a liberal curriculum. It is a boarding school with a large campus and a beautiful location.

BELHAVEN COLLEGE FOR YOUNG LADIES, JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI

ATHENS COLLEGE

ATHENS, ALA.

Governed by Women for Girls and Women. C Merit not Money: Polish not Varnish. C Member of All Assn. of Colleges. Preparatory School in connection, students enjoying equal opportunities with college students. Boarding Department enrollment quadrupled in five years. C Excellent advantages in Music, Oratory, Art, Normal Training, and Domestic Science for those desiring special courses. Graduate course, sterilized drinking water. Chemical fire extinguishers. C Rates, like month Board, Laundry, tuition in Regular Course, Physical Culture, Church Service, Medical Fee and Handsome Uniform made to measure by New York tailor hat and gloves to match $200. Sixty-day session begins Wednesday, September 20, 1910. C For details apply to

MARY NORMAN MOORE, President.

Ward Seminary Nashville, Tennessee

6th year Seminary and Special Courses. Conservatory of Music—Emil Winkler, Director. Signer Campagna, Venice. Fritz Schmitt, Vienna. 175 Boarding Places. Complete equipment. City advantages. Beautiful campus for outdoor sports. For catalogue address J. D. BLANTON, President.

MIRACULUS ESCAPE FROM DEATH.
Rev. T. P. Pierce, a minister and merchant of Vinemont, Ala., has a close call.

REV. T. P. PIERCE.

Following is Mr. Pierce's own story of how he fell into good hands and evaded the "grim reaper."

"In the Spring of 1907, I was a complete wreck, and was pronounced by some doctors to have dropsy, by one to have cancer of the stomach, another said tumor, in all, there were fourteen or fifteen doctors. Scarcely any of them agreed, and none of them did me any good whatever. Four of our county doctors said I could not be cured and gave me up to die. My weight had decreased to 147 lbs. and I was perfectly helpless when I decided to try W. H. Bull's Herbs and Iron. After using five bottles, my health was immediately restored, and in a few weeks I was as strong and healthy as ever in my life. My weight to-day is 247 lbs., and I shall never fail to recommend W. H. Bull's Herbs and Iron."

"W. H. Bull's Herbs and Iron can be had from any druggist in 50c and $1.00 bottles. If after using two-thirds of a $1.00 bottle you are not benefited, take the bottle back to your druggist and he will refund your money. If your druggist can't supply you, the W. H. Bull Medicine Company, St. Louis, Mo., will send it direct upon receipt of price."

FROM GALLMAN, MISS.

Our revival at Gallman was fine. The meeting began Sunday, Aug. 14, and closed last night. Rev. H. P. Lewis, our honored and faithful, sweet-spirited superannuate, preached two good, helpful sermons Sunday, the 14th inst. Rev. H. B. Watkins, who had promised to join us Monday following second Sabbath, reached us as promised, and began a fine series of sermons Monday night. Last Friday at 11 a. m., we had the pleasure of listening to Rev. V. D. Skipper, of the Great Woman. We had the privilege of having Rev. W. L. Linfield with us one night. Brother Watkins has many warm friends here in these parts, having acceptably assisted me here last year and having served four years acceptably at Hazlehurst, near this place. Our camp meeting at Hennington Camp Ground, beginning the 6th of August, was fine. It was said by some to have been the best in twenty years. Revs. George H. Galloway and H. R. Singleton did the preaching. To say that it was very fine is not saying too much. Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D., delighted and edified the people there Monday at 11 a. m. on the Doctrines of Methodism. Rev. D. C. Hull, D.D., our new president of Millsaps College, preached for us once. His earnest logic, fine diction, and Christ-like spirit captured the audience. Rev. W. M. Williams preached one time for us to the delight and pleasure of many old friends, he having spent several years here as pastor. Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., led the choir with great satisfaction. Miss Lois Cooper, the accomplished daughter of Dr. Cooper, furnished the music for the occasion. The help and presence of Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr., was an inspiration throughout the entire camp meeting. Rev. J. G. Galloway left nothing undone to make everything pleasant throughout the entire meeting. J. C. Ellis.

August 22, 1910.
If Tired, Restless, Nervous,
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate
It quiets and strengthens the nerves and brain, and induces refreshing sleep.

"A METHODIST HISTORICAL LIBRARY."

We have set apart a fire-proof room in our new house at Dallas for a Methodist Historical Library, and want everything of historical value we can get. These books and pamphlets will be carefully stored away in a permanent reference library. We will be glad if the readers of the New Orleans Christian Advocate will look through their libraries and make a list of all old and rare books and pamphlets on any phase of Methodist History, doctrine, biography, etc., and send us a complete list. Just now we are very anxious to secure the following:

Journal of General Conference of 1850.

History of the organization of the M. E. Church, South, 1845.

General Minutes of the Annual Conferences from 1845 to 1855, inclusive.

The Quarterly Review for the year 1890, and all dates back of 1892.

Complete file of the Christian Advocate (Nashville) for 1882, 1883, 1895, and all dates back of 1874.

Disciplinary code.

Mississippi Conference Minutes back of 1890.

North Mississippi Conference Minutes back of 1898.

Louisiana Conference Minutes for 1895, 1896, 1897, 1900, 1901, and all back of 1894.

Any one having any of these volumes will confer a favor on us by writing fully and at once.

Respectfully,

SMITH & LAMAR, Agents,
Dallas, Texas.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM.

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effective form. For grown people and children, 50c.

"THE NEW BELIEF IN PRAYER."

"We are witnessing at this present time a resurgence of faith in prayer," says the Rev. Samuel McComb, D.D., of the Emmanuel Church, Boston. Dr. McComb has written for the September Century of "The New Belief in Prayer," its significance and its possibilities.

3 bottles of Johnson's Tonic will put on 10 pounds.

Rev. J. M. McGort, Verbena, Ala., used 3 bottles and wrote: "I feel better and weigh more than I have in 20 years."
C. G. Butler, Argenta, Ark., wrote: "I sold 4 bottles and gained 12 pounds and feel 100 per cent better."
Money back when it fails.
The Johnson's Chill & Fever Tonic Co., Savannah, Georgia.

FROM OAKVALE, MISS.

We failed to get our new church finished to hold our revival meeting in from July 27 to Aug. 7, but the good, generous-hearted Baptists of our town opened wide the doors of their church and said, We want you all to come in and hold your revival. The writer (the pastor of the Methodist Church) thanked them with a God-bless you all. Our meeting was a success; our church was revived along all lines. I fully believe that every member in

EDUCATIONAL
Grenada College.

Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Courses. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

THE TEXAS DENTAL COLLEGE
HOUSTON, TEXAS.

THE SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION BEGINS OCTOBER 4th, 1910.

Offers to the prospective dental students unsurpassed clinical advantages and teaching facilities for the study of the most modern and up-to-date dentistry. Ideal winter climate; Reasonable living expenses; and the most wholesome mental influences.

For full information and catalogue, address the secretary, CHAS. H. EDGE.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

A home school for girls, 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful. Country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue.

Address, Pres. H. H. BROWNEE.

CLINTON, LA.

CHAMBERLAIN-HUNT ACADEMY, Port Gibson, Miss.

Reduced Rates—$100.00 per year, all Expenses

Catalogue or other detailed information will be sent upon request. It tells you things you ought to know before sending your boy off to school.
CHAMBERLAIN-HUNT ACADEMY, Box 900, PORT GIBSON, MISS.

For $110,654.04

We maintain an established trade in the South on any first-class article of general household use.

THIS SUM BUYS

1. A three-years advertising campaign, 10 inches per week, 70 publications, 520,000 circulation per week, over 50 millions of copies distributed to the most substantial Southern homes—to create the demand for the goods.
2. A sales force of 20 specialty salesmen for three years, selling the goods to retailers and jobbers—to place the goods within reach of the consumer.
3. A guarantee of certain minimum results as regards the number of initial or introductory sales and the amount of such sales—to secure the manufacturer against any unnecessary speculation in his advertising campaign. (Guarantee usually one dollar per 1,000 of circulation used per annum, and sales equivalent to cost of campaign—excess sales earned on commission basis.)

In brief, the only general publicity campaign covering a wide area, ever offered with a hard and fast guarantee of results.

If interested address below, explaining your selling system in detail, and sending samples of goods on which you desire to establish trade—no inferior articles promoted. Smaller accounts accepted covering narrower territory.

JACOBS & COMPANY, Clinton, S. C.

Advertising and Selling Agents.

Operating The Religious Press Advertising Syndicate.

Largest Special Advertising Agency in the World.

the church got a great blessing out of baptism. We also baptized five in of the meeting. The Rev. M. L. White, pastor during the meeting. The Rev. Dr. R. C. Bothea, and Clarence West, W. B. Jones, the presiding elder, was big as were the leaders. These brethren with us on August the 14th, and held on all came to us in due time, and our third Quarterly Conference at they wrought well, doing some super Baxterville. While he was with us prior preaching, Clarence Westbrook he preached two able sermons, one led the singing with his cornet, and it at Baxterville, and one at Oakvale was fine. These brethren were much. We have some reason to be glad, and I can safely recommend them as looking up, and I am expecting to being him help in revival meetings, for things in this way. We had thirteen accessions to the prayers of God's people. Thirty church—eight by vows, and five by Westbrook, P. C.

Epworth League

By Rev. H. B. Watkins.

TOPIC FOR SEPTEMBER 4.

A CHAPTER RALLY DAY.

References: Hebrews x. 24-25; Malachi iii. 16-18.

The most wonderful organization in all the earth is the Church of Christ. Often we grow very much discouraged over small attendance at our meetings and feel like giving up; and yet I make bold to say that the best attended institution in all the world, not excepting even the theatres, is the church. When we take into consideration the number of services held per week, the Sunday school, the preaching services, the League meetings, the prayer services, the women's societies, besides minor meetings like class meetings and committee meetings, one is really surprised at the uniformity of the attendance. I venture to speak this word of encouragement not because I would try to make us satisfied or to feel as if we were doing our duty, but rather to inspire all the institutions of the Church to fresh courage and to renewed activity. If the Church had been human it would have failed long ago, but it is divine and carries with it a message of never failing interest to every heart that comes into the world. The play of Hamlet appeals to some people, the circus appeals to many more, the lodge interests some, politics many more, but the gospel of Jesus Christ appeals to every soul on the face of the earth. Let men be as indifferent to Macbeth and to Caesar and to Napoleon as they will, no man down in his heart can long remain indifferent to Christ. There are fears lurking in every soul that only Jesus can soothe. There are cravings in every heart that only Christ can satisfy. There are hopes in every life that only the King of kings can fulfill. For this reason, our meetings have a supreme interest in human affairs and have an appeal that while men may resist, they can not in the nature of things be indifferent.

Now then, concerning our meetings, let me plead that we not grow discouraged. Let us not "be weary in well doing," for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. The faithful few have kept alive many a League until some returning tide brought new life and new hope. Give due credit to the revival tide, but remember it was the faithful few that made the revival possible at all. There are some who discount the every week meetings because they are not revival meetings and because no one was saved in them. Just so many people discount the regular pastor because few are converted until the evangelist comes. Let me say, the faithful few and the earnest pastor who kept things together in the heat of summer and in the cold of winter are the people who had most to do with the revival. God at last sends the rain, but it brings up the seed we have been sowing all year. Be faithful!

Let me say again with regard to all our meetings, give Christ the first place. After all, the thing that attracts men is Christ. "I, if I be lifted up shall draw all men unto me." That mother in Bonnie Briar Bush, who, anticipating her boy's call to the ministry, when she was dying, placed her hands on his head and said, "when you preach the first time in your own 'kirk,' speak a good word for Jesus Christ," was not only bidding him give glory to the Christ, but was giving him the key to the hearts of men and women. In our circle of League meetings each week, may the name of Jesus be spoken lovingly and reverently all round the world.

In our meetings, again, let personal testimony have a large place. I verily believe that to be the very best preaching which has in it the largest element of personal testimony. Besides our second reference, turn to Luke viii. 39, and hear Jesus putting on the lips of a man liberated by his power the greatest kind of sermon ever preached: "Go shew how great things the Lord hath done for you." Lastly, in our meetings, let everyone possible take some part. It isn't the man who takes part who fails to come back next week. It is usually the one who sat in the back and felt he had no part in the meeting. Let each, above all, ask "Lord what wilt thou have me to do?" and let it be the prayer of every meeting that our Leaguers individually may hear the call, "Who will go for us and whom shall we send?" and quickly reply, "Here am I, send me!"

May a new era lie before our young people, an era of service, which will be an era of happiness. Let this service close with a presentation of the claims of the Epworth Era, our splendid paper. We could send no better nor more attractive literature into the homes of our people than this little magazine. We want our meetings to be intelligent. They can best be so by keeping in touch with our entire Young People's Movement through the Epworth Era.

CHURCH DIRECTORY.

New Orleans District, Rev. F. N. Parker, D.D., presiding elder, residence, 1111 Olivier Street.

First Methodist Church, St. Charles Ave., near Calhoun St., Dr. S. H. Warren, pastor, residence, 1111 Pryor St., phone, Uptown 313.

Rayne Memorial Church, St. Charles Ave. and General Taylor St., Dr. John A. Rice, pastor, residence, 1111 Constantine St.

Second Methodist Church, 1111 Burgundy, near Lafayette Ave., Rev. A. I. Townsend, pastor, residence, 1111 N. Rampart St., office hours, 9 to 11 A.M., phone, Hemlock 313.

Parker Memorial, corner Nashville Ave. and Perrier St., Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor, residence, 1111 Nashville Ave.

Louisiana Avenue, corner Louisiana Ave. and Magazine St., Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor, residence, 1111 Fern St., phone, Walnut 413.

Felicity Street Church, corner Felicite and Chestnut Sts., Rev. Albert S. Lutz, pastor, residence, 1111 St. Andrew St., phone, Jackson 313.

Carrollton Avenue Church, corner Carrollton Ave. and Elm St., Rev. Henry T. Carley, pastor, residence, 1111 Fern St., phone, Uptown 113.

Algiers, Lavergne Street, corner Delatouche, Rev. J. E. Foster, pastor, residence, 1111 Seguin.

Epworth Church, corner Banks and South Sts., Rev. L. A. Sims, pastor, residence, 1111 South Pierce St.

Rev. John L. Sutton, Superintendent, Orphan Boys' Asylum, residence, 1111 St. Charles Ave., phone, Uptown 113.

Rev. N. E. Joyner, Superintendent, St. Mark's Hall, 1111 Esplanade, residence, 1111 Henry Clay Avenue, phone, Hemlock 113.

R. F. Harrell, Secretary, Y. M. C. A., 1111 St. Charles St.

Rev. R. A. Meek, Editor, New Orleans Christian Advocate, residence, 1111 Nashville Ave., phone, Walnut 313.

Studebaker Quality

is so well known that the best recommendation a wagon can have is that—it is a Studebaker. There are over a million Studebaker Wagons in daily use—many of these have seen from 25 to 35 years' service. We make wagons that are built especially to meet the requirements of every vicinity. That we do, is shown by the fact that every year for over 40 years more than 2,000,000 bales of cotton have been carried to market on Studebaker Wagons.

The name Studebaker stands for honest quality—experience—careful construction—greatest value. Go to a Studebaker dealer when you buy a wagon. Then you can be sure that the wagon you buy will give perfect satisfaction. See the Studebaker dealer and talk to him about your individual requirements. He is competent to advise you. Our Studebaker 1911 Farmers' Almanac tells all about the Studebaker products—mailed free. Write today.

STUDEBAKER BROS. MFG. CO.
South Bend, Indiana

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.,

Capital.....$200,000.00

Assets.....479,860.90

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

CONVENIENT WAY,

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA, SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS ON SALE TO ALL POINTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent, or address

E. C. D. MARSHALL,

General Passenger Agent.

New Orleans to California and Pacific Northwest and Points Intermediate.

California $52.00 one way; Pacific Northwest $46.85 one way
Via SOUTHERN PACIFIC

THE SCENIC ROUTE.

TICKETS ON SALE DAILY, AUGUST 1st to SEPTEMBER 30th, 1910.
Inclusive, OCTOBER 1st to APRIL 1st, 1911.

SUNSET EXPRESS

Only Train New Orleans to San Francisco Without Change

OIL BURNING LOCOMOTIVES, PULLMAN STANDARD TOURIST SLEEPERS, OBSERVATION CAR—CHAIR CARS, LUNCH CARS, ELECTRIC LIGHTED—ELECTRIC BLACK SIGNALS, LUNCH CAR SERVICE BEST IN THE WORLD.

RATE per DOUBLE BERTH in TOURIST SLEEPER, NEW ORLEANS to SAN FRANCISCO $37.50

For Further Information, Tickets and Reservations, Call on Write
J. H. PARSONS, Gen. Pass. Agt., C. W. MURPHY, City Pass. Agt.,
NATCHEZ and MAGAZINE STS., 1111 ST. CHARLES ST.,
NEW ORLEANS, LA. NEW ORLEANS, LA.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

Makes healthy happy children. It is better for them than the heavier foods and costs much less. It is delicious with fruit and will not curdle when served with milk and cream.

In large families where desserts "count up" Crystal Gelatine is as good as money in the bank. Each package makes two full quarts of delicious jelly, solving the problem of a menu at a small cost. Crystal makes the greatest variety of dainty dishes delighting all who eat it from grandma to the baby.

Ask your grocer to-day. Free sample for dealers name.

CRYSTAL GELATINE CO.
121 A Beverly St. BOSTON, MASS.

OXFORD CAMP MEETING.

FROM DR. BOSWELL.

The Oxford camp ground, belonging to Oxford Station and Abbeville, formerly Oxford Circuit, is located on a beautiful site three miles east from Oxford, Miss. There for forty years the Methodists from Oxford and the surrounding country, specially of "old Mt. Zion Church," have held their annual camp meetings without break and in old-time style.

Many who once tented and otherwise participated in these meetings have crossed over the river and are at rest on the other shore, but their children, with others, are keeping alive the camp fires and following on "in the good, old-fashioned way."

The Stephens, the Calloways, the McLarty's, the Slaughters, the Hamiltons, the Whites and others are still occupying the grounds and faithful to all demands of the occasion. They are already enjoying the rewards of spiritual refreshings and the salvation of their children and friends, but the crowning reward will be eternal life hereafter.

The names and preaching of Amos Kendall, Joseph H. Brooks, Drs. Wheat, Linfield and others who have finished their earthly ministry and who in the former years preached here with great power and efficiency are held in affectionate memory by the old people. It was enjoyable to hear them speak lovingly of those good men and their great preaching.

The meeting this year began Saturday, Aug. 6, and closed Monday morning, Aug. 15, being the longest in time, and pronounced by the oldest attendants one of the best ever held here.

From the beginning to the close the power of the Holy Spirit was manifest in the revival of Christians and salvation of sinners. Scarcely a service passed without one or more conversions. There was almost constantly the old-time singing, shouting and personal working with penitents at the altar.

About fifty were received into the Methodist Church and several others gave their names for membership in other churches.

Evangelist A. C. Holder, of Shreveport, La., did most of the preaching and did it well. His intense earnestness and unabated zeal in preaching and in personal work with the unconverted was blessed of the Lord in the conversion of many. The singing was conducted principally by Mr. Arthur Herring, an earnest Christian worker, and son of Rev. J. W. Herring, of the Arkansas Conference. These brethren will ever be remembered affectionately by the preachers and people for their works' sake on this occasion, as well as personally.

Other preachers who were present from time to time and who preached one or more sermons were J. E. Cunningham, presiding elder, Holly Springs; J. C. Park, Oxford; B. P. Fullilove, Abbeville; J. H. Mitchell, Water Valley; J. R. Countiss, Grenada, and the writer.

With the hearty co-operation of the preachers in charge of the meeting, many good books were sold which will abide in the homes of the people to continuously re-enforce the good work of grace. On the whole, this was one of the best of more than fifty camp meetings I ever attended.

I shall ever cherish in affectionate memory this occasion of personal religious enjoyment and communion with the old and new made friends. The Lord bless them, every one.

G. W. BACHMAN.
Winona, Miss., Aug. 18, 1910.

Dear Brother Meek: Our church in Sardis is greatly bereaved. Within the past seven days we have lost two valuable members. First, Sister A. W. Shands, a notice of whose sudden going appeared in the Advocate of August 18. Sister Shands was of a noble family, being on her mother's side a descendant of the great and good Dr. A. B. Longstreet, better known in the South as Judge Longstreet. She was, therefore, naturally a Methodist. She was also a Methodist of choice, and identified with all the interests of the Church in Sardis. She took an active part in the various societies of the church, and will be greatly missed by her many co-workers. She was universally beloved, and no man ever had more general and profound sympathy than Brother Shands in his bereavement. His sorrows not as those who have no hope.

On Wednesday, August 17, we laid to rest our good Brother William H. Short. He was one of the oldest members, having just entered his seventy-first year. For a long time he had been afflicted and was unable to take an active part in Church work, or to attend its services, but he loved the cause and loved the preachers. He gave me a cordial welcome when I first entered upon the work in Sardis, and I took pleasure in visiting him, which I did frequently. I always found him cheerful. He suffered much from the effects of a fall he had about ten days before his death and longed for his home in heaven. He died in the faith. Brother Short was a faithful Confederate soldier—served the entire war in the Army of Virginia, and lived and died in the respect and confidence of surviving comrades. The righteous hath hope in his death.

Besides these two, we have lost by death and removal eight other members—some old and prominent, and very useful. They are greatly missed, and the anxious inquiry is: "Who will take their places?" But the work goes on, verifying again the saying: "God unites his workmen, but carries on his work."
J. W. BOSWELL.
Sardis, Miss., Aug. 19, 1910.

THE CARE AND TRAINING OF CHILDREN OF BACKWARD MENTAL DEVELOPMENT.

It is only in comparatively recent years that the subject of the care and training of backward mental development has been considered of paramount importance, and special schools established for the educational training of this particular class of children. Realizing the necessity for such training, the up-to-date universities have a department devoted to this special psychological study—they have at last awakened to the fact that the only possible hope for such children lies in placing them under the care and direction of medical experts, where they will have the advantage of scientific treatment and training.

The Stewart Home and School of Eardale, Ky., situated six miles from Frankfort, the State capital, is a model school of this kind—one of the few in the South, and the largest private school in the country. Dr. Jno. P. Stewart, the superintendent, has devoted his life to this special field of medical science, and with the aid of a corps of trained teachers, is accomplishing magnificent results. It is as its name implies, a "Home" in the truest sense of the word, and the children enjoy every possible comfort and convenience and have the tenderest care.

No Alcohol!

Ask your doctor if a family medicine, like Ayer's Sarsaparilla, is not vastly better without alcohol than with it.

Is alcohol a tonic? No!
Does it make the blood pure? No!
Does it strengthen the nerves? No!
Is Ayer's Sarsaparilla a tonic? Yes!
Does it make the blood pure? Yes!
Does it strengthen the nerves? Yes!
Is it entirely free from alcohol? Yes!

SEE SCHALCK, THE SEED EXPERT

TO MAKE A SUCCESS IN GARDENING.

His SEEDS are FRESH and RELIABLE. For PURITY and QUALITY cannot be excelled. Special prices to MARKET GARDENERS and TRUCK FARMERS.

THIRTY YEARS' EXPERIENCE in the SEED BUSINESS is sufficient guaranty, and in order to prove my seeds, I will mail, free of postage, twelve packets assorted vegetable seeds for 25 cents, twenty-five packets for 50 cents. My selection: beans and peas not included. Give me a trial. Mail Orders—Specialty: All Correspondence Promptly Answered.

J. A. SCHALCK, SEEDSMAN AND GRAIN DEALER,
Phone, Hamlock 374. 520 ST. PHILIP ST., NEW ORLEANS, LA.

QCKWORK METAL-POLISH

A pure liquid absolutely free from acid, grit or anything injurious. Qckwork produces a dazzling, durable polish in a few seconds. It's just the thing for automobiles, yacht trimmings, bank fixtures and all metals that shine.

IN 25c TINS EVERYWHERE

KETTLER BRASS MFG. CO.
HOUSTON TEXAS

The Biggs Treatment

The most successful and best known method in the South for the cure of chronic ailments. No drugs. If you are afflicted with Paralysis, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Nervous Debility, or some other disease that medicine has failed to cure, write for our free book which tells about all this new and better way.

Ideal climate, home-like conditions, complete sanitarium equipment, low charges, liberal guarantee of satisfaction.

Write to-day for the book and diagnosis blank—both free.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM,
ASHEVILLE, N. C.

YOU CAN AFFORD a new Song Book in your Church or Sunday School, and one for every person: "FAMILIAR SONGS OF THE GOSPEL." Round or Shape Notes, for $3 for 100. Words and music. 83 very best songs. Sample copy 5 cents. M. A. K. BACHTT, 100 North Wayne Street, Fort Wayne, Ind.

Methodist Benevolent Association

Ministers and Laymen of Southern Methodist Church. Benefits at Death, or Old Age, or Disability. Over $8,000 paid to Widows, Orphans, Disabled. Insurance at cost. If in good health, write for rates and other information.

CARE METHODIST PUBLISHING HOUSE NASHVILLE, TENN.

You Look Prematurely Old

Because of those ugly, grizzly gray hairs. Use "LA CREOLE" HAIR COLOR RESTORER. Price $1.00, retail.

The Sunday School Lesson

FOURTH QUARTER, LESSON I, SEPTEMBER, 1

TWO PARABLES OF JUDGMENT

Matthew xxi, 33-46. Memory Verses, 41-46.

Heard another parable: There was a certain householder, which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and built a tower, and digged a winepress, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a foreign country.

And when the time of the fruit drew near, he sent his servants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of it.

And the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another.

Again he sent other servants, more than the first, and they did unto them likewise.

But last of all, he sent unto them his son, saying, They will reverence my son.

But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, This is the heir, come, let us kill him, and let us inherit his father's estate.

And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him.

When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, he will destroy the husbandmen, and will give the vineyard unto others.

vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen?

41. They say unto him, He will destroy them, because they have hated him, and have killed his son, which he hath loved.

42. Jesus saith unto them, Nay, I tell you, he will destroy them, because they have hated him, and have killed his son, which he hath loved.

43. Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof.

44. And whosoever shall fall on this stone, he shall be broken, but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

45. And when the chief priests and Pharisees had heard his parables, they perceived that he spake of them.

46. But when they sought to lay hands on him, they feared the multitude, because they took him for a prophet.

Golden Text: "Therefore say I unto you, from you." (Matt. xxi, 43.)

TEACHING TOPICS.

Making a Point Plain.

The Teacher had refuted the carping objections of the chief priests and the elders. When they came to him questioning his authority Jesus had placed these astute logic choppers in a dilemma from which they could find no escape. With very ill grace they admitted their defeat. Then by the use of an adroit parable (just preceding our lesson) he caused them to condemn themselves. When they were silenced and humiliated he hurled upon them his scathing condemnation. They were speechless. They turned away discomfited. But Jesus would not leave them yet. Disagreeableness is no valid objection to truths. He intended to drive the facts home in such a manner that there would be no chance for a mistake. Emphasis is the strength of teaching.

The Divine Preparation.

Before the estate of the householder was let out to the husbandmen, he planted the vineyard, set a hedge about it, digged a winepress, and built a tower for the watchmen who would guard his property. The householder had done his utmost. So according to the figure of the parable the Father God had given the good gifts of his love and of his protection to his children, the people of Israel, whose is the adoption and the glory and the covenants and the giving of the law and the services of God and the promises. So has God ever done for his children. He has provided our fields of pleasant labor. He has hedged us about with all protecting influences; the winepresses of the many hours are here to be filled with the rich fruits of life, and the tower of God is planted in our midst where watch the prophets, the teachers, the patriots, all the good men and women who have taken it upon themselves to guard the sacred interests of the vineyard of the Lord. This is a faithful picture of our many blessings. God has never failed to do this much for his children.

The Human Part.

Then the householder let it out to husbandmen. This is the next step. The vineyard is made to be worked. If it were for the benefit of himself alone God would never prepare a vineyard. For he does not need its fruits. The whole plan is for men. Therefore, without an exception, the vineyards are let out to husbandmen, weak and tempted as they are. They must render strict account, but that, too, is for their good. There is no way to escape the householder's duty. In some capacity we all hold such office. It is the human part. When so much is done for us, how shall we complain if the work taxes our strength or if dangers threaten? The Great Householder has ordered our work. It is his plan. We may trust him to take for his vineyard if we do our assigned parts.

"The Eternal Silences."

There are many who do not mind the labor and the danger of the day's work, if only the Master were not so far away. But the Householder has gone "into another country." Why are we left alone with our awful trials? Why are we left to struggle in the dark? Where is God? Why "the eternal silences" of his absence? There can be no doubt that the Householder does not remain with his vineyard in just the way that many of his laborers would have him do. Jesus told a great spiritual truth when he represented the Owner and Lord as letting out his favored field and going into another country. The truth is this: Perhaps it is not agreeable, but it is the apparent situation, and therefore must be the plan of the Creator. Man must work out his own salvation. The proper conditions are provided, and then men must educate and train themselves by grappling with the problems and molding them into conformity with the manifest ideal. God is not testing his children so much as he is training them. When a father tells his boy to do his best, bids him good-bye, and sends him off to college, he does not do it to find out whether or not his boy is obedient and manly, but it is to insure that he will be so in the future. God is training races and individuals in the same way. He is as near us as the father is to his boy; yes, infinitely more near. Yet it is the solemn fact that we are alone. The divine responsibility isolates each one. We are husbandmen who have been entrusted by our Lord with the fate of his vineyard.

Waiting for the Fruit.

Because life is a vineyard and men are in the making, the Lord is willing to wait for the fruit. All in due season. God does not crowd any one. "When the season of fruits drew near" the Lord sent his servants. When the time of ripening comes, then and then only does God speak for fruits. Here is comfort, here is warning, here is inspiration.

The Messengers of God are Men.

It discloses the community of interest between heaven and earth. The son of the householder was one of the messengers. He deigned to come on the same errand to the workmen of his father. Thus the whole of heaven and earth is shown to be concerned with the perfecting of the vineyard. In God and man, work together. They are interested in the same things. Their successes are interwoven.

The Stoning of the Prophets.

The messengers of God are his prophets. For the prophet is not one who foretells events, but one who speaks for God. This is the probable meaning of the Hebrew word. The prophets come direct from heaven to earth—and they are stoned. The pity of it! The lesson of the parable is sufficiently vivid without much comment. The failure of every individual and the ruin of every nation may be traced to a shameful rejection of the prophets of God.

Rejected Stones.

The sin of Israel has been repeated throughout the ages. It is not only the corner-stone that men have sought to reject. Society is slow to see the high possibilities of beauty and usefulness in stones not made prominent by happy chance. Gipsy Smith tells the story of his conversion: "A little while ago he looked upon an old gipsy tent where there was no Bible, but there was a father and five little motherless children, without hope and without God. Nobody cared. Who cared for a gipsy man and his motherless children? Yet they were all hungry for love and sympathy which did not come to them. Church ministers and church people passed by that old tent and saw nobody there but no man, despised and misrepresented and hated. But Jesus looked into that smoky tent, and sometimes I have thought I have heard him say, 'There are six brothers in there, the world does not know it, the churches are ignorant of it, but I will make them preachers and the world shall hear, and he put his arms around them, and this is one of them.' It takes love to see."—Western Christian Advocate.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Seashore Dist.—Fourth Round.

Howison and Saulcer, at
Howison, at	Sept. 17, 18
McHenry and Wiggins, at
Wiggins, at	Sept. 24, 25
Handsboro and Miss. City, at Miss. City	Oct. 5
Americus, at Salem Camp Ground	Oct. 5, 9
Brooklyn and Bond, at B.	Oct. 12
Logtown	Oct. 15, 16
Mentorum, at Ruble	11
a.m.	Oct. 21
Vandave, at New Prospect Camp Ground	Oct. 22, 23
Ocean Springs, at Oak St.	Oct. 27
Bay St. Louis	Oct. 29, 30
Columbia	Nov. 5, 6
Oakvale, at Oakvale	Nov. 7
Long Beach	Nov. 12, 13
Coalville, at Poplar Head	Nov. 16
Hub, at Byrd's Chapel	Nov. 19, 20
Carriere and McNeil, at C.	Nov. 19, 20
Poplarville	Nov. 21
Gulfport, 29th Street	Nov. 23
Moss Point	Nov. 26, 27
Pascagoula	Nov. 26, 27
Escatawpa	Nov. 26, 27
Lumberton	Nov. 30
Gulfport, 25th Ave.	Dec. 2
Wolf River Mission	Dec. 2
Biloxi, Main Street	Dec. 3, 4
W. B. JONES, P. E.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Winona Dist.—Fourth Round.

Greenwood	Sept. 25
Ita Bena	Sept. 25
Winona	Oct. 2
Kilmichael, at Kilmichael	Oct. 2, 3
Carrollton, at Valley Hill	Oct. 8, 9
Belzoni, at Belzoni	Oct. 14
Webb, at Sumner	Oct. 15, 16
Minter City	Oct. 22, 23
Lambert, at Lambert	Oct. 29, 30
Turkville, at Turkville	Oct. 30, 31
Schlatter, at South Side	Nov. 5, 6
Inverness, at Inverness	Nov. 6, 7
Tom Nolen, at Belmont	Nov. 11
Slate Springs	Nov. 12, 13
Edgemoor, at Mabel	Nov. 15
Winona City, at Bethlehem	Nov. 19, 20
Ridgely, at Ridgely	Nov. 22
Moorhead, at Moorhead	Nov. 23
North Carrollton, at Poplar Springs	Nov. 24
Mars Hill, at Bethesda	Nov. 26
Indianola, at Indianola	Nov. 27, 28
E. S. LEWIS, P. E.

Corinth Dist.—Fourth Round.

Belmont Ct., at Mt. P.	Sept. 10, 11
Luka Ct., at Claiborne Hill	Sept. 17, 18, 25 cents.

Luka St., at Luka	Sept. 18, 19
Corinth Ct., at Mt. Carmel	Sept. 24, 25
Corinth, First Church	Sept. 25, 26
Kossuth Ct., at Kossuth	Oct. 1, 2
Corinth, at South Side	Oct. 2, 3
Rienzi Ct., at Rienzi	Oct. 8, 9
Guntown Ct., at Guntown	Oct. 9, 10
Myrtle Ct., at Pleasant G.	Oct. 13
N. Albany Ct., at Bethlehem	Oct. 14
Rainey Mission, at Rainey	Oct. 15, 16
Ripley and B. M., at Ripley	Oct. 16, 17
Booneville Ct., at Carolina	Oct. 22, 23
Booneville Sta., at B.	Oct. 23, 24
Belden Ct., at Liberty	Oct. 29, 30
New Albany Sta., at N. A.	Oct. 30, 31
Dumas Ct., at Mt. Olive	Oct. 31
Marietta Ct., at Marietta	Nov. 3
Dry Run Mission, at String
fellow	Nov. 5
Hatchie Mission, at Mt. Carmel	Nov. 6
Mooreville Ct., at Andrews Chapel	Nov. 11
Mantachia Ct., at M.	Nov. 12, 13
Jonesboro Ct., at Mt. P.	Nov. 19, 20
Tishomingo Circuit, at
Paradise	Nov. 25
Wheeler Ct., at Wheeler	Nov. 26, 27
BEN P. JACO, P. E.

Columbus Dist.—Fourth Round.

Starkville	Sept. 3, 4
Crawford, at Shaffers	Sept. 10, 11
Brooksville	Sept. 17, 18
West Point	Sept. 23
Macon	Sept. 24, 25
Marble, at Curtis Chp.	Oct. 1, 2
Winstonville, at Mt. Hebron	Oct. 8, 9
Columbus, First Church	Oct. 15, 16
Columbus, Second Church	Oct. 16, 17
Starkville Ct., at Sessions	Oct. 22, 23
Sturgis, at Bevil's Hill	Oct. 29, 30
Shuqualak	Nov. 5, 6
Hebron	Nov. 12, 13
Mathiston, at Cumberland	Nov. 19, 20
Cedar Bluff	Nov. 20, 21
Columbus Circuit	Nov. 26, 27
J. E. THOMAS, P. E.

Aberdeen Dist.—Fourth Round.

Aberdeen	Sept. 17, 18
Tupelo	Sept. 25, 26
Verona, at Verona	Oct. 1, 2
Montpelier, at Fosters C.	Oct. 8, 9
Houston	Oct. 9, 10
Okolona Ct., at M. Chp.	Oct. 12
Palestine, at Palestine	Oct. 15, 16
Pontotoc, at Pontotoc	Oct. 16, 17
Beaufort Vista, at	Oct. 22, 23
Prairie, at	Oct. 23, 24
Tremont, at	Oct. 29, 30
Fulton, at	Oct. 30, 31
Greenwood Sps., at	Nov. 5, 6
Smithville, at	Nov. 6, 8
Shannon, at Shannon	Nov. 12, 13
Okolona, at	Nov. 13, 14
Houlka, at	Nov. 17, 18
Derma, at	Nov. 19, 20
Pittsboro, at Pleasant G.	Nov. 20, 22
V. and C. City, at C. City	Nov. 23, 24
Nettleton Ct., at	Nov. 26, 27
Amory and Nettleton, at A.	Nov. 27, 28

Some slight changes may be made. Due notice will be given. The Conference for Okolona Circuit, Nov. 2, will be held some time in September in connection with revival services. The date will be given without newspaper notice. The third round has been most encouraging. Fine revivals, good financial reports, third round questions all answered satisfactorily—and it is confidently expected that the brethren will be ready to answer questions 14, 15, and 29 promptly and satisfactorily this round.

JAMES H. FELTS, P. E.

Durant Dist.—Fourth Round.

Durant	Sept. 4, 5
Pickens	Sept. 4, 5
Vaiden, at Vaiden	Sept. 10, 11
Chester, at Nelo	Sept. 17, 18
West, at Bowling Green	Sept. 24, 25
N. G. AUGUSTUS, P. E.

MRS. C. C. MILLER'S BOOK.

A State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League writes the following about Mrs. Miller's book: "I have read Altheia. It is undoubtedly good, and will be helpful to prohibition."

The book can be had from New Orleans Christian Advocate; Mrs. C. C. Miller, Hammond, La., or Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss. Price, 25 cents.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 57—No. 35.

"PROVE ALL THINGS, HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 245

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, SEPT. 8, 1910.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

A PLEA FOR JUSTICE TO THOSE GROWING OLD.

(An address delivered in the lower House of Congress on March 22, 1910, by the Hon. Morris Sheppard, of Texarkana, Texas.)

Mr. Chairman, I was very much interested during the early course of this debate in the discussion of the question of old age as applied to clerks in the various departments of the Government. While listening to the statements of the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Gillett), in response to inquiries from the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Madden), the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Gardner), the gentleman from South Dakota (Mr. Martin), and others, regarding the advisability of attempting by law to establish an age limit for those who serve the Government, it occurred to me that in the noisy on-sweep of an intensely material era we were perhaps not sufficiently familiar with the capabilities of age. Indeed, sir, it has become too much a habit in recent years to disregard and put aside our older men and women. The clamor against old age, not only in the departments of the Government, but in nearly all the other activities of the world, is absolutely senseless and unjust. This fact I hope to demonstrate in the short time now allotted to me. The idea has become too prevalent that after a certain age, by no means advanced, a man's usefulness diminishes as his years increase. A celebrated physician—Dr. Osler—expressed the opinion only a short while ago that the effective work of the world is done between the ages of 25 and 40. A more colossal error could not possibly have been made.

The impression has become entirely too general that our older men and women obstruct rather than facilitate the march of civilization. The truth is that the world owes infinitely more to men above the age of 50, an age ten years beyond the Osler limit, than to men below it. Some two years ago an analysis was made by a scholar of accepted standing, Mr. Newman Dorland, of the lives and achievements of 400 foremost characters of human history. This analysis, to which I am indebted for many of the names I am about to present, showed that nearly 80 per cent of the world's greatest figures closed active lives between the ages of 50 and 80, 35 per cent continuing beyond 70, 22.12 per cent beyond 80, 6 per cent beyond 90. Let us consider what has been achieved by men beyond the age of 80. Titian, master of Venetian painting, whose magic colors reflected the freshness and enthusiasm of a world saluting the return of art and learning, produced many of his most wonderful canvasses after 80, painting his famous "Battle of Lepanto" at the age of 98. Fontenelle, one of the most versatile of men; Cornaro, the great disciple of temperance; Pope Leo XIII, John Adams and Theophrastus strode into the nineties with intellectual vigor unimpaired. Michael Angelo at 89 still held the sky a prisoner in his brush, having executed his "Last Judgment," perhaps the most famous single picture in the world, and his celebrated frescoes in the Sistine Chapel between 60 and 70. See Von Moltke in full uniform at 88, still the chief of staff of the Prussian army, having crushed France at 72. Hear John Wesley preaching with undiminished eloquence and power almost every day at 88, still directing the great religious movement he had founded, and closing amid unceasing activity at that remarkable age, one of the most remarkable careers of his time, having traveled 250,000 miles in an age that knew neither electricity nor steam, delivered 4,000 sermons, composed hundreds of volumes covering almost every phase of literature, earning through his publications $150,000, every cent of which he gave to charity during his life. See Guizot and Hobbes and Lander with active pens at 87. See Talleyrand and Thomas Jefferson, Herbert Spencer, Newton, and Voltaire, all fruitful in the eighties. See Bancroft, Buffon, and Ranke writing deathless history after 80. See Palmerston, prime minister of England at 81, and John Quincy Adams, stricken in the fulness of his strength on the floor of Congress at the same age. Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar," the tenderest death song in our language, was composed at 83. Goethe's "Faust" at 80. See Gladstone conducting one of his most exciting political campaigns at 80, taking control of a nation and becoming its premier at 83. See Cato learning Greek; Plutarch, Latin; and Socrates, music, all at 80, and tell me no more that the old are no longer capable of high and useful achievements. Think of Browning, brilliant and complex as ever at 77, or Whittier and Bryant issuing new volumes at 79. Think of Grimm, Laplace, Lamarck, completing tremendous tasks in the neighborhood of 80. Think of Perugino, at 76, painting the walls of a vast cathedral, or Humboldt deliberately postponing until 76 the best work of his life, his immortal "Kosmos," completing it at 90. Think of Galileo discovering the daily and monthly vibrations of the moon at 73. Think of Irving and Lamartine, Hugo and Holmes, Wordsworth and Longfellow, Hallam and Grote, George Buchanan and Samuel Johnson, Kant, Savigny, and Littré, all astonishing mankind with masterful productions between 70 and 80. Think of Henry Clay, Calhoun, Metternich, Bismarck-Crispien, Thiers, Franklin, Morgan, Reagan, Roberts, Allison, Morrill, Cannon, all towering figures in politics after 70. Think of Commodore Vanderbilt increasing the mileage of his railroads from 120 to 10,000, adding a hundred millions to his fortune between 70 and 88.

Turning to the period from 60 to 70, the list grows still more interesting and comprehensive. To this decade belong the best deductions of Confucius; Bismarck's inauguration of a colonial career for Germany; Pasteur's discovery of a cure for hydrophobia; Monroe's famous doctrine for the protection of the South American republics, the permanent safeguard of a continent's liberties; the third and fourth voyages of Columbus, resulting in the discovery of South America, and many of the brightest deeds of Webster, Beaconsfield, Jefferson, John Adams, Franklin, and Martin Luther. To this period belong many of the world's most splendid paintings. In music some of the rarest fabrics of Wagner, Haydn, Verdi, and Gounod are the fruitage of this period. In general literature, philosophy, and science many of the most imposing performances have been achieved by authors between 60 and 70. Prominent among these we find many of the best compositions of Cervantes, Schopenhauer, Hugo, John Stuart Mill, Berkeley, Mommson, Voltaire, Ruskin, Emerson, and Francis Bacon. Especial mention should be made of Michelangelo's great history of France, Dryden's ode on St. Cecilia's day, Milton's "Paradise Regained" and "Samson Agonistes," Edmund Burke's "Reflections on the Revolution in France," and Sir Richard Burton's translation of "Arabian Nights," a source of infinite delight to every English-speaking fireside.

Coming now to the deeds of men between 50 and 60, we find many of the most far-reaching achievements of all history. Between 50 and 60 Columbus made his first voyages of American discovery, perhaps the most important single events in human records; Marlborough won Blenheim, Morse invented the telegraph, Richelieu reconstructed France, Caesar corrected the calendar and wrote his "Commentaries," Cromwell established the protectorate, Lincoln issued the emancipation proclamation, Bright instituted his reforms, Loyola founded his great society, Jefferson the Democracy; Knox accomplished a great religious revolution, Wyclif and Luther translated the Bible and brought its eternal truths to the hearts and hearths of the English and German masses. Schliemann made his most notable excavations, Hunter gave a fundamental impetus to surgery, Kepler contrived his table of logarithms, Chesterfield his system of social ethics, Hegel and Lotze their systems of philosophy, Leibnitz founded the Academy of Berlin, Penn negotiated his famous treaty with the Indians, Washington became the first President of the United States, Robert E. Lee made the Confederate resistance sublime, Herschel invented the reflecting telescope, Canning and Peel performed their most brilliant labors, Burke devised his India bill and secured the impeachment of Warren Hastings, Garibaldi became the ruler of Italy.

Between 50 and 60 Leidy made his most valuable contributions to biology, Cuvier to natural history, Copernicus wrote his great treatise on the revolution of celestial bodies, Adam Smith his "Wealth of Nations," the foundation of modern political science. Between 50 and 60 Plato and Aristotle gave their principal creations to the world. Between 50 and 60 Kant wrote the "Critique of Pure Reason," Bacon the "Novum Organum," and Locke the "Essay on the Human Understanding," each of these three great works being veritable pillars of modern learning and progress. Between 50 and 60 were written Bunyan's "Holy War" and the second part of "Pilgrim's Progress," Boswell's "Life of Johnson," De Foe's "Robinson Crusoe," Dante's "Divine Comedy," Milton's "Paradise Lost," Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales," the first part of Cervantes' "Don Quixote," the second part being written after 60. La Fontaine's Fables, Gulliver's Travels, all treasures that will enrich the literature of the world for ever. The average age of the Chief Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States, perhaps the greatest legal tribunal on earth, is nearer 70 than 60, Marshall having concluded his prodigious labors of more than three decades at 80, Taney at 88, Waite at 72. Fuller is still presiding over that august body to-day at 76. It is safe to say that the average age at which all the more than fifty associate justices ...and the ... the sta- ... off. I ... was not ... slip up ... yet ... and ... ary? ... with ... about ... then, ... no ... after ... long, ... and ... ours ... and in ...

BACKWARD GLANCES

... in ...

THE OCCUPATION AT VANDERBILT

... in ...

... the ... men ... of ... and ... Cor- ... a ... not ... own ... Church ... was then ... the representatives of the ... Unif ... raised ... a la ... edices ... chatters ... the Uni ... the ... its ... shall ... to ... of ... to ... This ... in ...

... ar ... the ... the ... and ... a ... rela ... in ... more ... say ... Board ... en ... the ... the ... and ... a ... she ... must ... if ...

... the ... the ... and ... a ... she ... must ... if ...

... the ... the ... and ... a ... she ... must ... if ...

Church News

WOMAN DAY FOR THE LOUISIANA METHODIST CHURCH

The Louisiana Methodist Church is observing Woman Day on September 12th. The purpose of this day is to give women an opportunity to express their views on the various problems of the church and the world. The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day. The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day.

The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day. The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day.

The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day. The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day.

The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day. The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day.

The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day. The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day.

The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day. The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day.

Real French Drip Coffee can not be made unless the coffee itself is prepared, blended and roasted according to the famous French method. Use LUZIANNE COFFEE

For French Drip Coffee use

THE REILLY-TAYLOR CO.
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

A BRIEF TIPS

The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day. The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day.

W. B. SWELL

RUSTON DISTRICT ATTENTION

The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day. The day will be observed in all the churches of the Louisiana Conference. The women of the churches are invited to participate in the various activities of the day.

You Need the Leaders' Hand-Book.

The Most Complete Manual of the Laymen's Movement That Has Yet Appeared. A complete manual for the use of laymen and women in the church. It contains a complete account of the Laymen's Movement, its history, its principles, and its action. It is a must for every church leader. Order from LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT, M. E. CHURCH SOUTH, 812 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

Secular News and Comment

On Sept. 1 the Republic of Mexico began to celebrate the 100th anniversary of its independence. Mexico City, the capital, is gaily decorated, and many visitors from other countries are present.

Of all the cities in the United States above 100,000 population whose census statistics have been tabulated up to the present time, Atlanta shows the largest proportionate gain, her increase during the decade being 72.3 per cent. Her population is now more than 150,000.

The Cotton Record has just issued a report giving the figures concerning the production of sea island cotton for 1909 and 1910. The total yield is 9,656, about 5,000 bales short of that of the preceding year. Georgia produced more than one-half the crop by 11,000 bales, with Florida second, and South Carolina third.

There is reported to be a great shortage in the salmon industry of the Northwest. The pack at Puget Sound for the season of 1910, which ended Aug. 25th, shows an output of 222,107 cases, against more than a million the year preceding. It is said that the output of the current year will not be sufficient to meet the demand in the United States alone.

At the meeting of the American Bar Association just held at Chattanooga, Tenn., the Hon. Edgar H. Farrar, of New Orleans, was elected president. This is a distinguished honor. Mr. Farrar was born in Concordia Parish, June 20, 1849; he is a literary graduate of the University of Virginia and a law graduate of the Louisiana State University. He has a great reputation both as a lawyer and scholar.

The United States Department of Agriculture is doing a great work in the way of restocking our national forests. There are twenty-four nurseries now engaged in producing seedlings, with an estimated capacity of over eight millions. The Western yellow pine is the tree most largely planted. It has been announced that more than ten tons of seed will be used in the prosecution of this task during the current year.

The first wireless message ever sent from an airship was ticked off near New York City on Aug. 27. Hundreds of persons watched the performance of the feat, and in the gathering darkness the electric sparks from the sending machine on the aeroplane are said to have looked like jagged streaks of lightning. Wireless telegraphy is already rendering important service to humanity in many ways. Among other things it has greatly lessened the danger of ocean navigation.

The high cost of living is a world problem, the increase in the price of commodities having been more startling in other countries than in the United States. The American Consul at Havre, Mr. J. K. Dunning, reports that there is great complaint on this account throughout France, where, despite the advanced cost of the necessities of life, wages have remained stationary. It would seem that the only remedy for this condition of things is for the drift of population to turn from city to farm; but of this there is yet no indication.

Prof. J. W. Fox, of the Delta Experiment Station near Greenville, Miss., has been making some interesting experiments in the growing of wheat. He planted twelve varieties, and succeeded in securing yields varying from 21.32 to 26.94 bushels. The cultivation of wheat is already being carried on to a considerable extent in a number of counties in Mississippi. In Monroe County the flour mills are said to be running almost constantly, yet unable to meet the demands made upon them. As a promoter of diversified farming, the boll weevil is a distinct success.

The New Orleans Bee (L'Abeille de la Nouvelle Orleans) celebrated its eighty-third anniversary on Wednesday, Aug. 31. It is said to be the South's oldest daily paper, and is the only exclusively French daily in Louisiana. It was founded by Francis Delat Aug. 31, 1827, and since that time it has failed of issuance only three days, and that was when General Butler refused to allow it to be printed because of a patriotic editorial which displeased him. The present editor is Mr. Armand Capdevielle, who has been connected with the publication of this journal for thirty-eight years.

Emperor William of Germany is said to own more than fifty palaces, but he still continues to build them, having just completed one of six hundred rooms at Posen. It has been announced that this will be occupied by his second son, Eitel Friedrich. Is it not strange that any enlightened people should remain loyal to a monarchical form of government which entails upon them such a burden of extravagance? With all of its defects, a republic is vastly preferable to any empire or kingdom in existence, no matter what constitutional concessions may have been wrung from the occupant of the throne.

The census authorities have announced the present population of Greater New York to be 4,776,883, or rather that was the population last April when the enumeration was made. This makes the American metropolis easily the second city of the world. The population of Greater London in 1909 was 7,129,710, and that of Paris in 1906, 2,763,352. The fourth largest city is Tokyo, which in 1909 had a population of 2,186,979, and the fifth is Berlin, whose inhabitants in 1905 numbered 2,010,118. New York is slowly gaining on London, having increased 132,921 in ten years, while the latter increased 818,368 in eight years.

Oswatimole, Kansas, celebrated on August 30th the fifty-fourth anniversary of the struggle which took place between John Brown and his men and a band of Missouri raiders in a cluster of woods near the town. There is talk of inaugurating a movement to place a statue of John Brown in the Hall of Fame at Washington. If this is done, Carrie Nation also should have a niche in the National Pantheon. A lawless and unreasoning fanaticism is about the only claim of either to distinction, unless the fact that Brown was the father of twenty children is so considered in this Rooseveltian age.

Two interesting gatherings of Chinese students attending American institutions of learning were held at Trinity College, Hartford, Conn., in August. The first, at which about 200 were present, was a meeting of the Chinese Students' Christian Association, which was the second assembling of that organization. The other was the sixth annual Chinese Students' Conference. Among those who delivered addresses before the latter body was Mr. Chang Ying Tang, the Chinese Minister to the United States, and the Hon. John W. Foster, formerly Secretary of State. This attendance of so many young men from China upon our colleges is an exceedingly hopeful indication, since they will return imbued with Western ideas and impressed with our Christian civilization. We doubt not that their influence will be powerfully felt in the Orient in a few years.

The annexation of Korea to Japan has finally been accomplished. The New York Independent thus states some of the conditions under which this absorption of the Hermit Kingdom has taken place: "By the convention of annexation Korea has even lost its name. In being transferred to the Japanese Home Department the Hermit Kingdom has been re-christened Cho-Sen—the Land of Morning Calm. By the terms of the annexation convention the Korean court is maintained with an organization parallel to that of the Japanese Crown Prince; the Emperor of Korea becomes Prince GI, and will rank after the Japanese Crown Prince. The existing civil list ($7,000,000) will be continued, but numerous parasitical posts will be abolished. Foreigners are promised the same rights in Korea as in Japan. All treaties existing between Korea and foreign countries were on Monday succeeded by conventions to which Japan is a party. Japan will retain the present tariff for a period of ten years, and will, during the same period, permit foreign vessels to engage in the coasting trade between the Korean open ports, and between those ports and the open ports of Japan."

On August 21st, Sweden celebrated the centennial of the Bernadotte dynasty, now reigning in that country, which is the youngest royal line in Europe. In 1810, Augustenborg, the heir apparent to the throne, died, and the Swedish States in council designated Bernadotte as his successor to that inheritance. Charles XIII was then king, but such were his infirmities that Bernadotte at once became the actual ruler of the country, though he was not crowned until 1818, when Charles passed away. The following facts concerning the founder of the royal house of which King Gustav is now the representative are quite interesting: Bernadotte was the son of a lawyer, of peasant stock, and was born in a humble cottage near Pau. He was intensely democratic, as a boy, and stood as a private in the French army at the foot of the guillotine when Louis XVI was executed. As minister of war, and, on the establishment of the empire, as a marshal of France, he displayed great military genius. When he died, it was as Charles XIV, King of Sweden—but on the right forearm of the dead monarch, long concealed by the royal robes, was found tattooed a picture of a guillotine, with the motto in French, "Death to all kings and tyrants."

WANTED BY PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE, PORT GIBSON, MISS.—Several students who wish to reduce their expenses for a whole session to $102.00 or $77.00 by assisting in our Sewing Department.

A LETTER FROM MONTEAGLE

(The following is a personal letter which we have taken the liberty of publishing. We trust that the author will forgive us for having done so. We felt that it would interest many of our readers.)

Dear Brother Meeky: Born and reared under the shadow of this mountain, it so happens that this is my first visit to Monteagle, and I have been most agreeably surprised by the many attractions to be found here. Not the least of these are the many men and gently women surrounded by their bright-faced broods, who were the associates of my childhood and the friends of my youth. One of these, in particular, I have been pleased to meet, the Hon. John Bell R. B. grandson of the great Tennessee statesman of antebellum days, now chief counsel for the Louisville and Nashville railway, a professor in the Law Department of Vanderbilt University, and pronounced by Senator Chauncey Depew to be the most brilliant after-dinner speaker to whom he had ever listened.

Mr. Keckle and I started to our first school together when we were little children. He has gone a great way since that far-away time, but I find him completely unspoiled.

The mountains always swell my pulses and fire my imagination. I like to hear Bishop Hoss exclaim in exultant tone, "I thank God that I am a mountaineer!" I, too, am half a mountaineer, for my mother was a native of one mountain village and educated in another, both of them just across the range from where I now sit. So you need not wonder that I take some pride in the fact that I saw the light in the old Volunteer State. But in spite of it all, I am a good Mississippian. How could I be less, having received such multifold kindnesses at the hands of its noble citizenship? And I do not propose to subtract one whit from "Old Carroll's" claim to primacy among her sister counties. She has given many brilliant men to the State and Nation, and history will securely preserve her remarkable achievements.

Yesterday was Sunday, and a big sun of another church was billed to preach at the Assembly Hall; but I always fly my own flag, and what a glorious flag it is! There is no banner half so bright, no host half so militant, and the triumphant tread of Wesley's hosts is heard the world around. In this spirit I worshiped at our own Morton Memorial, a very handsome stone structure erected by the unwearying efforts of the accomplished wife of Bishop Hoss. It is perhaps the most beautiful and substantial country church in Southern Methodism.

The preacher was an earnest young man and one of his lessons contained the text from which I heard my father preach his first sermon in "Old McKendree" at the beginning of what is called the "golden age" of that great old congregation. I shall never forget that occasion: a vast audience gathered to hear the new preacher and pass judgment; he announced his text as follows: "I Am hath sent me unto you," and then proceeded to an elaborate discussion of our itinerant system and its defence. He came again on this Sabbath morning and stood before me, as he has done every day since he went away. Some days when my life has not been what it should, I cannot look into his kindly face; but he places his arms around me, as he was wont to do in the olden days, and says: "God bless you, my boy," and wipes away my tears. It is a great thing to have had such a father, and I hope that no day will ever come that I do not feel his touch upon me.

To prove to you that I am not a narrow Methodist, however intense, if one I may be, I must tell you that I am reading a three-volume life of Phillips Brooks. What a wonderful man he was! It is a great pity that his Church failed to catch his spirit and embody it. If you have not read this life you must do so. It may be had of E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

J. D. BARBEE.

Monteagle, Tenn., Aug. 29, 1910.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

FOR SALE:

The Blecker Cottage, on the Seashore Campground, right next to the Beach. Splendid location. Includes furniture. Apply Woodville & Woodville, 1002-1004 Maison Blanche Bldg., or R. G. Price, Seashore Campground.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?

GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH

LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.

736 Union Street.

Phone, Main 535.

Facts About Missions

RESULTS OF EVERY MEMBER CANVASS IN TWENTY-ONE CITIES.

From $2,485.10 to $1,141.11 is the range in total missionary contributions in twenty-one cities that have introduced the every member canvass in the last few months. The canvass was introduced in seventeen of these cities by conventions of the national campaign. In four of them, however, no convention was held and it is notable that the increase in giving is about as large proportionately as in those holding conventions, which shows clearly that it is the canvass which counts, not the convention. Like results have been realized in many other of the convention cities, but the figures have not yet been tabulated. The figures in detail give a very encouraging idea of the possibilities of the Laymen's Movement and the every member canvass:

Convention Cities.

	Amount	Amount
	Contributed by Laymen	Contributed by Women
Richmond, Va.	$ 36,287	$ 63,951
Memphis, Tenn.	19,124	55,132
Louisville, Ky.	32,894	53,500
Nashville, Tenn.	36,699	44,176
Jackson, Miss.	6,729	19,538
New Orleans, La.	13,372	19,137
Jacksonville, Fla.	3,593	12,385
Columbia, S. C.	5,365	12,355
Macon, Ga.	19,125	25,572
Tampa, Fla.	2,745	7,940
Montgomery, Ala.	6,325	19,529
Houston, Tex.	7,962	28,307
El Paso, Tex.	1,894	5,359
Phoenix, Ariz.	2,106	3,555
Huntington, W. Va.	2,636	3,297
Little Rock, Ark.	6,141	12,382
Total	$241,696	$366,691

Cities Holding Follow-Up Campaigns Without Conventions.

	Amount	Amount
	Contributed by Laymen	Contributed by Women
Petersburg, Va.	$ 7,138	$ 12,603
Winston-Salem, N. C.	9,220	14,728
Charlotte, N. C.	14,136	22,265
Chattanooga, Tenn.	9,620	15,393
Total	$ 40,114	$ 64,999
Grand total	$281,810	$431,690

Nothing increases missionary giving like a well conducted every member canvass. It is the best plan yet devised for crystallizing missionary sentiment into tangible form so that it may be sent to the ends of the earth and put to work. Have you had such a canvass in your church yet? The Laymen's Missionary Movement, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., will be glad to supply detailed information as to introducing and carrying out the canvass.

THE LEAVE-TAKING OF MISS NEVADA MARTIN.

Miss Nevada Martin, the missionary, was born and reared a few miles south of Pelahatchie, Miss., in the Shiloh neighborhood, and under the influence of Shiloh Church and camp ground she sprang from a good farm home and of a pious family. Her father is now, and has been for the last twenty or more years, one of the leading spirits in his church. Miss Martin is a graduate of Whitworth College and has been for the last three years at the Scarritt Bible and Training School preparing for missionary work in the foreign field. Her particular work is the kindergarten and training of teachers in Soochow University, China. She leaves her happy home, father, mother, brothers, sisters and a host of loved ones here, Sept. 1st, to join others who are going to the foreign field at Kansas City, Mo., and who will sail from San Francisco in a few days.

The Pelahatchie Woman's Missionary Society gave her a reception at Mrs. P. B. Sumner's in the afternoon of the 29th inst., where most of the ladies and others met her and presented many tokens and gifts which will contribute to her comfort in her new and arduous work. At 8 p. m. that evening the "Nevada Martin Circle," a juvenile missionary circle, gave a formal meeting at the church, where the opening services were participated in by this writer and Professor John Rundle, and then followed an interesting and instructive talk by Miss Martin. A large audience was present and enjoyed the occasion, except for the thought of the separation from one so dearly beloved and honored by our whole community. We give to China a noble young woman and one well equipped for her work. C. McDONALD.

Pelahatchie, Miss., Aug. 31, 1940.

W. F. M. S.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Sisters: Reports give evidence that as a conference society we are reaching forward. We are trying to attain higher heights, to sow in broader fields. This desire is attested by our "sacred aim," which is a greatly increased membership, many names added as subscribers to the Woman's Missionary Advocate and Young Christian Worker, all financial obligations met and a general acceleration of working forces toward the accomplishment of a great end.

At this juncture nothing so prominently presents itself as a factor in reaching our "aim" as a conscientious observance of the "crusade" inaugurated by the Woman's Board, now the Woman's Council of the Board of Missions.

The plans formulated are feasible and easily adapted to any locality and lend themselves to the action of any auxiliary.

Divided into three parts, we find for each month one phase of the work to be emphasized in our efforts during that time.

Your conference secretary has issued letters explaining what is projected for September, October and November. During September we are expected to hold the special remembrance the Scarritt Bible and Training School. This institution, as you know, though located in Kansas City, Mo., belongs no more to other parts of Southern Methodist than to North Mississippi.

During September let us make extra efforts to assure through your district secretary's appropriate literature, as suggested by Mrs. Clark, that information may flood our whole territory. Use the knowledge thus gained so effectively that the announcement of a public meeting will attract large congregations of willing hearers. Any pastor will grant an evening hour for such a service. If a pastor will cheerfully present the work to the people with a short talk or sermon, it need not have young people and children, as well as adults, take part in the program, making it interesting and convincing.

In the collection, let everyone share, be it large or small, not refusing even the widow's mite, if that is truly all one can give.

Friends, whether members or not, let us make this a memorable time when our Lord shall be honored and a worthy cause sustained. Let the annual call for the extra $30 on our scholarship be stopped once for all.

Yes, it takes money. But what successful enterprise does not? May the thought that our Lord sits "over against the treasury," withholding each coin as it falls, stimulate to liberal giving.

For October, we are to stress the formation of study classes, which, having done, we will find that our women have taken a long step forward.

November is given to a general membership crusade. Let no failure in the past deter one single individual from entering heartily into this movement.

Possibilities for tremendous results lie dormant all around us. Women need to awaken to a realization of their own powers; young people and children need to be told: "The Master needs you."

Glorious opportunities beckon even the weakest, for God leads his hosts. Therefore let there be no faltering now. Yours in his service.

MRS. J. F. EVANS.

Sept. Press Work.

LET'S GO IN TO WIN.

To the Pastors and Laymen of the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Brethren: Our Annual Conference session is only about three months off, and much remains to be done before this important event. Our Conference contributed last year for foreign missions on an assessment of $11,250, the sum of $2,500.75 on assessment of $11,100 for domestic missions, $9,749.25 for special missions, $2,949.25, including the $1,111.54 contributed by the W. F. M. Society, this makes a total for missions of $20,150.75, which is an average per member of 49 cents, our total membership being 51,134. Only two districts, the Brookhaven and the Jackson, paid the foreign mission assessment in full. The Jackson and the Seashore Districts each lacked less than ten dollars of their domestic mission assessment in full, but for district paid out on this claim. Eighty-four pastoral charges out of a total of 162 paid their foreign mission assessment in full, and eighty-five paid their domestic mission assessment in full. Who will be so unselfish as to say that we are not able to do far better than last year?

If we are to do our part in the great movement for the world's evangelization in the present generation, the time has come for us to make strenuous effort to advance beyond the small average for Southern Methodism of 48 cents per member for missions, which is not quite one cent per week per member, and seek to reach the goal of $2.00 per member in order that we may care for the 100,000 allotted to our great Church. All the signs indicate that the psychological moment has come for a great advance in missionary enterprise, and shall the Conference that sent the sainted J. W. Lambeth to China lag behind other Conferences?

The Southern Methodist delegation at the great National Missionary Congress held in Chicago last May gave their unanimous approval to the National Policy which was adopted, of which the following was an important part: "We earnestly urge the immediate organization of a missionary committee in each of our churches; an effective educational campaign; a thorough every member canvass; and a weekly offering from all our people." Success is sure wherever this policy is faithfully followed. Let the watchword in our Conference be: "An active missionary committee in every church and full collections for missions in every charge."

Mr. John R. Baper declared at the National Missionary Congress that only one out of every eight men in the average church gives any thing whatever to foreign missions. No wonder our average contribution is so small. The Laymen's Movement calls for the cooperation of every church and of every member of every church.

Fifty-six pastoral charges are this year receiving aid from the Board of Missions, and if through indifference or half-hearted effort, forty or fifty appointments should each fall short ten or fifteen dollars on their missionary assessments, the aggregate deficit would amount to hundreds of dollars. Such a deficit would work a great hardship upon the faithful men serving these mission charges. Let us make a strong pull, pull a pull all together to raise every dollar of our missionary assessments and a good surplus besides. May we not count on you for prayerful and hearty co-operation in making this the best year in missionary offerings and effort that the Mississippi Conference has yet seen? It is the Lord's work. Let us go in to win, and claim the victory in His name. Yours fraternally,

A. M. BLACK.

Secretary Board of Missions, Mississippi Conference, Port Gibson, Miss.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND

of FURNITURE that

Lasts a LIFETIME

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd

Manufacturer of Lumber

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McClosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec. Treas.
Geo. A. Hero.

The Home Circle

HIS CALL TO PREACH.

The carpenter set up his ladder against the house and prepared to make the modest repairs which the church trustees had ordered upon the rented cottage which served as a parsonage for the new minister. To the minister's small boy the occasion was one of importance and delight. He played round the foot of the ladder and plied the carpenter with questions. What was this tool for, and how did he use that one? Would that saw cut a man's leg off, and all the other foolish questions which a boy with intellectual curiosity will ask of any man who is willing to listen. The carpenter was a kindly man and answered the boy's enquiries, and now and then asked a question of his own.

"What's your father's business, sonny?" he inquired.

"He's a minister," said the little lad.

"Well, now, that's fine, ain't it?" said the carpenter. "Just to think of living to do good, telling people how to do right, and sort of helping them to do it! Nothing in this world could be so fine as that!"

The boy looked up, a little surprised at the warmth of the carpenter's word. To him it seemed a much finer thing to be a carpenter, climbing tall ladders and working with sharp and shiny tools. The man, with his foot on the ladder went on:

"Yes, sir, that's the very finest thing that can be. Now, being a carpenter's a great thing. Jesus was a carpenter, and if a man can't preach, why, there isn't anything better than to be a carpenter. But to be a minister, and just to live to help people to be good, why, nothing in the world could be so fine as that!"

The words made a deep impression on the boy. He received them as from one of high authority, a man who could erect tall ladders, and could climb up on houses, and could make things out of wood. Not for a moment did he doubt that to be a carpenter was one of the best things in the world, and to have so great a man speak so of his father's profession set him to thinking.

This small boy had been born into the home of a home missionary, and had spent his few years in moving from one small parish to another. He had not failed to honor his father, nor to count him the greatest and best man in the world, but his father's profession on the one hand had been the simply natural thing, and on the other had represented certain restrictions and hardships for the boy. The word of the carpenter gave him a new reverence for his father's profession, and that which it represented.

Years passed, and the young man saw things in a different perspective. Yet all through his college course, as he thought of his own lifework, the words that he had heard in boyhood came back to him, and ever with a profounder sense of their truth.

One day he stood before a council of ministers to be ordained to the ministry, and was asked to relate his Christian experience.

He told of the home influences and the early life of piety and of inspiration, of his father's hopes and his mother's prayers, and then told the incident as here related. Said he:

"I do not know how it will seem to you, or whether I can make you understand just how that word impressed me as a boy, nor how the feeling that it inspired occurred at intervals through the years. But I think no one incident has meant more to me. In a very true sense I think I can say of it that that was my call to preach. It gave me a new measure of my father's life, and that for which he wrought and sacrificed, and I have been unable to escape the conviction that nothing could be so fine as that."—Youth's Companion.

HOW THE WOODPECKER GOT HIS NAME.

Long, long ago, when King Elephant ruled the animal kingdom, Sir Squirrel, who held at court the high office of Purveyor of Peanuts to His Royal Highness, was found by his king dining upon some choice nuts which the king had intended to eat. For this offense the king banished Sir Squirrel.

King Elephant, however, soon missed Sir Squirrel.

For none of his subjects filled the office of Purveyor to his liking, so he last he decided to place him again in office. The king's heralds went forth to beat to Sir Squirrel this news, but they could not find him.

Sir Fox, the king's chief counsellor, then approached his king.

"Sir," he advised, "let His Highness, Whale, King of Fish, search under his wife's tail. Sir Squirrel is there."

"This good advice," cried King Elephant, "and he at once asked King Whale to do this. But Sir Squirrel was not found."

Sir Fox again came forward.

"Sir," let Her Highness, Owl, Queen of Birds, search this air. He now advised a search in King Elephant's trunk, and did what he said. The Owl was as willing to help as King Whale had been, and sent her subjects to seek Sir Squirrel, but none found him.

At this moment a bird, Bigbeak by name, flew towards them. "I saw Sir Squirrel a league from here, peeping from a hole in a hollow tree. So all the animals and birds set out, with King Elephant, carrying Queen Owl upon one tusk and Bigbeak on the other, in the lead."

The king at last reached Sir Squirrel's tree, and Bigbeak, jealous of his honors, flew from his perch and pecked his way through the hole in which he had seen Sir Squirrel. He kept his beak in the hole so long a time that Queen Owl grew worried, fearing that Sir Squirrel had bitten it off. At last she seized Bigbeak by his tail feathers and pulled him from the hole. Poor Bigbeak, upon this confessed that Sir Squirrel was not in the hole, and that he must have made a mistake. He had not, however, Sir Squirrel had seen the king coming, and thinking that he meant to slay him, fled.

A great uproar followed. King Elephant loudly trumpeted his sorrow, while his subjects reared and howled their grief. Queen Owl and her subjects, now angry at Bigbeak for bringing shame upon their tribe, flew at him, and left him almost bare of feathers. To add to his trouble, as he flew from them, Bigbeak heard his Queen hooting after him. "Not until you have found Sir Squirrel can you return to my court!"

Men in later years saw a bird pecking at trees, and named him Woodpecker, but that bird was none other than Bigbeak. Up to this day he is pecking on trees, which so much like to be the hiding place of Sir Squirrel, making this appeal:

"Sir Squirrel, listen, pray, to me:
No longer excited need you be.
Your lonely life, pray live no more.
Your king your office would restore.
And since no happiness I know
Till to your king with me you go,
If you are in this tree, pray speak.
Mad, mad the heart of poor Bigbeak."

But Sir Squirrel does not understand Bigbeak's appeal, and remains quiet, for he thinks that the king's herald is knocking at his door, so it seems likely that Bigbeak will be a woodpecker forever.—Sunday School Times.

REV. W. G. HARBIN'S BOOK OF SERMONS.

Rev. C. K. Huey, D.D., says: "I have just finished reading the book, 'Mads of The Heavenly Life,' by Rev. Walter G. Harbin, Maynesville, La., and I have never read a more fascinating book of the kind. My heart was strangely warmed as I read the stirring messages from the preaching pen of this gifted pastor-evangelist."

The book is a series of five sermons on the work of the Holy Spirit. The author has given the world a small book that will long abide. It is truly said, "No one can read it without being stirred to holier aspirations." by Dr. R. A. Black, in the introduction. The book may move you to tears as it did me. It is sure to make you want to be a better person and inspire you to greater and more heroic service for our Master.

The style is easy and inviting to all classes of readers. The English is good, the diction is pure and the illustrations are well chosen and convincing. The book is modern and yet sound and biblical. The one section on power is worth the price of the entire volume. The book, which is neatly and well arranged on good paper, sells for seventy-five cents, and can be had from the author, or the New Orleans Christian Advocate, New Orleans, La.

PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE.

On Sept. 14, 1910, the Female College will open its doors for the seventh session, and the indications are that it will be the most successful in its history up to this time. Nearly all the rooms are already occupied, and President Hawkins is expecting fully one hundred boarding pupils. The building and grounds have been put in the best of shape for the coming of the students and teachers. The painter and the janitor have been busy, and everything in and about the college looks as bright and clean as a brand-new silver dollar. A new room, which will prove of great advantage, has just been added to the equipment.

The faculty for the coming session numbers forty-eight, several members of which have taken special courses in Germany and elsewhere during the summer. All are duly equipped for their work.

A serious question which there is a college-wide interest in is the fact that there is a better record for health than at Port Gibson Female College, especially during the summer vacation. President Hawkins, the physical, intellectual, and religious welfare of the students is carefully and carefully looked after, hence it is a thoroughly safe school in every respect.

I am glad to see that the college and its faculty are held in the highest esteem in this, its home town. Of the seven who composed the graduating class last May, three were from Port Gibson. The sermon to the students will be preached the first Sunday after the opening by Rev. J. L. Neill, of Lorain, Miss. M. M. BLACK, Pastor, Port Gibson, Miss.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER.

Gumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co.

INCORPORATED.

DOCTOR
Tichenor's
Antiseptic

THE GO-BETWEEN

whether it be a Burn, Bruise, or Scald—

DR. TICHENOR'S ANTISEPTIC

affords instant relief. Its cooling effect prevents congestion, and the antiseptic qualities prevent swelling, blistering and supuration afterwards.

"It draws the fever"—you cannot afford to be without it at home.

All druggists 25 and 50 cts.

ASK ANY ONE WHO HAS EVER USED IT!

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POST OFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.
OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Mounger, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woodard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

A HOPELESS WARFARE.

A recent dispatch from London to the American secular press stated that a general movement is under way in Europe to organize a world-wide warfare upon revealed religion. According to this report a convention of freethinkers was scheduled to meet in Brussels on August 21, when definite plans were to be formulated and means procured for launching an anti-religious propaganda upon a larger scale than has ever before been attempted. Among those eminent in the scientific and literary world mentioned as being in full sympathy with the purposes of this gathering are Dr. Ernest Haeckel, of Germany; M. Anatole France, of the French Academy, and Joseph McCabe, of England. It is said that a skeptical literature will be created that can be sold at a low price, and that a vigorous and persistent effort will be made to uproot and destroy the superstition known as Christianity.

Certain it is that these gentlemen are not proposing to essay an easy task. The fabled labors of Hercules were mere trifles compared to the undertaking to which they are said to be about to address themselves. The impress of the Founder of Christianity is deeply stamped upon nearly every phase and institution of the world's foremost civilizations. He has largely taken possession of the art, the literature, the music, and the philosophy of mankind. The commerce and wealth and activities of the globe are overwhelmingly Christian; the educational equipment of the nations is chiefly in countries where Christ is regnant. Charity scarcely exists except where his name is honored, and the influence of his teaching has carried a beautiful humanitarianism to war's red fields and promises in the not-distant future to hush forever the cannon's roar. In the realm of chronology the sway of the Man of Galilee could scarcely be more complete. As has been said, to his birth all preceding history points, and from it all subsequent history dates. Not only among the shining hosts above, but also among the millions of earth, his name is above every name. The vision of the planet wrapped in redemptive glory at his feet, is becoming less a prophet's dream, and more a blessed reality, with every passing year.

Destroy Christianity! Why, it would be as easy to tear the earth from its place in the solar system, or to blow out the unquenchable light of the sun. No, not there is not a particle of danger of these learned skeptics overturning the religion of Christ. They will utterly fail in their efforts to do this, as infidelity has so signally failed in like attempts in the past. The utmost that they will be able to do—and that is enough to awaken an immeasurable feeling of sorrow and regret—is to lead a number of people astray and perhaps wreck them for both time and eternity. Herein lies the danger of all forms of modern unbelief, whether in the Church or out of it. Higher criticism can never destroy the Bible, but as Bishop Wilson said in his great sermon at the last session of the Baltimore Conference, the critics may criticize the minds of the people away from the sacred Word and leave them to perish for the bread of life.

Christianity will stand, because it is the truth. That which is true must ultimately prevail. Sophistry may temporarily obscure it, but it can not overthrow it. The fact that God exists and reigns guarantees the final supremacy of truth and righteousness. Infidelity must fail, because it is false. There is no permanent conquering might in error; time will unmask it and leave it shattered beside the way of human progress. Infidelity is destructive. It tears down; it builds nothing. It takes away that for which it has no substitute. What do these apostles of unbelief offer in place of the Christ they would take from us? With what would they comfort us when they have destroyed the Bible? Having blotted God out of existence and obliterated the judgment, what source of moral obligation would they establish? Annihilating immortality and heaven, what do they promise for the future?

Skepticism has done nothing to commend it to mankind. It has organized no State, constructed no civilization, produced no unselfish and self-sacrificing characters. Almost its only achievement of note in human history has been the production of a speculative and hurtful literature.

The following quotation from the accomplished pen of James Russell Lowell is not an unreasonable challenge to those who would tear down the superstructure of our holy Christianity:

"Some gentlemen tell us very complacently that they have no need of religion; they can get along well enough without it. Let me tell you, my friends, the worst kind of religion is no religion at all. And these men who live in ease and luxury, indulging themselves in the amusement of going without religion, may be thankful that they live in lands where the gospel they neglected has tamed the beastliness and ferocity of the men who, but for Christianity, might long ago have eaten their bodies like the South Sea Islanders; or cut off their heads like the monsters of the French Revolution. When the microscopic search of skepticism, which has hunted the heavens and sounded the seas to disprove the existence of a Creator, has turned its attention to human society, and has found a place on this planet ten miles square where a decent man can live in decency, comfort and security, supporting and educating his children unspoiled and unpolluted; a place where age is revered, infancy respected, womanhood honored, and human life held in due regard—when the skeptic can find such a place on this globe where the gospel of Christ has not gone and cleared the way, and laid the foundations and made decency and security possible, it will then be in order for the skeptical literati to move thither, and there ventilate their views. But so long as these men are dependent upon religion which they discard for every privilege they enjoy, they may well hesitate a little before they seek to rob the Christian of his hope and humanity of its faith in that Savior who alone has given to man that hope of eternal life which makes life tolerable and society possible, and robs death of its terrors and the grave of its gloom."

Infidelity can not win, because there is nothing in it that appeals to the burdened, struggling masses of humanity. Man in his deepest nature is disposed to be religious. Doubts he may have, but they are only on the surface. His instincts, extending to the very depths of his being, all incline him to believe in God and his accountability to him and dependence upon him. However much men may forget their Creator in the time of prosperity, when disaster comes practically all men pray. Conscious of their weakness, they cry to the Infinite and Omnipotent One for help. Dr. B. M. Palmer says, in his "Theology of Prayer," that even profanity itself is an unconscious attestation of belief in Deity.

And not only the heart, but also the head protests against the teachings of skepticism. The rational mind must believe that behind the mechanism of the universe there stands a Supreme Intelligence. Correct reason must conclude that creation began not with inanimate matter, but with a living, thinking Person. The earth, our solar system, the multitudinous stars, and other suns and systems are in existence. Whence came they?

"Who drew creation's stately plan,
And laid its first deep corner-stone?
Or, who decreed omniscient man,
And crowned him Lord of earth alone?
What hand inlaid night's dome with stars,
And set each system's morning sun?
Put up Aurora's blazing bars,
And fixed the bound of every zone?
And who alone the comet guides
In one right line a thousand years,
And holds at will the boundless tides
That swell the music of the spheres?
Yes, tell me, ye who scorn the light
That shines on every reverent soul,
What solves the problem here of night—
What Power sustains the wondrous whole?
Whence Law and Order's perfect reign,
Mid orbs above andneath the sod?
Oh! every throb in heaven's vast main,
And every voice on earth, says—God."

WOMEN AS CHURCH DESERTERS.

In a brief article under this caption, The Literary Digest of last week makes the following statement: "It is said on the authority of such evangelists as Dr. Chapin, Gipsy Smith, and George Stuart that five men are now being converted in their meetings to every one woman." This is a reversal of an earlier state of things that led scoffers to rail at the Church as an institution of women and children.

For the eminent revivalists mentioned by our distinguished contemporary, we entertain a very high regard, and we do not at all doubt the correctness of any statement they may have made as to what is transpiring in their meetings. But we are far from accepting the implied suggestion of The Literary Digest that this condition is general, or that there is at this time any unusual drift of women away from the Church. The observations of three or four men do not furnish sufficient data for a broad and sweeping generalization. To see that women yet constitute the world's most active religions force, one only needs to open his eyes and look about him. There have always been women who were worldly and indifferent to Christianity, and there always doubtless will be until the dawn of the millennium; but they to-day constitute much the larger percentage of practically every denomination. They very nearly make up the average prayer meeting; they do most of the teaching in our Sunday schools; their activity in missionary work is unabating, and they form vastly the larger part of nearly every worshiping congregation. We believe that if accurate statistics, showing the number of males and females received into the Church within the past twelve months for the entire United States, were available, it would overwhelmingly refute the claim that men are now more responsive to the call of the gospel than women.

We sincerely wish it were true that our male population were beginning to manifest an increased susceptibility to religious influence and a more active interest in Christian work. It is high time they were doing so. But as yet we see no general indication of it. The laymen's movement, while it has accomplished much, has scarcely touched the vast body of our men.

As we confront the decades of the twentieth century with their open doors and perplexing problems, and pause to estimate our resources, we frankly confess that in our opinion we have no human reliance that promises more in the way of strength and support than the mighty host of faithful women who stand ever ready to work and sacrifice for the extension of the Master's kingdom. Woman's record in Christian service through the centuries has been unsurpassed. Of her it has been beautifully said:

"Not she with traitorous kiss her Savior stung;
Not she denied him with unholy tongue;
She, when apostles shrank, could dangers brave,
Last at the cross and earliest at the grave."

Nor do we fear anything like a general abandonment of the cause of Christ upon the part of modern womanhood. Woman's devotion is, in our judgment, one of the things upon which we may with the most certainty depend. We believe, as some one has said, that if Christianity should ever go down, its last votary would be a woman, and its final earthly retreat would be a woman's heart.

A SUGGESTIVE STORY.

We appropriate the following suggestive story from our worthy contemporary, The Raleigh Christian Advocate, which also quoted it from some exchange, the name of which is not given.

The editor died and was, of course, directed to the abode of the just, but on his way there his journalistic curiosity asserted itself and he asked of his guide if it was permitted to look at—er—the other place. "Certainly," was the gracious reply, and down they went. There was much to interest the editor, and he scurried about and was soon lost to view. Finally his angelic escort got worried, and after a long search found him, softly fanning himself and gazing at the spirits in a blazing furnace, over the entrance of which was the legend: "Delinquent Subscribers." "Come," said the angel, "we must be going." "You go on," said the editor without lifting his eyes; "I am not coming; this is heaven enough for me."

Our friends must not construe this story too literally. We wish our delinquent subscribers every good thing in the present life, and also pray that they may escape the wrath to come. But a hint to the wise should be sufficient. We have two thousand names on our books that it would immensely please us to mark renewed. The Advocate—the only Methodist paper published in Mississippi and Louisiana—urgently needs the money. Why not make remittance TO-DAY?

OUR EDUCATIONAL PROPERTY.

The following statement concerning the educational institutions and equipment of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was sent out to the secular press from Nashville on August 24:

"In the universities, colleges, and schools under the jurisdiction of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the Church owns property to the value of over $12,000,000. Vanderbilt University representing more of this amount than any other institution. The sixteenth annual report of the Board of Education of the Church, just off the presses, gives the complete statistics of the Church's educational interests, and the reports of all matters of the Board and bodies subordinate to it. In all the schools the total endowment is $4,500,000. This amount is divided among one university, ten class A colleges, five class B colleges, twenty-four unclassified institutions, fifty-one academies and minor institutions, five negro schools, two special institutions and thirty-six in foreign fields. The annual income from endowment, tuition, assessments and other sources is $1,813,042. Total enrollment in all of these schools is 32,051. Southwestern University at Georgetown, Texas, having the largest number. Twenty-nine new buildings were erected during the last year at a cost of $348,950.

This is not a bad showing. Indeed, compared with the educational work of our sister denominations, it is quite creditable. Yet it must be confessed that our facilities for instruction are painfully inadequate and that the present outlook for Christian education is fraught with the gravest perils. As Methodists, we need to stand heartily by our schools and support them both with our means and patronage. They need to be speedily strengthened and enlarged in their resources. And only men who are known to be loyal to the core to church ownership and control should be entrusted with their management. No work before us is more pressing and important than that of conserving and increasing our educational forces. Upon them largely depends the future of Southern Methodism.

TRUE AND TIMELY.

We have long held the view that the preaching which counts is that which deals with the great essential truths of Christianity in a dignified, positive, and forceful manner. Sensational utterances from the pulpit may create a temporary stir, but they seldom exert an abiding influence. Never was a faithful exposition of the gospel more needed than now, when innumerable of breasts the human conscience seems to have gone to sleep, and man's accountability to a Supreme Being appears to be largely forgotten. In view of the general religious situation at present, we consider the following brief editorial in The Western Christian Advocate, of Cincinnati, in its issue of July the 27th, as pertinent and timely.

Bishop McIntyre, it seems, has been deprecating to the young men of the Troy Conference what he calls "ragtime preaching," and which he defines as sermons dealing with no try, politics, literature, and travel. Look's Weekly seems to think the Bishop hit the bull's-eye, and says: "The Bishop's warning would be good advice for the young minister of any denomination to have ringing in his ears as he goes to his first charge. To the laymen such preaching seems to indicate a dearth of ideas and a lack of conviction concerning the great central truths of religion. Why cannot the man behind the pulpit remember that he calls for no theological training or ceremony of ordination to deliver political tirades or read essays on poetry and literature, and that likewise it is not at all necessary for people to go to church simply to hear such themes discussed? The minister who desires to be a growing influence for righteousness is more apt to realize it through an ardent presentation of the great truths of religion than by ragtime methods."

PERSONAL.

Rev. W. T. Griffin, of Gulfport, has been recreating in Chicago for some weeks.

Bishop W. A. Candler will dedicate the Twenty-first Avenue Methodist Church in Birmingham next Sunday.

Dr. Felix R. Hill writes that Centenary College will open Sept. 14th. Many improvements have been made, and everything points to a prosperous session.

Dr. J. A. Rigo, of the Rayne Memorial Church, this city, is expected to occupy his pulpit next Sabbath. A hearty greeting will be given him by his many friends and admirers.

Rev. L. W. Campbell delighted the people of Meadville, Miss., with a series of stirring sermons a few days since. The Master honored his earnest messages and much good was accomplished.

Rev. L. T. Sargent, of the Greenwood Springs Circuit (Mississippi), has had up to date 41 accessions on profession of faith. We have an interesting report from his work which will appear next week.

Rev. Hugh Jamieson called at the office last Wednesday. He will spend a few days with relatives in the city. Hereafter correspondents will please address him at Shreveport, La., instead of Bossier City.

Have you mentioned the matter of renewing subscriptions to the Advocate to your people? If not, why not do so next Sunday? We earnestly invoke the assistance of every pastor in this needed work.

Rev. A. A. Bernard, pastor at Melville, La., is being assisted by Rev. A. R. Hoffpauir in a meeting at Bethel Church, which was built in 1880 by Rev. J. F. Wynn. The prospects for a great revival are said to be excellent.

Dr. F. N. Parker preached at the Second Methodist Church, this city, last Sunday at 11 o'clock. Rev. A. J. Townsley preached at Rayne Memorial at the same hour. It is needless to say that both congregations heard helpful messages.

Mr. James Hapt, of Purvis, Miss., in making a remittance to the office, adds: "It is a pleasure to renew my subscription to the Advocate, for I consider it a first-class paper and enjoy it very much." Thank you, brother, we highly appreciate your commendatory words.

Flora, Miss., has recently had a fine meeting. There were 40 conversions, 20 additions to the church, 20 family altars established, and the membership generally was greatly stirred. The services were conducted by Evangelist D. E. Kelley, and the pastor, Rev. L. L. Roberts.

It is reported that on account of health considerations Dr. H. M. Whiting has asked to be relieved of his charge—First Church, Shreveport—and that he will return to Texas. It is said that Dr. Felix R. Hill, president of Centenary College, will probably supply the vacant pulpit until Conference.

Rev. W. V. Shearer has just closed a gracious revival at Carolina Church on the Boonville Circuit, North Mississippi Conference. There were 22 conversions on the night of the 2d inst. The preaching was done by Rev. R. M. Evans, of Crawford. The Lord is greatly blessing Brother Shearer in his labors.

Two New Orleans pastors who have taken practically no vacation are Dr. S. H. Werlein and the Rev. C. D. Atkinson. Dr. Werlein is kept busy with the numerous departments of his institutional work at First Church, and Brother Atkinson is a prince of hustlers. Both are making their influence felt in the city.

In sending in his fourth round of appointments, Rev. G. H. Galloway, of the Vicksburg District, says: "The year is rapidly closing, and the promise is for a better close than usual. We are having good revivals all over the district. Brother Galloway and his co-workers have wrought well for the Church in that important field."

Rev. E. E. Langford, of Brooksville, Miss., is making things move in that delightful charge. He has had a net gain of 26 members, and has secured 25 subscribers to the Advocate. He is expecting Bishop McCoy to hold his fourth quarterly conference in conjunction with his worthy presiding elder, the Rev. J. E. Thomas, on the 20th inst.

Dr. W. H. LaPrade and wife passed through the city on last Monday, returning to their home in Mississippi from a visit to their son, Rev. W. H. LaPrade, Jr., in Oxford, Ga. We regret our failure to see this friend of our Emory days, and this daughter of the lamented Dr. L. M. Smith, one time president of Emory.—Wesleyan Christian Advocate of Sept. 2.

It was with sorrow that we learned that Rev. W. J. Newson, of Port Vincent, La., has been down with an attack of typhoid fever, but we are pleased to be informed that he is now convalescent and will soon be able to resume his loved employ. We trust that he will speedily regain his strength and find himself equal to the task of closing out with large success the work of the year.

Rev. N. E. Alford, of Bogalusa, La., was in the city last week and honored the Advocate office with a call. His present charge is St. Tammany Circuit. He says he has the largest field, the hardest work, the roughest roads, and the best people of any preacher in the Louisiana Conference. He gladdened the heart of the publisher by bringing a list of eight subscribers, some new and some renewals.

At a meeting of the Protestant Ministers' Association of New Orleans last Monday it was resolved to inaugurate a movement for the suppression of disorderly houses out of the restricted district. The Charity Hospital presented its monthly report, and Miss Violet Bell, the missionary who represents the organization at that institution, was given a month's leave of absence with full pay.

We regret to learn that Henry Barton, the little son of the Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Lewis, of Clarksdale, has been critically ill. At one time his life was well-nigh despaired of, but thanks to the faithful work of Dr. T. M. Dye, he was considerably improved when we last heard from him. The people of Clarksdale were most kind and attentive during the days of anxiety, and left nothing undone to attest their interest and solicitude.

What says the label on your paper as to the present status of your subscription to the Advocate? If you are in arrears, please renew. We want our subscription list to speedily improve in every respect. From now until the middle of October we desire our friends to make a special effort in behalf of the paper. Let every reader lend a helping hand. We ought to aspire to make ours the best Conference organ in the connection.

A dispatch to the Times-Democrat from Harrison, Miss., on Sept. 4th, stated that Rev. J. L. Neill closed a meeting at Cane Ridge the day preceding with eleven applications for church membership. A revival at Harrison was begun last Sunday, the initial sermons being preached by Rev. H. G. Hawkins, of Port Gibson Female College, and Rev. J. W. Campbell, of Fayette. Evangelist Kelley was expected to assume control of the services Monday evening.

After a stay of four months in San Antonio, Mrs. Amos Kendall returned to Houston, Texas, on Sept. 6th. Her present address in that city is 1009 Tuam Avenue. Sister Kendall writes that she does not want to miss a copy of the Advocate, that it gives her the home news, and that she thoroughly enjoys it. She may be assured that her hosts and friends in North Mississippi hold her name in loving remembrance, and that they will be delighted to have even this brief item of news from her.

Dr. H. M. Bullock's discussion of the Vanderbilt question in Zion's Herald of Aug. 25th, which was in the nature of a reply to the editor of that periodical, left nothing to be desired. It was courteous, able and convincing—a timely and complete defence of the course of the General Conference and the representatives of the Church in seeking to maintain the rights of Southern Methodism in Vanderbilt University. Dr. Parkhurst showed little ability either to justify his position or make an orderly retreat.

Under date of 31st ult. Rev. Paul M. Brown, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, writes: "Our district mourns again the loss of one of its most faithful and efficient stewards, Brother E. R. White, son of the Rev. E. R. White, of sainted memory. He died at his home at Gold Dust, La., Aug. 10. He will be sorely missed by his church and community. A suitable memoir will doubtless be furnished the Advocate. We deeply sympathize with the stricken family and church, and pray that God may help them to bear up bravely under their great loss."

A magnificent banquet was given Bishops Kilgo and McCoy at the tabernacle of the Ensley Methodist Church, of which Rev. J. A. Bowen is pastor, on Aug. 26th. Two hundred and fifty guests were present, a number of brilliant addresses were made, and good fellowship was at high tide. The Alabama Christian Advocate reports that in the course of his interesting speech, Bishop McCoy said that on the occasion of his recent visit to Mississippi a little Baptist girl asked her Methodist chum the difference between a Bishop and a presiding elder. The little Methodist quickly answered, "Why, that's easy; a Bishop is the only man who can take the best piece of chicken from the presiding elder."

We are indebted to Mrs. Bessie W. Lipscomb, the accomplished lady principal of Whitworth College, for the following interesting item of information: "Miss Nevada Martin, of Pelahatchie, Miss., will sail for China from San Francisco on the steamship Siberia on Sept. 13. She goes to take up kindergarten work at Soochow, and is the third young lady from the Mississippi Conference to be stationed in that city, the other two being Miss Janie Watkins and Miss Nell Drake." Sister Lipscomb asks that the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society make special prayer that Miss Martin may have a safe voyage, and that her labors in the Orient may be crowned with success.

We greatly regret to chronicle the death of Dr. E. D. Yeates, of Starkville, Miss., which occurred at the home of his son, Mr. William Yeates, in Grenada, on Sept. 12. Though he had been in feeble health for some months, his death was sudden and unexpected. He was 65 years old, having been born in Starkville in 1845. He was a Confederate soldier and made a fine record in military service. He stood well as a physician, was a loyal member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and a Christian of irreproachable life. A man of more kindly heart or greater readiness to go to the relief of the needy and suffering, we have not known. His beloved wife, a woman of unusual accomplishments and culture, passed away perhaps a couple of years ago. Dr. Yeates lived worthily, served well his day and generation, and now sleeps with other loved ones in the cemetery at Starkville, leaving behind the fragrance of a good name. We extend profound sympathy to the sorrowing relatives and friends.

The Centenary College of Louisiana.

Fall Term will
open Sept. 14, 1910.

For Catalogues or other information write to FELIX R. HILL, President,
or
JOHN S. JOHNSTON, Dean,
SHREVEPORT, LA.

I Was Deaf 25 Years

NOW I HEAR WHISPERS

C. P. WAY
Inventor
I stand back of every claim made for my drum.
CEO. P. WAY, 8 Adelaide Street, DETROIT, MICH.

SAW YOUR WOOD

With a FOLDING SAWING MACHINE, you can saw your own wood in 10 hours. See the new folding sawing machine. Folding Sawing Mach. Co. 135 E. Harrison St., Chicago, Ill.

UNCLE SAM WANTS YOU

for the Railway Mail Service. Examinations everywhere soon. We coach you to insure success. Salary $150 monthly. Appointment for life. Work only half-time on full pay. Wonderful opportunity for young men with ambition. Write immediately for booklet. AMERICAN STANDARD RAILWAY INSTITUTE, Dept. 50, Kansas City, Mo.

VISIT

MINERAL WELLS

FOR HEALTH AND PLEASURE
AND

WEST TEXAS

For
FINE AGRICULTURAL LANDS
REACHED VIA

EXCURSION TICKETS ON SALE DAILY.

Write for Free Booklet.

E. P. TURNER,

General Passenger Agent, DALLAS, TEXAS

QUEEN & CRESCENT ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves at 8:00 a.m.

Instead of at 9:20 a.m. as formerly.

22 Hours to Asheville

THROUGH SLEEPERS ON MONDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, and FRIDAYS.

24 Hours to Cincinnati

Through Sleepers Daily. Dining Cars.

Train No. 2 Leaves at 7:30 p.m.

FOR

NEW YORK, CINCINNATI, ST. LOUIS.

SUMMER TOURIST TICKETS NOW ON SALE.

INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUPS UNBREAKABLE POINTED TOP STYLE

Requires no tipping back of the head—no washing by hand—no breakage.

WRITE FOR ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE
LE PAGE
INDIVIDUAL COMMUNION CUP CO
TORONTO - CANADA

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

JOHN WESLEY BARLOW died July 16, 1910, aged 76 years. He gave his heart to God when he was a young man, and joined the M. E. Church, South. He was true to God, and faithful to his pastor and church. I conducted the funeral service in the presence of the largest congregation I was told that ever met in Harrisville on such an occasion. We laid his remains to rest beside his wife (who preceded him the 7th of last March) to await the resurrection of the just.
R. T. NOLEN, P. C.

Mrs. ANNIE ELIZABETH ECHOLS was born in Choctaw County, Miss., in 1849, and died at her home near Virgil, Miss., June 26, 1910. In 1861 she united with the M. E. Church, South, at Andrew's Chapel Church, Rankin County, Miss. She was married to Mr. C. Echols in June, 1871; there were born to them five boys and five girls; all survive her yet except one boy. The husband was called before his wife. Mrs. Echols was faithful in walking in the path of righteousness for many years before her death, but now she is gone—transplanted in the heavenly land; she has fought life's last battle and is at rest.
D. E. VICKERS, P. C.

Mrs. ELIZABETH HESTER left her home near Acona, Miss., on July 6, 1910, for that home prepared for the people of God. Mamma, as I called her (for she had been a mother to me since I married her daughter, Mollie, in 1890), gave her heart to God and joined the M. E. Church, South, when a young lady, and remained a faithful member until her death at the age of seventy-six. She was laid to rest beside her husband, who had preceded her to the Father's house, twenty-one years. Pray that all of us—children and grandchildren—may so live that some day we shall meet on that beautiful shore, where there shall be no parting. Mamma, by the help of the Lord, we are coming. Her preacher boy.
R. T. NOLEN.

OTHA JOHNS was born Aug. 16, 1894, and died in Gallman, Miss., Aug. 6, 1910. Always a lovable, obedient boy, he was much more so after uniting with the Methodist Church at Gallman, in 1909. While surrounded by circumstances which did not always give him the best advantages, he was yet always bright and happy, never failing to come to school or Sunday school with a smile on his face and a word of polite greeting for his teachers. Though never a leader in his classes, we all admired him for his quiet persistence in well-doing. We sympathize with his loved ones in their sorrow and pray that they may get a blessing from this affliction. May God help them and us so to live that we may meet him in heaven.
HIS TEACHERS AND CLASSMATES

Truly, with hearts bowed down, we pay this tribute of love to our departed co-worker in the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of Jefferson Street M. E. Church, South, Miss SUSIE H. REED, who after years of physical pain, borne with true Christian submission, "passed over the river" to rest under the shade of the trees, July 28, 1910. While we kiss the chastening rod, we feel that as a society, we are deeply bereaved—that our loss is beyond repair. Faithful and true in all good works, her heart was especially in that of foreign missions. Ever ready and willing to answer every call to the Master's work here on earth, so was she ready and willing to answer his call. "Well done, good and faithful servant," enter thou into the joys of thy God. She knew the end was near, and sank to sleep in the arms of Jesus, saying: "It is all right to suffer, all right to go, Jesus is with me." Therefore, be it resolved, that we tender our sincerest sympathy to the stricken family, saying with them: "God called her home." He thought it best. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family; also to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and be recorded on the Minutes of the society.

MRS. A. E. WYATT,
MRS. W. A. OBER,
MRS. G. J. BALME.

ASHTON BERAUD was born in Lafayette, La., May 18, 1888, and died July 31, 1910. He was the eldest son of Dr. P. D. Beraud and Mrs. Callie Girard Beraud. At the time of the death he was a student in the Medical Department of Tulane University and would have completed his course in 1912. He was reared in a Christian home and was dedicated by baptism in his infancy to the service of God. At the age of ten he united with the church and was a faithful and consistent Christian. Those who had the privilege of living close to his heart, and who knew of his spiritual life, tell of its depth and serenity. In his home he was a source of joy. His strong character and cheerful disposition gave great comfort to his widowed mother. She leaned heavily upon him and not once did his strength fail. He was popular among all classes and a favorite in his own social circle. His tragic death has brought unspeakable sorrow to a multitude of hearts. And yet, it is not a sorrow of despair, for he inherited the promises and has been made a citizen of the kingdom of God. May the good Father in his tender mercy comfort the sorrowing loved ones.
A. FLOYD VAUGHAN, Lafayette, La., Aug. 14, 1910.

On July 26, 1910, at the old home, ALYCE NEEL BROCKEY passed from this life and entered the life beyond. For more than a year she had been a great, but hopeful sufferer, and even those who loved her most and feel her loss most keenly realize that to her it was a sweet release. When quite young she united with the Methodist Church under the ministry of Rev. W. H. Lewis, who was then pastor, and she continued the relation until the end. Her life was a beautiful one because of its modesty and simplicity. She was held in loving esteem by everyone who knew her. She was happily married to Mr. M. A. Brockey, of Little Rock, Ark. On this union two sweet little boys came to make their home happy. Being of a delicate frame, she fell a victim to the awful and dreaded white plague, and it was wonderful to see how hopelessly she battled with the disease. She was anxious to live, for she had so much to live for, but she was not afraid to die and when death came she passed away sweetly, as she had prayed to do without a struggle. Among friends and loved ones she was laid away at the family cemetery at Bethesda, but we hope to meet her again in the beautiful beyond where there will be no parting and good bye.

A precious one from us has gone.
The voice we loved is still.
The place made vacant in the home
Can never more be filled.
Our Father in his wisdom called.
The hour his love had given.
And though on earth the body lies,
The soul is safe in heaven.
A FRIEND.

NOTICE.

We are very anxious to secure the services of a good Christian lady, to take charge of the cooking department in our Orphanage. A Methodist lady is preferred. A woman without children, or other incumbrance, if possible. To the right person we can offer a good position and a permanent home. Please communicate at once with
ROBT. W. VAUGHAN,
Superintendent,
Louisiana Methodist Orphanage,
Ruston, La.

Whitworth College.

Twenty carefully selected teachers and officers. More than two hundred students last session. A most excellent literary course leading to the degrees of L.B. and A.B. Departments of Music, (including piano, violin and voice culture) expression, art, commerce.

Next Session begins Sept. 8, 1910.

For Catalogue address
WHITWORTH COLLEGE
BROOKHAVEN, MISS.

"THE SCHOOL THAT CARES."

Not Crowded
Takes only 250

RUSKIN CAVE COLLEGE

No football or tobacco

SAFEST PLACE IN SOUTH.

Free Cate.
Ask Pres. E. E. SMITH, Rusk, Tenn.

RANDOLPH-MACON ACADEMY

For Boys and Young Men.
Fits for college, scientific schools or business. Work endorsed by over 30 colleges and universities. Beautiful and healthful location. Athletic grounds; gymnasium. Terms only $20. No extras. For catalogue, address E. SUMTER SMITH, Principal, Bedford City, Va.

Vanderbilt University

NASHVILLE, TENN.

1007 STUDENTS 100 TEACHERS
CAMPUS OF 80 ACRES

New College Hall and Chemical Laboratory Just Completed

Expenses low. Literary courses for graduates and undergraduates. Professional courses in Engineering, Law, Medicine, Dentistry, Pharmacy, Theology. Send for catalogue, naming department.
J. E. HART, Secretary.

"Ticket"

please, to Port Gibson, Miss. They say $177 pays board, laundry, tuition, medical, library, Lyceum and outing fees at the PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE a whole session.

SAWTELL SCHOOL OF MILLINERY

Only in the South.
All branches of millinery, success fully taught by correspondence. Fully equipped factory, with every modern machine and tool. Catalogue free. Write to Miss Sawtell,
Whitehall Street, Atlanta, Ga.

SOUTHERN SEATING

and

CABINET COMPANY

Manufacturers

HIGH GRADE CHURCH

FURNITURE

Largest and Oldest Makers of Church Furniture in the South
Jackson, Tennessee.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM

Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effectual form. For grown people and children, 50c.

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 101 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER AND NO HOUSE HOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

BABY SAVED HER

"I was sick for three years," writes Mrs. Nollie L. of Russellville, Tenn. "I had a doctor and took medicine regularly, but grew worse, until last spring I was past going out and was just skin and bones."

"One day I noticed my baby playing with one of your Ladies Birthday Almanacs. I picked it up and from it learned of your Wine of Cardui."

"I have taken 4 bottles of Cardui and am well and hearty. Weigh 145 pounds. I believe Cardui saved my life and I hope all women who suffer as I did will try it."

Cardui is a pure, vegetable medicine for women. It has been found to relieve or cure nervousness, headache, backache, pain in the side and other female ailments.

If you are suffering, try Cardui at once. Thousands of letters come to us from grateful women who have found relief in Cardui. If it has done so much for them, it surely will help you—just one more. Try it.

All reliable druggists sell Cardui, with full directions for use inside wrapper.

N. B. We will be glad to send you one of our Ladies Birthday Almanacs, if you will send postal card, asking for it. Address: Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00
St. Louis, $26.00
Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares

To ALL Principal Points in the United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone, Main 3618.

CLYMYER
BCHURCH
BELLS.

UNBEATABLE BELLS
SWANEE, MORE DURABLE, LOWER PRICE.
WRITE FOR CATALOGUE
TELLS WHY.

ESTABLISHED 1858.
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Write for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57.
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

Bowden
CHURCH & SCHOOL BELLS
Catalog, Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

Marriages

Aug. 27, 1910, at the home of the bride's parents, Indian Haven, La., by Rev. R. A. Morgan, M. C., Mr. SAMUEL Q. WALKER of Houston, Tex., to Miss MARY GORE of Arcadia, La.

July 15, 1910, at the home of the bride's parents, Indian Haven, La., by Rev. R. A. Morgan, M. C., Mr. CLAYTON MORGAN and Miss OLIVIA FOREMAN.

Aug. 22, 1910, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Crawford, Indian Haven, La., by Rev. G. A. Morgan, M. C., Mr. PAUL WALKER and Miss WILLIE MAGDALENE CRAWFORD.

On Sunday, Aug. 22, 1910, at the Methodist parsonage in Indian Haven, La., by Rev. W. Wilkins, D. D., Mr. JOSEPH A. SPAULDING, formerly of Nashville, Tenn., to Miss ELEANOR C. FRANKLIN, daughter of R. H. C. Murphy, local itinerant of the Louisiana Conference.

A WORD OF COMMENDATION.

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of the North Mississippi Conference, writes this of Mrs. Miller's book, Abethel, or "As the lion it breathes like a serpent, and sineth like an adder."

"If you want to read a little book which is truly a good story which is thrillingly interesting, so that almost anybody, young or old, that begins will finish it, which is morally and spiritually invigorating and inspiring in striking contrast to the average novel now in vogue, and which is in structure and style of fact, though it will surprise some to know that such facts are true in our sister State today, read, and give to your older children and friends to read, Mrs. Martha Carolyn Kell Miller's book, just published by the press of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, entitled ABETHEL, or As the lion it breathes like a serpent, and sineth like an adder."

"If you have children or friends inclined toward worldliness, it will open their eyes to the sordidness of such a life and to visions of nobler things. If any lean toward lawlessness or intemperance, it will be to them an impressive warning. Certainly none can put it down without feeling that Christian devotion and ability of the author, and catching in some measure her spirit."

The proceeds of the book are to go to the Russian Orphanage. It may be had for twenty-five cents from the Advocate office, or from Mrs. C. J. Miller, at Hammond, La. Put in large type and more expensive format, it would equal in size and selling price most modern novels, and infinitely surpasses them in value and helpfulness."

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Whereas, God in his all-wise goodness and infinite wisdom, has seen fit to remove from earth to heaven the loved Christian mother and our co-worker, Mrs. ANNA MAYS TROSPER, beloved wife of I. M. Trospier, Sr., be it resolved,

First, That we, as members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, deeply deplore the loss of such a friend, but rejoice that an entrance to the heavenly kingdom has been hers, and thank God for her beautiful life and service in the cause of Christ.

Second, That this community and this society has sustained a great loss in her death, and that we shall miss her most when a call is made for a conscientious, fearless, woman.

Third, That the memory and example of this consecrated mother will encourage others.

Fourth, That we extend to the family our greatest sympathy in this hour of sorrow.

GREENWOOD ANNULARY, Louisiana.

When Tired Out.
Take Horsford's Acid Phosphate
It builds the nerves, aids the digestion, refreshes and invigorates the entire system.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE THE L. and A. RAILWAY,

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

Comfort and Entertainment

When you go out for your entertainment you usually leave your comfort at home. If you knew that you could combine all the comforts of your home with all the entertainment you derive from the opera, concert, theatre or vaudeville, how often would you go out?

the EDISON Phonograph

in your home supplies better and more varied entertainments than you could get if you went to a show or a concert every night in the week. You don't sit on an uncomfortable theatre seat and think how you could enjoy yourself if you were comfortable. You are comfortable, and you do enjoy it—every minute of it. With the Edison Phonograph it's just like having your own theatre, your own opera company, your own orchestra and band right in your home.

Edison Phonograph.....$12.50 to $200
Edison Standard Records.....35c
Edison Amberol Records.....50c
Edison Grand Opera Records, 75c and $2.00

There are Edison dealers everywhere. Go to the nearest and hear the Edison Phonograph play both Edison Standard and Amberol Records. Get complete catalogs from your dealer or from us.
National Phonograph Co., 149 Lakeside Ave., Orange, N. J.

We are Headquarters for

Edison's Phonographs, Records and Supplies

—CASH OR INSTALLMENT—

We pay transportation charges on purchase of one dozen records or more.

NATIONAL AUTOMATIC FIRE ALARM CO., OF LA.

614 GRAVIER STREET NEW ORLEANS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE:

Monroe Dist.—Fourth Round.
Monroe	Sept.	18
W. Monroe	Sept.	18
Bastrop, at Humphrey's Ch.	Sept.	24, 25
Bonita, at Bartholomew	Oct.	1, 2
Merrouge	Oct.	2
Farmerville	Oct.	8, 9
Winnboro	Oct.	17, 18
Gilbert	Oct.	18
Florence, at Jonesville	Oct.	22, 23
Downsville, at Douglas	Oct.	29, 30
Oakridge	Nov.	5, 6
Girard	Nov.	6
Floyd	Nov.	12, 13
Lake Providence	Nov.	19, 20
Waterproof	Nov.	21
Delhi	Nov.	26, 27
Brokland, at Frantom	Dec.	3
Ews	Dec.	3, 4

S. S. KEENER, P. E.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Seashore Dist.—Fourth Round.
Howison and Saucier, at	Sept.	17, 18
McHenry and Wiggins, at	Sept.	24, 25
Wiggins	Sept.	24, 25
Handsboro and Miss. City,	Oct.	5
at Miss. City	Oct.	5
Americus, at Salem Camp	Oct.	8, 9
Ground	Oct.	8, 9
Brooklyn and Bond, at B.	Oct.	12
Logtown	Oct.	15, 16
Mentorun, at Ruble	Oct.	11
a. m.	Oct.	21
Vanceleave, at New Pros.	Oct.	22, 23
pect Camp, Ground	Oct.	22, 23
Ocean Sps. at Oak St.	Oct.	27
Bay St. Louis	Oct.	29, 30
Columbia	Nov.	5, 6
Oakvale, at Oakvale	Nov.	7
Long Beach	Nov.	12, 13
Coalville, at Poplar Head	Nov.	16
11 a. m.	Nov.	16
Hub, at Byrd's Chp	Nov.	19, 20
Carriere and McNeil, at C.	Nov.	19, 20
Poplarville	Nov.	21
Gulfport, 29th Street	Nov.	23
Moss Point	Nov.	26, 27
Pascagoula	Nov.	26, 27
Escatawpa	Nov.	26, 27
Lumberton	Nov.	30
Gulfport, 25th Ave.	Dec.	1
Wolf River Mission	Dec.	2
Biloxi, Main Street	Dec.	3, 4

W. B. JONES, P. E.

Vicksburg Dist.—Fourth Round.

Vicksburg, Crawford St.	Sept.	17, 18
Vicksburg, Washington St.	Sept.	18, 19
Silver City, at S. C.	Sept.	25, 26
Rocky Springs, at R. S.	Oct.	8, 9
Rolling Fork, at R. F.	Oct.	11
Oak Ridge, at O. R.	Oct.	12
Uica, at Uica	Oct.	15, 16
Bolton, at Bolton	Oct.	29, 30
Edwards, at Clinton	Oct.	30, 31
Harrison, at Lorman	Nov.	5, 6
Port Gibson, Pt. G.	Nov.	12, 13
Anguilla, at Anguilla	Nov.	19, 20
Mayersville, at Fitters	Nov.	22
Sartatia, at Mt. Olivet	Nov.	26, 27
Hermanville, at H.	Nov.	29
Bishop E. D. Monzon will address the District lay leaders at 11 a. m.
in Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, October 24. Let as many men of the district come as possible.

G. H. GALLOWAY, P. E.

Natchez Dist.—Fourth Round.

Woodville Circuit, at White's	Oct.	1, 2
S. H.	Oct.	8, 9
Hamburg, at H.	Oct.	15, 16
Woodville	Oct.	22, 23
Fayette	Oct.	24
Washington, at W.	Oct.	24
Natchez, Jefferson St.	Oct.	24
Natchez, Pearl St.	Oct.	25
Barlow, at	Oct.	29, 30
Bayou Pierre, at	Oct.	31
Homochitto, at Wesley chap.	Nov.	5, 6
Scotland, at Bethel	Nov.	12, 13
Centerville	Nov.	19, 20
Meadville, at M.	Nov.	25
Nebo, at	Nov.	26, 27
Gloster	Nov.	29
Wilkinson, at	Dec.	1
Liberty, at L.	Dec.	3, 4
Adams, at A.	Dec.	5

The preachers in charge will please see very carefully after wise answers to questions 24, 27 and 29, and that full answers be given to question 31 (New Discipline).

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN, P. E.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Greenville Dist.—Fourth Round.
Arcola and Hollondale, at	Sept.	18, 19
Hollondale	Sept.	18, 19
Cleveland	Sept.	25, 26
(Morning and evening service at Boyle)	Sept.	25
Shelby, at Bobo	Oct.	1, 2
(Evening) service at Hill house)	Oct.	2
Clarksdale	Oct.	6
Greenville	Oct.	8, 9
Tunica, at Robinsonville	Oct.	15, 16
Lula and Lyon, at Lyon	Oct.	16, 17
(evening)	Oct.	16, 17
Jonestown, at Belen	Oct.	18
District Mission at Bellview	Oct.	20
Lake Cormorant, at Poplar	Oct.	22, 23
Corners	Oct.	22, 23
Coaloma, at C. (evening)	Oct.	23, 24
Friars Point	Oct.	24
Cleveland Cir., at Shipman's	Oct.	29, 30
Chapel	Oct.	29, 30
Boyle, at Boyle (evening)	Oct.	30, 31
Rosedale, at Rosedale	Nov.	2
Glen Allan, at G. A.	Nov.	6, 7
Gunnison, at Gunnison	Nov.	13, 14
Hillhouse and Benoit, at B.	Nov.	19, 20
Shaw and Marigold, at Marigold (evening)	Nov.	20, 21
Leland, at Leland	Nov.	27, 28

W. W. WOOLLARD, P. E.

Winona Dist.—Fourth Round.

Greenwood	Sept.	25
Ita Bena S. p. m.	Sept.	25
Winona	Oct.	2
Kilmichael, at Kilmichael	Oct.	2, 3
Carrollton, at Valley Hill	Oct.	8, 9
Belzoni, at Belzoni	Oct.	14
Webb, at Sumner	Oct.	15, 16
Minter City	Oct.	22, 23
Lambert, at Lambert	Oct.	29, 30
Tutwiler, at Tutwiler	Oct.	30, 31
Schlater, at Sunny Side	Nov.	5, 6
Inverness, at Inverness	Nov.	6, 7
Tom Nolen, at Bellfontaine	Nov.	11
Slate Springs	Nov.	12, 13
Eupora, at Maben	Nov.	15
Winona Ct., at Bethlehem	Nov.	19, 20
Ruleville, at Drew	Nov.	22
Moorhead, at Moorhead	Nov.	23
North Carrollton, at Poplar Springs	Nov.	24
Mars Hill, at Bethesda	Nov.	26
Indianola, at Indianola	Nov.	27, 28

E. S. LEWIS, P. E.

Corinth Dist.—Fourth Round.

Belmont, Ct., at Mt. P.	Sept.	10, 11
Inka Ct., at Clausel Hill	Sept.	17, 18
Iuka Sta., at Iuka	Sept.	18, 19
Corinth Ct., at Mt. Carmel	Sept.	24, 25
Corinth, First Church	Sept.	25, 26
Kossuth Ct., at Kossuth	Oct.	1, 2
Corinth, at South Side	Oct.	2, 3
Rienzi Ct., at Rienzi	Oct.	8, 9
Guntown Ct., at Guntown	Oct.	9, 10
Myrtle Ct., at Pleasant G.	Oct.	13
N. Albany Ct., at Bethlehem	Oct.	14
Rainey Mission, at Rainey	Oct.	15, 16
Ripley and B. M., at Ripley	Oct.	16, 17
Booneville Ct., at Carolina	Oct.	22, 23
Booneville Sta., at B.	Oct.	23, 24
Belden Ct., at Liberty	Oct.	29, 30
New Albany Sta., at N. A.	Oct.	30, 31
Dumas Ct., at Mt. Olive	Oct.	31
Marietta Ct., at Marietta	Nov.	3
Dry Run Mission, at String-
fellow	Nov.	5
Hatchie Mission, at Mt.
Carmel	Nov.	6
Mooreville Ct., at Andrews	Nov.	11
Chapel	Nov.	11
Mantachie Ct., at M.	Nov.	12, 13
Jonesboro Ct., at Mt. P.	Nov.	19, 20
Tishomingo Circuit, at
Paradise	Nov.	25
Wheeler Ct., at Wheeler	Nov.	26, 27

BEN P. JACO, P. E.

Columbus Dist.—Fourth Round.

Starkville	Sept.	3, 4
Crawford, at Shaffers	Sept.	10, 11
Brooksville	Sept.	17, 18
West Point	Sept.	23
Macon	Sept.	24, 25
Mayhew, at Curtis Chp.	Oct.	1, 2
Winstonville, at Mt. Hebron	Oct.	8, 9
Columbus, First Church	Oct.	15, 16
Columbus, Second Church	Oct.	16, 17
Starkville Ct., at Sessums	Oct.	22, 23
Sturgis, at Bevils Hill	Oct.	29, 30
Shuqualak	Nov.	5, 6
Hebron	Nov.	12, 13

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.

Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Courses. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

A home school for girls. 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful hill country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue. Address, Pres. H. E. BROWLEN, CLINTON, LA.

For $110,654.04

We guarantee an established trade in the South on any high-class article of general household use:

THIS SUM BUYS

1. A three-years advertising campaign, 10 inches per week, 56 publications, 526,924 circulation per week, (over 80 millions of copies) distributed to the most substantial Southern homes—to create the demand for the goods.
2. A sales force of 20 specialty salesmen for three years, selling the goods to retailers and jobbers—to place the goods within reach of the consumer.
3. A guarantee of certain minimum results as regards the number of initial or introductory sales and the amount of such sales—to secure the manufacturer against any unnecessary speculation in his advertising campaign. (Guarantee usually one dollar per 1,000 of circulation used per annum, and sales equivalent to cost of campaign—excess sales carried on commission basis.)

In brief, the only general publicity campaign covering a wide area, ever offered with a hard and fast guarantee of results.

If interested, address below, explaining your selling system in detail, and sending samples of goods on which you desire to establish trade—no inferior articles promoted. Smaller accounts accepted covering narrower territory.

JACOBS & COMPANY, Clinton, S. C.

Advertising and Selling Agents,

Operating The Religious Press Advertising Syndicate.

Largest Special Advertising Agency in the World.

Mathiston, at Cumberland Nov. 19, 20 the brethren will be ready to answer Cedar Bluff Nov. 20, 21 questions 14, 16, and 29 promptly and Columbus Circuit Nov. 26, 27 satisfactorily this round.

J. E. THOMAS, P. E.

JAMES H. FELTS, P. E.

Aberdeen Dist.—Fourth Round.

Aberdeen	Sept.	17, 18
Tupelo	Sept.	25, 26
Verona, at Verona	Oct.	1, 2
Montpelier, at Fosters C.	Oct.	8, 9
Houston	Oct.	9, 10
Okolona Ct., at M. Chp.	Oct.	12
Palestine, at Palestine	Oct.	15, 16
Pontotoc, at Pontotoc	Oct.	16, 17
Beuna Vista, at	Oct.	22, 23
Prairie, at	Oct.	23, 24
Tremont, at	Oct.	29, 30
Fulton, at	Oct.	30, 31
Greenwood Sps., at	Nov.	5, 6
Smithville, at	Nov.	6, 8
Shannon, at Shannon	Nov.	12, 13
Okolona, at	Nov.	13, 14
Houlka, at	Nov.	17, 18
Derma, at	Nov.	19, 20
Pittsboro, at Pleasant G.	Nov.	20, 22
V. and C. City, at C. City	Nov.	23, 24
Nettleton Ct., at	Nov.	26, 27
Amory and Nettleton, at A.	Nov.	27, 28

Some slight changes may be made.

Due notice will be given. The Conference for Okolona Circuit, No. 2, will be held some time in September in connection with revival services.

The date will be given without newspaper notice. The third round has been most encouraging. Fine revivals, good financial reports, "third round questions" all answered satisfactorily —and it is confidently expected that

Durant Dist.—Fourth Round.

Durant	Sept.	4, 5
Pickens	Sept.	4, 5
Vaiden, at Vaiden	Sept.	10, 11
Chester, at Nebo	Sept.	17, 18
West, at Bowling Green	Sept.	24, 25

N. G. AUGUSTUS, P. E.

WORK OF A GOOD MAN.

A few men now and then, here and there, realize the responsibility they owe to the world to be of some benefit to their fellow-men and one of the most conspicuous examples of this is Dr. B. M. Woolley of Atlanta, Ga. Dr. Woolley is noted for his Christian integrity and fair dealing, being a highly-esteemed citizen of his home town, where he has built up a reputation as a specialist for the cure of the liquor and drug habits. He has had more than a quarter of a century's experience in the treatment of these terrible diseases. Dr. Woolley and his son, Dr. Vassar Woolley, conduct an elegantly equipped sanitarium in Atlanta where hundreds of persons addicted to drugs and liquor are successfully treated every year. The average time required for treatment is thirty days except in extreme cases. Some time ago Dr. Woolley wrote and published a book on the effects of opium and liquor upon the human constitution. It brings out many facts not generally understood. If you happen to know of any person in your neighborhood to whom such a book would prove of value, you will do him a great favor by sending his name and address to Dr. Woolley, No. 21 E. Victor Sanitarium, Atlanta, Ga., and the book will be sent post-paid with the author's compliments.

Tidings from the Field

Kilmichael, Miss.

Dear Advocate: We have just closed a meeting at Kilmichael, which was very gratifying to the pastor and his helper, Rev. W. L. Graves, of Itta Bena, and the people. The meeting commenced on Thursday at 11 o'clock and Brother Graves preached us on Sunday and preached to the children at 4 p. m., and stayed till Saturday at 11 o'clock. We had a gracious meeting. The Church was revived; sinners were convicted and converted. There were 11 added to the Church on profession of faith, 1 by certificate, and 2 by vows. The congregation voted unanimously for Brother Graves to be with them next year and to get him they are willing to put up with me. We are having a good year, before the end of the year we will have sent in more than 20 subscriptions to the Advocate. We have had good health and plenty to eat. P. S. Just the I can't tell how it will be next year. The people here remember the editor as their pastor. J. R. WILSON, P. C.

Vardaman and Calhoun, City:

Not having seen any news from our charge lately and having been a subscriber to your valuable paper for several years, I take the liberty of giving you a few items which I hope will be of some interest to your readers. Vardaman and Calhoun City constitute our charge, and Rev. W. C. Carlisle is our beloved pastor. He has endeared himself to the people since he came on this work by his persistent efforts to build up the cause of Christ. Our third Quarterly Conference convened at Vardaman on the 8th ult. Our new church was dedicated on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock by our greatly beloved presiding elder, James H. Felt, who preached a most excellent sermon to a large congregation. Our revival services followed our Quarterly Conference, and there were sixteen professions with twelve additions to our church. Brother H. J. Estes, local preacher from Calhoun City, assisted in the meeting. He did some fine preaching to the delight of those who heard him. Brother Carlisle was at his best, and many were brought into closer relations to the Lord. Besides the weekly prayer meeting, there were three prayer meetings organized—one for the men, one for the married ladies and one for the young ladies. The people are working so as to have Brother Carlisle carry up a clean sheet to Conference at Sardis. The Advocate is being looked after by Brother Carlisle, and those who take it are always anxious to receive it.—A Layman.

Haynesville Mission (Louisiana):

We have just closed two of our meetings at the Haynesville Mission. Rev. E. M. Mosser, of Stanish, Ark., assisted as at Dykesville. We had about twelve or fifteen reclamations and two additions to the church. Quite a number of members of other denominations took an active interest in the meeting and the people generally were somewhat stirred up and revived. We had two additions to the church, and while the meeting was not all that we had expected and anticipated, yet there were results that will tell for good in the future. Our membership was stirred up to do more and better things for the Lord, and several have promised to erect family altars in their homes, and this among our young married people. Our meeting at Shogaleon, conducted by Brother Woodward, of Haynesville, resulted in two additions, a general revival among the few members we have there and the breaking of ground for a new church. I say a new church, but really we have no church there now. This is only the second year that they have had regular preaching, and we have but fifteen members to date. We expect to receive more later on as we have sent for others for others who have membership in other denominations elsewhere. We are planning for a $500 church and have the ground roughed for the framing, and over $100 subscribed towards the building. There is a Baptist Church there already, but the people feel that they want and need another church, especially a Methodist Church. We expect to hold other meetings later on and we will let you hear from us as to our success. We also expect to present the claims of the Advocate later on. We have been stressing the matter all the year. We expect, however, to secure more subscribers for you later on in the year.—J. E. WIGHT.

Scobba, Miss.

In accordance with previous arrangements, a revival was begun at Scobba, Miss., on Aug. 17, in which our four ministerial brothers did the preaching. The revival lasted nine days, closing on Thursday night, Aug. 25. The results of our labors were seven-teen accessions to the Methodist Church, the establishing of six new family affairs, and the organization of a men's prayer meeting. The spiritual interest of the membership of all the churches was greatly quickened. The Meridian Evening Star had the following to say regarding the revival in its issue of the 25th: "Scobba is enjoying a spiritual feast in the revival held in the Methodist Church, conducted by five preacher-brothers, as follows: Rev. B. W. Lewis, preacher in charge; Rev. J. T. Lewis, of Clarksdale; Rev. H. P. Lewis, Jr., of Natchez; Rev. J. M. Lewis, of Vancleave; and Rev. Q. S. Lewis, of Hattiesburg, sons of a preacher, and all are able, resourceful and forceful preachers. Their sermons abound in gospel teachings portrayed by Christ to a dying people. Their illustrations of a Christian life are beautiful. Every service becomes of more interest; each discourse brings the hearers near to Jesus. Not only are they strong, God-fearing preachers, but they are also sweet singers of heavenly anthems, with voices filled with melody that thrills the soul with joy and gladness. They wear their robes of divinity with becoming meekness and all have a charming personality, which commands the highest esteem and appreciation of all whom they meet. The services will continue until Thursday night, affording the people the advantages and benefit of this unusual opportunity of seeing and hearing five brother preachers. The good people of Scobba deserve thanks for the royal way in which they entertained, and the many good things sent in to the parsonage. God bless them."—B. W. LEWIS.

KETTLE
OK
BRASS MFG. CO.

FOR BRASS STOVE, BANK FEATURES AND ALL METALS

USE

QCKWORK METAL POLISH

AT LAST!—a metal polish that does the work quick, saves drudgery, makes all metals look new. Try this new polish that is absolutely free from acid or grit.

IN 25c. TINS EVERYWHERE

Manufactured by Kettler Brass Mfg. Co., Houston Texas.

Every Druggist Knows

and thousands of users know
that

MINARD'S KING OF PAIN LINIMENT

is the great family Remedy For Bodily Pain

resulting from rheumatism or neuralgia, stiff joints, strained or lame muscles, sprains, tired, aching feet, sore heads, and all sorts of bruises; also for painful throats or tubes, heavy colds, sore throat and hoarseness; as well as for scores of every-day emergencies and accidents that happen in every family. MINARD'S LINIMENT is a safe and reliable standby, and should be on every medicine shelf.

MINARD'S LINIMENT is a smooth, aromatic cream, clean to use, powerful, penetrating and soothing, and absolutely free from any toxic, poisonous or harmful. When rubbed into the skin it stops inflammation, easing the pain and soreness at once.

If you are not one of the thousands who are already familiar with its merits, we want you to

TRY MINARD'S LINIMENT AT OUR RISK

Send from your druggist or dealer the enclosed, and if you are not satisfied, we will refund your money. Put in your name and address.

MINARD'S LINIMENT MANUFACTURING CO. SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, MASS.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 57—No. 36

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2349

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, SEPT. 15, 1910.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

JOHN RUSKIN'S BIBLES.

Perhaps no one outside of the Christian ministry read his Bible more constantly and made better use of its truths than John Ruskin. His works bear traces on nearly every page that the phraseology, incidents, parables and imagery of the sacred Scriptures were inwrought in the very tissue of his mental being. The last paragraph in "Queen's Gardens," the second lecture of the most popular of his books, Sesame and Lilies, is a perfect mosaic of Bible passages. The account given by himself in Præterita and Fors Clavigera of the way in which he gained this knowledge has been so often quoted that it is familiar to all.

Among the cherished treasures of this great writer, kept at Brantwood, his last home near Coniston Lake, is a collection of the Bibles he used at different times in his life.

One day in August, 1873, Ruskin, busy writing one of his letters to working men, opened his oldest Bible to verify the wording of a passage he had just quoted. "It is," he says, "a small, closely but very neatly printed volume, yellow now with age, and flexible, but not unclean, with much use, except that the lower corners of the pages at the eighth of First Kings and thirty-second of Deuteronomy, are worn somewhat thin and dark, the learning of these two chapters having cost me much pain. My mother's list of the chapters with which she established my soul in life has just fallen out of it."

He then gives the list and thus comments upon the knowledge thus acquired: "Though I have picked up the elements of a little further knowledge and owe much to the teaching of other people, this property of chapters from the Bible placed in my mind by my mother, I count very confidently the most precious, and on the whole the one essential part of my education."

The other pages in this book, which still bear the marks of his little fingers, are those containing the 119th Psalm, of which he thus writes in Fors Clavigera in 1875: "It is strange that of all the pieces of the Bible which my mother thus taught me that which cost me most to learn and which to my childish mind was most repulsive, has now become of all the most precious to me in its overflowing and glorious passion of love for the law of God. 'O, how I love thy law! it is my meditation all the day.'"

It was Ruskin's habit to write thoughts suggested by the passage on the margin of the Bible he was reading, and his father's Bible, used by John, in later days, is thus annotated. The most valuable ancient manuscripts in his possession were not too sacred for these notes, and the margins of many precious ones are pencilled with the overflowings of his active mind as he read the sacred text.

A grand Old Testament in Greek MS., the back lettered the tenth century, but with 1643 dimly seen printed off from the last leaf, Ruskin read and freely wrote upon its margins. He did the same with a Greek Psalter, and still more fully, and in ink, in his most valuable tenth-century Greek gospels.

How precious these notes become to the student who wishes to trace Ruskin's return from the agnostic attitude of his middle life to the firm faith and piety of his age. "For he who wants to get at Ruskin's mind," says his biographer, Collingwood, "will find it there. John 15:9 was the help and life he found."

He was accustomed to read his Latin Bibles also. His library contained one in three volumes, purple morocco, printed in 1541. He owned, too, many fourteenth and fifteenth-century Bibles and Psalters and Missals. The one he prized the most is known as King Hakon's Bible, from a reference on the fly-leaf to King Hakon V, of Norway.

When traveling he carried with him various little testaments. In his bed-room for reading on wakeful nights he had a Bible in six volumes, one, the Apocrypha, bearing marks of frequent notes and pencilings. At the close of his life he read a large typed Bible, or had it read to him constantly up to his death.

Very few helps to Bible reading were in his library. The plain Bible text was the book he read and studied through his long life, and he knew it as few of this generation know it.

"Once in his rooms at Oxford," says Collingwood, "I remember getting into a difficulty about some passage. 'Haven't you a concordance?' I asked. 'I'm ashamed to say I have,' Ruskin replied. I did not quite understand him.

"Well," he explained, "you and I oughtn't to need a concordance."—Sue W. Hetherington, in the Presbyterian of the South.

THOUSAND DOLLAR SPECIAL FOR MISSIONS.

The laymen of the Winchester District, Baltimore Conference, at a recent meeting assumed a thousand dollar missionary special, and within a few minutes raised $800.00 of the amount. This is in addition to the regular missionary assessment and illustrates the growing recognition of personal responsibility on the part of the laymen for the evangelization of the world.

At the District Conference Judge E. D. Newman presided over a meeting of the men, the needs of the field were presented and a call from the Board was read, asking for funds to send out eighteen new missionaries. After a few minutes' discussion the laymen gladly pledged $1,000 for the district for this cause and raised four-fifths of it on the spot. The movement was spontaneous and enthusiastic. One man, when asked to pledge one hundred dollars for his Church, replied: "Certainly, why not? I can go out any time and in an hour raise $75 for baseball, and I can raise this money just as easily when the men understand about it."

In a letter to the Conference Missionary Secretary, the Secretaries of the General Board say: "Nearly all of the advance and notable development of plans and equipment has come out of specials and money raised apart from the regular assessment. The men and women on the field plead for help. The men and women in the homeland are ready to go. What will the Church do in this hour of opportunity?"

The laymen of the Winchester District have set a worthy example in responding to the Church's appeal for aid to increase her working force in the mission fields.

Will not our laymen everywhere recognize the inspiring opportunity of the hour and gladly assume a worthier part in the work of world evangelization? The men of Southern Methodism can finance our share of this enterprise whenever they will. They can do it easily and without sacrifice or inconvenience. Three million dollars per year, less than two dollars per member, is a mere bagatelle to our 1,800,000 Southern Methodists. Yet, this will enable the Church to evangelize, in our day, the forty million heathen for whom we are responsible. Surely out of our abundance we will not withhold this little that means light and life to millions of our benighted brothers, perishing for lack of the gospel that we can supply whenever we will!

THE POWER OF A HOLY LIFE.

Man covets power. He would like to be able to create, but being unable to create, he seeks to control. He tunnels through the mountains and spans the streams with bridges to make way for his flying locomotive, which he drives along with stored-up sunbeams. He chains the lightning to his chariot-wheels, and by the utilization of this wonderful force he annihilates space. He has well-nigh mastered the mighty power of gravitation, as he literally "mounts up with wings as eagles." But every young Christian may wield a mightier power than the power of steam, or electricity, or gravitation; that is, the power of holiness. Speaking of this wonderful power, the Rev. W. H. Wilson says:

It utilizes ability, fertilizes the soul, and energizes the whole man. It is the fire and water in the engine, bringing out to their fullest capacity the strength of all the parts of the machinery, so that the greatest amount of spiritual power may be expended in rolling back a revolted world to God. Holiness is God's power with man and man's power with God. Thus they become co-workers. Every man who dwells in God and God in him, in an accommodated sense, is God's man, which makes him a positive power against all evil and for all good—to pluck careless souls from the incoming flood and storm of wrath, lifting them up into the sweet serenity and protection of the Rock of Ages. Without holiness we are weaker than a bruised reed; with it, we are like an impregnable and well-garrisoned fort, which will stand unharmed the hottest siege; at the same time, raining like a hail-storm red-hot balls from the magazines of the gospel on an armed world against Christ.—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

We may lose the things we strive after to-day, but if we bear patiently the burdens, taking the heartache if it comes, being faithful in the midst of the conditions where God has placed us, living nobly to ourselves and fellow-men, we shall have built up for ourselves characters of divine finish, divine beauty, and divine glory.—M. F. Savage.

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS.

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

VANDERBILT UNIVERSITY ONCE MORE.

Brother Meek has kindly permitted me to appear once more in the Advocate on the above subject. Since it is to be but once, I shall require more space than otherwise I would need.

I wrote, "Those who have not read what I said will get an erroneous idea from the statement in the Advocate of August 4th." If Brother Meek prefers to change that to "misrepresent," he can do so; of course.

Those who read what I wrote in the daily papers know that Brother Meek did not "state the general attitude" of myself as it appears in my writing, as he claims to have done. They know, also, that I have not "apologized for them" (the trustees), "defended them," and smeared his "fincked sweetness" upon them with a trowel.

Judge O'Rear stated in most positive terms that $25,000 was to be used for the lawsuit. That statement was made to influence the General Conference, and did influence it. It was made three months ago, and Brother Meek had not exposed it as erroneous. I repeated it in a merely incidental way and it became a "blunder" to be exposed in the Advocate and to be pronounced a "statement that is not true."

I said it was difficult for Brother Meek to be fair. He writes himself down as incapable of being fair when he says, "I have no trace of patience" with views expressed by the opposition. I note that Miss Carlton corrected an error into which the secular papers led Brother Meek in causing him to speak of Gov. Seay, of Texas, instead of Alabama. I did not see what Miss Carlton wrote, but I'm sure she did not advertise it as a "blunder," and say "that statement is not true."

I have not "ridiculed our Bishops," men who have shown to me unusual and undeserved kindness. If Brother Meek's reference is to the parody that I published I will say that parody was not meant to be and was not "ridicule of our Bishops," as the sentence immediately following the parody clearly indicated. It was simply set over against the suggestion that the trustees of Vanderbilt University were capable of digging up and removing the remains of Bishop McKendree, of Bishop Soule and of Bishop McTyeire. The parody is just as true and just as kind as the suggestion. How the former can be the quintessence of wickedness and the latter a paragon of piety, I must leave to modern Jesuits to explain. Even if I had "ridiculed our Bishops," which I have not done, Brother Meek is not the proper person to rebuke me. The Advocate has contained columns of sharpest editorial criticisms of one of our Bishops, which criticisms call in question the integrity of his character; while it has printed something like a half column in a plea for charity for the Commercial Appeal because our Church paper in Kentucky, which agrees with Brother Meek in supporting the action of the General Conference, said it was deplorable that "any reputable secular paper would print an article stating as a probability that a certain Bishop would be arraigned and silenced as a Bishop in the Church because of the way he voted in the Vanderbilt Board of Trustees meeting."

Brother Meek admitted that the Commercial Appeal "erred" (not "blundered," nor published a "statement that was not true"), but added, "we dare say that some one supposed to speak with a dependable knowledge of the situation misled the reporter." Wonder if he had as good authority as I had in Judge O'Rear?

More than once I have expressed in a public manner approval of that great daily paper for its efforts to have the law enforced, and have written to its able editor words of commendation. But, honor bright, is the Commercial Appeal a greater force for righteousness than is Bishop Hendrix? Has it been for a third of a century a better servant of Methodism than Bishop Hendrix has been? Much mercy Meek to Mooney showed; none he showed to Hendrix.

By the way, Brother Meek must uncork another vial of charity for the Commercial Appeal, since it has given a certificate of character to Hon. Thos. Watson, of Georgia.

Brother Meek announces his purpose to continue the agitation. Why? It has gone on for about five years. Every District Conference and every Annual Conference before which it has been brought has voted with the agitators. The General Conference has so voted. Brother Meek claims that 1,500,000 members of the Church agree with him. Then why further agitation? Having ecclesiastically and piously slain the trustees, why mutilate their remains?

Everything has been carried, but the one thing necessary to be carried—the law court. Abuse of Hendrix, Kirkland and other trustees will not influence the court in passing on a matter involving property rights. The Bible says, "Michael, the archangel, when contending with the devil he disputed about the body of Moses, durst not bring against him a railing accusation." Shall the trustees have less consideration?

Brother Meek's contention that "enlightened public sentiment" is a "loftier tribunal than any earthly court," sounds very much like the doctrine of the abolitionists, who appealed from the Supreme Court of the United States on a property question to the "higher law" of "enlightened public sentiment," and caused our entire country to run red with blood.

Why further agitation? Is it to display spleen engendered by personal pique? Is it to force reluctant Bishops to bring a lawsuit, which seems to hang fire? If the Bishops "have sought to carry out the positive instructions of the General Conference," when was it? They did "mark time" July 12th, but if they have "taken steps," when and where?

Why further agitation? It cannot be to make "enlightened public opinion" when, according to Brother Meek, 1,500,000 are lined up against a few more than 12,000.

Methodism has entered upon a new experience when secular papers advertise our Bishops as arrayed in hostile camps, such publications to be deplored by some Methodist editors and apologized for by others.

In his letter to the General Conference asking for superannuation, Bishop Hargrove said: "The potency of our unique Episcopacy is in its unity." The intimacies and confidences thus necessarily engendered conspire to make the Episcopacy to an eminent degree a close and goodly fellowship. The spirit of cordial unity, thank God, it has ever maintained. The peace and prosperity of the Church require its continuance. In a peculiar sense it is imperative that our Bishops be all one in Christ Jesus.

As those wise and weighty words fell from the lips of that apostolic Bishop they made a profound impression on me. The high and holy principles they teach formed perfect embodiment in the character and ample illustration in the life of that other great Bishop, into whose pure soul entered the iron of unjust criticism about this Vanderbilt matter, and from whom I learned to reverence Methodist Bishops and the Methodist Church to a degree which otherwise I would not have known.

In sad and painful contrast are the developments of subsequent years, when differences are widely published.

Those seven wise men elected at Asheville, for each of whom I voted, cannot do a better thing for Methodism than to exalt in every way the final charge to his colleagues by Robert K. Hargrove.

Some years ago Democrats began to read out of the party those who could not pronounce a certain shibboleth, with the result that as a national organization it became a rabble and a rout. If the spirit of proscription is to grow in Methodism, and we get our consent to—

Snub our bright men,
Discount our strong men,
Run after light men,
And honor wrong men.

we need not bother about changing our name, nor about retaining our present name; for our name will be Ichabod, and we shall find ourselves without an intelligent constituency. Self-respecting men will not submit always to be objects of suspicion and to be badgered and baited simply because they will not permit themselves to be bullied.

The patience of Bishop Hendrix and of Chancellor Kirkland under assaults that have become the scandal of Methodism, is as fine an example of the charity of silence as the world has seen.

Over against Brother Meek's notion that I have written in bad spirit, I place the many letters I have received from laymen, including elect women, lawyers, law-professors, and preachers, approving my position and invariably expressing appreciation of the spirit in which I wrote. That appreciation is true of some who support the action of the General Conference, being markedly so in the case of a member of the minority party of the trustees.

The final paragraph of my former communication to the Advocate, of which Brother Meek makes so much, is based on facts, which facts Brother Meek can have for the Advocate if he wants them.

Since I am not permitted to write again for the Advocate on this subject, I ask my friends to preserve this copy of the Advocate and to re-read this communication in connection with any subsequent comments on it, should any appear.

J. R. BINGHAM.

THE EDITOR'S DEFENSE.

In the foregoing communication Brother Bingham makes reply to our editorial which appeared in the Advocate of August the 18th. He begins by calling attention to the fact that he is having the last say in the present discussion. An explanatory word as to that may not be amiss. We have closed our columns to him only so far as for continuance of the present controversy with this Editor is concerned. What he may have to say about other things, or even about the principles involved in the Vanderbilt issue, will receive the same consideration at our hands as that accorded any other contributor. Not a single dishonest communication bearing on his vexed question, which now unpharisaically disturbs the Church, have we thus far rejected. But we felt that a long public wrangle between the Editor and Brother Bingham would be unprofitable and unprofitable so we gave him notice in advance that space would only be allowed him for one more rejoinder. As we unintentionally opened the discussion, it seemed only fair that, following the uniform rule of debates, we should have the concluding word. No injustice in this has been done Mr. Bingham, and it furnishes no proper warrant for trying to stir up sympathy.

Brother Bingham says he did not (by implication) charge us with misrepresentation, and makes the following statement to show that he did not. "I said, 'Those who have not read what I said will get an erroneous idea from the statement in the Advocate of August 4th.' But, unfortunately, that was not all that Brother Bingham said. He added: 'They will be surprised to learn that I took two positions.' How could they be 'surprised' after reading our editorial by the perusal of his article, unless we had gone far afield in our representation of his attitude?" Why did not Mr. Bingham quote all that he had written on this point and not simply a part of it? We ask our readers as we proceed with this discussion to notice how inaccurately and unfairly he quotes throughout his entire article. Indeed, the extent to which he has garbled statements we do not say intentionally, is to us utterly astounding.

Mr. Bingham says, "Those who read what I wrote in the daily papers know that Brother Meek did not state the general attitude of myself in my writing, as he claims to have done." Why did he not point out the particulars wherein we have misrepresented his "general attitude"? We challenged him to do so, but not one single specific charge of error has he made. This abandonment of the forum of debate and appeal to a scattered and promiscuous public from which no majority verdict is obtainable, is the usual method of retreat of the beaten and routed disputant.

And while we are on this point of his having made no response to our challenge, we call special attention to the following facts: 1. He has not denied that he "sides with the Board of Trust," as we said he does. By his silence he admits the correctness of the charge. 2. He has not denied the only other affirmation that we made in the brief editorial which so stirred him up, namely, that if the Church should control Vanderbilt University, it will shrink into the proportions of a college. Indeed, he can not be induced to say a word concerning this sweeping statement of his. Why does he not come forward and explain his meaning, pointing out plainly what it is in an independent government that produces growth and development, and what is in Church control that blights and dwarfs and tends to destroy. Having taken this position, does he lack the courage to maintain it? He may have space in the Advocate to furnish the desired bill of particulars on this point, if he wishes it, subject only to the limitation that he must not stray from the question.

Mr. Bingham says he has not "apologized for the trustees, or 'defended' them, or 'smeared' 'fincked sweetness' upon them." Let us refer to the record and see whether he has or not. He pronounced them "eminent and good men," he said, "they honestly believe that they only have the right to elect the trustees." (When did he acquire the power to read the human heart and tell who are honest in their opinions?) He affirmed that "if the trustees win, Vanderbilt will become one of the greatest universities in the nation." In his reply to Mr. Barbee he wrote the following: "I challenge any reader to show any unkind utterance against anyone by the trustees." "Certainly they have won the ethics of the controversy." This, too, when Bishop Hendrix, a trustee, had said in a public address at Nashville that "Vanderbilt University is never going to become a 'one-hoss' college; when Dr. Winston, another trustee, had charged in the Texas Advocate that Bishop Hoss' course with reference to the university had been inspired by personal pique or hurt pride; and when the Committee on Education and the General Conference had been characterized by some of these gentlemen as partisan and unfair. He declared Mr. Cupples to be a man of "large business ability and unquestionable piety," he pronounced Dr. Kirkland to be "the most distinguished citizen and the most eminent educator in the South, and one of the most devout Christians in the nation. (Is not this a considerable splash of the trowel?) And in his present article he says: "The patience of Bishop Hendrix and Chancellor Kirkland under the assaults that have become the scandal of Methodism is as fine an example of the charity of silence as the world has seen." (Another splash of the trowel, and here also we have the spear thrust at those who have stood for the Church in the present controversy.)

But Mr. Bingham says he has not defended them. Then pray, what was he doing when he had his bout with Dr. Featherston over the question of hired attorneys? And what was he doing when he wrote the following: "Methodists have too long denounced Catholics for exalting ecclesiastical above the civil statutes in matters wherein the civil authorities must control; for them now to assume that medieval superstition." What is the meaning of this, if it is not an attempt to justify the Vanderbilt trustees in their rebellion against the Church? And what was he doing when he claimed that the Board of Trust passed a resolution "recognizing and rejoicing in the ownership of the Church," and were criticised for it, and later they were criticised for tabling virtually the same resolution? Was he not in bringing this forward "defending" the trustees for not adopting the Bradford paper? (And mark you, he was even unfair and misleading in this statement, because the criticism of the Board's first action was not at this point at all, but because the word "receive" was used instead of the word "accept." No fault at all was found with the part of the resolution which he quotes. A reaffirmation of ownership was entirely in order at the June meeting, as the complexion of the body had considerably changed since their former action and the most sacred precedents were there being broken; especially was this so as the resolution was designed to conserve the peace of the Church.)

How, in the face of these statements and declarations, which I have accurately taken from the articles that he has written, can Mr. Bingham say, "I have not apologized for the trustees, or defended them, or smeared 'linked sweetness' upon them?" We confess that his denial of having done this is to us utterly inexplicable.

Brother Bingham says: "Judge O'Rear stated in most positive terms that $25,000 was to be used for the lawsuit." We do not think the record in the Daily Advocate at all warrants this statement, but what if the Judge did say it? Could one member by a mere verbal utterance undo the formal and deliberate action of the entire committee? But he says, "That statement was made to influence the General Conference, and did influence it." Of course, it was intended to influence the General Conference. We presume that no speech was made from the beginning to the end of the session that was not intended to influence the body. But if he means that Judge O'Rear, with design, sought to mislead the Conference, we beg leave to differ with him. In our opinion, he is quite incapable of such action. He says the statement was made three months ago, and that Brother Meek had not corrected it. Brother Godfrey made that unnecessary. He pointed out the mistake almost as soon as the utterance had fallen from the Judge's lips. The correction stands side by side with the error in the journal of the General Conference.

The fact that we said Brother Bingham "blundered," and that his statement to the effect that $25,000 had been provided for a lawsuit was "untrue," seems yet to rankle in his bosom. He did "blunder," and his statement was "untrue," though not intentionally so. We stated in the discussion two weeks ago that we meant no offense. More than this, we cannot do. If he chooses to disregard our disavowal of any improper purpose, it is, of course, his privilege to do so. He says the editor writes himself down as incapable of being fair when he said, "I have no trace of patience." With views expressed by the opposition. Never in our life have we written any such thing. Here is what we said: "our readers will find it in our issue of August 4th in the discussion of the Vanderbilt Charter." With the contention now advanced that a few leading Methodists are so much wiser than 1,800,000 brethren, that they alone are capable of managing our educational institutions and to determine their relations to the Church, we have not the slightest trace of patience. It was with the single contention that the Methodist Church cannot wisely govern her institutions and that only independent boards can do so, that we said we had no trace of patience. The statement did not even refer specially to Vanderbilt University (note that the word "institutions" in the quoted sentence is in the plural), but we were declaring our strong aversion to the preaching now heard in some quarters—that no Conference, Annual or General, ought to elect the trustees of our colleges. Brother Bingham expands what we said into an affirmation that we "have no trace of patience" with views (note the plural) expressed by the opposition. He need not think that he can shelter here under an artful handling of quotation marks; for his blended statement is one in effect, and utterly misleading. Nor is this the only time in his communication that he distorts this sentence: twice more he does it. Out of it he gets the following two declarations: "Brother Meek claims that 1,500,000 members of the Church agree with him," and "When according to Brother Meek 1,500,000 are lined up against a few more than 12,000." By any proper rule of construction, are either of these statements of his even remotely deducible from what we said? Mind you, he could have evolved them from nothing else that we have written, for only in this one place did we use these figures. And now in the light of this disclosure, may we not ask the question, Who is incapable of being fair?

Brother Bingham declares that he has not ridiculed the Bishops. Here is what he said:

At midnight, in their guarded tent,
Bishops lay dreaming of the hour
When Vanderbilt in suppliance bent,
Should tremble at their power.
Strike for your altars and your fires,
Strike for the green graves of your sires.

This parody represents the Bishops as dreaming of having Vanderbilt before them in suppliance and trembling at their power. We submit that the ascription of any such dream or feeling to these worthy men whose course has been thoroughly dignified and respectful, and the manner in which it was done, is nothing short of ridicule and misrepresentation. Brother Bingham says it was not so meant; that, of course, we cannot discuss with him; but in our opinion, he put the Bishops in a wrong light. We have had letters from some of the brightest preachers in Mississippi—men who know the import of language—who of their own accord expressed to us the same view. He says the following sentence shows that he meant no reflection: "This is very pretty poetry and mighty fine heroics, but absolutely valueless in a law-court where alone the issue can be determined." We fail to see in this last statement the significance that he claims for it as an interpretation of what had gone before.

He says it was placed over against Bishop Hoss' suggestion that the trustees of Vanderbilt University were capable of digging up and removing the remains of Bishop McKendree, Bishop Soule, and Bishop McTyeire. This is passing strange, when in the entire article in which the above parody appears, not the slightest reference is made to anything that Bishop Hoss had said. The Bishop's interview had appeared in the Commercial Appeal two weeks before Mr. Bingham's article first appeared in the Jackson Daily News two hundred miles away. How did he expect the public to know that he was setting it over against the Bishop's utterance on that point? Did he think that the day of universal telepathy has come?

But the worst of it is, that he has utterly misrepresented Bishop Hoss. The Bishop did not say, or suggest that the Vanderbilt Trustees were capable of digging up the remains of McKendree, Soule, and McTyeire. What he did say may be found in the Advocate of June 30th. After he had stated to the reporter in detail what the trustees had done, the latter asked him, "Could they have gone any further?" He answered yes. There is one other thing they might have done to emphasize their repudiation of the Church's ownership and control. "And what is that, Bishop?" said the reporter. The response was, "They might have ordered the removal of the dust of Bishops McKendree, Soule, and McTyeire from the campus. The graves of these great men there, carry an unpleasant suggestion of ecclesiastical narrowness, and ought by all means to be leveled to avoid giving offense to the very broad-minded gentlemen who think that churches are an unnecessary survival of the dark ages." The latter part of this statement is very sharp, but the thrust is at their conception of the churches, and has nothing to do with the complaint which Mr. Bingham makes. Bishop Hoss did not say that "the trustees were capable of digging up the remains" of these men, or would do so, or desired to do so, but that this was about the only thing they had left undone in their attempt to exterminate Methodism from the institution. The suggestion of what ought to be done was his; he did not claim that such was at all their disposition. And in making him say that the trustees were "capable of doing this," Brother Bingham has done him a grave and unwarranted injustice.

But Mr. Bingham says even if he had criticised the Bishops we are not the one to rebuke him, because the Advocate has contained columns of the sharpest editorial criticism of Bishop Hendrix and that we have shown him no mercy. If all our Brother here alleges were true, we would yet have vastly the advantage of him, for it could still be said in our favor, that we had criticised a Bishop who has arrayed himself against the General Conference and the authority of the Church and is seeking to alienate from its control $3,000,000 worth of property, whereas he has ridiculed the Episcopal College (save one member) for seeking to maintain the rights of the Church as they were instructed by the General Conference to do. And it could be shown that our strictures have a record of facts to sustain them, while his misleading parody is utterly without a semblance of truth to support it, being wholly the product of an overwrought imagination.

THE Grant Furniture Co.
THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that
— Lasts a LIFETIME —
WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.
427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

SPEARING & CO.,
(Established 1817.)
SAIL MAKERS
AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS, and TENTS.
CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOU LAS STREETS
Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

But reprehensible as we think has been his course, we have not bitterly and malignantly pursued Bishop Hendrix, as Brother Bingham would apparently have our readers believe. When at Asheville in an address to the General Conference he called the name of two Vanderbilt trustees—men known throughout the conference—and stated that they had advised against having a meeting of the Board at Asheville, and these men said he had not properly set forth their attitude (not accusing him of intentional misrepresentation), and one of them expressed himself on the subject with some feeling, and his utterance (which would have been embarrassing to the Bishop) was about to be wired to the secular press, it was cruel, merciless R. A. Meek, who interfered and kept it from being scattered broadcast over the country under glaring headlines. Was not that an act of kindness and charity to Bishop Hendrix? And from that day until the meeting of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust, about the middle of June, not one syllable in depreciation of him was written by our hand. And even after that famous session of the Board when the authority of the Church was set at defiance, his name did not appear in the Advocate until he came into its columns over his own signature, in a communication in which the Committee on Education at Asheville (of which we were a member) was charged with having brought on the present trouble, and the position of Judge O'Rear, Col. Harris and others was improperly stated (we do not charge that this was designedly done). What were we to do with the Bishop's communication? If we had rejected it, Mr. Bingham would have been the very first man to condemn us. We did the only thing we could with propriety do; we published it and answered it to the best of our ability. And in that answer we discussed only the points raised by the Bishop, and we did not go one step beyond the record of the case. There was not in our entire discussion one word of abuse or a single invasion of the realm of motive. In a plain, frank, fearless manner we met the issues presented, and if the integrity of his character was called in question, which we have not said, and do not now say, it is only because a recital of the facts in the case and a fair analysis of the contentions of the Bishop themselves constitute such an impeachment. And from that issue of the Advocate up to the present time, no other specific criticism of Bishop Hendrix have we made (we expressed no opinion at all in the editorial in reply to Dr. Mann in the Advocate of July 21).

Thus it is shown that Brother Bingham's "columns of sharpest criticism" are reducible to a single editorial written in reply to a communication sent the Advocate from the Bishop's own pen, and which was largely in the nature of a defense of the editor's own course as a member of the Committee on Education at Asheville. Brother Bingham seems to think it is a matter of little consequence how much we are misrepresented. We are too small to figure in his calculations. It is for great ecclesiastical dignitaries and the most distinguished citizens of the South that he is concerned. The rights of the ordinary teacher and the protection of him from injustice are causes in defense of which he does not feel called upon to draw his lance. Unlike the ancient knight, who went to the rescue of the weak and helpless, he does battle only for the powerful and illustrious. And going still further, he would apparently even deny us the inalienable right of self-defense.

But let us not be misunderstood. We do not wish it to appear that we apologize for anything we have written concerning the course of Bishop Hendrix and the Vanderbilt Board of Trust. In our opinion, what they did is deserving of severe censure. As we see it, Bishop Hendrix has no more right to refuse to obey the law of the Church than the humblest preacher in it. On this point the Methodist pertinently said, "Bishop Hendrix is not a weak man. He knows the gravity of his act. What he did he did deliberately, and has made up his mind, doubt-

Brother Bingham and his friends have had many letters disavowing of what he wrote. We do not at all doubt that there is quite a number of men in the Church on that side of the question. And many of the "brothers" and "sisters" know all about it. It is not in the least a great scandal. We received Mr. Bingham's answer to a letter from me. But we do not intend to publish it. Another that we heard from was a "number" who told us that he was particularly kind-hearted and kind. We saw the Scallop Camp Ground a few days ago. The first communication appeared in the "New York News" and taught that we were a "heresy." We sent, we did not think a single one approve what he had written. He took his position as so popular, let him study his views in a series of discussions, taking pains to include what he said about the "warding-in" of Church control (in the "University"), and submitted it to the two Mississippi Churches when they met in St. December, and let the question go.

Brother Bingham has no ground to stand on (which might be inferred from the delivery of his referenced that we have ever even had a "heresy" particularly in or defended to the States. We have any criticism of Bishop Galloway. We have that great Mississippi man not one whit less than he honors him.

He can hang no laurel upon his brow that we would not place there. He can pay no tribute to his character and services too exalted for us to endorse. No word of criticism has ever been uttered against him that we did not think was without justification, and which we did not desire. Almost the only enemies we have, were made standing fearlessly upon the great Bishop against the spiteful brood of little fellows who have made his name in Mississippi and no body knows this any better than Mr. Bingham.

One more point and we will have done. Brother Bingham says his final paragraph of which we made so much, is so much, consisted of a single brief sentence is based on facts, which we may have for the Advocate. If we do not think so, the good Brother does not exactly mean what he says. He does not mean that he has any proof of the statement that the agitation of the Vanderbilt question has been largely conducted on suspicion and misrepresentation. He could not prove that if he were to write a whole volume additional to the one which he has shortly promised to give us. That charge rests wholly upon his ipse dixit. What he means is that he has proof that this controversy began in personal resentment. And this he says we may publish if we care to. Our answer is not now. Bishop Hoss is in the Orient, whether he has gone to look after the interests of the Church. It is neither brave nor manly, nor chivalrous to make war upon him in his absence. When he returns and is here to speak for himself, we shall be pleased to consider Brother Bingham's communication. But we advise him to take warning from the fate of his friends and to think three before he touches his lance to do battle against E. E. Hoss. This claim that personal pique has had anything material to do with the Vanderbilt controversy is ridiculous in the extreme. Think of an issue with nothing to warrant it but personal pique enlisting the support of such men as A. W. Wilson, W. A. Candler, James Atkins, and all of the other Bishops, except one controlling the five able lawyers of the Vanderbilt Commission dominating the General Conference, the power of Southern Methodism, and a large majority of the Church. Merely personal pique, it is scarcely less wonderful than the propaganda from which skeptical scientists contend has evolved the stupendous universe.

This issue is not one between Bishop Hoss and Bishop Hendrix or Bishop Hoss and any one else. It is an issue squarely joined between the Church and an insurgent body of traitors. And now that Mr. Bingham has been clearly shown to be thoroughly alienated with all his heart in rebellion, we can little wonder what he writes. We have not found fault with him for agreeing with those men. That is his right. But when we object to what he says, when his prime object is to injure the Church, and protect his insurgent friends, that with a plea for peace upon his lips he yet makes the union of those who dared to defend the rights of the sacred rights of Southern Methodism. If we want to say that he was concerned for the welfare of the Church when he was planning the wisdom of withdrawing absolutely from her control one-fourth of her educational property. How can he say that he was pleading for peace when he approved the adoption of the Bradford resolution, which was wholly a peace measure, and which would have tended to bring the voice of controversy from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Let our Brother fight for his friends as much as he pleases, but let him acknowledge when he stands, just as he stands, and come out square in the open. We admire an frank man, who has no compunctions about if he has anything to say, says it plainly and not by indirection. In fact, a eulogy upon Governor John Marshall Stone, which it was our privilege to hear, Bishop Galloway said, "There were not enough shadows in his great soul to hide a sinister thought." We had rather say so as to be worthy of that noble trait, than to be the illustrious president of the Vanderbilt Board of Trust, or Mr. Bingham's most distinguished citizen of the South, or even to stand upon such an eminence as to consider himself equal to the task of addressing seven Bishops upon the proprieties of their official conduct.

We heartily concur in Brother Bingham's request that his communication be carefully read in conjunction with our reply. And we sincerely trust that every reader who has the matter at hand will examine the various quotations made in the discussion. We do not desire to do our good Brother the slightest injustice. It seems that we have in places been severely rebuked by our readers to note the fact that he pitched the plan of the discussion and that we have only in the issues which he has presented, introducing new features at all.

We sincerely regret this controversy with Mr. Bingham. We did not anticipate that our brief reference to his communications in the secular press would precipitate it. At that very time we were engaged in circulating a leading Mississippi preacher who desired to take him to task in our columns not to do so. But once having referred to our good Brother, we were powerless to avert the issue. Had we shut him out, he would have felt that he was not treated fairly. So all that was left us to do was to meet him in the forum of debate as best we could. And this we have done, leaving almost wholly upon the defensive.

Church News

The Twelfth District Synod of the Lutheran Church of the South met in Richmond, Va. on Sept. 10. It was a large and enthusiastic gathering.

Bishop Monzon is in Mexico, visiting the churches and conferring with the workers in that mission field. He expects to attend the regional celebration now in progress in Mexico City.

The North Carolina Conference Epworth Leagues are enlarging their field of usefulness this year by taking up the support of a medical missionary in Japan. Another worthy example.

An organization of the Travelers Aid Society has been effected at Jackson, Miss. This has been chiefly through the influence and work of Mrs. Charles B. Galloway, who is giving to abundant in good works.

Rev. John W. Caldwell, pastor of the Carrollton Presbyterian Church, of New Orleans, has been called to the Alabama Street Presbyterian Church of Memphis. Whether he will accept has not been announced at this writing.

Professor J. L. Chalmers, well known as the director of our Correspondence School, has inaugurated a movement in Nashville to raise $20,000 for church extension work in that city. It is thought that several new churches may be erected as an outcome of this campaign.

Dr. J. R. Hammond, formerly Secretary of the General Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South, has been elected Professor of Biblical Theology and Church History in the Methodist Training School for Christian Workers at Nashville. His many friends in that city are pleased to know that he will continue to reside there.

A Christian convention of Indian men, held not long since, it was found that of the audience of one hundred were Indians. If half the men of Southern Methodism did as well, all our Church practical problems would be solved and our share of world evangelism would be an assured fact. Why should we not? Why should you not?

The London West End Mission, with which Hugh Price Hughes was connected, is soon to have new and more ample quarters. The institutional work will be conducted in an eight-story building with fifty-five rooms, and the religious services will be held in a large hall with a seating capacity of two thousand. It is said that the new property will be worth a half million dollars.

The round of Annual Conferences has already begun. Those in Brazil and Japan have been held by Bishops Lambuth and Hoss, and the last issue of the St. Louis Advocate contained the appointments of the Missouri Conference, which assembled on August 1st, under the presidency of Bishop Denny. Bishop Watsonhouse is now wielding the gavel in the Northwest, and from now on these interesting gatherings will follow in quick succession.

On Sunday, Sept. 4th, Bishop Candler preached a sermon in Wesley Memorial Church in Atlanta. In the afternoon the beautiful stained windows just in the rear of the choir platform, were unveiled, appropriate addresses being made by the Bishop and Dr. J. W. Lee. The latter has just returned from a two-months visit to England.

Bishop J. S. Key was in Dallas a few days since to attend the obsequies of the Rev. John S. Davis. Regarding him the Texas Advocate of the 8th inst. says: "The Bishop is looking well. His complexion is clear, his step steady, his voice distinct, and his natural force seems unabated. He looks so well that we are justified in the belief that he has several years of vigor and usefulness still ahead of him. He preaches often and during the summer helped the presiding elders in their District Conferences."

NEW ORLEANS METHODISM.

The New Orleans Preachers' Meeting was resumed this week after an adjournment extending through summer months. Dr. F. N. Parker presided with the following ministers: Dr. S. H. Werlein, Revs. N. E. Jory, W. W. Holmes, J. E. Sutton, A. I. Townsley, R. H. Harrell, H. T. Carley and C. D. Atkinson. Rev. N. E. Jory was invited to address the meeting on Sept. 13th on the subject of the recent World Missionary Conference, to which he was a delegate. The Bishops of our Church are to meet here on October 20th and the Preachers' Meeting appointed the following reception committee for that occasion:

Dr. F. N. Parker, chairman, Dr. John A. Rice, Rev. W. W. Holmes and Dr. S. H. Werlein.

Bishop Mouzon has promised to speak before the Union Epworth League on Oct. 25th at 8 p. m. at First Church.

The Union League gave an outing and entertainment last month at the City Park to about fifty poor children and "shut-ins" of the Werlein Mission District. The present Epworth Church is one of the fruits of the Union League. The president of the Union is Mr. T. L. McKnight, a nephew of Dr. J. T. Sawyer.

The Industrial School at the First Methodist Church has an enrollment of more than 120. It is hoped that the General Board of Missions will re-enforce this work.

Dr. J. A. Rice preached an interesting sermon at Rayne Memorial last Sunday from the text, "Ye are my witnesses." Rev. N. E. Joryer also made a brief address telling of the World Missionary Conference.

Rev. A. I. Townsley will enterprise some institutional features at the Second Methodist Church in the near future. He feels that they would be quite helpful in his part of the city.

Rev. L. A. Sims already has in hand about half of the funds needed to construct the new Epworth Church for which he has been planning. The old house of worship will be moved to the rear of the present lot, and may ultimately be converted into a parsonage.

The Parker Memorial Church will hold its Annual Rally Day, Oct. 1, at Audubon Park. The walls of this church which have been up for some time, according to report, will be plastered before the winter season sets in.

Rev. H. T. Carley reports a good day at Carrollton Avenue last Sunday. With the coming of more pleasant weather, the congregations are improving, and the various departments of the work are taking on their customary activity.

REPORT OF TREASURER, CONFERENCE BOARD OF MISSIONS, LOUISIANA ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

May to September, 1910.

Received from—	—Missions—
	Foreign	Domestic
Haynesville, Rev. W. T. Woodward	$ 67.00	$ 67.00
Selma, Rev. J. A. Alford	29.00
Parker Mem., Rev. C. D. Atkinson	22.00
Monroe, Rev. R. H. Wynn	20.00
Patterson, Rev. Jno. Sholars	4.00	15.50
Wilson, Rev. E. L. Cargill	20.00	20.00
Mary Werlein, Rev. H. Whitehead	10.00	10.00
Amite, Rev. H. W. Bowman	7.50	7.50
Rayne, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr.		16.00
	$159.50	$136.00

W. B. THOMSON, Treasurer,
221 S. Rampart Street.

New Orleans, Sept. 8, 1910.

It is not the temptation yielded to, but the temptation rejected that makes moral fiber.—Henry Churchill King.

The Centenary College of Louisiana.

Fall Term will
open Sept. 14, 1910.

For Catalogues or other information write to

FELIX R. HILL, President,

OR
JOHN S. JOHNSTON, Dean,
SHREVEPORT, LA.

You Need the Leaders' Hand-Book.

The Most Complete Manual of the Laymen's Movement That Has Yet Appeared.

A hundred-page book full of practical plans and valuable suggestions for speakers, leaders, and committees, together with an appendix giving an account of the Dallas Conference, a copy of the National Policy adopted at Chicago, and a digest of the action of the late General Conference on the Laymen's Movement.

Price, 25 cents per copy, silver or stamps. Order on this coupon from

LAYMEN'S MISSIONARY MOVEMENT,
M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH,

810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

Name

Address

Secular News and Comment

A case of techil, the dreaded Korean, ear-n disease, was discovered in Seattle, Wash., on Sept. 5th, the victim being a Korean. He was taken in charge by the authorities, who have declared it to be their purpose to report him.

Reinhard A. Wetzel, instructor in physics of the College of the City of New York, has been engaged in a series of experiments to compute with more exactitude the weight of the earth. He announces that our planet weighs seven trillion tons.

More than 60,000 persons applied for municipal relief in New York City during 1909, an increase of 80 per cent. in five years. During 1909 more than 100,000 people asked shelter in New York lodging houses. Between 1904 and 1909 suicides in New York City increased 50 per cent. with poverty as the chief cause.

General Juan Estrada, the new President of Nicaragua, has issued a public statement in which he declares that all political prisoners in the Republic have been liberated, and that the freedom of the press will be respected. He also invites foreign and especially American investments. Apparently General Estrada has made a fine beginning, and promises to develop into a wise and patriotic ruler.

The cultivation of the poppy plant, from which opium is made, is being steadily reduced in China. Two provinces in Manchuria—Hei Lung Chian and Kirin—where formerly the industry flourished on a large scale, are now said to contain only a few small fields. The number of dives for opium smoking are also decreasing, and more numerous applications are being made for assistance in breaking off the drug habit.

The cholera epidemic in Russia is reported to be abating. During the week ending Sept. 3, there were 9,899 new cases, with 4,405 deaths, against 15,699 cases and 7,990 deaths the week previous. The total figures for the entire season show 170,363 cases and 77,466 deaths. Armenian clergymen are said to have recently led through the city of Drivan a procession, carrying sacred images and beseeching God to stay the ravages of the plague.

The preliminary registration shows that the enrollment of pupils in the public schools of New York City this fall will approximate 700,000. This is greater than the total population of any city in the United States except New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, and possibly Saint Louis. The pupils will be housed in 550 buildings, and will receive attention from 15,000 teachers. Last year the average attendance upon the schools of the American Metropolis was 657,593.

Under the joint auspices of the Yorktown Historical Society of the United States and the Society of Descendants of the Signers of the Declaration of Independence, the anniversary of the surrender at Yorktown, Va., of Lord Cornwallis to General Washington on Oct. 19th, 1781, will be celebrated in the town where the memorable event occurred. The program is now being arranged and contemplates ceremonies lasting several days. It will embrace a number of patriotic addresses by eminent citizens, and it is said that one or more battleships may take part.

The Chinese tallow tree has been successfully transplanted in Southern Texas. It is a native of the Orient, and is a beautiful ornamental shade tree which produces berries from which vegetable tallow is made. About $30,000 worth of this commodity is imported annually to the United States. It is Uncle Sam's purpose to reproduce upon our soil every valuable industry to be found anywhere of which our climate will admit. He keeps a number of men steadily employed in this commendable work, and in the prosecution of it his agents practically cover the globe.

Gen. William C. Oates, the well known lawyer and politician of Alabama, died at his home in Montgomery on Sept. 9th in the 76th year of his age. For many years he was the most conspicuous figure in public life in that State, serving in Congress from 1880 to 1894, when he was elected Governor, defeating the Populist candidate. He was a distinguished Confederate soldier, and lost an arm on the battlefield. In the Spanish-American War, he was a Brigadier General of Volunteers, and at the time of his decease was a member of the Chickamauga Park Commission.

On Sept. 6, Elias Fernandez Albano, acting president of the republic of Chili, died of pneumonia after a brief illness of six days. It will be remembered that President Pedro Montt, the chosen ruler of the nation, passed away in Bremen, Germany, whither he had gone in search of health on Aug. 16th. It was when he left to go abroad that Albano assumed the reins of government. According to the laws of Chili, when the office of President becomes vacant, the Chief Magistrate is succeeded by the senior Minister under the title of "Vice-President of the Republic" until an election is held. On the eve of celebrating the centennial of his independence, this nation is called upon to mourn the loss of two executives who died within three weeks of each other.

The National Farmers' Union closed a three days' session at Charlotte, N. C., on Sept. 5th. Delegates were present from all parts of the country, and the meeting was most enthusiastic. A legislative committee to wait upon Congress and the State assemblies in the interest of the demands of the Union, was constituted. The following are some of the measures for which the body declared: "A law to prevent gambling in agricultural products by boards of trade and cotton exchanges; a law providing for the establishment of a parcels post; a law against the establishment of central government banks, through which the money of the country may be withdrawn from circulation and the volume of available money contracted; a law to restrict foreign immigration; a law gradually reducing the tariff to a revenue basis; physical valuation of railroads, telegraph and telephone lines."

A considerable Mormon exodus is said to be going on from Utah and other Western States to Mexico. It is reported to have begun about three years ago, when a test colony was established in the State of Chihuahua. Later 65,000 acres of land were acquired in Chihuahua and the colony was transported to that State. Within the past few days an additional tract of 50,000 acres has been purchased, and it has been announced that options are held on nearly a half million acres more. It is expected that 5,000 Mormon families will move to this settlement within the next eighteen months. According to report, Mexico waives the duty on all Mormon property brought in, including machinery and stock, and will exempt the colonists from taxation for twenty-five years. We do not wish our sister Republic any misfortune, but this immigration pleases us not a little. A people who believe in polygamy, whether they practice it or not, are not desirable citizens.

After visiting England, Ireland, Scotland, France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Italy, Austria, Hungary, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Lapland, and Russia, and studying the social condition of each of these countries, Mrs. Larkin, Helen Baker, of Spokane, Wash., declares that Russian women and children are the most degraded to be found anywhere in Europe. She says: "Peasant girls are the prey of Russian soldiers and bear thousands of children who become charges on the government. The boy babies are put in good hands, they are educated and trained for the army. The girl babies are so neglected and starved that forty per cent. of them perish. The soldiers are privileged ruffians who move their camps from place to place, robbing the peasants of their flocks, potatoes, and everything else they chance to covet." Mrs. Baker spent a week with Count Tolstoy and his family, and found the great reformer full of sympathy and pity for the deplorable condition of his countrywomen.

BACKWARD GLANCES.

By Rev. H. Armstrong

No. 2.

At the close of my last paper I was discussing Dr. A. Hunter. Just before Conference I said to him: "Some of the Carlisle people are anxious for my return." He replied by closing his eyes and a gentle shake of the head. I knew that settled it. Our Conference assembled that year in Arkadelphia. Bishop Keener presided. Cadman Pope was on that district, and Charles F. Evans was pastor. A $6,000 frame church had just been finished. It was roomy and comfortable. The session was harmonious. The congregations at preaching were large. The preaching in my judgment was good, better and best of course, Bishop Keener's sermon on Sunday at 11 o'clock, was wonderful in thought, clear and forcible in delivery, and measured up to high-water mark, but the only sermon preached during the session that set the congregation on fire and produced an upward was preached on Thursday night by Dr. James Atkins, father of our worthy Bishop Atkins. He had recently been transferred to us, and had served Second Street Church, Little Rock. The sermon was remarkable afterwards, did not seem to be extraordinary, except that it held the large congregation like a cable rope until the climax was reached, when the rope broke, and the auditors yelled and yelled like a great fire, or earthquake excitement. The sermon was from the words, "The sufferings of Christ, and the glory that should follow."

The appointments were read out on Monday morning. Mine was Bright Star, in Miller County, below Texarkana, and bordering on Texas, and extending into Louisiana. Bright Star had a postoffice, a dogger, a large Methodist church, and nestled down in a clump of pines, about one hundred yards from any other house, was a fine old parsonage. Our trip from Carlisle was a journey with some difficulty. It was late in December, and very cold for so early in the season. Several inches deep, trains were very irregular, and boarded one in the night. It had no sleepers, and some cause it was not properly heated, and at day about 3:30 o'clock, cold, hungry, and weary, we reached Atlanta, Texas, the nearest station to Bright Star, which was twelve miles away. The mail and accommodation back had gone on the morning (Saturday). It went out every morning except Sunday. I found a boarding house, at which I put up, to wait until Monday. Just before a supper a gentleman came in and inquired about me. He introduced himself as Tom Willis and was home with him, to remain over Sunday. That was Saturday night, December 31, 1874, and the next day there fell a snow which measured twenty-four inches in depth on level ground. Not a wagon, buggy, or anything left town for a week. On Monday, January 9, we got conveyance to Bright Star. The parsonage was not ready for occupants, so we were kindly and hospitably entertained by Bro. S. W. Mays and family until the parsonage was looked after and until it had something in the larder. I found Brother Mays to be a fine old man. He had more property and money, perhaps, than any other six for miles around. Each morning, except Sunday, there would be callers, black and white, to see the proprietor on business. He held family worship night and morning, and would not allow anything to interrupt his tenants were invited in, but if they refused they could stand without the rain, cold or snow, as the case might be. The worship was observed regardless of anything else. He did not unite with the Lord's army, as he called it, until he was about forty years of age. He said when he did enlist, he enlisted for the whole war. He was a fine steward. On approaching his church on Sunday morning, a crowd in front of the door. Brother Mays could be seen bareheaded with a broad smile, soliciting quarterage. He gave five dollars each year at home to the mission cause, and when he died a triumphant death he was supporting and educating a girl in China.

J. W. Groves and J. C. Tison were two local preachers there who were a great help to the cause. They were men of experience, good common sense, always ready to pray and to preach, and of course one of their means to every interest of the cause. There were four churches in easy distance of the parsonage, but the two in Louisiana were visited at times with difficulty. The stream, Black Bayou, had to be crossed, and it was divided into five branches, or runs, and in time of high water a horse could wade from one run to another, but each run was swimming, and well supplied with crooked stumps, and when a knee was encountered the horse would lose his balance and the rider would be a good lucking. These runs in high water made a solid flood of at least a thousand yards in width. The water has made the crossing at all times of the year, and has been ducked when the water had ice in it. I only crossed the bayou once a month and approached at both places the same day. I loved my Louisiana churches and people very much. There were manifestations of hospitality and love at every turn, and strange to say, there was said to be an organized clan of robbers and murderers right there, who were not discussed by their neighbors, nor molested by officers of the law. I had good meetings, overwhelming conviction, and very bright professions, there conversions sometimes during a sermon. I am told that the robberies and cold blooded murders perpetrated then upon unsuspecting strangers passing through that community, have long since ceased. Railroads have permeated the most unfavored parts and sweet and balmy peace has followed in their wake.

Time well spent is Satan's deadliest foe. It leaves no opening for the lurking fiend.—Wilcox.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of
NEW ORLEANS, LA.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure.

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McClosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec. Treas.
Geo. A. Haro

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Moulner, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woolard, Rev. H. S. Sprague.

Editorial.

ALIEN FAITHS.

More and more the United States is becoming the home of alien and unchristian faiths. Being a land of religious freedom, any sect may here propagate its views and seek, unhindered by but few restraints, to establish itself. Already there is among our population a sprinkling of Buddhists, Confucionists, Bahaists, and of the devotees of other heathen forms of worship. There are now in our country sixty-two Chinese and twelve Japanese temples. The former, however, are reported to have only one priest and not to be very active. But the latter are said to have a priest for every house of worship and to be ardent and industrious propagandists. The Hindoo religion, which was introduced during the World's Fair in 1893, now has organizations in New York, Pittsburg, San Francisco, and Los Angeles. It is known as the Vedanta Society, and seeks to bring all religious systems into harmony. Bahaism is a new faith of Persian origin. It began with one called Bab, or the gate, who claimed to be "the forerunner of him whom God should manifest." Following him came one calling himself Baha Ulla, who professed to be the one whose coming had been prophesied, and from him the new sect took its name. It is scarcely necessary to remark that this beginning is evidently a spurious imitation of the commencement of Christianity.

As the years pass and our population becomes more cosmopolitan, we are certain to have much more transplanted heathenism upon our soil. Though where they have an opportunity to know the truth, we hold firmly to the view that men will be held responsible for their opinions, we believe, so far as earthly governments are concerned, in the freedom of human thought, and would not trammel it to the slightest extent. But let it be distinctly understood that liberty of thought does not mean license in conduct. We concede to all men the right to think as they please, but not to act as they please. There is a vast amount of wisdom in that part of the Spanish Constitution of 1876 which deals with this question. The clause to which we refer reads as follows: "No one shall be molested in Spanish territory for his religious opinions, nor for the exercise of his personal worship, always provided due respect is paid to Christian morals."

This in reality is also the position of our government, though it is not so explicitly stated. According to the decision of our courts, no one under the guise of religion may violate the laws established by our people for the peace and good order of society. No worshiper among us, because he personally believes in it, has a right to practice polygamy, or to offer human sacrifices, or to do bodily harm to himself or any other fellow-being. Christian Science parents are even indictable for leaving their children without medical attention when stricken by malignant or contagious diseases.

Nor should these alien faiths be accorded any sympathy in their warfare upon Christian institutions. Ours is distinctly a Christian nation. Its cradle was rocked by Christian hands; the impress of Christian teaching upon it is deep and ineradicable. Christian sentiment produced it, and now conserves and sustains it. Our laws are little else than this sentiment crystallized into statutes. Our Bible and Sabbath have both received legal sanction, and are the mightiest conservators of private and public morals. Hence, when those who do not believe in them seek to close the one in our public schools and do away with the other as a national day of rest, they strike at the very foundation of the Republic. And those of our citizens who, under a mistaken conception of religious freedom, are disposed to give them encouragement and assistance in an attempt so unrighteous, are lacking both in wisdom and true patriotism.

VIRTUES RARE AND BEAUTIFUL.

A Christ-like devotion to the welfare of humanity was not the only shining virtue possessed by the late Florence Nightingale. Other beautiful characteristics were her unusual modesty and her complete self-abnegation. We are told that after peace was declared and the Crimean War had ended, she returned to England incognito to avoid a public ovation and went quietly to her home at Lea Hurst. When a purse of $250,000 was presented to her as a testimonial of appreciation of her splendid services, she used it not to advance any interest of her own, but to endow a training school for nurses. And when they talked of burying her in Westminster Abbey, where repose the ashes of Britain's illustrious dead, she requested that her obsequies be as simple as possible, and that she be allowed to sleep at East Wellow among her kindred and the masses of the people for whom she had lived and wrought.

This effacement of self is all too rare among the followers of the Man of Galilee. We are exhorted to be lowly in mind and in honor to prefer one another, but such a spirit is seldom found. Egotism parades itself abroad, and struts in high places in the Church. The perpendicular pronoun is too often upon lips, which, forgetful of self, should exalt the Crucified One. The reign of Mammon is widespread, and the standing of people in our congregations is determined too much by what they have and give. Spiritual wealth is not generally rated at its real value. But it constitutes the true riches of the Church and it is what God wants. A large self-esteem is incompatible with high attainments in grace. Humility is an invariable mark and attestation of genuine holiness. It also unfailingly belongs to those who possess the highest order of greatness.

The brightest stars are burning suns;
The deepest water stillest runs;
The laden bee the lowest flies;
The richest mine the deepest lies;
The stalk that's most replenished,
Doth bow the most its modest head.
Thus deep humility we find
The mark of every master-mind."

NEGLECTED DOCTRINES.

The two most distinctive doctrines of Methodism are, perhaps, the witness of the Spirit and Christian perfection, and yet they are probably less stressed from our pulpits and in our church papers to-day than almost any other tenets in our creed. May not this in some measure account for the lack of spirituality among our people? The assurance of salvation can alone give to the soul the knowledge, peace, and joy which thrill it and inspire it to high and heroic action. It alone can supply in the testimony of believers the note of certitude which makes it efficacious in convincing the unsaved. Whence is this assurance to come if not from a clear impression made directly upon the human consciousness by the Holy Spirit?

The privilege and necessity of a high and holy life also need to be frequently and impressively stated. Because we do not believe in a certain theory of sanctification, let us not fight shy of the great Bible doctrine of holiness. Our people need an exalted standard toward which they may ardently and energetically strive. Wesley said he never knew a congregation that did not decrease in spiritual attainments where such a goal was not held up before its members. The preaching that sin is a necessity is not helpful in the making of saints. It stifles aspiration for a loftier religious life and tends to reconcile one to live upon a low plane, where his conduct is that of mixed good and evil. Such teaching is both unmethodistic and unscriptural. Let us urge our people to seek to be made perfect in love in this life—to go from grace to grace, and strength to strength, until Christ is fully formed within them, the hope of glory. We were pleased to see a few days since that Dr. Hornabrook, the distinguished president of the British Wesleyan Conference sounded a bugle note in behalf of this glorious doctrine across the seas. We sincerely wish that it might be emphasized with earnestness and vigor in every Methodist Church in America from ocean to ocean. We ought never to allow ourselves to forget that it is our noble mission "to spread scriptural holiness" over the earth.

OUR CUBAN WORK.

We have every reason to be gratified with the progress of our work in Cuba. Though our re-occupancy of that field only began in 1896, we now have there three presiding elders' districts, 24 pastoral charges, 35 churches, 19 parsonages, 3,203 members, and 961 probationers. We have 48 Sunday schools, 203 officers and teachers, and 2,202 pupils. The Epworth Leagues number 16, with a membership of 539. We have one college, and one day school, and our teaching force numbers 14, and the students 251. The total valuation of the mission property is $236,576, and the amount raised by the several congregations upon the island last year was $12,444.77. These figures may seem small, but it should be remembered that in carrying forward Christian work in a new territory the first years are always incomparably the most difficult. With the forces now on the ground and the equipment which has been acquired, vastly larger achievements may be expected in the near future. Much of the success accomplished has been due to the untiring energy and splendid leadership of Bishop Candler, under whose fostering care the mission has been wisely kept. With tongue and pen he has eloquently pleaded for its pressing needs, and has left nothing possible undone to promote its interests. The Cuban people are our neighbors; they are almost at our very doors, and ours is the only Methodism in that ripe and inviting field. The Methodists of the South should pray specially for this mission, and, as opportunity offers, give generously of their means to maintain it. If a vigorous branch of Wesleyanism is not planted there, it will be our fault and lasting reproach.

CHARACTER ITS CREDENTIAL.

The Kingdom of God is within. To make it consist in the mere formal observance of a few outward religious proprieties is to exalt the less above the greater. The best attestation of the reign of Christ over an individual is a sensitive conscience, worthy principles, and unperturbed affections. Too many there are who want to repeat the formularies of our holy Christianity, and then go unrestrained in the ways of the world. Noble manhood, even though out of the Church, is vastly preferable to the despicable Pharisaism which seeks to profit by a religion which it in reality repudiates. Stealing the livery of heaven to serve the devil in, has not yet gone out of practice.

REMEMBER THE ADVOCATE.

Autumn has arrived, and renewed activity is perceptible on the part of both our preachers and people. In planning for the fall campaign, we hope that our friends will not fail to be mindful of the interests of the Advocate. Regularly through the heat of the summer, it has made its appearance pleading earnestly for our glorious Methodism and the cause of Christ. It knows nothing of a vacation or season of relaxation. Funds have been scarce, but it has managed to pass through the period of financial stringency and is now ready to take a hand in rounding out successfully the work of the year. But to give the best service we must have a replenished exchequer; we must have renewals and new subscribers. We are watching every mail with eagerness and expectancy. Help us, brethren, that we may the more efficiently help you. Remember that the Advocate campaign is now on and appeal to your people in its behalf. We shall be most grateful for any assistance rendered.

PERSONAL:

Send in your subscription to the Advocate. Under the postal law, we shall soon have to drop many names. Let not yours be among the number.

Rev. B. P. Fullilove has just closed a sweeping revival at Abbeville, Miss., with 60 conversions and 23 additions to the church. He was assisted by Rev. J. H. Bell, of Potts Camp.

Rev. W. B. Peritt, of Wesson, Miss., has been appointed to the Mary Werlein Mission and McDonoughville, this city. He comes highly recommended and will enter upon his work at once.

Dr. H. W. Featherston, of the Natchez District, informs us that the Rev. E. Walter Barrington has been transferred from the Montana Conference and placed in charge of Centerville Station, Mississippi Conference.

Whitworth College had a great opening on Sept. 9. The press dispatches report that the capacity of the institution will be taxed to accommodate the pupils. We congratulate Dr. Cooper and his faithful co-workers.

Rev. W. H. Lewis, of the Meridian District, finds the outlook encouraging in that important field. Many fruitful meetings have been held during the summer and the brethren expect to be able to give a good account of their labors at Hattiesburg in December.

Rev. T. H. Dorsey, of West Point, requests us to state that Bishop J. H. McCoy will be in that city on Sept. 21 and 22 and will preach twice each day. Brother Dorsey adds: "The preachers who are convenient to West Point are cordially invited to spend as much of that time with us as possible."

Mrs. Robert Somerville and her daughters, Misses Eleanor and Lucy, returned from Monticello, Tenn., where they spent the summer, to their home at Greenville, Miss., on Sept. 1. After visiting a friend at Big Stone Gap, Va., Miss Eleanor will this week resume her studies at the Randolph-Macon Woman's College, at Lynchburg.

Rev. Eugene Johnson, the pastor, reports a most remarkable meeting at Eupora, Miss., in which there were scores of conversions and 24 accessions to the Church. Indeed, the whole town was profoundly stirred. The preaching was done by Rev. J. L. Morris, of Texas. Brother Johnson has received 60 members since the last Annual Conference.

We were pleased to have as callers a few days since Rev. Robert E. Martin, French Missionary of the Lafayette District, and Mr. Ursin Matherne, a faithful layman of the French congregation at Bourg, La. These brethren gave an interesting account of their labors and were optimistic as to the outlook for Methodism in the French Mission field.

In a postal card report for which we thank him, Rev. E. S. Lewis, of the Winona District says: "Since I last wrote, a number of good meetings have been held. At Isola, there were eight additions; ten at Roussell; eight at Three Mile Lake, and five at Sandy Bayou. Our preachers are active and enthusiastic. We expect a good report at Sardis."

Rev. Theodore Coneland is winding up the quadrennial at Saint Paul's Church, St. Louis, with every phase of the work in superb condition. He has wrought well and won all hearts, and will go to his new field, when the assignment is made, followed by the love and admiration of the entire congregation which he has so faithfully served for the past four years.

How about the arrearages to the Advocate in your charge? Like every other interest of the Church, our main reliance is upon our pastors. We try to aid them in their work, and we earnestly invoke their assistance in the prosecution of ours. Our periodical literature must be circulated, if we are to have an intelligent and aggressive Methodism. Will you not help us, brother?

Rev. W. M. Young, presiding elder of the Sardis District, is pleased with the prospect as the end of the year approaches. Brother Young is a host in himself, and he has associated with him a band of workers who knew naught but to succeed. The next Annual Conference will meet in the midst of these brethren, and we doubt not that they will exhibit a record highly creditable upon that occasion.

In forwarding his last schedule of quarterly meetings for the current year, Rev. R. W. Tucker, of the Ruston District, remarks: "Things are progressing favorably in this territory. The presence, and preaching of Bishop Murrah at our District Conference was a treat. Echoes of the admirable work being done by Brother Tucker and his faithful coadjutors in that section have many times reached our office."

Cheering news comes from the Brookhaven District. Brother Leggett, than whom we have no more faithful and capable presiding elder, says in a communication enclosing his fourth round of appointments: "The district is in good shape. The worthy pastors have not been making much noise, but they have been doing most excellent work. We expect to make good reports to the Conference in December."

Mrs. F. R. White, of Gold Dust, La., in renewing for the Advocate, writes of the death of her husband, and adds: "Our home is very sad and lonely, but we do not mourn as those without hope, for we surely know where to find our loved one. Our departed brother left a wife and eight children. We deeply sympathize with these bereaved ones in their immeasurable loss. Let the readers of the Advocate pray that God may comfort and sustain them."

Rev. T. H. Lipscomb recently held a successful revival at Fairview, on the Indianola Charge. Fourteen were brought into the church (12 on profession of faith) and the entire community received a great moral and spiritual uplift. He was assisted by Rev. L. P. Wasson, of Friar's Point, whom Brother Lipscomb highly commends both as a man and preacher. He says: "As an orator, I believe that he is the most gifted young minister I have ever heard—and I have heard a few."

Rev. J. E. Cunningham, presiding elder of the Oxford District, reports as follows: "Things look good up this way. Crops on the lowlands are almost a failure, but the hills have good corn and some good cotton. We have had many successful revivals, and the prospect is that we will make a better financial showing than we have ever made." Brother Cunningham has spared no pains or effort to carry forward the interests of the Church in the territory over which he has supervision.

Rev. D. M. Gean requests us to state that the Local Preachers' Association of the Oxford District will meet in Main Street Church, Water Valley, at 7 o'clock p. m., Sept. 23, and continue through Saturday and Sunday, the 24th and 25th. Those who expect to attend are desired to notify Rev. A. N. Goforth, Water Valley, Miss., that entertainment may be provided for them. The brethren are urged to come praying for the presence and power of the Holy Spirit. A program will be sent out later.

Rev. G. W. Bachman, a few days since, wrote as follows: "I am just back from Charleston, Miss., where I spent several days in a meeting with the pastor, Rev. J. W. Bell. Rev. O. W. Bradley did the preaching the first six days. Two were added to the church—one by letter and one from another denomination. We organized the Laymen's Missionary Movement in the charge. They have sold the old parsonage and are about ready to begin building a new one on a lot adjoining the church. All goes well at Charleston."

Rev. J. W. Ramsey, of the Lauderdale Charge, has had a number of excellent revivals on his work, and up to the present about fifty have joined the Church. He has repaired one house of worship, and new pews are being put in another. Collections promise to be in advance of any previous year. Brother Ramsey's health is far from good, and he fears that he will be forced to retire from the active ranks at Conference. We sincerely trust that he will improve and that no such step will be necessary.

Commenting upon the situation in the capital district of Mississippi, of which he is the beloved "sub-bishop," Rev. J. R. Jones, in a letter to the editor, says: "The outlook is good for full reports. We have had fine revivals, and the preachers are faithful and the people happy." This, despite political conditions in Mississippi, which are reported to be bad and growing worse. If our citizenship would listen to their ministers more and politicians less, they would doubtless have more of both patriotism and prosperity. This comment anent matters political is pure, not Brother Jones'.

One of the wide-awake pastors of the Mississippi Conference is the Rev. M. H. Moore, of Poplarville. He serves an excellent people, who hold him in high esteem. No interest of the Church suffers in his hands, not even the Conference organ. On the 9th inst. he kindly sent in fourteen subscribers, for which we make grateful acknowledgment. Others who sent in clubs during the past two weeks are: Dr. E. H. Moulter, Rolling Fork, Miss.; Rev. T. H. Porter, Courtland, Miss.; Rev. J. C. Ellis, Gallman, Miss.; Rev. J. T. Lockhart, Pontotoc, Miss.; Rev. C. C. Evans, Heidelberg, Miss.; Rev. D. M. Floyd, Dunbar, Miss.; Rev. N. E. Alford, Bogalusa, La.; Rev. W. A. Bowlin, Smithville, Miss.; Rev. C. M. Noble, Charleyville, La.

In a note to Brother Whitehead, Mrs. G. G. Hamilton, of New Orleans, furnishes the following interesting item of information, for which we thank her: "On Aug. 24th a party of eight ladies from New Orleans, representing the Methodist and Presbyterian Churches, were in the city, and the Methodist Church was visited. The ladies were very interested in the work of the church, and the pastor, Rev. J. R. Jones, was very cordial in his reception of them. The ladies were very much interested in the work of the church, and the pastor, Rev. J. R. Jones, was very cordial in his reception of them. The ladies were very much interested in the work of the church, and the pastor, Rev. J. R. Jones, was very cordial in his reception of them.

The Shepherdess, Miss. Methodist Church, of the First Conference, has been generally greatly pleased with the work of the church, and the pastor, Rev. J. R. Jones, was very cordial in his reception of them. The ladies were very much interested in the work of the church, and the pastor, Rev. J. R. Jones, was very cordial in his reception of them. The ladies were very much interested in the work of the church, and the pastor, Rev. J. R. Jones, was very cordial in his reception of them.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE TRAINING SCHOOL.

The 1910-11 session of the Mississippi Conference Training School at Monticello, Miss., opened September 6th with the largest student body in its history, there being two hundred and sixty pupils in attendance the first day.

Rev. W. W. Moore, the president, and his excellent corps of teachers were greeted by a large attendance of patrons and friends of the school at the opening.

Interesting addresses were delivered by Rev. J. M. Weems, D. D., ex-president of the Board of Trustees; Rev. C. M. Chapman, ex-president of the school; Prof. C. L. Nell, principal of the Laurel Graded Schools, and Rev. W. W. Moore, the president of the school.

Brother Moore is to be congratulated upon securing a strong faculty, composed of three men and three ladies, all graduates to teach in the literary department.

The education class is being taught by a competent teacher, and the primary department is directed by an instructress second to none.

The auspicious beginning, the strong faculty, the co-operation of the trustees and patrons of the school, and the well equipped building assure for the school the most prosperous session it has ever had.

In the afternoon of the opening day there was held a most harmonious session of the Board of Trustees, in which the report of the president's home by Brother Moore was endorsed, and the plan for erecting on the campus a concrete building to be styled the J. W. Lambuth Mission Hall, was approved.

This building, which is to be composed of a music room, a mission library, and mission study room, a Christian Association Hall, and private consultation rooms, will be a valuable acquisition to the school.

The school now owns several acres of land, some woodland, some improved land, and arrangements are being made to use these lands for practical demonstrations of agriculture, dairying, poultry raising, etc.

If you want to place your boys and girls where they will have superior high school advantages, and enjoy good Sunday School, French, German and Church privileges, and be surrounded by a healthy, religious atmosphere, and where they will get maximum values for minimum cost, send them to Monticello, and if you want to make a profitable investment, send us $500 for the J. W. Lambuth Mission Hall. Fraternally,

T. J. O'NEIL, P. E., President Board of Trustees.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TONIGHT? GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH LEON IRWIN & CO. FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE. 736 Union Street. Phone, Main 535.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM

Take the ONE SQUARE GROVER'S TASTELESS CHILLINGTON. You know what you are taking. The formula is plain printed on it, and the showing is in every Quinine and Iron tasteless form, and the most effective form. For grown people and children. 50c

SEWING MACHINES.

SINGER SEWING MACHINES ARE BETTER THAN ANY OTHER MAKE. LIGHT RUNNING AND EVERLASTING. PRICES TO SUIT ALL PURSES. WE SELL NEEDLES AND PARTS FOR ALL MAKES OF SEWING MACHINES. WE HAVE THE BEST OIL IN LOUISIANA. SEE THE DARNER DEMONSTRATED AT OUR 1011 CANAL STREET STORE. IT IS THE BEST DARNER, AND NO HOUSE HOLD IS COMPLETE WITHOUT IT.

WISHED FOR DEATH

Terrible thing to be so sick, that death would come as a welcome relief from suffering!

How much, then, must one be thankful for a medicine that relieves such misery and brings one into a less desperate state of mind!

Cardui, Women's Relief, has done this for many women, and may be expected to do so for many more.

Thousands of ladies have written to tell about their suffering, and how it was relieved by the use of Cardui.

Among this long list of letters written, stands forth Mattie Campbell, of Ratcliff, Texas, who says: "Two years ago my health was bad. I suffered untold misery. I ached all over. Life was a burthen to me. At times I wished for death, to end my suffering."

"At last, I decided to try Cardui. I took one bottle and it helped me. I took 12 bottles more and now I can say that Cardui has stopped my suffering and made life worth living."

"I would not be placed back where I was—not for this whole world rolled at my feet."

Try Cardui. It contains not one grain of dangerous mineral ingredients, but is purely vegetable, and a safe, reliable remedy for young and old. Sold everywhere.

SUMMER TOURIST FARES

Effective May 16 to Sept. 30
Return Oct. 31

Chicago, $33.00
St. Louis, $26.00
Louisville, $27.25

Summer Tourist Fares

To ALL Principal Points in the United States and Canada.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD
141 St. Charles Street, New Orleans.
Phone Main 3618.

BLMYER
CHURCH
BELLS

UNLIKE OTHER BELLS
SWIFTER, MORE DURABLE,
LOWER PRICE.
OUR FREE CATALOGUE
TELLS WHY.
Write to Cincinnati Bell Foundry Co., Cincinnati, O.

ESTABLISHED 1858
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
With for SPECIAL DONATION PLAN Cat. No. 57
THE C. S. BELL COMPANY, HILLSBORO, O.

Bowden
CHURCH AND SCHOOL BELLS
Catalog Free.
AMERICAN BELL FOUNDRY, NORTHVILLE, MICHIGAN.
Special discount to readers of this publication.

SOUTH McCOMB AND FERNWOOD.

It has been in my heart all the year to write something for the Advocate concerning this church, which is one of the best in the Mississippi Conference. The largest portion of the members of the two churches composing it are loyal to the standards of Methodism and hence to our Lord Jesus Christ. The church at Fernwood is the best all-around church that I have ever known anything about. The beautiful house of worship there, which was dedicated last fall by Bishop Murray, was burned early in the year, but we have secured a large and more beautiful building of the same lot and are now arranging for its dedication by Bishop Morison some time between now and the Annual Conference. The building and furnishings cost approximately $1,500. It has an auditorium, a lecture room, and a class room which will be used in the future as a pastors study. The building throughout is lighted by electricity and is heated by a furnace in the basement. Each room has electric fans and is fitted up with all the furniture needed to make it up to date in every particular. For liberality and consideration this church surpasses all others that I have any knowledge of. They do not allow their pastor to collect a cent for anything. The stewards manage all the finances. The pastor's salary is paid ahead of time and early in the year the entire assessment of $215.50 for this church for the various benevolences was paid in full and forwarded by the different treasurers. I need not now say that Fernwood is a missionary church. One of her leading members is Z. Z. Linn, Conference Leader of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. He and Brother Engels attended two or three of the Laymen's Missionary gatherings last winter. They were both at Dallas. Brother Engels headed that entire convention in his subscription $1,000 to the Laymen's Movement. The average monthly collection in the Sunday School at Fernwood is $100. The school has contributed over $200 already to missions. Not a dollar of this has been applied to the assessment on the church. I have never served a church which had so large a percentage of active members as Fernwood. It would be difficult to find a nobler set of laymen than Linton, the Engels, Scott, and others whom we might mention. The people at Fernwood put religion into their business, and they run the church in a business-like way. Now, Mr. Editor, I have not written this letter with any spirit of boasting, for this pastor deserves no credit whatever for the condition of things at Fernwood. I felt it was due the good people there to say this much in their praise. We recently held a revival meeting at Fernwood in which the pastor was assisted by Revs. W. M. Sullivan and C. N. Guice. They sang and preached the gospel with great power and telling effect. The meeting resulted in a number of conversions, ten accessions to the church, and a quickening of spiritual life among the members. We are now in the midst of a meeting here at La. Branch Street, with Rev. W. M. Sullivan as helper. When this meeting is over, I will furnish you a write-up of this church for publication in the Advocate. With best wishes for the New Orleans Christian Advocate, which I read as one of the very best periodicals published by our church, I am cordially yours—D. Scarborough.

WHITNEY-CENTRAL TRUST AND SAVINGS BANK

A SAVINGS BANK FOR ALL THE PEOPLE

A BANK WHERE SMALL DEPOSITORS RECEIVE EVERY COURTESY AND ATTENTION

INTEREST PAID ON SAVINGS DEPOSITS OF $1.00 AND UPWARDS.

616-618 COMMON STREET.

USE THE L. and A. RAILWAY, "EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

ena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A., Texarkana, Ark.

QCKWORK METAL POLISH

This marvelous new polish produces a brilliant and lasting surface in a few seconds. It contains nothing injurious. Fine for brass fixtures, signs, automobiles, yachts, golf sticks, faucets and all metals. Qckwork eliminates all drudgery, turns work into play. Accept no substitute.

IN 25c. TINS EVERYWHERE

Manufactured by Kettler Brass Mfg. Co. Houston, Texas.

The Biggs Treatment

The most successful and best known method in the South for the cure of chronic ailments. No drugs. If you are afflicted with Paralysis, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Nervous Debility, or some other disease that medicine has failed to cure, write for our free book which tells about all this new and better way.

Ideal climate, home-like conditions, complete sanitarium equipment, low charges; liberal guarantee of satisfaction.

Write to-day for the book and diagnosis blank—both free.

THE BIGGS SANITARIUM, ASHEVILLE, N. C.

Methodist Benevolent Association

The Connectional Brotherhood of Ministers and Laymen. Life or Term Certificates for $500 to $2,000. Benefits payable at death, old age, or disability. $91.152.50 paid to widows, orphans, and disabled. $10,000 reserve fund. Write for rates, blanks, etc. Care Methodist Publishing House Nashville, Tennessee

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Greenville Dist.—Fourth Round.

Washington, at W.	Oct. 24
Natchez, Jefferson St.	Oct. 24
Natchez, Pearl St.	Oct. 25
Barlow, at	Oct. 29
Peyou Pierre, at	Oct. 31
Honochite, at Wesley chap.	Nov. 5
St. Land, at Bethel	Nov. 12
Centerville	Nov. 18
Meadville, at M.	Nov. 25
Nabo, at	Nov. 26
Groster	Nov. 29
Wilkinson, at	Dec. 1
Liberty, at L.	Dec. 3
Adams, at A.	Dec. 5

The preachers in charge will please see very carefully after wise answers to questions 24, 27, and 29, and that full answers be given to question 31.

N. W. Dickinson

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Jackson Dist.—Fourth Round:

[illegible]

Greenville Dist.—Fourth Round.

W. W. WOOLLARD, P. E.

Winona Dist.—Fourth Round

Florida		Dec. 1
Jackson, Capitol Street, 700		5
Jackson, First Church, 700		8
J. R. Jones, P. E.
<hr/>
Meridian Dist.—Fourth Round.
Birmingham at Wabasha	Sept. 15	15
Daleville at Bethel	Oct. 8	9
Leakdale at L.	Oct. 13	21
DoKala at New Hope	Oct. 19	22
North Kaysville at Pleasant Grove	Oct. 31	31
Scotts at S.	Nov. 5	6
Bucatanama at B.	Nov. 14	14
Waynesboro at W.	Nov. 14	14
Wayne Mission at Winches	Nov. 13	13
Marshallville at Whitford	Nov. 16	16
East Chas. at C.	Nov. 16	16
Starkville and Quikman and Q	Nov. 16	16
Meridian, 5th ave	Nov. 16	16
Winfield at Coffey's	Nov. 16	16
Meridian, 8th st	Nov. 16	16
East Price and S.	Nov. 16	16
Enter, rise	Nov. 16	16
Meridian, Central	Nov. 16	16
Meridian, East	Nov. 16	16
South Main and Pleasant	Nov. 16	16

Greenwood 1911

Complete Dist.—Fencing Round.

[illegible]

THE BUREAU OF THE

[illegible]

Williams, A. at Kilmichael	0
Carroll, W. at Valler, H.	0
Belmont, at Belmont	0
Wells, at Summit	0
Miles, C. at	0
Lambert, at Lambert	0
Turville, at Turville	0
Schmitt, at Summit	X
Shaw, at Summit	X
Tom Nolan, at Summit	X
Slater, at Summit	X
Eugene, at Mason	X
Ward, C. at Belmont	X
Rosen, at Belmont	X
Mohrman, at Belmont	X
North, at Belmont	X
Car Sprague	X
Mare, H. at Belmont	X
Indiana, at Belmont	X

[illegible][illegible]

1. General
 2. General
 3. General
 4. General
 5. General
 6. General
 7. General
 8. General
 9. General
 10. General
 11. General
 12. General
 13. General
 14. General
 15. General
 16. General
 17. General
 18. General
 19. General
 20. General
 21. General
 22. General
 23. General
 24. General
 25. General
 26. General
 27. General
 28. General
 29. General
 30. General
 31. General
 32. General
 33. General
 34. General
 35. General
 36. General
 37. General
 38. General
 39. General
 40. General
 41. General
 42. General
 43. General
 44. General
 45. General
 46. General
 47. General
 48. General
 49. General
 50. General
 51. General
 52. General
 53. General
 54. General
 55. General
 56. General
 57. General
 58. General
 59. General
 60. General
 61. General
 62. General
 63. General
 64. General
 65. General
 66. General
 67. General
 68. General
 69. General
 70. General
 71. General
 72. General
 73. General
 74. General
 75. General
 76. General
 77. General
 78. General
 79. General
 80. General
 81. General
 82. General
 83. General
 84. General
 85. General
 86. General
 87. General
 88. General
 89. General
 90. General
 91. General
 92. General
 93. General
 94. General
 95. General
 96. General
 97. General
 98. General
 99. General
 100. General

[illegible]

1990-1991

Monsieur at Eastern	9
Houston	10
Oklahoma City at M.	12
Palestine at Philadelphia	16
Portland at Boston	17
Bureau Visiting at _____	23
Birmingham at _____	24
Baltimore at _____	30
Groesbeek at _____	31
Groesbeek at _____	6
Saint Paul at _____	8
Shanghai at _____	12
Columbia at _____	14
Honolulu at _____	18
Berlin at _____	20
Philadelphia at _____	22
New York City at _____	24
New York City at _____	27
Amy and Nathan at _____	28

Some slight corrections made.
The notice will appear in the Communicator for October 1914, No. 2, will be held some time in November in connection with the services.
The date will be given by the newspaper through The United States has been most successful in its efforts toward placing the world's financial conditions in a satisfactory condition and it is hoped that the answer to the question will be found in the
and

Belmont College

[illegible]

QUEEN & CRESCENT
ROUTE.

Train No. 4 Leaves 8:00 a.m.

22 HOURS TO ASSEVILLE

24 Hours in Cincinnati

24 NOV 1950 0000Z
MAGIN, MA 30 1000 5200 N M

TRAIN NO. 2 1:50 P.M.
FOR

NEW YORK,
CINCINNATI.

ST. LOUIS

05 0457

Obituaries.

Obituaries not over two hundred words in length will be published free of charge. All over two hundred words will be charged at the rate of 1 cent a word. Count the words and send the amount necessary with the obituary. That will save trouble all around.

ALFRED RAY WALKER, son of L. and E. K. Walker, was born near Verona, Miss., December, 1888. Roy (as we all called him) had been the child of severe affliction for nineteen months. It commenced with pneumonia, which developed into lung trouble, against which he fought with all the power of his fragile being. Having all the assistance a mother's love and prayers could give, and the best medical aid that could be had, but finally Roy went to bed and sleep was fatal. On Saturday night, the 10th of August, he woke up next morning in the Father's house of many mansions. While the family were resting in sleep (they thinking he was doing the same) with out a struggle on the moving of the bed cover, he passed gently away without disturbing anyone. Roy joined the Methodist Church last September at this place, and lived a serene, calm Christian until the end. He told his mother sometime ago he was ready to leave a weeping mother, two sisters, and a brother to mourn his departure. Many friends sorrow because of his leaving, but not as those who have no hope. May all the loved ones overtake Roy in the good world. D. W. BABB.

Mrs. M. L. S. ABRAHAM (nee Hamilton), of Milledgeville, Miss., left this sinful world for the better land on the morning of the 15th of August, 1910, in Yazoo City, Miss. Sister Sumrall was born in Caseyville, Lincoln County, Miss., on the 27th day of March, 1840, and was married to Noel Sumrall in 1860. She was a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South, a devoted Christian, affectionate wife and a loving, obedient child. She joined the church when a girl of 14 summers in Wesson, Miss., but in moving around was not received in full connection, or did not take the vows, until she was grown and settled in life. She loved church work, the Sunday school and prayer meetings. A good and useful woman has gone to the better world. She said in the presence of her sister: "I am not afraid to meet Jesus." Bless the Lord, our God, for right. She has gone to meet her babe and loved ones who preceded her to the glory land. There she will wait and watch for mother, husband, brother and sisters, who are left to mourn their loss. Why mourn? Nuthin' is so dead, but sleep eth. Some sweet day you may see her again in the sweet beyond. Across the river she will be waiting and watching and singing to cheer you through death's chilly gloom. D. C. FARMER.

BUILDING A WAGON.

"Building a wagon sixty or seventy-five years ago consumed about as much time as building an ordinary business block," said J. M. Studebaker, president of the great Studebaker Bros. Mfg. Co. at South Bend, Indiana. Well do I remember when the first Studebaker wagons were manufactured at the rate of two per year.

At that time all wagons were made by blacksmiths and wheelwrights. As the country awakened, the demand for wagons increased until it was much greater than the output. It was this increasing demand that presented such a splendid opportunity to manufacture wagons on a larger scale. It was, however, necessary to improve and make new machinery so that wagons could be built more rapidly. By careful study this machinery was improved to such an extent that for twenty years past there have been practically no wagons made by local blacksmiths.

It required a great deal of study as the wagon had to be adapted as to the different styles for each different location. There were the plains, the hilly country, the mountain regions, and the different sections of the South. It can readily be seen that a thorough research was necessary before it was possible to manufacture wagons suitable for each vicinity. By adopting a systematic research for information as to the construction of wagons for the different sections, it has been possible for us to build in our factories wagons for each section of the United States, and, in fact, the whole world.

Continuing, Mr. Studebaker said, "It is gratifying to me to know that for many years there have been over two million sales of cotton bales on Studebaker wagons each year. This is a strong evidence that our wagons are particularly adapted for that section in which cotton is raised, or, in other words, to the Southern trade. It is wonderful," he said, "how rapidly the wagon business has advanced in the past fifty years. Think of it, from two wagons a year to seventy-five thousand."

This is the way our output has grown and it has only been possible through our efforts in designing and building wagons for each individual section and producing the kind of vehicles that the trade in general requires.

"AL-ETHE-IA."

The following is taken from The National Temperance Advocate of New York City:

"Al-ethe-ia," or, At the Last it Righn. Like a Sergeant and Singeth Like an Addeh. The foregoing is the title of a pamphlet from the press of New Orleans Christian Advocate, by Martha Carolyn Keller Miller. It is a story of 80 pages, solidly printed, and is well bound in pamphlet form and is of attractive appearance. It should have a large sale. The author's introduction explains its purpose, which is a most worthy one, and the work itself merits reading and passing on.

For sale by Mrs. C. C. Miller, Hammond, La., or The New Orleans Christian Advocate. Price, 25 cents.

CHURCH DIRECTORY.

New Orleans District, Rev. F. N. Parker, D.D., presiding elder, residence, 241 Olivier Street.
First Methodist Church, St. Charles Ave., near Calhoun St.; Dr. S. H. Warren, pastor; residence, 5830 Pryor St.; phone, Uptown 329.
Rogers Memorial Church, St. Charles Ave. and General Taylor St.; Dr. John A. Rice, pastor; residence, 1421 Constantine St.

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.

Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Courses. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE JACKSON, MISS.

Rev. David Carlisle Hull, M. S., President.

A high-grade College, situated at the Capital of the State. Location high, dry and beautiful. Entrance requirements and curriculum same as in other leading colleges and universities, North and South. The very finest Moral and Religious Influences. Extraordinary Advantages in

LITERARY AND LAW DEPARTMENTS.

Courses Leading to A. B., B. S., A. M., M. S., and LL.D. Degrees.

NINETEENTH SESSION BEGINS SEPTEMBER 28, 1910.

For Catalog and other information address

J. E. WALMSLEY, Secretary, Jackson, Miss.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

A home school for girls. 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful hill country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue. Address, Pres. H. H. BROWLER, CLINTON, LA.

For $110,654.04

We guarantee an established trade in the South on any high-class article of general household use.

THIS SUM BUYS

1. A three-years advertising campaign, 10 inches per week, 56 publications, 526,924 circulation per week (over 50 millions of copies) distributed to the most substantial Southern homes—to create the demand for the goods.
2. A sales force of 20 specialty salesmen for three years, selling the goods to retailers and jobbers—to place the goods within reach of the consumer.
3. A guarantee of certain minimum results as regards the number of initial or introductory sales and the amount of such sales—to secure the manufacturer against any unnecessary speculation in his advertising campaign. (Guarantee usually one dollar per 1,000 of circulation used per annum, and sales equivalent to cost of campaign—excess sales carried on commission basis.)

In brief, the only general publicity campaign covering a wide area, ever offered with a hard and fast guarantee of results.

If interested, address below, explaining your selling system in detail, and sending samples of goods on which you desire to establish trade—no inferior articles promoted. Smaller accounts accepted covering narrower territory.

JACOBS & COMPANY, Clinton, S. C.

Advertising and Selling Agents.

Operating The Religious Press Advertising Syndicate.

Largest Special Advertising Agency in the World.

Epworth Church, cor. Banks and Scott Sts.; Rev. L. A. Sims, pastor; residence, 231 South Pierce St.
Rev. John L. Sutton, Superintendent Orphan Boys' Asylum; residence, 5229 St. Charles Ave.; phone, Uptown 123.
Rev. N. E. Jones, Superintendent St. Mark's Hall, 619-21 Esplanade. Residence, 711 Henry Clay Avenue; phone, Residence, Uptown 2729; St. Mark's Hall, Hemlock 1453.
R. F. Harrell, Secretary Y. M. C. A., 115 St. Charles St.
Rev. R. A. Meek, Editor New Orleans Christian Advocate; residence, 124 Nashville Ave.; phone, Uptown 573.
Second Methodist Church, 2531 Burgundy, near Lafayette Ave.; Rev. A. I. Townsley, pastor; residence, 2725 N. Rampart St.; office hours, 9 to 11 a. m.; phone, Hemlock 273.
Parker Memorial, corner Nashville Ave. and Perrier St.; Rev. C. D. Atkinson, pastor; residence, 724 Nashville Ave.
Lutheran Avenue, cor. Louisiana Ave. and Magazine St.; Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor; residence, 1313 Fern St.; phone, Walnut 492.
First Street Church, cor. Felicity and Chestnut Sts.; Rev. Albert S. Lutz, pastor; residence, 123 St. Andrew St.; phone, Jackson 945-L.
Carrollton Avenue Church, cor. Carrollton Ave. and Elm St.; Rev. Henry T. Carley, pastor; residence, 1125 Fern St.; phone, Uptown 123.
Minister Laverne Street, cor. Dela-ronde; Rev. J. F. Foster, pastor; residence, 214 Seguin.

Believes Headache

Horsford's Acid Phosphate

Relieves headache, nervousness, indigestion, loss of sleep, wakefulness, and general debility.

Sunday School

LESSON XII. SEPTEMBER 18, 1910.

THREE QUESTIONS

(Matt. xxii. 37-40. Memorize verses 37-40.)

Golden Text: Remember therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's. Matt. xxii. 21.

A Strange Conspiracy.

The Herodians were a political party committed to the establishment of the family of Herod on the Jewish throne. The Pharisees were the patriotic party, which was almost as bitterly opposed to the heathen Roman rule of this heathen land as the Pharisees of the family as to the Roman overlordship. The Pharisees refused to take the oath of allegiance when Herod captured Jerusalem; they conspired against him, and he burned numbers of them alive. On the other hand, the Sadducees, who were receiving the chief offices under Rome, were politically and religiously opposed both to the Pharisees, who hated any form of Roman rule, and to the Herodians, who hated the present form of Roman government, since it deprived the house of Herod from recognition. All of these join together against this holy claimant to Messiahship.

Politics in Religion.

There never was an era when political controversy was more keen or religious hate more bitter than at this very period, which was just before the revolutionary war of the Jews. Was Jesus a patriot? Did his new religion encourage the love of native land and native rulership? No patriotic Egyptian to-day will pay taxes to England without first being bastinadoed. The Jews in Palestine felt the same shame of paying tax to Rome, and thus acknowledging that the old free people of Jehovah had become slaves of the heathen. The newly-discovered papers have much to say of the recently established poll tax. With consummate skill and subtle flattery, these enemies of Jesus throw at him the question which cannot be answered either affirmatively or negatively without a losing antagonism of the most virulent kind. And Jesus does not dodge. Neither does he drop from his lofty and independent position as supreme king and spiritual dictator. He says no word that either party could not endorse, but hits the disbelievers of both parties local politics in the realm of the spirit. Jesus never had drawn plans of action with reference to slavery, interference of politics, but established principles which were universally valid. So here, he declares that one who carries the copper coin is acknowledging himself subject to his ruler, and putting himself under obligation to return to him an equivalent for the protection and business security which his rule offers. But God does not care for the ruler's royal stamp, and he has his decisions on money matters, let not the religious man put his person or his life always to the test.

Hard Questions Concerning the Future Life.

The Sadducees believed in no resurrection, and their question really showed the absurdity of such a belief, as the Pharisees taught the future life is merely a re-establishment of the present order of things. But the Master, breaking away from all the notions of his day, affirmed that the resurrection is not a "mere animation of dead bodies," for flesh and blood cannot inherit immortality. The two points of our Lord's answer are everlastingly important. The Scriptures teach the fact of immortality, which the Sadducees really were denying. Jehovah said to Moses—Ex. iii. 6—"I am the God of Abraham," etc. That proves that Abraham was alive after death. This argument does not rest, as I see it, upon the present tense of the verb, nor upon the authorship of a document, but upon the necessary relation between mortal man and the faithful, deathless God. If God ever cared enough about Abraham to commune with him and appreciate his comradeship, he could not let him drop into non-existence. If man and God can ever get into intimate covenant relations in this life, that is the very best proof that death cannot interrupt their companionship. God is the "living God." Death can have no power to break off any relations which he enjoys. Death cannot hurt any one whom God loves, and to whom he has given his pledge of protection. Therefore the proof of a future life rests upon nothing less solid than the argument for God's own existence. If one would be sure of the future, let him get into covenant relation with the ever-living, ever-loving God. To live now in communion with God is the essential thing. If we have this, the other is assured. This teaching concerning the resurrection does not intimate that there will be no home loves, no special heart relationships, continued in heaven, but only that flesh relationship will not continue. I have found a curious parallel to the general argument in the Talmud where Rabbi Izzib seeks to prove from Jer. xxx. 10, that Jacob never died.

The Great Commandment.

It was "a miracle of genius" to bring together from far separated portions of the Bible this text from Deuteronomy and another from Leviticus, and join them in this eternal unity of perfection. This Golden Law shows to all time what was the one root principle out of which all the innumerable laws of Moses had grown. It is also the one fulfillment of perfection towards which all the minor fulfillments of prophecy point. There is one statement in the Talmud which, taken by itself, would greatly remind one of this. One rabbi in commenting on Deut. vii. 4, says: "The name of the Lord shall be loved through thy treatment of thy fellow-man." But unfortunately the context shows that "fellow-man" here had reference to "fellow Jew," instead of to universal humanity as in this splendid, divine interpretation of Jesus. This Golden Rule of Jesus may be called the principle of gravitation in the spiritual universe. The universal conscience acknowledges its truth as soon as it is understood, and the human reason seizes eagerly a principle which unifies all spiritual phenomena as perfectly as the Newtonian principle unifies material phenomena. All the minutiae of Old Testament ritual and all the ramifications of the Old Testament law are now seen to have been efforts to express in human action or temple symbol this one fundamental law of the soul. Love explains it all. How different this is from all heathen conceptions of the essence of religion! In every religion except the Christian atonement means the self-sacrifice of man for God's sake; in the Christian religion it means the self-sacrifice of God for man's sake. The heathen doctrine of sacrifice is "Man so feared God that he offered his best and dearest to him;" the Christian doctrine is "God so loved man that he gave his only begotten Son." In all other religions, salvation is by merit; in Christianity, salvation is by grace. In all other religions service is determined by rule and measure and external demand; in Christianity it is an offering of love. In all other religions duty to brother man is a very different conception from duty to God; in Christianity alone, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these ye did it not to me." This proves that Christianity is the "absolute religion." By no stretch of the imagination can one even conjecture the possibility of this principle of the perfect life ever being superseded or outgrown.

David's Lord.

This argument of Jesus is almost always misunderstood. The proof here does not depend upon the authorship of Psalm 110; it does not attack the view that the Messiah was to be a "son of David;" it was not primarily a statement of the deity of Jesus. At this, last moment of Christ's life he was not pressing any mere intellectual divergence of opinion between himself and the Pharisees concerning the divine nature. The point he emphasizes is vital. They have been expecting a prince of the royal house to climb to the Jewish throne. Jesus points out that to do this would not be to fulfill prophecy. The prophecy centers in something far more important. It is not Davidic ancestry of the flesh, but divine ancestry of the spirit, that is the important fact. It is a spiritual lordship which so completely outranks ordinary ancestry that even David, the great king, can call the Messiah his superior. That proves that the Messiah was to be more than a Jewish king. It was not national rule and political deliverance which the son of David was to bring, else his illustrious father would not be represented by the inspired prophet as laying his crown at his feet, and he occupying the central throne of heaven. The common Jewish explanation of Messianic passages are thus shown to miss the higher meaning which links the victory of the Messiah to the regeneration of mankind. As this very psalm emphasizes, he is to be the priest-king whose priestly authority antedated and must supersede those of the old Aaronic succession. The Jews had been refusing to accept Jesus as the Christ because of his contradiction of some of the minute requirements of the Levitical law, but Jesus here points out that prophecy itself represents the Messiah as superior to this law. The Messiah is represented as sitting on the right hand of Jehovah as the heir sits on the right hand of the king. This shows that his royalty is not on earth, but in heaven. He sits by the side of God as king while his enemies on earth are being subdued before him. This is what the expectation of a Messiah which Messiah is to be the earthly king is a false expectation. He is to be not a Jewish king, but the King of Glory. —Pittsburg-Christian Advocate.

AIM HIGH.

D. L. Moody, speaking on one occasion of the kind of men that are most needed in the world, said: "Some men are afraid of the too religious. What we need is men who believe deep down in their souls what they profess. The world is tired and sick of sham. Let your whole heart be given up to God's service. Aim high. God wants us all to be his ambassadors. It is a position higher than that of any monarch on earth to be a herald of the cross, but you must be filled with the Holy Spirit. A great many people are afraid to be filled with the Spirit of God—afraid of being called fanatics. You are not to do for anything until the world considers you a fanatic. Fox said that every Quaker ought to shake the country ten miles around. What does the Scripture say? 'One shall chase a thousand, and two shall put ten thousand to flight.' It takes about a thousand to chase one now. Why? Because they are afraid of being too religious. What does this world want to-day? Men—men that are out and out for God and not half-hearted in their allegiance and service." —Southern Churchman.

WELL, AGAIN.

"I feel it my duty," writes Mrs. Martha Dinwiddie, Lehigh, Ky., "to tell you what Cardui has done for me. I was a chronic invalid, suffering from nearly every trouble that women are heir to. I have doctoring a great deal and travel much in search of health, but set no better. Four months ago, I began to use Cardui and have steadily improved ever since. I am now 46 years old and look 25. I wish that I gave Cardui the credit for my recovery."

TAKE CARDUI, THE WOMAN'S TONIC.

If this were the only tonic enthusiastically praised Cardui, it might not prove much. But similar letters come to us every day from all over the country, telling the same story of benefit obtained from Cardui. This great medicine is over 30 years old, and is more in demand today than ever. Cardui has stood the test—it has become the standard tonic medicine for women of every age.

Try Cardui to-day. It can't harm you—its record shows it is almost certain to help you. For sale at all drug stores.

360 MERCHANTS

whose combined worth is estimated at $1,000,000, wrote in April and May and gave as their opinion that JOHNSON'S TONIC is the best Fever and Grip medicine in the world. Sample bottle with the 300 opinions, names, and addresses.

SENT FREE

on receipt of this ad cut out of paper. Address:

The JOHNSON CHILL & FEVER TONIC CO.
Depot: At SAVANNAH, GA.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 57—No. 37.

"PROVE ALL THINGS, HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 250.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, SEPT. 22, 1910.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

EMPHASIS ON HOLINESS.

At the recent Conference of the Wesleys in Bradford, England, the president of the Conference, the Rev. John Hornabrook, in his opening sermon, gave expression, amid many ejaculations of approval, to the imperative importance of a greater emphasis being laid at the present time on a higher spirituality—on true holiness rightly conceived. He said: "A revival amongst us of the doctrines of the Spirit, no one can doubt, would lead to a deepening of the spiritual life throughout the entire Church. It would do much to bring back the exuberant gladness, the moral glow, the radiant hopefulness of Christian experience, for it would once again lead to the realization on a large scale of the blessing of Christian assurance. It would also bring into prominence the doctrine of spiritual holiness, and lead to the eager pursuit and personal realization of it on the part of many."

"I know that this high state of grace has been sometimes crudely presented, and men have been alienated from it by perversions and exaggerations which have no foundation in the Word of God. We cannot, however, get away from the fact that the Christian ideal, as set before us in the New Testament, is a very lofty one, and if it be true, as a recent writer in a secular paper says, that holiness is a word we seldom use nowadays, and that ordinary men and women, if they think of the quality at all, think of it coldly as of something shining far off in a celestial haze; the sooner we bring it down to earth again the better. For," as the writer goes on to say, "in the New Testament, perhaps from cover to cover, the most warm-hearted and least academic book that was ever written, 'Holiness' is used to express the aim of Christian teaching in regard to the individual. But the word has lost its vitality, and its essential beauty has become somewhat chill and austere. Some redefinition of it will have to be generally accepted before it can be revived in connection with living personalities."

"That is well put, but I think you will hear me out when I say that, for Methodism, the redefinition of it is not necessary. We may need a restatement of it in terms of actual experience and modern life, but the thing itself as a grace of the Holy Spirit can not well be better defined than in the language of John Wesley. Let us get back to his teaching, placing the emphasis on those great truths to which he bore unflinching testimony, and the doctrine will reassert itself in the daily round, and in the common task, in the consecrated lives of thousands and tens of thousands who shall be vessels unto honor, sanctified, meet for the Master's use, and prepared unto every good work. Let Charles Wesley once again interpret for us the deep things of God, and express for us our yearning desire—

"O come and dwell in me,
Spirit of power within,
And bring the glorious liberty
From sorrow, fear, and sin!

"The seed of sin's disease,
Spirit of health, remove,
Spirit of finished holiness,
Spirit of perfect love."

"If once we can reach that high standard as preachers and people, and to nothing less are we every one of us called, we shall be clothed with a might which is invincible. The Church will once more go forth conquering and to conquer. In the language of the New Testament, the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord."

These are words of seriousness and of deep wisdom. There is a distinct necessity of their reiteration in our day. The need is great. Without such holiness in heart and life, Christians will never be able to move the world out along lines of moral reform. The higher, vital, effective morality depends upon the purity and strength of the inner spirituality. The two are as intimately blended and interdependent as faith and works in the Scriptural teaching. They act and re-act on each other, back and forth, mutually. The more spiritual a man is, the better philanthropic worker and moral and political reformer he ought to be; and the more he engages in these earthly activities, the more his spirituality ought to be developed and strengthened.

The life of God in the soul of a man and its outworking in the practical and ethical exhibitions of righteousness among his fellows are forever and inevitably inseparable. They have one root.

We heartily agree, therefore, with what the editor of the Methodist Recorder writes concerning the words we have quoted:

"The words of the president concerning holiness should be pondered. We speak the strict truth when we say that the early Methodists recovered for the Church the doctrine of Christian perfection. They did more. Many of them illustrated it by their beautiful lives. Those who have lived, in thought, in the time of the great revival, and have come into the presence of the best men and women who worshiped and worked in these great days, will assent to the assertion that Methodism, at the moment of its greatest intensity, produced a type of saintliness that was singularly attractive by reason of its quiet and celestial loveliness. The biographies of the men and women of whom we are thinking somewhat obscure their character. If we could have their memoirs rewritten by men who, in addition to possessing a kindred spirit, also have literary skill and taste, and know the path that leads not only to the mount, but also to the multitude, we should soon have a Methodist Book of Saints. In modern times, the doctrine of holiness has suffered at the hands of its expositors. Worst of all, it has been made a battle-flag, which has fluttered in contests that have broken the unity of the Church. Has the day come for saner teaching on this subject? We have no hope of any Church that does not possess an inspiring doctrine of holiness. The word 'saints' was supposed to be descriptive of the members of the primitive Church. The modern expositor informs us that the word did not mean much in its first application. He may be right. But a deeper meaning is now found in it. It makes us think of St. Jude's phrase, 'Kept for Jesus Christ.' That sentence should be inscribed on the badge of every Methodist. We must aim at real, practical, common-sense saintship, that reveals itself in a life spent in the service of God and man."—Western Christian Advocate.

CONFIDENCE IN MEN.

Much of the progress and prosperity of any community depends upon men's confidence in each other. If all of the people in a given community were dishonest and untruthful, there would be a most deplorable state of affairs. All kinds of business would very seriously suffer. No noble progress could be made in any direction. It is the people who command the implicit confidence of their fellows that are the true salt of society. Upon the strength of their word, others proceed to say and do certain things which they would not say and do if it were not for such confidence. And yet a risk is always run in one's placing utmost confidence in the veracity and supposed integrity of even those whom he has long regarded as being thoroughly reliable. In the county in which I reside there was a bank of long standing, whose cashier had been in its employ over thirty years. All who dealt with him, besides very many in that city, had the utmost confidence in him, and, because of this, a large amount of money was entrusted to his care. Suddenly it was discovered that this man was a defaulter, to such an extent that the bank failed. At this juncture the cashier committed suicide. Very naturally, the whole city was profoundly shocked, as were also many people in the country. It was very hard for the man's friends to believe that he ever would destroy the ground of their confidence in him. For over thirty years his character had appeared to be so well established in uprightness as to lead people to think that he never would do a dishonest act. And this is one instance among many thousands of a similar kind. A fresh instance appears in the case of Dr. F. A. Cook, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who had asserted that he reached the North Pole on April 21, 1908. Multitudes of people had confidence in him, and, therefore, in his assertions. Men who had long and intimately known him confided in him completely. How amazed they were when it was known that he had deceived them! But we may have all confidence in the unchangeable and veracious God.—C. H. Wetherill, in Southern Churchman.

MISUNDERSTOOD BLESSINGS.

When the disciples saw their Lord coming to them on the water they were afraid, supposing it to be an apparition. How often we fear the approach of our greatest blessings. One night, a few years ago, on the wild Newfoundland coast, a fierce storm arose before the fishing fleet could make the harbor. Wives and children strained their tear-dimmed eyes, hoping to see through the darkness and tempests the coming sails. About midnight it was discovered that the cottage of one of the fishermen was on fire, and, notwithstanding all their efforts, it was totally destroyed. When the morning dawned the fleet was found safely anchored in the bay. As the wife went to greet her husband with the tidings of their loss, he said: "Wife, I thank God for the burning of the house, for it was by its light that the fleet was able to make the port; but for the fire, we all had perished."

How little we know what a gain our losses will be to us. If we could see as He sees, we should often thank God for our trials and losses. We see things not as they are, but as our fears interpret them, and so we often misunderstand our greatest blessings.—Selected.

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

DIRECTIONS.

Correspondents will please direct all communications intended for the Editor to 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La. Communications intended for the Business Department should be addressed to the Manager of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. Write with ink, and only on one side of the paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after two weeks, notify us, and we will make it right. Papers will be continued unless subscribers order otherwise.

EUREKA! ANOTHER BASIS DISCOVERED.

By Rev. Jno. W. Ramsey.

At the last session of the Meridian District Conference, which met at 7th Avenue Church, Meridian, by assignment of the presiding elder, I read a paper on "The Needs of the Field," in which occurred this paragraph: "There ought to be a more just apportionment of the various assessments by the District Stewards. These assessments are made upon the different charges in proportion to the salary assessed for the pastor, which plan places too heavy a burden upon the poorer churches and smaller towns. A recent writer in the Nashville Advocate says, 'The salaries of station preachers have materially advanced, though the per capita contribution of the members for their support has declined. There has been less proportional advance in the salaries of circuit preachers, though the per capita payments on the circuits have materially increased. The increase in members, caused by the people moving from the country to the towns and cities, thereby depleting the membership of the country churches and leaving them poorer, enables the station churches to advance the salaries of the pastors, and reduce the per capita payments at the same time. But comparing per capita payments on circuits to-day with thirty years ago, it will be seen that they have increased, notwithstanding depletion of membership, showing how our people in the country and in smaller towns are experiencing a constantly increasing burden in supporting the Church, while the burden in the stations grows lighter.' The writer has no way of verifying these statements as they relate to his own Conference, but believes they are true, not only in our own bounds, but throughout the whole Church. If so, some adjustment should be made which places the heavier burden where it belongs—on our station and city churches, and relieve the depleting membership of the poorer churches; for the augmentation of the wealth and number of the station is drawn from the circuits and smaller towns. This departing wealth ought to carry its portion of the burden along with it into the station and city church. The time has come when we must seek for a wiser and a more equitable basis for the apportionment of the general assessments than that of the pastor's salary."

After I had read the paper from which I quote, one of the preachers present said to me, "We want you to tell us a more equitable basis than the pastor's salary. Wise men have sought it, but have not found it." I could not at that time tell him a more equitable basis, but I desire now to make a suggestion which, I believe, is a solution of the problem.

Before doing so, I wish to direct attention to the emphatic statement that the present pro rata assessment plan is no part of our system; it has no legally recognized place in the economy of our Church. There is no law for it—it is only a custom. We have drifted into the present evil method of making the pastor's salary a basis of assessment, and it has worked hardships in many instances, even to underrating the preacher who failed to get his "collections in full," despite the impossibility of getting them under some conditions. I know how difficult it is to break loose from an old custom, but the hoary and vicious method of making the pastor's salary a basis of assessment must go if we would be just to all.

The plan which I suggest as a substitute for the pastor's salary in the matter of assessment is this: Let the District Stewards, after a consideration of the district as a whole, and of each charge therein, assess the apportionment to the district according to their best judgment of the ability of the different charges. In other words, let common sense and good judgment be the basis of apportionment. This method pre-supposes the exercise of good judgment by the presiding elder in selecting the District Stewards, for broad men—business men—capable of taking a comprehensive view of the entire district, and of estimating the ability of each charge, would be essential to operate this plan effectively.

I disclaim originality in suggesting common sense and good judgment as a basis for the apportionment of the Conference collections. I got the idea from an article in the Nashville Advocate by Rev. J. E. Godbey, entitled "Press the Issue." Let all who recognize the weakness of the present custom, adopt the suggestion of title and "press the issue" till we secure a more equitable basis for the distribution of the Conference claims.

BACKWARD GLANCES.

By Rev. H. Armstrong.

No. 3.

In sketching the Bright Star Circuit I did not mention my dear old presiding elder, Brittain G. Johnson. He was large and bony, hair and complexion dark, high cheekbones and a crooked eye. He was not graceful in his movements and gestures, but his undoubted integrity, piety and devotion to every interest tending to the betterment of fallen humanity made him a power in his day, and his influence still abides. Brother Johnson was humorous and loved to talk and enjoy himself with his friends at Conference, but he looked deeply troubled until every charge in his district was supplied with a preacher. The cabinet work over, the gloom disappeared from his face, and he was as a ray of sunshine the remainder of the session. When superannuated, he made his home at Mineral Springs, and died there at a good, ripe old age, one of the humblest and best men that I have ever known. Bishop David Doggett presided at our Conference at Hot Springs in 1878, only a short time before he died. He was pale and looked feeble, but presided with great satisfaction, and preached a great sermon on Sunday morning from John v. 25. The Conference opened in time of a snow storm, and some were delayed on the way, and the class of the third year did not all get in until Tuesday night, and went at once before their committee, and worked all night, never undressing. Dr. R. A. Young, missionary secretary at that time, preached a sermon on that stormy Tuesday night which had a wonderful effect. It was discussed all over the town the next day, and how much longer I never knew. A nice, cultured young man was there being treated for rheumatism, and at preaching hour he hobbled out to the Methodist Church and heard Dr. Young. The next morning when his physician called he told the Doctor that the worst misery was in his heart.

The Doctor did not understand him, and replied that "rheumatism of the heart was dangerous." The young man said that "he felt that he was in danger, and was praying to the great Physician, the sinner's friend."

Conference over, and appointments read out, mine was Richmond and Rocky Comfort—two nice towns fourteen miles apart. Rocky Comfort had the courthouse, and strange to say had no church in it, and the courthouse was the only preaching place. The Methodists and the Masons had begun a building of two stories, but advanced the money when the building was framed and roofed, and the contractor ran away with the money. There the bony-looking structure stood, and it was standing and twisted by the wind when I got there. I called the people together one night to decide whether it would be better to adjust the frame and complete the building begun, or to tear it down and construct a house of one story, using as much of the old material as available. The latter was decided on, and a gentleman named Read, of the Christian Church, arose and said that, to save trouble and time, let one man take the whole responsibility, take the lead, and foot all of the bills, and he was chosen immediately. Now, said he, "when the church is done, if you see proper to refund to me any part of the expense, very well; if not, you will have a house. I am going to have a church where I live." In seven weeks a beautiful church, 30x40 feet, painted, with a bell adjusted, and ready for use, ornamented the town, and at the dedication money was pledged in a few minutes to satisfy Mr. Read, and he said "hold." It was finished early in the fall, and a series of meetings soon followed that were characterized by great power. From the first, convictions were overwhelming and professions very bright. There was an Irish Methodist lady who was good help in the meeting. She was prayerful and spiritual and very much interested, and her broken English, her wit, and familiarity encouraged penitents to seek, and other Christians to work. One night I arose and spoke of closing the services, when the old sister said: "Brother Armstrong, here are some kneeling at this seat not ready to go yet. Poor children. Some one start a song." The result of that meeting, with the new church, was a source of much encouragement to the town.

This was in 1879, and the Little Rock Conference met that year late in November in the town of Camden on the Ouachita river. Bishop George F. Pierce presided. The Bishop was suffering with his throat, and looked to be very unwell. He sat in Conference with his overcoat on, and the collar turned up, but presided all right, and preached on Sunday with wonderful power, and closed with the congregation wrought up to a pitch of feeling. The Bishop proposed reading out the appointments on Sunday night, but Conference objected and they were read out on Monday morning.

A PLEA FOR REASON.

By Rev. G. B. Winton, D.D.

The article of Dr. H. W. Featherstun in reference to Vanderbilt is surprising alike for its dogmatic misstatement of facts and for its intemperate language. On the basis of certain positive assertions of his own, the writer of it rouses himself to such a pitch of indignation that he forgets to be kind, or even courteous. But his assertions will not bear examination.

The State of Tennessee most certainly does "impose conditions relative to the constitution of boards," Dr. Featherstun to the contrary notwithstanding. So soon as any board asks for a charter of incorporation, the State lays down the most rigid requirements. For me to hold that these terms cannot then be disregarded by a chartered board of trust without a breach of morals may discredit my intelligence with Dr. Featherstun. But it is a position which is safely in harmony with Scripture and with the Articles of Religion. Dr. Featherstun argues so much more forcibly on the basis of unfounded assertions than he possibly could if embarrassed by facts, that perhaps he will not care to know that the laws of Tennessee governing corporations of this kind are summarized in Art. ix, Sec. 8, of the Constitution, and in Articles 1170-1173, inclusive, of Shannon's Code. Laws passed by the Legislature since the issuance of the charter of Vanderbilt cannot under the above article of the Constitution have an ex post facto application.

A second unfounded assertion of this critic of the Board of Trust is that the law of 1895 has been "declared by the Supreme Court unconstitutional." This law has never been passed upon by the Supreme Court of Tennessee, and so far as may be gathered from the published deliverances of that body, has never even been pleaded before it. This I had just the other day from one of the best lawyers in the State. He told me that the statute in question was not so much as mentioned in the record of the South-western Presbyterian University case.

Once more. My statement that the charter of Vanderbilt requires the trustees to fill their own vacancies is pooh-poohed as ridiculous. Yet that very assertion, in so many words, is found in formal acts of the Board—once as far back as 1873—three times repeated, the last occasion being when the Board approached the General Conference of 1898 with a proposal that the University be brought into closer relations with the Church. It is a matter of conjecture, so well established as to partake of the nature of certainty, that Bishop McTear was the author of the resolution in which this statement was first made. It is a matter of fact that when it was repeated in 1898 it was over the names of A. W. Wilson, C. B. Galloway, and E. R. Hendrix. If I am in error, therefore, I am in goodly company. This interpretation by the Board of the laws governing its action, let it be noted, was accepted by the General Conference of twelve years ago, nem. con. Had we not excellent reason, then, for thinking it not only correct but acceptable to the Church? No protest was ever before raised.

It is true that this provision does not appear formally set out in the words of the charter. But the men who took out that charter, as I have taken pains to ascertain, knew perfectly what I myself have later learned, and what Dr. Featherstun might have ascertained but for his indifference to mere facts, namely, that under the legal practice of this State the members of a corporation of which the charter contains no specifications as to the filling of vacancies, not only may but must fill those vacancies. As for that, and as showing the drift of law here, since 1875, no corporation of the class to which the Vanderbilt Board belongs can have a provision in its charter for the election of members to the corporation by any other body than itself. Dr. Featherstun will have to make further studies before he can safely undertake to practice law in Tennessee.

He waxes indignantly—and scripturally—eloquent in protesting against having the matters in dispute settled by a friendly suit at law. It is a strange thing that all who object to the course of the Board of Trust are so insistent on being hostile to it. How can a legal matter be determined, in case of dispute, except by a court of law? And why can we not, if we be brethren, secure such an adjudication in a brotherly way? The attitude of many of the critics of the Board seems to be that the law is something of no consequence once "the Church" has spoken. That is good Roman Catholic doctrine, but it is new to Methodism. The Board of Trust proposes to serve the Church to the best of its ability, but to do so in a legal way. It desires no lawsuit, but would prefer one to a protracted controversy as to what the law is. That is the situation now. If the people who insist that we have violated the law really think so, why do they not prove it in court? We are ready to abide by the result.

The men and women, though they may be poor, ignorant, blundering, who day by day are quietly setting aside their own pleasure for the sake of some other person, take a sweetness and get in themselves a growth which makes the world a sacred place for them.—George S. Mirrham.

FROM OKLAHOMA.

Mr. Editor: Being a native Mississippian, a Southern Methodist, an adopted son of Oklahoma, and a subscriber to the much-loved New Orleans Christian Advocate, and also having a number of friends and relatives throughout the States of Louisiana and Mississippi, I take this opportunity, with your permission, of submitting a short article to the readers of the Advocate for the purpose of expressing my sentiments in regard to some of the valuable articles that have recently been contributed to it; and for the further purpose of informing many of my friends who may have lost sight of me, as to my whereabouts, and that I am still alive in the "good cause" that is, and should be, advocated by all of its readers.

On Monday, Oct. 5th, 1908, at 4 o'clock p. m., I boarded the westbound train at Meadville, Miss., for the beautiful, historic old city of Vicksburg, from which place I departed on the morning of the 9th, with my face turned westward, with a view of going to the grand new State of Oklahoma. At 1:30 p. m., Oct. 10th, I arrived at the hustling little town of Atoka, Okla., and then, in fact, realized that I had thus transplanted myself from the beautiful, sunny soil of southern Mississippi into the "land of the mistletoe, smiling in splendor, lured with the summers of azure and gold"—the once "wild and woolly West," a few hundred miles nearer the beautiful, broad bosom of the peaceful Pacific—in the grand, new State of Oklahoma, with its fertile agricultural soil and rich mineral lands and a progressive people, that are rarely equaled and never excelled. But with all its grandeur, riches and progressive people, it cannot keep my mind from crossing the "Great Father of Waters," the long, winding and beautiful Mississippi river, of which every American citizen should be justly proud, into the grand old State of my nativity, whose beautiful, cultured daughters are among the fairest representatives of Southern womanhood, and whose critical sons are not born to follow, but are born leaders of mankind. No State or country can more proudly boast of her critical sons and cultured daughters, year favorite sons and fair daughters, than can Mississippi. I guess I've said enough along that line for this writing.

I shall now confine myself to, and briefly state, a few things that will probably be of interest to some of my friends and relatives who know me best.

After taking the law course at Millsaps College and entering into the practice of law for several months in Mississippi, and after coming to Oklahoma, I decided to travel over the State and investigate its resources with a view of selecting the most suitable place, in my judgment, to locate for the practice of my chosen profession. So I traveled from place to place for about a year, then came to McIntosh County, in which county I have been since July, 1909, and in Eufaula, the county seat, where I am now actively and vigorously prosecuting the practice of my profession. This is a great State for lawyers, and the eastern part of it is the most fertile field in which to sow their professional seed with the promise of an abundant harvest of success.

Eufaula is a small town, of about 2,500 people, about one-half of whom are Indians and negroes, the greater part of that half, however, being Indians. The Indians here are generally well educated, and are highly respected by the white people. We have an Indian mission school here with a corps of the very best teachers and instructors. The pastor of the Southern Methodist Church, or as I prefer to say, "The Methodist Episcopal Church, South," is a product of Alabama, and is doing a great work for the Methodists of Eufaula. Brother Dosier is full of enthusiasm and is a strong advocate of Southern Methodism.

I have read with care all the articles in the columns of the Advocate in regard to the Vanderbilt University situation. Rights of the laity for the women of the Church. Brother H. P. Lewis' (that venerable father in Israel) treasured and very interesting articles that have closed with a recent issue of the Advocate, and also the articles with reference to the change of the name of our Church.

As to the Vanderbilt situation, I am absolutely in sympathy with the view that the Church takes in regard to the Board of Trust as was decided by the General Conference, and feel satisfied that when the question shall have been thoroughly thrashed out in law that the Church will maintain the power that it was intended it should exercise.

As to the subject of rights of the laity for the women, that brought about so much discussion through the columns of the Advocate before the last session of the General Conference, I guess I had better not express myself too clearly, as I am an unmarried man and a lawyer, too, and it might be safer for me not to mix up with the fair sex on that subject. Suffice it to say, that I think that the ladies, under the present regime, are doing a great work, and I know that God is greatly honoring their efforts. I don't think, however, that they are withheld from doing the greatest possible good for the cause of the Church militant, and the Church triumphant as their power exists in the Church to-day.

As to the eliminating of the word "South" in our Church's name, I bitterly denounce the idea, though not from a prejudiced point of view, but for many and various reasons, which the lack of space forbids me in this brief article to discuss. I am glad that four years more are given the various Conferences to discuss and settle this very important question.

Among the many and very interesting articles published in the Advocate that I have read, is one from that most gifted of writers and brilliant pulpit orator, Dr. S. A. Steel, who some months ago favored us, with a sample from his facile and prolific pen. Come again, Dr. Steel. Let us hear from you a little oftener. I always clip your articles and store them away for future reading. No one who has ever been under the influence of his sermons, lectures and articles can help but love and honor him.

Then there is Rev. W. M. Sullivan, say, what's the matter with you? Let us hear from you through the columns of the Advocate. Uncle Monroe, you ought to come over to Oklahoma some time.

Now, Mr. Editor, if this article escapes the waste basket, I shall write again some time on some special subject.

WILEY G. GRIFFING.

Eufaula, Okla., Sept. 3, 1910.

AMONG THE MISSIONARIES IN THE PHILIPPINES.

My last letter was written in the rich copra section of Luzon, about six hundred miles from here. It was the intention of my chief to let me stay there for the remainder of my tour of duty, so he informed me. That is one of the most desirable places out here, and I was delighted with it. (I will gladly return when this trip is over.) But it became necessary to send out a recruiting party for the Scouts, and it fell to my part to go with the party as medical examiner.

Our first stop was at Manila, whither we went for special instructions, supplies, and also to get a ship to take us up here. In Manila, I met the new pastor of the American Church (Methodist) and found him to be a most excellent gentleman, and as much a brother as if he had been of the Southern Church. In fact, all the Methodists I met are warmly in favor of a united Methodism. When he learned that I was to go to the Cagayan Valley, he wrote letters to the missionaries, and warned them to look out for me. On the ship en route were two Catholic missionaries. They were German, but spoke a little English. All three were bright, well-educated young men, and seemed to be much in earnest. We had some pleasant chats in the long three days at sea, and they left us with positive regret. I told them it seemed to me to be rather strange for the Catholic Church to be sending men to these Islands, as they were so well fixed here. He (the leader) said that they were to open a work among tribes not yet Christian. They left us for a trip of ten or twelve hours into the mountains. They have my sympathy, and would have the sympathy of any one who was at all familiar with the situation.

Our first stop was at Aparri. This old town is at the mouth of the Cagayan river, and is the gateway to the valley. This is the finest tobacco country in the world, and with half cultivation would be the richest part of the Islands. But the natives do not care to work much, and so do not do it. They can live with but a little labor, and do not feel the ambition to get ahead that is so characteristic of the American and other people living in cooler climates. I have an idea that if I stayed here many years, I would be as lazy as they are.

At Aparri I met my first missionary in his native heath, and what I say about him applies with equal force to the young men here. Both these gentlemen are bright, scholarly men of the best type we have at home. Both are Westerners, and from a border State. It is fine to see what an excellent class of men our sister Church is sending out. Both are under thirty years of age, and each has a devoted wife to help on the good work. They preach and pray and work among the people, and are assisted by native converts. In a letter to the Nashville Advocate, I stated that I had as yet seen no Filipino with what one would call a "good" face. Two of the young Methodist "exhorters" up in the valley have excellent faces. It was quite a satisfaction to me to find the first strong Christian face to belong to a Methodist. And I may add here, that from the reports of his pastor, in each case, I think they are consecrated young men. They have no likeness to the native priests.

Some one is ready to ask how they are succeeding in the work out in these delectable islands. It is so easy to criticize and find fault that I am loath to say what I really think; suffice to say that considering the handicap they work under (that could be helped) they are wonderfully successful. Let some one misunderstand, I will explain. In Aparri they have no church building, but hold a service in the basement of the parsonage. I am informed that this is the case in other missions. Here conditions are not even so good as at Aparri, and this is the capital of the province. The missionary lives in a house rented from a Filipino, and it is a typical native house of the better class. As is usual, the stable is under the house.

Nothing pleases these people like a prosperous front. It means so much more with natives than it does with us. All their lifetime they have seen the church was the best building in town, and have been taught that the building meant so much more than we think. They see the stately services, and gaudy fixtures, and to them it symbolizes prosperity, grandeur and religion. You can readily see how comfortably seems worship in the basement of a native house, or elsewhere. The Church makes slow progress, because they associate the entire organization with what they see out here. Our missionaries will never succeed as they merit, and as we have a right to expect, until they have seen church buildings at each central mission. On account of the ants and other insects, all buildings should be of concrete, with concrete floors. The pews should be iron framed, and well enameled. With one central church in the town, a number of smaller missions in the adjoining barrios (or villages) could be established, and each would soon support a native helper. At Aparri a central church would influence fully 30,000 people, and here 150 miles up the river there are probably 10,000 people in a radius of ten miles. The Catholics have a very handsome brick church that at home would cost at least $20,000. It has a lofty tower, and chime of bells. Can you not see how hard it is to reach people with the facilities we have? I may add in passing that I feel quite sure that the Filipinos need the Methodist Church, and need it badly.

These missionaries are very cheerful and seem to bear their privations with wonderful bravery. They would not tell it, but I will, so you can see how they live out in the wilderness. The climate is extremely hot all the time. In sixteen months I have never seen a single cool day, and yet they have to drink cold water all the time. There is no ice, no fresh fruit, butter, milk, fruits, or fresh vegetables such as we are accustomed to. We get bananas, a kind of squash, and that is about all. In other sections there are mangoes, but none here. Canned diet may seem nice for a few meals, but one gets sick of the very labels on them. A canned diet of ten months with a short intermission, made me feel like the day the transport sailed would be a happy one for me, and gladly will I see the mountains of Luzon sink into the sea. So, my friends, give the missionary your prayers and sympathy, for you have no idea of the many privations he and his devoted wife endure. Of course, I do not mention the isolation from society, friends, and such things.

In conclusion, let me suggest that the laymen take the matter of building suitable houses in central places, and thus place the implements of warfare in the hands of the preacher. Let this be done, and such success as has not been dreamed of will come to the Philippine missions.

Letters addressed to me at Manila, P. I., will reach me. I will probably reach my station before this is published.

J. C. BALLARD.

Tuzon, P. I., July 28.

TAKING CARE OF THE PARSONAGE.

A parsonage is built by the people for the preacher and means to him the same as so much salary. If the people give him a house to live in, isn't it very unkind of him to neglect to care for it? It is amazing how much damage can be done by property in one year by neglect. Moreover, the Methodist ministry is a brotherhood and should look out for each other's comfort. There are some fruits that Louisiana preachers ought to have at their homes. I, for one, expect to plant five fig trees and one hundred strawberry plants and have them growing by the first of December. Who will join me?

A. J. GEARHEARD.

Grieydan, La.

It helps us to understand this great mystery if you consider death as not the end, but simply an incident in an unending life—an entrance into a larger, richer life, where development of character still goes on.—L. D. M.

THE Grant Furniture Co.

THE DEPENDABLE KIND
of FURNITURE that
Lasts a LIFETIME

WHERE PRICES ARE THE LOWEST.

427-429-431 Camp Street, New Orleans

SPEARING & CO.,

(Established 1817.)

SAIL MAKERS

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS and TENTS.

CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOUAS STREETS

Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

Church News

The next Lutheran Synod of the South will be held in Atlanta in 1912.

Bishop J. C. Kilgo has lately been spending some time in the Blue Grass State, lending a hand to the work in that important territory. He is now holding the Kentucky Conference, which assembled at Harrodsburg yesterday.

Australian Methodists believe in taking care of their superannuated preachers. They are reported to have an endowment fund for this purpose of nearly $2,000,000, though they number less than 200,000. This is much to the credit of our brethren across the seas.

Dr. J. M. Buckley, the editor of the New York Christian Advocate, and his daughter, returned from a several weeks' sojourn in Europe on Sept. 4th. The Doctor is the dean of Methodist editors in America, and for full and accurate information has scarcely an equal in any Church.

The Year Book of the Congregationalists is said to show that about one-third of their ministers are without charges. We should not be surprised if a great many of their churches are not also without pastors. For effectiveness, such a form of government cannot compare with our admirable itinerant system.

Archbishop Ireland passed his seventy-second birthday on September 11, while attending the Eucharistic Congress in Montreal. He was born in Kilkenny, Ireland, in 1838, and came to America with his parents in 1849. He is in charge of the See of Saint Paul, Minn., and is the most influential Roman Catholic clergyman in the Northwest.

The North Alabama Epworth League Conference, recently held at Huntsville, was an occasion of much interest. Dr. J. A. Rice, of New Orleans, and Dr. Andrew Sledd, the new president of the Southern University, rendered platform service that was particularly helpful. The Sunday morning sermon was preached by Dr. F. S. Parker, the accomplished editor of the Epworth Era.

Rev. R. M. Boone, editor of the Baptist Chronicle, has been supplying the Coliseum Place Baptist Church, this city, for the past two months. Dr. Sowers, the pastor, having been granted a leave of absence. Our brethren of that denomination are toiling assiduously to establish themselves in New Orleans and Louisiana. And they will succeed. They are everywhere an aggressive and energetic people.

The Alabama Christian Advocate is forging forward under the new management. The Whitehead Publishing Company has been organized with a capital stock of six thousand dollars, the editor and publisher taking $4,000 of this amount. The remaining $2,000 is offered to the patrons of the paper in shares of $10 each. The contents of this journal is also beginning to evidence the touch of skillful hands. We are pleased to note the progress our worthy contemporary is making.

The General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada was honored by a visit and address from Sir Wilfred Laurier, the Premier of the Dominion. Other eminent men who looked in on the body and uttered words of encouragement were the Hon. E. M. Macdonald, of Nova Scotia, and the Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways, the latter being the son of a Methodist parsonage. Wesleyanism in its various folds is now esteemed as a force which makes for righteousness around the world.

To the Christian Intelligencer of September 7th we are indebted for the following interesting news item: "The centenary of David Livingstone's birth will be observed in 1913. Charing Cross Hospital, in London, where he studied medicine, is soliciting gifts of a million shillings, which would enable it to reopen the wards (eighty-seven beds) now closed because of shrunken funds." In honoring this hero of Christian missions and African exploration, England will honor herself. He was one of the truly great men of the nineteenth century.

Dr. James I. Vance has accepted the call to the First Presbyterian Church, of Nashville, and will take charge November 1. He served this congregation once before for six years, with marked success, achieving a South-wide reputation as a pulpit orator. Since leaving the Tennessee capital, he has been pastor of a large church in Newark, New Jersey. The Christian Intelligencer, of New York, speaks in the highest terms of Dr. Vance's work north of Mason and Dixon's Line. We are pleased to see this brilliant clergyman return to the South.

The Christian Recorder recently brought out a memorial addition in honor of the late Bishop Lampton, of the African Methodist Episcopal Church. He well deserved the distinction thus accorded him. Practically his whole life was spent in Greenville, Miss., where he wrought a good work for his race, and enjoyed the confidence of the white people as well as those of his own color. His funeral is said to have been remarkable for the great throngs in attendance and for the unusual manifestations of sincere grief. It was Bishop Lampton's purpose to lead the negroes of Mississippi in a movement to erect a monument to Bishop Galloway in the capital of the State, of which they were both distinguished citizens.

A press dispatch from Peking states that a revised edition of the New Testament and the Psalms is now being published in China, and that stacks of this volume are being shipped to various parts of the Empire. This project was inaugurated in 1890 at a conference of all missionary bodies at work in China, and is being carried forward at the expense of the Bible societies of the world. Several books are added each year, and it is expected that the work of revision will be completed in 1915. The translators held their annual session at Che Fu in August. They hope that this edition of the sacred Scriptures will be the Chinese what the Authorized Version of the Bible is to the English-speaking world.

The question of the time limit was a burning issue at the recent General Conference of Canadian Methodism. Many memorials were sent up asking for an extension of the possible term of four years. The committee reported in favor of a quadrennial limit, except in the case of mission work, with an added proviso that a pastor might be returned to the same charge for four additional years, if asked for annually by a two-thirds vote of the Quarterly Official Board. This proposed new arrangement brought on a spirited debate, which finally resulted in the retention of the regular four-years limit without any modification, a large majority voting against the suggested change. The laymen in particular are said to have been strongly against lengthening the pastoral term.

A number of prominent Louisiana Sunday school workers are making a tour of the State. It began on September 17, and will end on September 29th. The purpose of the itinerary is to stir up an increased interest in the various phases of this important work. The party is led by Thomas V. Ellzey, State Secretary, and includes the State president, H. N. Pharr; the Rev. George D. Booth, of the Napoleon Avenue Presbyterian Church; the Rev. W. H. Coleman, of Homer, La.; the Rev. W. S. Slack, of Mt. Olivet Church, Algiers; J. W. Parsons, of Mansfield; and Miss Sisle Jaden, of New Orleans. The places which have been or will be visited are as follows: Monroe, Sept. 15-16; Ruston, Sept. 17-18; Athens, Sept. 19-20; Minden, Sept. 20-21; Mansfield, Sept. 21-22; Alexandria, Sept. 22-23; Lake Charles, Sept. 24-25; Crowley, Sept. 26-27; Morgan City, Sept. 27-28; Houma, Sept. 28-29. With the return of this party to their homes, there will begin a Sunday school institute in New Orleans, which it is hoped to make a permanent winter training school for Sunday school teachers. The coming institute will run from October 9 through October 14. There will be some prominent out-of-town speakers, E. H. Nicholls, of Chicago; W. C. Johnson, of Colorado; and Fred A. Wells, treasurer of the International World's Sunday School Association.

AN APPRECIATIVE TRIBUTE

Miss Virginia O. Wardlaw, whose death was recently announced in the daily papers, was a native of Georgia. She belonged to a cultivated and refined family who for generations have been people of educational and literary prominence, a family who have always stood for the highest and best in Church and State. Her father was a venerable Methodist preacher, whose strong, wholesome life was an inspiration and benediction to all who knew him. A gifted brother, John B. Wardlaw, Jr., died early, but not before he had made a lasting impression on the life of Princeton University, of which he was an alumnus, and had given promise of unusual literary ability.

Early in life Miss Wardlaw sustained an injury of the spine, which caused her extreme nervous suffering during most of her life. Few of her most intimate friends ever realized the pain under which she lived and did her arduous work. She was indefatigable, giving the best years of her life to the education and realization of the highest ideals in the education of Southern women, whom she loved with an ardor and an earnestness that was unwearied. Her ability to awaken responsiveness and kindly enthusiasm, to inspire love and loyalty, to infuse her own high ideals into the consciousness of her pupils, was especially characteristic of her work and marked her as the true educator.

She was proud and reticent, but a woman of noble purposes and deep affections, and a Spartan courage that could suffer and be silent as no other woman I have ever met. She possessed remarkable intellectual powers and an energy and vision far beyond the strength of her frail body. As a daughter, sister and aunt, she was the essence of unselfishness, and while her family loved her almost to the point of idolatry, one was always impressed with the fact that her devotion was their gift and not her demand. That the great trial of her life should be a supposed injury to one of her own, was the most bitter and crushing sorrow that could have come to her—it broke her heart.

She died in New Jersey August 11th, and was taken to Christiansburg, Va., the 14th, and followed by those who had known and loved her from childhood, she was laid by the side of her father. The mountains round about, as God's sentinels, guard her last sleep.

A life of storm and stress, of high hopes and shattered plans, a loving, sensitive, misunderstood, much suffering soul is at rest at last. The Father of all understands.

A FRIEND

A NEW MISSIONARY MAGAZINE

An ideal long cherished by many in reference to our missionary periodicals is about to be realized. At a recent meeting of the secretaries of the Mission Board it was decided unanimously that the three missionary periodicals should be combined into one. It was agreed that this combination should be effected so as to begin the new publication with the January issue. From that date Go Forward, Our Homes and the Woman's Missionary Advocate will be merged into a magazine which will be published at the rate of fifty cents a year. It will be designed to cover all the ground now covered by these three periodicals, so that each subscriber will have the opportunity through one periodical of acquaintanceship with the whole missionary work of the Church. Each separate interest will receive full treatment and sufficient emphasis in the different departments of the new periodical, so that none of these interests will suffer any loss of attention, but each will receive added force by its proper relation to all the other missionary interests.

The unexpired subscriptions of each of these periodicals will be filled out with the issues of the new one. Hence, all renewals and new subscriptions given for either of the three will count for the period for which they are given. In the case of Go Forward, which is published at only half the price of the new magazine, the above proposition will hold until the first of November. All new subscribers and all renewals sent in before that time will be good for one year, but subscriptions will not be accepted at that price for a period longer than one year.

It is our purpose to make this new periodical a worthy and adequate exponent of the work of missions, and one that will commend itself to all our people. Believing that this new evidence and illustration of the unity of our missionary forces will be welcomed gladly by the Church at large, we earnestly ask for the co-operation of pastors and people in giving to the new magazine such a subscription list as will be worthy of the great cause of missions and will properly represent the widespread and deep interest of the Church in world evangelization.

W. B. PINSON.

WANTED BY PORT GIBSON FEMALE COLLEGE, PORT GIBSON, MISS.—Several students who wish to reduce their expenses for a whole session to $100.00 or $75.00 by assisting in our Sewing Department.

Secular News and Comment

The International Prison Congress will be held in Washington, D. C., October 2-8. It is expected that many delegates from abroad will be in attendance.

Louisiana's six markers, designed to indicate the positions of her troops during the historic siege of Vicksburg, are now all in place. The workmanship upon these tablets is said to be excellent and has elicited much favorable comment.

The Appalachian Exposition at Knoxville, Tenn., (named for the rich territory of which that city is the center) was opened on September 12th and will continue for a month. Virginia, the Carolinas, Tennessee, Georgia, Kentucky, and Alabama are reported to be making remarkably good exhibits.

President Woodrow Wilson, of Princeton University, was nominated for Governor of New Jersey by the Democrats of that State on the 15th inst. by a large majority. This brings into politics one of the foremost scholars of the nation, and some predict that he has been started upon a career that will end at the White House.

The Democrats elected a majority of the delegates to the Constitutional Convention in the contest recently held in Arizona, and will write the organic law of that new State of the southwest. It is said that it will provide for the initiative and referendum and the direct election of United States Senators. It is predicted there will be a lively battle over the questions of State-wide prohibition and woman suffrage.

The Mississippi State Normal College will be located at Hattiesburg, the terms being that that city is to donate $250,000 and a site of 100 acres or more to the institution. The competing places were Jackson and Laurel, each of which submitted a tempting offer to the trustees. The determining consideration in making the selection seems to have been the fact that all of the other State colleges are situated in North Mississippi. We congratulate Hattiesburg upon her notable triumph.

Assistant Commissioner Abbott, of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, returned to Washington on the 11th inst., after having traveled 20,000 miles and inspecting Indian reservations in twelve States. He was much pleased with the progress the red men are making in the way of developing a creditable civilization. He reports their schools to be excellent, their knowledge of agriculture and other practical industries as being on the increase, and their warehouse and transportation facilities as steadily improving. He thinks the key to the solution of the Indian problem lies in teaching them to become self-supporting on their various allotments of land.

There continues to be some speculation as to whether the commission of Judge Thornton, the newly appointed Senator from Louisiana, will be called in question at Washington on account of certain alleged irregularities in the course pursued by Governor Sanders. Senator Foster has announced his purpose to do his utmost to have the claims of the Governor's appointee recognized. Meantime, there is but one sentiment as to the admirable fitness of Judge Thornton for the place to which he has been assigned. He is conceded to be a man of ability and high character. He is an active member of the Christian Church.

Dr. Dunbar Rowland, Director of the Department of Archives and History of Mississippi, has sailed for New York and is expected to reach Jackson on September 25. He went abroad several weeks ago to attend a World Conference of Historians at Brussels, and read before that distinguished body a paper which elicited much favorable comment. Since the adjournment of that notable gathering, he has spent some time investigating the methods used by Germany and other countries in preserving their records. Mississippi is fortunate in having so capable an official as Dr. Rowland. Under his management her Hall of Fame has already become one of the most interesting Pantheons in the nation.

In the Arkansas election on September 12, the amendment to the Constitution providing for the initiative and referendum was adopted. Under its provisions any act passed by the Legislature is required to be submitted to a vote of the people where eight per cent of the citizens are shown to desire it. By petition an objectionable measure may also be suspended until a referendum vote can be had at the next State election. This new feature of government seems to be increasing in popularity, but we somewhat doubt the wisdom of it where the legislative assemblies meet with such frequency as they do in the American States. Stability of administration is a valuable factor of government, and should not be too much disturbed. A perpetual reign of politics, as we see it, is not calculated to contribute to the public good.

Colonel Roosevelt's tour of the Middle West has attracted world-wide attention, and has been much and variously commented upon by the American press. It began on August 23 and ended on September 11, during which time the Ex-President traveled 5,500 miles, visited sixteen States, and made a hundred addresses. He was received everywhere with extraordinary enthusiasm, and some of his public utterances were of unusual significance, notably his speech at Osawatomie, Kansas, where he outlined at some length his political views, declaring for what he was pleased to term "the new nationalism." Opinion is divided as to whether Mr. Roosevelt is conspiring to become president again in 1912. We hazard no prediction as to his future course, but we sincerely hope that he will not again be a candidate. We say this believing thoroughly in his patriotism and devotion to the interests of the masses. Our objection to his occupancy of the White House again is two-fold: we do not think he has sufficient reverence for the Constitution, and we believe in the unwritten law of the Republic, that two terms are enough for one man. If Mr. Roosevelt is again called to the helm of the nation, the trusts and corporations will be irresistible for the result. Thousands believe that he only has the force and aggressiveness to make predatory wealth respect and comply with the law and cease to encroach upon the rights of the people.

CONCERNING THE ADVOCATE.

To the Pastors and Members of the North Mississippi Conference:

Dear Brethren: As members of your Publishing Committee, we desire to call your attention to certain facts and imperative needs of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

1. It has a subscription list of about 8,000. Fully one-third of this number are lapsed subscriptions which the publisher is carrying for the present with the hope of early renewal. Of course, this is a heavy load for him to carry. He ought not to have it to do. Will not every subscriber who reads this appeal examine the label on his paper, and if his subscription has expired, or is about to expire, hand to his pastor the amount he may be behind, and for one year in advance? This amount will be small to the individual subscriber, but to the publisher it is very large in the aggregate. We appeal to the pastors to get a list of the subscribers in his charge, if he hasn't one already, and then make a canvass of these subscribers, that no one may forget it. A little work here on the part of the pastors will mean much to the maintenance and effectiveness of the Advocate.

2. With a membership of 53,002 in the North Mississippi Conference, we ought to have a paid up subscription list of 5,000, less than one paper to every ten members. Is this too much? We now have far less than this. But we ought to do far more than we are doing, ought we not? And will we not do it? The Advocate now is giving us more reading matter than formerly, and so, of course, it is being published at greater cost. Both the editor and the publisher have higher purposes for our Conference organ which they will give us as fast as the paper's income will allow. Let us join heartily, and with enthusiasm, with the other Conferences in a campaign for 10,000 subscribers to the Advocate before the meeting of our Annual Conference this fall.

Will not every pastor, on Advocate Day, take with him into his pulpit some copies of the Advocate, call special attention to it, asking for new subscribers and for renewals? Then if he will follow this up by a thorough canvass of his charge, either personally or by committee, we ought to give to the Advocate a very large increase in its circulation.

The large amount of work which the editor has undertaken leaves him little time for travel throughout the Conferences. He should have assistance; and in order to procure the needed help a much larger income to the paper is imperative.

Fraternally,

J. T. MURRAH,
H. S. SPRAGINS,
W. W. WOOLLARD.

AN AUSPICIOUS BEGINNING.

Dear Brother Meek: Mansfield College began the session of 1910-11 on Sept. 5th. The citizens always take a great interest in the opening exercises. On that day they came in numbers and met the students who had arrived. I am told that the opening was auspicious. We have a fine attendance. Much of our patronage comes from Mansfield itself, and this certainly speaks well for the College. It shows that the home people like the institution and have confidence in its faculty and methods. Nothing is so gratifying as to feel that you have the confidence and moral support of those among whom you live.

We wish you could have been present on the opening day. There were good speeches. There was pleasant fellowship. There was enthusiasm. Besides, the kind ladies of Mansfield, knowing how homesick the girls away from home were likely to become, had formed a committee of welcome, and had provided some nice refreshments, and so with music, kind words, and pleasant entertainment, the young ladies were made to feel at home. We have a fine set of girls in the College, and what is very encouraging, more are coming in. The classes are getting down to hard work, and we are not going to fritter away the time. Perhaps I ought to remark— with much emphasis—that the Methodists of the State do not know what beautiful grounds, excellent buildings and equipment they possess in Mansfield College. For years and years I had heard about the College, but never supposed that there was really anything here to boast about. Let me say—and I am guarded in the statement—that we have a splendid institution here, thoroughly furnished, in fine repair, and suited in every respect to do the very best work for the girls of our State.

H. N. HARRISON.

LATE BOOKS.

The International Critical Commentary, Two Volumes: Genesis, by John Skinner, D.D., M. A., Principal and Professor of Old Testament Language and Literature, Westminster College, Cambridge. The Books of Chronicles, by Edward Lewis Curtis, Ph.D., D.D., Professor of the Hebrew Language and Literature in the Divinity School at Yale University, and Albert Alonzo Madsen, Ph.D., Pastor of the First Congregational Church, at Newburgh, N. Y. Charles Scribner's Sons, Publishers. $3 each, net.

These volumes belong to a series of commentaries now being brought out by Charles Scribner's Sons, of New York, and T. & T. Clark, of Edinburgh, which, when completed, will embrace forty-three volumes—twenty-five on the Old Testament, and eighteen on the New Testament. A number of these have already been issued, and others are in process of preparation. The editors of this monumental work are Rev. S. R. Driver, D.D., Regius Professor of Hebrew, at Oxford, England; the Rev. Alfred Plummer, M.A., D.D., late Master of University College, Durham, and the Rev. C. A. Briggs, D.D., of the Union Theological Seminary, New York. The declared purpose of this series of publications is "to combine British and American scholars in the production of a critical, comprehensive Commentary that will be abreast of modern Biblical scholarship, and in a measure lead the van." The volume on Genesis is the product of six years of painstaking labor by the distinguished author. He brings to bear upon this hook of primeval history all the light of modern research, and subjects the various incidents recorded therein to the critical test of human reason and scholarship. His spirit is not that of the dogmatist, as is sometimes the case with progressive theologians; but rather that of the sincere seeker after truth. Far from accepting all of the deductions of the writer, we have found his discussions suggestive and, in places, illuminating. The work on Chronicles is said to be the first critical and analytical discussion of that part of the Bible brought out since the issuance of Zöckler's Commentary in the Lange series in 1876. Dr. Curtis does not accept the view that the author of 1 and 2 Chronicles was a mere copyist, but holds that he drew freely from other sources of information, some of them perhaps non-canonical. The handling of the genealogical tables with which Chronicles opens is thorough, and the geographical and historical notes are copious. We are indebted to D. H. Holmes & Company, of New Orleans, for the opportunity of examining these interesting volumes, of which house they may be had at the usual price. This progressive firm maintains an excellent book department, which ministers and others interested in any phase of literature would do well to look over when in the city.

W. W. Carre Co. Ltd
Manufacturer of Lumber
Exporter of

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Centenary College of Louisiana.

Fall Term will
open Sept. 14, 1910.

For Catalogues or other information write to

FELIX R. HILL, President, or
JOHN S. JOHNSTON, Dean,
SHREVEPORT, LA.

REV. JAMES ENGLISH—AN APPRECIATION.

By Rev. H. P. Lewis, Sr.

Rev. James English was for about thirteen years, prior to 1865, a member of the Mississippi Conference, and in 1866-67 he was presiding elder on what was then called Paulding District.

He was a deacon of one year when I was admitted in 1857. He was ordained elder by Bishop Paine in 1858 at Woodville, Miss., and seven years afterwards he succeeded B. B. Whittington as presiding elder on the Paulding District.

There were no district parsonages in those days; so he had to look for a home for himself and wife. As Mt. Carmel Circuit, where I was in charge, was near the center of the district, wife and I consented to furnish board for him and his wife. We found him a pleasant and agreeable companion. He was not what some would call a "star preacher," yet he was a good, practical expounder of the Word of life. He was born and reared in Canada, and I suppose was an "abolitionist" from childhood. He said but little about the politics of our country, yet enough to let every one know that he leaned towards the Republican party.

He was my presiding elder for two years, and a more faithful presiding elder I never had.

For some cause, he was led to believe, like some others, that the M. E. Church would sooner or later completely run over and absolutely absorb the M. E. Church, South. He firmly believed the time was near at hand when there would be a premium on loyalty to the U. S. Government, and that no man could be a loyal citizen who adhered to the M. E. Church, South. He fully decided during the year 1867 to sever his connection with the Church, South, and join the Northern branch. So, after making his report to the Conference, which met in Natchez that year, he asked for and obtained an honorable location—left our Church—joined the M. E. Church and Conference, and was sent to the Missouri Mission Conference and stationed at St. Joseph. He stayed there three years, then came back the worse whipped man I ever saw.

His mission North was a flat failure. He saw it, he felt it; and however humiliating it may have been to him, he deliberately made up his mind to quit the M. E. Church, retrace his steps as far as he could consistently do so, and make his future home in the South.

It was early in the year 1871, while sitting on my front porch in my home near Holmesville, Miss., that my attention was directed to some one coming up the road from the direction of Osyka. He seemed at a loss to know just what to do. In a moment I recognized the man to be my good old friend and former presiding elder, Rev. Jas. English. He at first seemed to hesitate, doubting in his mind as to whether he would be welcome; then advanced towards the house. I, of course, went to meet him.

More than three years had passed since we looked into each other's face. Bid him welcome to my home? Of course, I did. How could I do otherwise? He was my brother in the Lord. He had wandered off from his best friends, discovered his mistake, fatal in some respects; had returned to his former home and friends—had come back to stay.

He had severed his connection with the M. E. Church and Conference, and was content ever afterwards to remain in the local ranks of our Church. He had too much self respect—too much respect for the Church he deserted to ask her to receive him back into the traveling connection. He located at Johnston Station, took up his old trade (brickmason), led a quiet, peaceable life, and died in peace thirty years ago.

He said to me one day, while sitting on a log near my home, "Brother Lewis, I made a sad mistake when I left the M. E. Church, South." So he did. How many, oh, how many have made similar mistakes, quit and gone elsewhere because of a little trifle that might have been well adjusted, if only time, patience, reason, good judgment and good religion had been timely and properly exercised. We haven't charity enough among ourselves. Paul said, "Charity suffereth long and is kind."

I loved Brother English. I doubt if he had two better friends among his ministerial brethren than he had in Brother W. W. Hurst and myself. He was a Republican—a Republican from principle. He had a right to be, if he thought Republicanism was preferable to Democracy. He is not a generous man at heart who lightly esteems another and talks disrespectfully about him because of a difference between them politically, religiously and otherwise. Some of my best friends are Republicans. Some of my best friends are Baptists, or members of some other Church.

On one occasion, on Silver Creek, in Lawrence County, Miss., I heard Brother English preach a strong sermon on "The Devil as a Hard Task-Master." His text was Rom. vi. 16: "To whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey." He held the congregation spell-bound for about one hour. On another occasion, when he was young as a preacher, finances did not come up as well as Brother English thought they ought. So he said to one of his stewards, "This is mighty poor pay," to which the steward replied, "Mighty poor preach."

Brother English married a Miss Fannie Ott, near Osyka, about the year 1860. She was a niece of Judge Tate, a woman of culture and refinement.

MATTERS HISTORICAL.

By Rev. E. L. Shettle, of Marlin, Texas.

Editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. I have been gathering for a number of years material for a History of Methodism—not that I expect to write it myself, but that our Church in the southwest might have in easy reach ample sources for any one who may desire to write such a history. I have lately secured a collection of letters. The title page is as follows: "Extracts from Original Letters to the Methodist Bishops, mostly from the preachers and members in North America. Giving an account of the work of God, since the year 1800." Prefaced with a short history and increase of the Methodists, with a sketch of the camp meetings. Published by Ezekiel Cooper and John Wilson for the Methodist connection in the United States, 1805." In this unique, and I am sure, rare bit of Wesleyana are three letters from the Mississippi territory which I am enclosing for publication. They contain but a few facts, but it is by gathering up here and there a stray fact that we are able finally to have the material sufficient from which to tell the whole story of our great Church.

While I am on the subject of Methodist history, I trust the reader will go through his old books and pamphlets, reports of the various boards, and write me what he finds that he would part with. I am very anxious to get old letters written from Texas to friends in the old States.

The three letters referred to above are as follows:

Mississippi Territory, March 20, 1804.

Through divine mercy my life has been preserved. I have enjoyed my health this winter rather better than usual. Praise the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his favors.

It was not convenient for us to come here by water; therefore, we set off through the wilderness on the last day of October, and after thirteen days and twelve nights toil, we came safe to this place. I have formed a four weeks' circuit and call it Washington. A revival has taken place among the poor black people and it increases every round. About thirty of them have joined the society, and the greater part of them are, I believe, happy in the Lord. In various places our white congregations are serious and attentive. Some are like Agrippa, almost persuaded to be Christians; but pride and the honor of the world have hitherto hindered them. Thank the Lord, I have, however, seen blossoms and a little fruit in this remote part of the vineyard of the Lord. Our brethren seem stirred up to seek their first love, and sinners weep before the Lord. O that God would turn our captivity as the streams of the South.

Brother Gibson was sick when we came here and still continues so; his legs are swelled up to his knees and he has also a violent cough. He has not preached more than seven or eight times in nine or ten months. He told me a little while past that he was willing to meet his death. He and other friends urge me to stay in this place a year or more, and from the situation of things, I suppose it will be best for me to continue. Tell my dear brethren (the young preachers) not to be afraid of this place, for God is here, and souls have been converted this winter in public and private, and others are inquiring the way to heaven. Here are also a great many souls that must die like heathens, except they are visited by faithful ministers of the gospel. There are various places in the country which Congress purchased from the French, where scarcely a faithful sermon was ever preached. My hope revives in secret, and in public preaching, that God will pour his Spirit on us more abundantly, and that our brethren will come and help us.

HEZEKIAH HARRIMAN.

Mississippi Territory, April 9th, 1804.

Since I wrote to you last, some things have occurred that move me to trouble you with another letter. Brother Gibson has gone to his long home. He preached his last sermon on New Year's day, and it was profitable to a great many souls; since that time he has not been able, at various times, to hold family prayer. I was with him four weeks before his death and he informed me he was not afraid to die, and seemed to wish for the hour. I visited him again about seven hours before he expired, but he was then speechless. On the fourth day of April he was taken with a high fever, and about midnight he began to vomit blood and in a short time lost his senses. He was restless in the fore part of the day, but grew weak and calm in the evening, and about eight o'clock he resigned his spirit to God in peace. He died at the widow Gibson's, near the Walnut Hills, Claiborne County, on the 5th of April, 1804. He was exemplary in his conduct and useful in his ministerial labors. He continued to labor in the vineyard of the Lord as long as he was able to preach or pray. He expressed, some time before and in his last illness, a great degree of humility, patience, and resignation to the will of God, though much debilitated with consumption for two or three years past. He was esteemed a real Christian in this territory by the righteous and the people of the world. His work of faith and labor of love is still prospering in this place. His heart is no longer the seat of trouble and torturing pain; it ceased to flutter and beat, it never shall flutter again.

The Lord has made bare his arms in another part of the circuit a few days past, and some have tasted of the good Word of God and the power of the world to come, and others seem deeply awakened.

HEZEKIAH HARRIMAN.

Mississippi Territory, Dec. 15, 1804.

Brother Barnes and myself left Kentucky on the 4th of October, and arrived in this territory on the 4th of November. We had appointments given out, etc. We have visited the circuit and have found some kind friends and very attentive congregations, and numbers have wept under the Word. The Lord was with us at our quarterly meeting. Numbers, I believe, were powerfully awakened. We appointed a camp meeting at Washington, in Adams County. It commenced last Friday and ended to-day. On the Sabbath I suppose it was attended by near two thousand people. I have reason to believe that five were converted and twenty or thirty were powerfully awakened at this camp meeting. Methodism is in its infancy in this country, but I have no doubt it will prevail in this as well as in other parts of America. The language of my soul is victory or death. I had rather die than go to a circuit and not see souls converted to God. I can say here is my time, my talents, my life, and all a sacrifice to promote the cause of religion. In coming to this country we had to endure hardships. We slept nine nights in the open air. I am yours.

LAWNER BLACKMAN.

SALVATION FOR PREACHERS AND PEOPLE.

By Rev. J. W. Sandell.

Meditate upon these things; give thyself wholly to them, that thy profiting may appear to all. Take heed unto thyself, and unto the doctrine; continue in them: for in doing this thou shalt both save thyself, and them that hear thee. 1 Tim. iv. 15-16.

If I am alive Sept. 18, 1910, I will be eighty-one years old. I am about a fourth-rate supernannuated preacher according to a salary standard, which is the common rating of the preachers of these times. But when a preacher is retired he drops to the common level of the brethren in that relation without regard to salary in the effective relation. If the doctrine of equality in the support of worn-out preachers is to be regarded, why may it not be regarded in the support of the ministry in all its relations? If $200 is a support for a retired preacher, should an effective man have $1,000 or $2,000 for a support in the same community? By what gospel doctrine can this practice be sustained in the Church? If the gospel is to be preached in all the world it must be done on gospel principles, and the ministers must be the guardians of the doctrines and lives of those to whom they minister in holy things. The preacher is to be an example to the people in doctrine and life. He must live the gospel he is to preach. This is necessary to save himself and those to whom he ministers. What a great responsibility is resting upon the ministry of the churches of our country!

Is a preacher's responsibility measured by the salary he receives? If an increase of pay increases responsibility, it also increases the danger of failure to reach the true standard of a gospel preacher. That disciple whom Jesus loved said: "I have no greater joy than to hear that my children walk in truth." His saying may be considered supernannuated, as his age was much greater than most of our preachers who sustain that relation to-day. Supernannuation does not lessen a preacher's interest in the salvation of souls.

I believe that the remedy for the many evils that exist in our country to-day is in the gospel of Christ. The preachers must believe and teach the Word of God as the rule of the faith and practice of preachers and people. Instead of twisting the gospel to make it conform to the practice of the age, the life of the people must conform to the spirit of the gospel of the living Christ. The only way to make a new world is to make the people new creatures, or a new creation.

Magnolia, Miss.

All that time is lost which might be better employed.—Rousseau.

Honest Painters Recommend

CLIMATIC PREPARED PAINT

Guaranteed 100 Per Cent Pure.

AMERICAN PAINT WORKS, New Orleans, La.

Directors:

Francis Martin, Pres. John McClosky, Vice-Pres.
W. S. Flynt, Gen'l Mgr. C. H. Ellis, Sec.-Treas.
Geo. A. Hara.

The Home Circle

UNISON WITH GOD.

What grace, O Lord, and beauty shone
Around thy steps below!
What patient love was seen in all
Thy life and death of woe!
Forever on thy burdened heart,
A weight of sorrow hung;
Yet no ungentle, murmuring word
Escaped thy silent tongue.

Thy foes might hate, despise, revile,
Thy friends, unfaithful prove;
Unwearied in forgiveness still,
Thy heart could only love.

Oh, give us hearts to love like thee,
Like thee, O Lord, to grieve
Far more for others' sins than all
The wrongs that we receive.

One with thyself, may every eye
In us, thy brethren, see
That gentleness and grace that springs
From unison, Lord, with thee.

—Edward Denny, in Christian Index.

JACK'S GOOD NAME.

"And I can't do anything for him—not one single thing!" Jack shook his head mournfully as he arrived at this sorrowful conclusion. I can't go and see him and sit with him because I haven't got the time. I can't send him fruit and books and things, like well-off folks does when their folks has to go to the hospital, because I haven't got the money. I can't earn a cent more'n mother and the young ones need. No help for Billy from me."

Billy was an orphan boy younger than Jack. He had recently, with some relatives with whom he made his home, moved into Jack's neighborhood. Going on an errand, he had fallen from a street car and broken his leg.

As we have seen, all Jack's sympathy went out toward the boy to whom life seemed to have turned its harder, rougher side. Jack was office boy in a place which made large demands on his time and indeed, on every other thing which might be said to belong to a growing boy. His duties were many, and his master exacting. But it never occurred to Jack to question the reasonableness or otherwise of anything which was required of him. He was nothing more than a good, plodding boy, having very fixed notions on the subject of his duty which notions were expressed in few words: "I'm going to do the best I can." And Jack's best was a very wide best. A great many words might be written on the true meaning of it. Indeed, it may be said that many large books have been written without exhausting the subject. If Jack had enlarged on it a little, he might have seen that his best meant something like this: "Always tell what's so, no matter what; never touch what ain't mine; always be on time or a little ahead; always go quick when you're sent, and remember what you're sent for; sweep clean, and keep things fixed up; keep myself clean, and my hair brushed; take my hat off and speak polite." Which, take it altogether, was a very good code for an office boy, or, perhaps, a good many other boys.

There came a day when Jack stood face to face with a hard question. Stealing a moment on his way home to run in and see how Billy was getting along, he found him with a cloud over his unusually cheerful face.

"What's the matter, Billy?"

"They've been telling me"—Billy shook his head despairingly—"but I won't get well till no telling when, unless I go to some place in the country when I go away from here."

"Phew, Billy!" said Jack in dismay.

"I thought you know," said Billy, "that I could get to work right off. I ain't any right to be a burden on the folks. But the folks here are telling me of a real nice place where I could go for twenty-five dollars, where I'd get good treatment and stay as long as I needed. They think that's awfully cheap, but"

—poor, Billy, sighed woefully—"twenty-five dollars is a lot of money, ain't it, Jack?"

"It is that."

"So I'll be back near you the beginning of the week, and then I'll be with you evenings. And—hopefully—"I guess I'll get well without any twenty-five dollars."

Jack talked about it with his mother. "I wish the poor boy could go," she said. "It might be the settling of his health for years to come."

"But how can he?" said Jack in a discouraged tone.

"If it could be paid a dollar at a time"—she said, half-questioningly—"You might be able to put by a dollar a week for it."

"I don't see how you will spare it, mother."

"We might pinch a little closer."

After a little more talk Jack made his plans.

He went the next morning to his employer and asked if he could advance the twenty-five dollars, deducting a dollar each week from his pay until the amount was made up.

Mr. Strong looked keenly at the boy as with much hesitation he pressed his request, telling of Billy and his needs. "How do I really know you'll work it out?" asked Mr. Strong. "You can't give me any security, can you?"

"No, sir," and Jack dropped his head forlornly.

"You might, you know, leave me before the twenty-five weeks were up."

"I'd promise not to," said Jack earnestly. "But I haven't a thing to give you for security."

"Your promise will be enough," Mr. Strong's manner changed as he went on. "I'd take your word, Jack, for more than twenty-five dollars. You have worked for me a good while, and I know what you are. Your good name makes your promise all the security I want." As Jack was turning away, his face crimsoned with gratification at the kind words. Mr. Strong added: "I'll speak more about it to-morrow."

"If—if—Jack strove to stammer out his thanks—"if there's a thing more about the place that I can do that—I don't do, I'd be glad, sir—"

"There isn't," said Mr. Strong kindly. "You are honest and faithful in everything. Such a reputation is a valuable thing to start on in life."

Mr. Strong, on going home that evening spoke to his grown-up daughter: "Bertha, haven't you to do with some of these fresh-air businesses?"

"Yes, father; you have given me money for them."

"Where they send poor little lads into the country and feed them up and and brace them up and return them as good as new?"

"Exactly that kind of thing," said Bertha, smiling.

"Well, I have a boy for you—one for whom I want a top seat."

So Billy went out to one of the places provided by some of the Master's faithful who strive to follow in his footsteps in showing loving kindness to his little ones. Jack's heart gave a bound when he learned that Miss Bertha Strong was to see to Billy's outing, for surely it must be something better than could be offered by any one else. Looking into his pay envelope at the end of the week, he turned back with it to Mr. Strong. "You've given me a dollar too much, sir. There's the expense for Billy, you remember."

"I remember, but that goes in on the account of your good name." There's nothing more to pay. And there will be a vacancy in the office next door by the time Billy comes back; if he is your kind of boy, he can have the place."—Youth's Companion.

MISSISSIPPI ORPHANS' HOME.

To the Pastors of the Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences:

Please send me at once the names and addresses of all of your Sunday school superintendents. Do not delay; this is most urgent. I want to send them programs and collection envelopes for "Work Day," which is October 14th. Rally Day will follow, Sunday, Oct. 16th. Please co-operate with us in this work day effort. We must raise at least $5,000 on that day. Request all of your people to pray and work for its success.
W. M. WILLIAMS, Manager.

"AN EVIL UNDER THE SUN."

Question.—Is there not a great indecency sometimes practiced among us, viz: Talking in the congregation before and after service?

Answer.—Let all the ministers and preachers join as one man, and enlarge on the impropriety of talking before and after service; and strongly exhort those that are concerned to do it no more. In three months, if we are in earnest, this vile practice will be banished out of every Methodist congregation. Let none stop till he has carried his point.—From the Methodist Book of Discipline, 1808.

If the suggestion is followed, made in the first parenthesis of the new Order of Worship, urging all to private devotions for a brief period, there will be little inclination to engage in social converse. But what can put a quietus upon the outburst that the country and town church, at least, follows immediately on the benediction?

When the preacher kneels at the close of service to engage in private prayers, as most surely he ought, his ears are greeted with a hubbub of laughter and conversation extremely disturbing and fearfully irreverent. Notice the terms used above by the fathers for characterizing this habit all too common in our churches generally to-day: "A great indecency," "impropriety," "vile practice."

Will the thoughtful reader kindly quit it, or endeavor to stop it?
W. A. BETTS.

Montrose, Miss.

THE SAFEST AND QUICKEST WAY

—TO—

TRANSFER MONEY

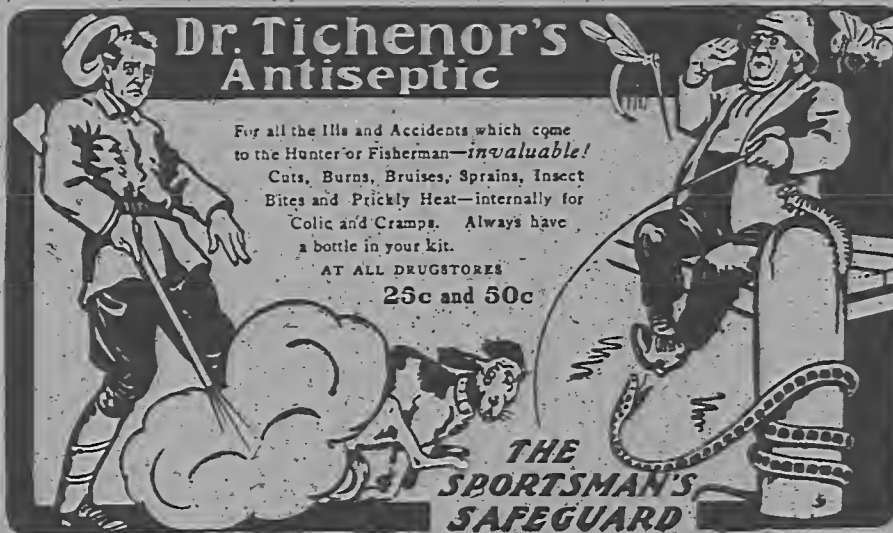

—IS BY—

Long Distance Telephone

FOR RATES APPLY TO LOCAL MANAGER,

Cumberland Telephone & Telegraph Co

INCORPORATED.

Dr. Tichenor's Antiseptic

For all the Ills and Accidents which come to the Hunter or Fisherman—invaluable!
Cuts, Burns, Bruises, Sprains, Insect Bites and Prickly Heat—internally for Colic and Cramps. Always have a bottle in your kit.
AT ALL DRUGSTORES
25c and 50c

THE SPORTSMAN'S SAFEGUARD

Christian Advocate.

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

ENTERED AT THE POSTOFFICE AT NEW ORLEANS
AS SECOND-CLASS MAIL MATTER.

OFFICE: 512 CAMP STREET, NEW ORLEANS.

TERMS.

One Copy, one year, $1.50; six months, 75c. To preachers of all Denominations, $1.00.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEES:

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE—Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev.
J. M. Henry, Rev. W. W. Drake.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. I. W. Cooper, D.D.,
Rev. E. H. Mounger, D.D., Rev. J. T. Leggett.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE—Rev. J. T.
Murrah, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. H. S. Spragins.

Editorial.

THE IMPORTANCE OF SOUND DOCTRINE.

There seems to-day to be a disposition to decrie creeds and confessions and doctrinal teaching generally. The affirmation is frequently heard that the world is weary of theology and is interested only in a practical, every-day religion of service. The statement is boldly made that it matters little what one thinks or believes, if only his conduct be altruistic and proper. Never perhaps in the history of Christendom was there a time when the sentiment of so many was voiced by the following familiar couplet:

"For forms and creeds let graceless bigots fight;
His creed cannot be wrong whose life is in the right."

In a sense, the thought expressed in these lines is true; not because a correct apprehension of doctrinal truth is unimportant, but for the reason that one's conduct is the real expression and interpretation of his faith. It is not so much what a person says that discloses his innermost and fixed belief, as it is his daily actions. A man's genuine convictions govern and control him; hence the necessity that they should be correct and in harmony with the great essential facts of the universe, physical, intellectual, and moral.

It is a tremendous mistake to suppose that the fruits of Christianity can exist apart from the great fundamental truths which gave origin to the religion of Christ, which now gird and support it, and which lie back of the recovering agencies that it has put into operation for the salvation of the world. Do away with the doctrines of God, the fall, the incarnation, the atonement, repentance, justification by faith, regeneration, sanctification, the resurrection, the judgment, and future rewards and punishment, and undertake to preach only a gospel of humanitarianism and benevolence, and soon there would be no Christianity worthy of the name upon the face of the earth. If the tree be hewn down, with it must perish also the blossoms and the fruit.

Man's relation to his fellowman, important as it is, is far from being the whole, or even the chief part, of the Christian religion. The thing of first and foremost concern is the relation of the individual to his Maker. Only a proper apprehension of God as Creator, Preserver, Redeemer, and the reigning and universal Sovereign, can awaken in the human soul the reverence, gratitude, adoration, affection, and sense of obligation which a finite and dependent being owes to the infinite Lord of all. To glorify the Heavenly Father we must recognize his existence and claims, and give him the homage, praise, and obedience which are justly his due. If we ignore him, no matter what else we may do, no matter how widespread may be our philanthropy, we are not true disciples of Christ. Kindness to man gives no exemption from the necessity of worshipping God.

But it is true that the right attitude toward the Creator must produce a right attitude toward the creations of his hand. The fatherhood of God leads logically to the brotherhood of man. Loving him who careth for all, we must also love our fellowmen. If we have the Spirit of him upon whose unfailing bounty all beings subsist, like him, it must be our delight to dispense blessing and helpfulness. Esteeming Christ as "precious," it becomes a privilege and joy to "feed his lambs."

But what has this to do with the importance of sound doctrine? It has much to do with it. The tendency of the times is leave God out of our religion and make it wholly a ministrations to human need. The supernatural in it is reduced to a minimum, and some would fain entirely eliminate it. The effort is made to explain away the miracles, and the great transcendental doctrines of revelation, which baffle the human reason and must be accepted upon faith; should, we are told, be shelved and let alone. This emasculated form of Christianity relies most, not upon divine, but human, means for its extension. It counts upon winning men by making it to their temporal advantage to embrace it.

Such a religion is of the earth, earthy. It is man-made, not God-made. Its mission is to the body, not to the soul. Its horizon is limited to time, and does not reach out into eternity. That it will fail, scarcely needs to be said. Like a stream cut off from its mighty source, it may flow on in blessing for a little time, but soon its strength will be spent and it will dwindle away into nothingness.

The religion that conquers must exalt God. It must magnify the adorable Trinity. It must teach the whole compass of Christian doctrine. It must unfold and impress the marvelous scheme of human redemption. It must not seek to repudiate the divine and mysterious. It must honor the Word of God and insist upon its absolute authority as a revelation of moral and spiritual truth. The Master gave his followers no formal and abstract creed, but his preaching was pre-eminently doctrinal. The fatherhood of God, the depravity of man, a vicarious atonement, the necessity of a pure heart, the immortality of the soul, a "house of many mansions" for the righteous, and a realm of "outer darkness" for the finally impenitent, were among the great themes upon which he dwelt. And much like him in this respect, was Paul, the most majestic of his apostles. The most active of missionaries, he yet was the most luminous of Christian teachers. There is scarcely an important doctrine or practice of the Church upon which he did not pour a flood of light. Almost without exception the foremost religious leaders of the centuries have been men who fed upon the Scriptures and reveled in the exposition of them. This was true of Luther, of Calvin, of Wesley, and of Spurgeon.

The remedy for any apparent lack of success upon the part of our twentieth-century Christianity lies not in the abandonment of our time-honored doctrines, but in a more faithful and vigorous presentation of them. Contentions about trivial and unessential things may well be hushed, but the underlying fundamentals of the Christian system never needed to be brought forward and emphasized more than now. The world's only saving power is the gospel of Christ, and for it there is no substitute. Only he who declares to the people "the whole counsel of God," may hope for the largest results in his work, and will be able to say, as did Paul, "I am pure from the blood of all men."

NEGRO BAPTISTS IN THE CITY.

The National Convention of Negro Baptists met in Washington Artillery Hall in New Orleans on September 15, with a reported attendance of ten thousand. Words of welcome were spoken by Mr. Bohman, mayor of the city. This gathering represents the largest Baptist body in existence, the membership of the churches under its jurisdiction aggregating 2,382,236. It is also by far the most numerous religious Negro organization in the world. It has a Sunday school enrollment of 994,000, and owns nearly $25,000,000 worth of church property. It has a Publishing House valued at $316,000, its educational equipment foots up the sum of $3,625,028, and it disbursed for church expenses last year a little less than $2,000,000. The seating capacity of its houses of worship is 5,700,000, and the net increase in membership during the past year was 31,597.

The deliberations of the Convention were orderly, and the deportment of the negroes, both in the Hall and throughout the city, was creditable to them and elicited favorable comment from the secular press. The measures passed by the assembly were in the main characterized by wisdom and sanity. We think, however, that the action of the body in declaring against separate coaches for the whites and blacks on the street cars and railways was most unwise and ill-timed. If our colored brethren had asked for better separate accommodations, we should have been in hearty sympathy with their request. We have never thought that our public carriers dealt quite fairly with them in the character of the service provided to meet their needs. But the remedy for any existing ills does not lie in promiscuity of any kind or anywhere between the races. That can be only harmful. Nothing has been more thoroughly demonstrated than the wisdom of the legislation which aims to prevent the social intermingling of whites and blacks. Separate churches, schools, and commitments upon the public highways are an urgent necessity in the South and will be, and ought to be, maintained.

We say this in all kindness. We have no feeling of prejudice against the Negroes. Their voices crooned above our cradle, and their arms bore us about in infancy. We grew up surrounded by them, and there are a number of them to-day in Mississippi who would put themselves to not a little trouble to befriend us. We feel a deep interest in their welfare and entertain for them a strong attachment. We have scant patience with those who teach that they should be kept ignorant and in a state of perpetual serfdom as nearly like slavery as is possible. As we see it, illiteracy would not help a single phase of our perplexing race problem. But on the contrary, would tend to aggravate and complicate it. But while this is our fixed opinion, we also hold firmly to the view that the safety of the colored people lies in their social segregation and development along racial lines. They need to let politics alone, recognize the existence of an impassable barrier between them and the white race, and address themselves to the task of establishing a social order of their own, which would rest upon sound moral principles and be a credit to them even when measured by the high standards of this Christian century.

THE FIRST METHODIST CHURCH OF NEW ORLEANS.

A busier congregation than this would be difficult to find. A worker himself, Dr. S. H. Werlein, the pastor, has the faculty of setting others to work. The several institutional features which he has enteredprised are being successfully operated, and much good is being accomplished. The industrial school is steadily gaining in public recognition. The clinic, the millinery, the music, and the stenography departments are being well maintained, though more workers are needed in some of them. Twenty new pupils were added last week, and the Sunday school received five recruits from the industrial school. One student has recently acquired sufficient skill to secure a paying position. This same one was relieved of a serious physical disorder by a physician connected with the clinic. At a session of the Quarterly Conference on the 14th inst., a resolution was adopted to apply to the General Board of Missions to place First Church on a missionary basis, subject to the control of the Board. If this is done, it will exempt the congregation from the time limit in the appointment of its pastor, and also procure needed financial assistance for its industrial and missionary work. The committee appointed to communicate with the General Board are Mr. W. W. Carre, Mr. R. N. Cobb, and Dr. Werlein. The committee, it is announced, will forward the application at once.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

The next session of this institution will begin on Wednesday, September 28th. Everything points to the most auspicious opening in its splendid history. An admirable program has been arranged for the occasion. Mayor Crowder, of Jackson, and Governor Noel will welcome the new president to the capital city of Mississippi. Addresses will also be delivered by Bishop Bratton, of the Episcopal Church, and Mr. J. C. Hardy, President of the A. and M. College. In the unavoidable absence of Bishop Murrah, Dr. A. F. Watkins, Vice-President of the Board of Trustees, will represent him and formally turn the institution over to President Hull. According to the last report of the General Board of Education, Millsaps has an endowment of $300,000, and stands next to Trinity among the colleges of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This proud position has been achieved in only eighteen years, and it has yet hardly begun to grow. Its future could scarcely be brighter. And Millsaps is an out-and-out Methodist institution. All of the trustees are elected by the two Mississippi Annual Conferences, without even a nomination from an outside source.

WORK DAY FOR OUR ORPHANAGES.

It has become an established custom for our Orphanages to have annually what they are pleased to term a Work Day. This observance has commanded the approval of the people wherever tried, and has uniformly been attended with success. We think the practice is both beautiful and appropriate. In addition to the material benefits secured, it exerts a far-reaching educative influence. The Work Day of the Louisiana Orphans' Home has been fixed for Saturday, October 8th, and that of the Mississippi Home for Friday, October 14th. Rallies will be held and the reports received in the various congregations the Sundays succeeding. Our energetic agents—Brothers Vaughan and Williams—are busy sending out announcements and programs. Every pastor and Sunday school superintendent should give these faithful brethren their hearty co-operation. Both institutions have pressing needs, and each in the highest sense is worthy and deserving.

IN BEHALF OF THE ADVOCATE.

We are grateful to the Publishing Committee of the North Mississippi Conference for their stirring appeal in behalf of the Advocate which appears in this issue. It is needed and timely, and we hope that their exhortation will be instrumental in bringing the claims of the paper more effectively to the attention of our preachers and people. Why should not the Conferences press the work of circulating their organ? It is certainly to their interest to have it in as many Methodist homes as possible, and they can speak with a note of authority which the publisher or editor cannot command. Renewals are what we are most clamoring for now. But at no distant day we must have ten thousand bona fide subscribers. Less than that number is not creditable to the 140,000 Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi.

PERSONAL.

Rev. W. J. Ferguson recently assisted Rev. James M. Lewis in a revival at Vancleave, Miss. Much interest was manifested in the services.

Rev. H. W. Bowman delivered an interesting address on the occasion of the opening of the High School at Amite City on September 12.

Rev. A. L. Townsley has been assisting Rev. J. W. Lee in a revival at Kentwood, La. The press dispatches report overflowing congregations.

Greenville, La., has recently enjoyed an excellent meeting. The preaching was done by Rev. A. J. Coburn, the pastor. There were eight accessions of profession of faith.

Rev. W. D. Wendel, of Hernando, Miss., requests us to state that Bishop Murrell will dedicate the Methodist Church at Horn Lake, Miss., on the first Sunday in October. All former pastors are cordially invited to be present.

The Lord continues to bless Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, of Indianola, in his evangelistic efforts. His last meeting at Falsobia, like the others which he has held, was a marked success. There was much interest and six were added to the church.

Rev. G. D. Purcell, of Jena, La., reports some excellent meetings on his charge. He conducted services at a mission point last week and took 20 into the church. He has had 60 accessions during the year. He will begin a series of protracted services in the new church at Jena on October 1.

Writing from Vicksburg on the 13th inst., Rev. W. H. Saunders says: "We buried Mrs. Irma Birdsong, of this city, yesterday afternoon at 5 p. m. She was the daughter of the late Rev. C. A. Powell, of the Mississippi Conference." We extend sympathy to the sorrowing relatives and friends.

Dr. F. N. Parker, preached at Rayne Memorial Church, this city, last Sunday. Rev. N. E. Joyner delivered an address on the World Missionary Conference at Second Church at 11 o'clock a. m., and Dr. J. A. Rice occupied the pulpit at the evening hour. Brother Townsley was out of this city.

The editor completed last Sunday a four weeks' engagement with the Prytania Street Presbyterian Church of New Orleans. He found it a genuine pleasure to minister to that progressive and wide-awake congregation. Dr. Alexander, the beloved pastor, will return this week and occupy his pulpit next Sunday.

The Jackson District Epworth League Conference will be held at Florence, Miss., September 21-23. The program announced is a most attractive one. We are pleased to note that the address of welcome is to be delivered by Judge A. G. Norrell, who is a member of the State Legislature and a Methodist without reproach.

Rev. Ralph W. Moore, the stirring Principal of the Mississippi Conference Training School, informs us that that institution has recently been the recipient of two appreciated gifts: a hundred Bibles by the American Bible Society, and a good printing press by a friend. This worthy school is accomplishing a great work.

We regret to learn that the health of Mrs. S. H. Werlein, wife of the pastor of First Methodist Church of this city is not good. She has been spending some time at the Seashore Camp Ground, where she improved somewhat, but finding herself still not strong, she left for the mountains of Tennessee on Monday last. We trust that she will speedily regain her accustomed vigor.

Rev. A. S. Lutz has lately held an interesting meeting at Slughter, La., a community with which he became familiar during his college days at old Centenary, when that institution was located at Jackson. Brother Lutz occupied his pulpit at Feltly Street in this city Sunday morning last, but surrendered the evening service to Salvation Army leaders, by whom it was conducted.

The Nashville Tennessean of the 17th inst. announced that Dr. C. B. Winton left the day before for Ardmore, Okla., where he will fill the pulpit of the Broadway Methodist Church until the assembling of the Oklahoma Conference on November 9. Dr. Winton is a member of that body, and it is stated that he will maintain his connection with it and re-enter the work of the pastorate.

A note from Rev. J. A. Randolph came to hand a few days since instructing us to send his Advocate to Fort McPherson, Atlanta, Ga., instead of Fort Hancock, N. J. The former place will be his address until he gives notice to the contrary. We are pleased to know that our good friend is again located in the South, and is nearer home. He continues to render fine service as a chaplain in the Army.

Rev. G. A. Morgan is pleased with the progress of his work at Glenmora, La., and finds encouragement in the outlook. We are grateful to him for his kindly and continued interest in the circulation of the Advocate.

A communication from Brother H. G. Child brings information of a series of refreshing services at Church Point, this State, where Rev. H. B. Vandenburg is the preacher in charge. The spiritual life of the church was quickened and there were four additions.

We appreciate the kind invitation of Pastor H. W. Bowman to attend the dedicatory exercises of his church at Amite City, La., on October 10th. The sermon will be preached by Bishop W. B. Murrell. That it will be a strong and timely message, scarcely needs to be said.

In a communication bearing date of September 16th, Rev. A. M. Broadfoot, of Forest, Miss., says: "The work here is moving on smoothly. The church at Lena will soon be ready for use; when completed it will be worth $1,800. We have sold the old church at Forest and will begin to build at once. The church is being strengthened numerically, and we hope to report the Conference collections in full."

We thank Rev. D. M. Gean for a program of the meeting of the Local Preachers' Association of the Oxford District, which is to be held at the Main Street Church, Water Valley, Sept. 24-25. It is well arranged, and we doubt not that the occasion will be one of much interest. This is a somewhat unique organization, but it seems to us that it should prove helpful both to its members and the work of the Church.

Rev. W. H. Coleman, of Honier, is one of the hand of Sunday school workers now making a tour of the State. He is Superintendent of the Adult Work of the Louisiana Association, and is making his influence felt in the interest of organized classes. He furnishes the exposition of the Epworth League lesson for the Advocate every other week, and his admirable discussions of these topics have elicited much favorable comment.

The Columbus Circuit is flourishing under the faithful ministry of the Rev. W. R. Goudelock. His revival campaign, in which he had the assistance of Rev. J. T. Murrell, Rev. T. W. Lewis, Dr. T. C. Wier, Rev. E. Lin Egger, and Rev. R. P. Neblett, was a gratifying success. He has organized a church at Caledonia, in Lowndes County, with 57 members, and has the material on the ground to construct a new house of worship. This is a notable achievement for Methodism.

In a personal note to the editor, Rev. Robert Selby incidentally adds, "I have had the best congregations for the past two months that I have had since I came to Natchez, nearly four years ago." Blessings usually brighten as they pass, and we are not surprised that the Methodists of the historic Adams County capital are determined to make the most of what remains of Brother Selby's quadrennium. He easily ranks with the foremost preachers of his Conference and State.

A most superior program is that which Rev. E. S. Lewis, of the Winona District, has arranged for his Missionary Institute which will be held in Winona, October 17-19. Bishop McCoy will be present and participate in the exercises, and addresses will be delivered by Mr. T. B. King, of Memphis; Rev. D. C. Hull, President of Millsaps College; and Rev. J. R. Countiss, President of Grenada College. Brother Lewis seems to know how to command the services of the strong men of the Church.

A working superannuate is the Rev. H. P. Lewis, of Jackson, Miss. We thank him for the following brief summary of his labors during the current year, which he sent us a few days since: "I was superannuated last year after 52 years in the ministry, but I have not been idle. I have traveled about 3,000 miles and preached more than 60 times. I have preached, by invitation, in every presiding elder's district in the Mississippi Conference, and one in the North Mississippi, have kept fat, and, I trust, sweet in the work."

Mr. G. C. Kendall, of Meridian, writes thus of Mr. T. C. Wyatt, who recently died in that city: "A large circle of readers will call to mind Brother Wyatt as the sightless Confederate veteran. A bullet at the battle of Chickamanga in a moment deprived him of the sight of both eyes when a mere boy. At the Institute for the Blind in Jackson, he learned to make brooms and bottom chairs. His temporal prosperity has been phenomenal. By untiring labor, frugality, and marked liberality, he leaves his wife and children a comfortable competency."

Dr. and Mrs. J. H. C. Cook, of Hattiesburg, Miss., have issued cards announcing the marriage of their daughter, Miss Evelyn Stevens, to the Rev. Osmond Summers Lewis in the Court Street Methodist Church, of that city, at eight o'clock p. m., September 27th. The prospective bride is deservedly popular and has a wide circle of friends in south Mississippi. Mr. Lewis is one of the most promising young ministers of the Mississippi Conference, and is at present stationed at Broadstreet, Hattiesburg. The Advocate extends hearty congratulations.

A letter from Rev. W. E. McEgahan, of Starkville, Miss., informs us that Mrs. Elvira Caldwell of that goodly city is recovering slowly from the injuries sustained by a fall some time since. She is in a sanitarium under the care of Dr. J. W. Eckford. This information gives us not a little satisfaction. That noble Rock has in it no choicer spirit than Sister Caldwell, who for so many years has been a faithful benefactress in its various circles and activities.

Dr. S. A. Steel has been resting lately for a few days at Brownwood, Texas. The arduous labors of the summer were quite fatiguing to him, and his strength somewhat completely failed while preaching to ten thousand people at a camp meeting in Virginia. His autobiographical book—The Spirit of Saxony: A True Story of the Transition from the Old South to the New—is ready for publication. That it will be read with eager interest throughout Southern Methodism is a foregone conclusion. Either with tongue or pen, Dr. Steel is the most eloquent man in the Church, and better still, he is a genial, brotherly, warm-hearted Christian gentleman. We are pleased to know that he will soon be in Louisiana.

Rev. W. W. Woodard announces that the work in the Greenville District is in good condition. He is having the district parsonage covered and papered anew, which has needed to be done for some time. He reports that Rev. W. S. Farrone has recently held a most successful meeting at Dockery, resulting in 14 accessions to the church at that place. Bishop McCoy will make an itinerary through the Delta in company with Brother Woodard early in October. We are pleased to note this fact. That great field has not been given the attention and consideration by our Church leaders to which its importance justly entitles it. We have no doubt that the Bishop's visit and ministrations will hearten and inspire our people in that difficult but promising territory.

Rev. J. T. Murrell is now preaching in the Court-house at Aberdeen. The old church, which is one of the historic edifices of East Mississippi, has been abandoned, and a new structure will be erected. Brother Murrell is the third one of his family to serve this excellent congregation; his honored father, the Rev. William Murrell, D.D., and his brother, Bishop Murrell, having both formerly been pastor there. This church contains some of the strongest and most representative laymen in North Mississippi, among them being Mr. G. J. Leftwich, Doctor and Judge Sykes, Doctor and the Honorable George Paine, Mr. Tubbs, and Mr. Plant. The staunch loyalty of its membership has long been the subject of remark in the North Mississippi Conference.

Dr. H. M. Whaling conducted his farewell service at the First Methodist Church, of Shreveport, on Sunday, the 18th inst., preaching a touching sermon from the text, "God is love." Resolutions expressing appreciation of the work of Dr. and Mrs. Whaling were presented by Mr. W. A. McKennon, chairman of the Official Board, and unanimously adopted. Appropriate remarks were also made by Dr. Felix R. Hill. In a personal note, Dr. Whaling says, "It has given me inexpressible pain to be forced to give up my charge; but I am physically unable to go on with the work. In fact, I am scarcely able to hold my pen as I write." We deeply sympathize with our worthy brother, and pray that rest and climatic influences may soon bring about his complete restoration to health. Accompanied by his family, he left on the 12th inst. for Austin, Texas.

MAKE HOME HAPPY.

We spend much of our time at home, or at least we should do so. Let it be our aim, then, to make it as delightful a place as possible. It need not be a grand place, nor be furnished with extravagances; it is the spirit that pervades and the harmony and happiness found there, and the common interests, that make home a happy place.

How memory clings to home scenes and home experience! Let us prepare pleasure and pastimes for the little ones. Let us give them happy hours around the parental hearth. They will never forget these things. Let us make our homes so dear to all concerned that our boys and girls will not be in haste to get away into the world.—The Lutheran.

Men who live for self never succeed in satisfying self, or in quite satisfying anybody else; men who live for others in God-like unselfishness have joy themselves while giving joy to others.—H. Clay Trumbull.

GULFPORT, MISSISSIPPI, greatest port handling lumber, cotton and naval stores; also tropical fruits. Getting better. Live oak lots inside. $75 to $200 each. GEO. L. CARLEY, Gulfport, Miss.

SUPPOSE YOU HAVE A FIRE TO-NIGHT?
GET SOLID PROTECTION AND INSURE WITH
LEON IRWIN & CO.
FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE.
736 Union Street Phone, Main 535.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Seashore Dist.—Fourth Round.

Mellie and Wiggins, at Wiggins	Sept. 24, 25
Handsboro and Miss. City, at Miss. City	Oct. 5
Amelia, at Salem Camp Ground	Oct. 5, 9
Brooklyn and Bold, at B.	Oct. 12
Lostown	Oct. 15, 16
Memoriam, at Ruble	11
a m.	Oct. 21
Vandave, at New Prospect Camp Ground	Oct. 22, 23
Ocean Sprs, at Oak St.	Oct. 27
Bay St. Louis	Oct. 29, 30
Columbia	Nov. 5, 6
Oakvale, at Oakvale	Nov. 7
Long Beach	Nov. 12, 13
Coaville, at Poplar Head	11 a. m.
Hub, at Byrd's Chp	11 a. m. Nov. 19, 20
Carriere and McNeil, at C.	Nov. 19, 20
Poplarville	Nov. 21
Gulfport, 29th Street	Nov. 22
Moss Point	Nov. 26, 27
Pascagoula	Nov. 26, 27
Escatawpa	Nov. 26, 27
Lumberton	Nov. 30
Gulfport, 25th Ave.	Dec. 1
Wolf River Mission	Dec. 2
Biloxi, Main Street	Dec. 3, 4

W. B. JONES, P. E.

Vicksburg Dist.—Fourth Round.

Vicksburg, Washington St.	Sept. 18, 19
Silver City, at S. C.	Sept. 25, 26
Rocky Springs, at R. S.	Oct. 8, 9
Rolling Fork, at R. F.	Oct. 11
Oak Ridge, at O. R.	Oct. 12
Utica, at Utica	Oct. 15, 16
Bolton, at Bolton	Oct. 29, 30
Edwards, at Clinton	Oct. 30, 31
Harrison, at Lorman	Nov. 5, 6
Port Gibson, Pt. G.	Nov. 12, 13
Anguilla, at Anguilla	Nov. 19, 20
Mayersville, at Fittler's	Nov. 22
Satartia, at Mt. Olivet	Nov. 26, 27
Hermanville, at H.	Nov. 29

Bishop E. D. Mouzon will address the district lay leaders at 11 a. m. in Crawford Street Church, Vicksburg, October 24. Let as many men of the district come as possible.

G. H. GALLOWAY, P. E.

Natchez Dist.—Fourth Round.

Woodville Circuit, at White's	S. H.
Hamburg, at H.	Oct. 1, 2
Woodville	Oct. 8, 9
Fayette	Oct. 15, 16
Washington, at W.	Oct. 22, 23
Natchez, Jefferson St.	Oct. 24
Natchez, Pearl St.	Oct. 25
Barlow, at	Oct. 29, 30
Bayou Pierre, at	Oct. 31
Homochitto, at Wesley chap.	Nov. 5, 6
Scotland, at Bethel	Nov. 12, 13
Centerville	Nov. 19, 20
Meadville, at M.	Nov. 25
Nebo, at	Nov. 26, 27
Gloster	Nov. 29
Wilkinson, at	Dec. 1
Liberty, at L.	Dec. 3, 4
Adams, at A.	Dec. 5

The preachers in charge will please see very carefully after wise answers to questions 24, 27 and 29, and that full answers be given to question 31 (New Discipline).

Jackson Dist.—Fourth Round.

Canton	Sept. 18
Thomasville, at Forest Hill	Sept. 24, 25
Brandon, 7:30 p. m.	Sept. 25
Jackson Ct., at Dist. Parsonage	2:30 p. m. Sept. 30
Madison, at Pearl River	Oct. 1, 2
Jackson, Rankin St., 7:30 p. m.	Oct. 5
Camden, at Forest Grove	Oct. 8, 9
Canton, 7:30 p. m.	Oct. 12
Terry, at Byrum	Oct. 14
Sharon	Oct. 15, 16
Eden, at Car	Oct. 20
Menderhall	Oct. 22, 23
Benton	Oct. 29, 30
Yazoo City, 7:00 p. m.	Oct. 30
Jackson, Galloway Chapel, 7:00 p. m.	Oct. 31
Deasonville, at New Hope	Nov. 6, 7
Florence, at Monterey	Nov. 12, 13
Fannin	Nov. 19, 20
Harrisville	Nov. 23

Lintonia, at Anding	Nov. 26, 27
Vazoo City, 7:00 p. m.	Nov. 30
Flora	Dec. 2, 4
Jackson, Capitol Street, 7:00 p. m.	Dec. 5
Jackson, First Church, 7:00 p. m.	Dec. 6

J. R. JONES, P. E.

Meridian Dist.—Fourth Round.

Binnsville, at Wahalak	Sept. 25, 26
Daleville, at Bethel	Oct. 8, 9
Lauderdale, at L.	Oct. 23, 24
DeKalk, at New Hope	Oct. 29, 30
North Kemper, at Pleasant Grove	Oct. 31
Scooba, at S.	Nov. 5, 6
Bucatumna, at B.	Nov. 13, 14
Waynesboro, p. m.	Nov. 14
Wayne Mission, at Winches	Nov. 15
Matherville, at Winifred	Nov. 16
East Clark, at Coopers Chp.	Nov. 19, 20
Shubuta and Quitman, at Q.	Nov. 21
Meridian, 7th ave.	Nov. 23
Vinville, at Coker's Chap.	Nov. 24
Meridian, 5th st.	Nov. 25
Enterprise and Stonewall, at Enterprise	Nov. 27, 28
Meridian, Central	Nov. 29
Meridian, East End	Nov. 30
South Side and Poplar Spgs., at Poplar Springs	Dec. 1
Porterville, at P.	Dec. 2

W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

Brookhaven Dist.—Fourth Round.

Osyka, at Holmesville	Oct. 1, 2
Magnolia	Oct. 2, 3
Summit, at Summit	Oct. 3, 9
McComb and Fernwood, at Fernwood	Oct. 9
Monticello, at Georgetown	Oct. 15, 16
North Wesson, at Beauregard	Oct. 22, 23
Wesson	Oct. 23, 24
Gallman, at Gallman	Oct. 29, 30
Crystal Springs	Oct. 30, 31
Topisaw, at Sartinsville	Nov. 5, 6
Buford, at Waterholes	Nov. 12
Tylertown, at China Grove	Nov. 13
McComb, Centenary	Nov. 16
Prentiss, at Carson	Nov. 19, 20
Bogue Chitto and N., at Norfield	Nov. 23
Silver Creek, at New Hebron	Nov. 26, 27
Hazlehurst	Nov. 30
Pearlhaven, at P.	Dec. 3, 4
Brookhaven	Dec. 5

J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Oxford Dist.—Fourth Round.

Abbeville, at Mt. Zion	Oct. 8, 9
Oxford	Oct. 9, 10
Paris, at Pine Flat	Oct. 15, 16
Water Valley, at First Ch.	Oct. 16, 17
Water Valley Circuit, at Pleasant R.	Oct. 22, 23
Water Valley, at Main St.	Oct. 23, 24
Potts' Camp, at Bethlehem	Oct. 27
Red Banks, at Victoria	Oct. 28
Holly Springs Circuit, at Early G.	Oct. 29, 30
Ashland, at Ashland	Nov. 5
Charleston, at Charleston	Nov. 6
Coffeetown, at Bethlehem	Nov. 11
Grenada Ct., at Bethel	Nov. 12
Grenada	Nov. 13, 14
Randolph, at Raudolph	Nov. 18
Toccapola, at Toccapola	Nov. 19, 20
Lafayette, at Lafayette	Nov. 21
Spring	Nov. 22
Holly Springs	Nov. 25
Waterproof, at Pleasant G.	Nov. 26, 27

J. E. CUNNINGHAM, P. E.

Greenville Dist.—Fourth Round.

Cleveland	Sept. 25, 26
(Morning and evening service at Boyle)	Sept. 25
Shelby, at Boho	Oct. 1, 2
(Evening service at Hill house)	Oct. 2
Clarksdale	Oct. 6
Greenville	Oct. 8, 9
Tunica, at Robinsonville	Oct. 15, 16
Lula and Lyon, at Lyon (evening)	Oct. 16, 17
Jonestown, at Belen	Oct. 18
District Mission at Bellview	Oct. 20
Lake Cormorant, at Poplar Corners	Oct. 22, 23

Coahoma, at C. (evening)	Oct. 23, 24
Frlars Point	Oct. 24
Cleveland Cir., at Shipman's Chapel	Oct. 29, 30
Boyle, at Boyle (evening)	Oct. 30, 31
Rosedale, at Rosedale	Nov. 2
Glen Allan, at G. A.	Nov. 6, 7
Gunnison, at Gunnison	Nov. 13, 14
Hillhouse and Benoit, at B.	Nov. 19, 20
Shaw and Merigold, at Merigold (evening)	Nov. 20, 21
Leland, at Leland	Nov. 27, 28

W. W. WOOLLARD, P. E.

Winona Dist.—Fourth Round.

Itta Bena, 8 p. m.	Sept. 25
Winona	Oct. 2
Kilmichael, at Kilmichael	Oct. 2, 3
Carrollton, at Valley Hill	Oct. 8, 9
Belzoni, at Belzoni	Oct. 14
Webb, at Sumner	Oct. 15, 16
Minter City	Oct. 22, 23
Lambert, at Lambert	Oct. 29, 30
Tutwiler, at Tutwiler	Oct. 30, 31
Schlater, at Sunny Side	Nov. 5, 6
Inverness, at Inverness	Nov. 6, 7
Tom Nolen, at Bellfontaine	Nov. 11
Slate Springs	Nov. 12, 13
Eupora, at Maben	Nov. 15
Winona Ct., at Bethlehem	Nov. 19, 20
Ruleville, at Drew	Nov. 22
Moorhead, at Moorhead	Nov. 23
North Carrollton, at Poplar Springs	Nov. 24
Mars Hill, at Bethesda	Nov. 26
Indianola, at Indianola	Nov. 27, 28

E. S. LEWIS, P. E.

Aberdeen Dist.—Fourth Round.

Verona, at Verona	Oct. 1, 2
Montpeller, at Fosters C.	Oct. 8, 9
Houston	Oct. 9, 10
Okolona Ct., at M. Chp.	Oct. 12
Palestine, at Palestine	Oct. 15, 16
Pontotoc, at Pontotoc	Oct. 16, 17
Bona Vista, at	Oct. 22, 23
Prairie, at	Oct. 23, 24
Tremont, at	Oct. 29, 30
Fulton, at	Oct. 30, 31
Greenwood Spgs., at	Nov. 5, 6
Smithville, at	Nov. 6, 8
Shannon, at Shannon	Nov. 12, 13
Okolona, at	Nov. 13, 14
Houlka, at	Nov. 17, 18
Derma, at	Nov. 19, 20
Pittsboro, at Pleasant G.	Nov. 20, 22
V. and C. City, at C. City	Nov. 23, 24
Nettleton Ct., at	Nov. 26, 27
Amory and Nettleton, at A.	Nov. 27, 28

JAMES H. FELTS, P. E.

Durant Dist.—Fourth Round.

West, at Bowlin Green	Sept. 24, 25
Kosciusko Ct., at Bethel	Oct. 1
Rural Hill, at Rural Hill	Oct. 8, 9
Pickens, at Pickens	Oct. 11
Ebenezer, at Liberty Chp.	Oct. 15, 16
Sidon	Oct. 16, 17
Sallis, at Pleasant Hill	Oct. 22, 23
Kosciusko	Oct. 23, 24
McCool, at Chapel Hill	Oct. 29, 30

N. G. AUGUSTUS, P. E.

Sardis Dist.—Fourth Round.

Como Station	Oct. 1, 2
Sardis Station	Oct. 8, 9
Coldwater Sta. at Love	Oct. 15, 16
Wall Hill, at Chulakoma	Oct. 20
Tyro, at Free Springs	Oct. 22, 23
Cockrum, at Green Leaf	Oct. 29, 30
Olive Branch, at O. B.	Nov. 1
Mt. Pleasant, at Marshall Institute	Nov. 2
Byhalia, at Byhalia	Nov. 3
Courtland, at Courtland	Nov. 5, 6
Enid, at Enid	Nov. 8
Eureka, at Terza	Nov. 10
Pleasant Hill, at P. H.	Nov. 12

Hernando and Hinds, at Hernando	Nov. 13, 14
Long Town, at Davis Chp.	Nov. 15
Arkabutla, at Brooks Chp.	Nov. 17
Senatobia	Nov. 19, 20
Crenshaw, at Crenshaw	Nov. 22
Batesville	Nov. 26, 27

W. M. YOUNG, P. E.

Columbus Dist.—Fourth Round.

Mayhew, at Curtis Chp.	Oct. 1, 2
Winstonville, at Mt. Hebron	Oct. 8, 9
Columbus, First Church	Oct. 15, 16
Columbus, Second Church	Oct. 16, 17
Starkville Ct. at Sessums	Oct. 22, 23
Sturgis, at Bevils Hill	Oct. 29, 30
Shuqualak	Nov. 5, 6
Hebron	Nov. 12, 13
Mathiston, at Cumberland	Nov. 19, 20
Cedar Bluff	Nov. 20, 21
Columbus Circuit	Nov. 26, 27

J. E. THOMAS, P. E.

"AL-E-THE-IA."

Here is what Bishop J. S. Key wrote to Mrs. Miller in reference to her book, "Al-e-the-ia."

"I read the book at one sitting. I was interested from start to finish. It is a strong story, is well-written and is no exaggeration of the facts."

For sale by Mrs. C. C. Miller, Hammond, La., or The New Orleans Christian Advocate. Price, 25 cents.

A Werlein certificate entitling the holder to $90. off the regular purchase price of a Piano, will be given any Minister, Church, Society, Institution or responsible person. Address Miss M. F. Advertising Dept., New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Belmont College
For Young Women Nashville, Tenn.
L. L. LAYBRIGHT, D. D., LL. B., President
MISS HOOD and MISS HEROS, Principals
College and Preparatory Courses
Music, Art, Expression, Modern Languages, Physical Culture and Domestic Science. Matchless location. Athletics. Horseback Riding. Register now. For catalogue, address BELMONT COLLEGE, Box...

FREE TO YOU

LORD'S PRAYER BANGLE PIN
We mean what we say. We will send to you ABSOLUTELY FREE THIS LOVELY BANGLE PIN with the entire Lord's Prayer engraved on it. If you will send us your name and address.

REED MFG. CO., 41 Sun, PROVIDENCE, R. I.

"There is only one way to get ready for immortality, and that is to love this life, and to live it as bravely and faithfully and cheerfully as we can."
—Henry Van Dyke.

360 MERCHANTS

whose combined wealth is estimated at $10,000,000.00 wrote in April and May and gave it as their opinion that JOHNSON'S TONIC is the best Fever and Grip medicine in the world. Sample bottle with the 360 opinions, names and addresses.

SENT FREE!

on receipt of this ad cut out of paper. Address

The JOHNSON CHILL & FEVER TONIC CO.

Depot A., SAVANNAH, Ga.

Notice to Policy-Holders

IN THE

AMERICAN TEMPERANCE LIFE

INSURANCE ASS'N OF N. Y.

It is to your interest to READ AT ONCE, the report of the investigation by the Policy Holders' Committee of this Association. Mailed on request. Address.

POLICY HOLDERS' COMMITTEE

Room 1312, No. 309 Broadway, New York City.
LOUIS ANNIN AMES, Chairman. JOHN D. KNAPP, Sec'y

Epworth League

By Rev. Wm. H. Coleman

TOPIC FOR SEPTEMBER 25, 1910.

CO-OPERATION IN THE WORK OF THE KINGDOM OF GOD.

(1 Cor. iii, 9.)

1. What does this co-operation require on man's part?

(a) First of all, it requires perfect consecration. Absolute commitment of your substance and yourself to God. If the co-operation is to be complete with results most honoring to God and satisfactory to the one engaged in his service. (Luke ix, 23; Rom. i, 1-2.)

Those of the past who have accomplished most in the sublime work of the Kingdom have been men and women whose lives were wholly devoted to God. Some of them did not understand as perfect a code of ethics as would be practiced by them if living to-day, but the attitude of all of them toward God was that of humility, faith, obedience, true devotion, and they were the most perfect characters of their respective ages. Such were Abraham, Moses, Isaiah, Joseph, Daniel, the whole Church at and immediately after Pentecost, Luther, Wesley, and a host of others.

Also, those to-day who are accomplishing most for the glory of God and the good of humanity, and whose lives are noblest and richest, are wholly consecrated men and women. One of the most beautiful and impressive scenes that I have ever seen my privilege to witness was at the recent great World's Sunday School Convention in Washington City. At the close of a soul-inspiring address by Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, in response to an appeal from him for a wholly consecrated life, about six thousand men and women from all the ends of the earth devoutly bowed before God and solemnly pledged to live for him, to walk with him, and if need be, to die for him. My heart was stirred, not alone because of the great number and the seeming completeness of the consecration, but also because of the fact that these were of the noblest type of men and women that the world possesses to-day. There were ex-governors, legislators, princely businessmen, men high up in the professions. There were women representing that large class of uncrowned queens who are leaders of the highest society of the world; that society, whether in the home, the Church, or the world, that introduces you into a spiritual atmosphere that moves you closer to God.

These consecrated men and women of both the past and the present are the ones who, by faithful co-operation with God have secured for us all that we hold sacred and dear.

(b) The second requirement on man's part in this divine co-operation, is faithful, diligent service in every walk and relationship of life.

We are saved for service. We consecrate not alone for the sake of being made happy, but, above all, for the reception of that spiritual strength that will enable us to resist the tempter, and that will give us power for service. (Acts i, 8.)

Real consecration requisite for entering this divine co-operation is expressed in the attitude and language of St. Paul, when he said: "Lord what wilt thou have me to do?" (Acts ix, 6.)

The code of a Christian life following this correct beginning has its epitome in the teaching of Paul: "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." (1 Cor. x, 31.)

Do all to the glory of God, in every walk and relationship of life. Not only in the ministry, or as a special church official, or personal worker, but as a member of the church in the world in all that we do. That which is not right to do no one should engage in; that which is right to do can be done to the glory of God, whether it be to preach the gospel, practice law, hold office, sell goods, till the soil, teach school, keep the home, or lead in society. It can and should all be done to the glory of God, in co-operating with him in making the world better and in blessing every life in the world.

Such were the lives of Gladstone, Lord Shaftsbury, Florence Nightingale, Frances Willard, Wm. McKinley and a host of others in all the useful activities of life.

Such are the lives of the greatest business and professional men and the world's most amiable women of to-day. If space admitted we could give you a long list of them.

11. What does it insure for us on God's part?

The great trouble with the majority of people is that they never really do the things of which we have spoken: never really consecrate to God, and obediently, devoutly and faithfully serve him. But when we do, then we have the following good things positively assured us:

(a) If you mean business with God in entering into a partnership with him according to the aforesaid conditions, he will furnish you all the capital that you need with which to carry on the business that he gives you to do. This is taught in the parable of the pounds and of the talents. It further teaches that he continues to increase the capital as you prove faithful in its use. This capital may be material or mental or spiritual. Whatever it is, God gives us in the beginning as much as we need for the work required; and as we improve it he increases it, and also enlarges the field of our operations and enlarges the business that he has committed to us.

For instance, I know a man whom, when a boy, the Lord gave ability to make fifty dollars a year and his board. That boy with perfect consecration and zeal entered into this divine partnership, or co-operation, and the Lord increased the mental, material and spiritual capital of his life until to-day he is financially able to pay ten thousand dollars a year into the Lord's treasury, and is mentally and spiritually able to bless thousands by his Christian work.

I know a man whom, when a boy, the Lord gave sufficient mental and spiritual capital to run a little country Junior League. That boy ran it to the glory of God, and the Lord increased both his capital and his field of labor until to-day he is known all over the South, and is winning thousands of souls to Christ.

(b) It insures not only success in accomplishing the work that he gives us to do, but also that all our personal needs shall thereby and therein be supplied. (Matt. vi, 33; Ps. xxxvii, 3, 4; 1 Cor. x, 13; Phil. iv, 19; Matt. xix, 27-30.)

Then at the end of a happy and useful and well spent life in this world, there shall come a time when our Senior Partner, the King of the Kingdom, shall call us into his presence and reward us with a more glorious life, in a more splendid realm, with sublimer achievements to attempt, and loftier ideals to attain.

Should not every young life be inspired with a holy ambition to enter into this exalted co-operation with God, into which he has condescended to call us, and to achieve success in his kingdom? Your life out of the kingdom with all its efforts will contain very little satisfaction, success or safety for time and none for eternity. Your life in the kingdom will be richly full of all for both time and eternity.

Superior to Lemonade
Morsford's Acid Phosphate
A teaspoonful added to a glass of cold water with sugar, makes a refreshing drink.

"Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it."—Lincoln.

FREE FREE Household Prizes THE 68 PUZZLE

To Further Illustrate Our Piano Selling Plan. No Commissions! No Rebates!

CAN YOU SOLVE IT? IT CAN BE DONE!

First Prize A Handsome Clock and $100, good in part payment of a new piano, to be selected by winner.

Second Prize A Rocking Chair and $100, good in part payment of a new piano, to be selected by winner.

Third Prize A Lady's Gold Filled and Enamel Watch and $100, good in part payment of a new piano, to be selected by winner.

Fourth Prize $100, good in part payment of any new piano, either grand or upright, of standard make at time of purchase from us, provided no "friend" is to get commission, nor any other reduction. Second-hand pianos and club pianos excluded.

Answers must reach us not later than October 8, 12 M.

EXPLANATION.

Take the nine numbers 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18 and so arrange them that they will add 68 in each direction, crossways and up and down.

Either use diagram in this advertisement or make one like it according to rules below.

The person sending in the nearest correct answer will receive the first prize. Person sending in the next nearest correct answer will receive the second prize. The person sending in the third nearest correct answer will receive the third prize, and so on.

In case of ties, identical prizes will be awarded those tying.

RULES OF THE CONTEST.

Any one may compete for these prizes, except our employees and the winners of first, second and third prizes in previous contests.

Answers must be on one sheet of paper, with signature and address, and reach us not later than October 8.

Mention Christian Advocate.

CONTEST DEPARTMENT

PHILIP WERLEIN, Ltd.

605-607-609 CANAL STREET,
NEW ORLEANS.

Obituaries.

...which was a great loss to the community. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...which was a great loss to the community. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

...he was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him. He was a man of great character and a true friend to all who knew him.

AYER'S HAIR VIGOR
Stops Falling Hair
Destroys Dandruff
An Elegant Dressing
Makes Hair Grow

Does not Color the Hair
Composed of Sulphur, Glycerin, Quinine, Sodium Chloride, Water, Perfume. Ask your doctor his opinion of such a preparation.

USE GAS for COOKING and HEATING! USE ELECTRIC CURRENT for LIGHTING and POWER FURNISHED BY US.

WE OFFER A FACTOR OF SAFETY.
NEW ORLEANS RAILWAY and LIGHT COMPANY.

HIBERNIA INSURANCE CO.

Capital.....$200,000.00
Assets.....479,200.00

No. 303 Camp Street.

New Orleans, La.

LOSSES PROMPTLY PAID.

CONVENIENT WAY.

LOUISIANA RAILWAY

(LA. RY. AND NAV. CO.)

THE SHORT LINE BETWEEN

NEW ORLEANS, BATON ROUGE, ALEXANDRIA, SHREVEPORT.

PULLMAN BUFFET SLEEPING CARS. TICKETS ON SALE TO ALL PORTS.

Inquire of Local Ticket Agent.

E. C. D. MARSHALL.

General Agent.

USE THE L. and A. RAILWAY,

"EVER ON TIME"

Double Daily Passenger Service

Between Alexandria and Winnfield, Sibley, Minden and Shreveport.

Daily Service

Jena, Trout, Hope, Stamps, Hot Springs, St. Louis, Etc.

OUR FREIGHT SERVICE IS UNEXCELLED.

B. S. ATKINSON, G. F. & P. A. TEXARKANA, ARK.

BOSTON CRYSTAL GELATINE

makes a dessert of purity, quality and endless possibilities.
Dainty, Wholesome, Economical.
Each package of Crystal Gelatine bears the above Trade Mark.

Each package is guaranteed to make two quarts of jelly.

If your grocer does not keep it send us for Free Sample Package.

CRYSTAL GELATINE COMPANY
121A Beverly Street
Boston, Mass

Sunday School

LESSON XIII. SEPTEMBER 25, 1910.

TEMPERANCE LESSON.

Gal. V. 15-26.

Golden Text: If we live by the Spirit, by the Spirit let us also walk.

TEACHING TOPICS:

"Called for Freedom."

It is a very significant phrase which Paul uses in the thirteenth verse. The Christian is characteristically a free man. There is no compulsion upon him anywhere, ideally. This is the best thing about the gospel, in Paul's estimation. The old way was subjection to law, that is, to rigid regulations, not in themselves necessarily ethical or spiritual, which would coerce the rebellious will and compel it to come into some sort of subjection to the high authority of the universe. This was forbidding in idea. It was cruelly disappointing in fact, because it never yielded the satisfaction of loyal, loving obedience. Paul found it so for many years. Then one memorable day he saw the true vision. On the way to Damascus the light of heaven shone around him. What was the profound significance of this wonderful experience? To his enraptured gaze there was revealed Jesus: Jesus who had been subject to death, the best penalty of the law over the guilty or the innocent, Jesus who was alive, and hence who must overcome the powers making for limitation and destruction. Therefore every one redeemed from sin and death by the might of the living Christ is a man dedicated to the liberty of the Spirit. He is "called for freedom." This is the essence of Christianity and of its salvation, in the eyes of Paul. For freedom did Christ set us free, stand fast therefore, and be not entangled again in a yoke of bondage.

A Dangerous Gift.

We all know how easily the precious gift of liberty is abused. Freedom all too readily degenerates into license which is the most perfect slavery. Here is a great pity. Nevertheless the possibility seems to be necessarily interwoven in the very texture of Christian character so long as it is in the making. Since freedom is the characteristic meaning of the Christian message in relation to law, since this liberty is so readily interpreted and used as if it were license, therefore temperance becomes the cardinal principle of ethics, the root principle, we might say, of all character formation from its very earliest stages.

The Why of Temperance.

Temperance is a much bigger word than often supposed. It seems that animals obey the immediate impulse; they are governed by the laws of appetite almost exclusively. The first condition of advance beyond the animal level is the control of appetites and passions according to the higher direction of the mind. Now, in the world of invention everything is given already, though in chaotic condition, the genius merely selects, orders, and thus controls the forces of nature. In the realm of character building all the impulses are native, no new forces are created; the principle of growth is the gradual projection of the ideal, which comes to guide, direct, and hence control the powerful forces of the moral nature. Temperance is absolutely the sine qua non of spiritual advancement. Every animal passion has its place if properly controlled and duly subordinated. This is easily seen in regard to most of the instincts and feelings. It is true of every primitive feeling. For example, the capacity for feeling anger is a splendid thing. What would character be without it? And yet it is as clear as can be that indignation must have its proper object and must be strictly subordinated to love, entirely controlled by the lofty ideals of forgiveness and of service. It is quite simple. Temperance means education and self-control. It means "enough and not too much." But it is just within this narrow margin that true manhood is found. On either side of the line lie animalism and bestiality.

Victory over the Flesh.

This victory must be won in every department of human experience, by those who are "called for freedom." There is more than one temperance and more than one drunkenness. The first in Paul's list of "the works of the flesh" are not intoxication or murder. It is said by many of those who know intimately the weaknesses of our social structure that the sins of incontinence are far more dangerous to our national well-being even than the cruel wrongs of the liquor traffic. It is difficult to know. One passion inflames another, and the devastating conflagration is fed by many ugly fires. Truly "the flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh." This warfare is a terrific reality. We can afford to shut our eyes to no aspect of it, nor relax for a moment our efforts in the cause of the Spirit. Here as everywhere "eternal vigilance is the price of liberty."

To "Walk in the Spirit."

is something quite practical. We sometimes hear it spoken of as though it were a strained effort to be punctilious in the observance of fixed forms. Perhaps it is thought of in terms of social approval, and then its method is imitation. Or perhaps it is something vaguely splendid, something done for the glory of God, but of such rarefied beauty is it that one would have difficulty in describing its nature. Meanwhile, God really works in the souls of men to prepare them for taking part in the establishment of his kingdom. Here is the way the process begins in multitudes of cases. There is experienced a "horrible duality" (as one has described it), there are discordant and conflicting desires, good and evil fight in the darkness, and self-despair hovers over the fearful struggle. So long as this goes on the carnal man is trying to maintain the pride of his own individuality. At last this foolish pride is humbled in the dust of its pitiable helplessness. The man throws himself on the mercy of the higher powers that do battle for him; he surrenders to the ideal; he ceases to struggle, and thereby opens his mind and heart to the purifying, strengthening inflow of the divine stream, the eternal holiness. Then does he "live in the Spirit." But the single event will not suffice. He must "walk in the Spirit." It will be no new experience, but the process must continue. He must go on from strength to strength, from victory to victory. This means that if he chances to look on vice he will loathe it and turn away in disgust. This means that he will strive to cultivate high thoughts and aspirations in his home, in business, in the lives of all his associates. He will be on the side of the Spirit wherever the warfare wages. He will vote for social righteousness. He will champion the cause of the ideal wherever a duty discloses the way. O yes, the image of God is quite easily recognized by the comrades of his day's journey.

"The Fruit of the Spirit" is so beautiful and gracious as to defy description. Paul's symbols for it, which range from "love" to "self-control," suggest the galaxy of graces which make up the Christian character. But any or all of these words are insufficient, if experience of the realities is lacking. And if experience of them is in the life, no argument or exhortation will be required. We need speak therefore no further word of praise. We may call attention, however, to the fact that "self-control" crowns the noble list. Temperance is seen to be the high test of the art of Christian living.—Western Christian Advocate.

AN IMPORTANT GATHERING.

Again I call attention to the missionary meeting to be held in Winona, Oct. 17-19. We expect all the preachers and a good many laymen from the Winona District to be in attendance. Ample arrangements will be made for entertainment. This meeting will furnish a magnificent opportunity to the laity of this section to hear Bishop McCoy, Mr. T. B. King, of Memphis; Prof. Hull, of Millsaps, and many others on the stirring issues before the Church. I urge every pastor in the district to be present. I wish every steward could be induced to attend. What wonderful results would follow! Let me urge the pastors to give notice of this meeting to all their congregations. The first service will be at 8 o'clock Monday evening, Oct. 17. Bishop McCoy will preach at that hour.

It would be a good idea for the pastors to appoint a delegation from each congregation and lay upon their hearts their duty to attend this meeting. Let us rally our forces and make the finest showing at the approaching Conference at Sardis the district has ever made. E. S. LEWIS.

Gold Spectacles Free

You can read the very finest print in your Bible with them on. Write by the day for a trial.

Don't Send Me One Cent when you answer this advertisement, as I am going to distribute at least one hundred thousand sets of the Dr. Haux wonderful "Perfect Vision" Spectacles to genuine bona-fide spectacle-wearers in the next few weeks on one easy, simple condition.

I want you to thoroughly try them on your own eyes, no matter how weak they may be, read the finest print in your Bible even by the dim firelight; thread the smallest eyed needle you can get hold of and put them to do just you like in your own home in any way you please. Then after you have become fully and positively convinced that they are really and truly the simplest, clearest and best-fitting glasses you have ever had on your eyes, you can keep the $2.00 pair forever without one cent of cost, and by showing them around to your neighbors and friends, and speak a good word for them everywhere at every opportunity. Won't you please introduce the wonderful Dr. Haux "Perfect Vision" Spectacles in your locality, on one easy, simple condition?

Just Do Me A Good Turn

If you are a genuine bona-fide spectacle-wearer (no children need apply) and want to do me this favor, write me at once and just say: "Dear Doctor: Send me your Perfect Vision Eye Tester, absolutely free of charge, also full particulars of your handsome 10-part Gold Spectacle Offer," and address me personally and I will give your letter my own personal attention. Address:—

DR. HAUX, (Personal)

Haux Building, St. Louis, Mo.

10-95 Buy This Large Handsome Nickel Trimmed Steel Range without warming closet or reservoir. With high warming closet, porcelain-lined reservoir, just as shown in cut. $17.25. Large, square, oven, wonderful baker, 6 cooking holes, body made of cold rolled steel. Duplex grate; burns wood or coal. Handsome nickel trimmings, highly polished.

OUR TERMS are most liberal ever made. You can pay after you receive the range. You can take it into your home, use it 30 days. If you don't find it exactly as represented, the lowest bargain you ever saw equal to stores called for double our price, return it to us. We will pay freight both ways.

Write Today for our beautifully illustrated Store Catalog No. 5144; a postal card will do. 150 styles to select from. Don't buy until you get it.

MARVIN SMITH CO., CHICAGO, ILL.

For $110,654.04

We guarantee an established trade in the South on any high-class article of general household use.

THIS SUM BUYS

1. A three-years advertising campaign, 10 inches per week, 56 publications, 526,924 circulation per week, (over 80 millions of copies) distributed to the most substantial Southern homes—to create the demand for the goods.
 2. A sales force of 20 specialty salesmen for three years, selling the goods to retailers and jobbers—to place the goods within reach of the consumer.
 3. A guarantee of certain minimum results as regards the number of initial or introductory sales and the amount of such sales—to secure the manufacturer against any unnecessary speculation in his advertising campaign. (Guarantee usually one dollar per 1,000 of circulation used per annum, and sales equivalent to cost of campaign—excess sales carried on commission basis.)
- In brief, the only general publicity campaign covering a wide area, ever offered with a hard and fast guarantee of results.
- If interested, address below, explaining your selling system in detail, and sending samples of goods on which you desire to establish trade—no inferior articles promoted. Smaller accounts accepted covering narrower territory.

JACOBS & COMPANY, Clinton, S. C.

Advertising and Selling Agents.

Operating The Religious Press Advertising Syndicate.

Largest Special Advertising Agency in the World.

PELAHATCHIE, MISS.

The Camp Meeting at Old Shiloh Camp Ground began on the night of the second of September and closed on the following Friday morning. We had with us the following brethren: W. W. Simmons, L. L. Roberts, J. V. Bennett, W. N. Thomas. These brethren did most of the preaching, and presented the truth clearly and strongly, giving out no uncertain sound. It was such that the small children could understand it. We were glad to note the presence of Rev. T. J. King, who served the Shiloh Charge for four years. He added much to the success of the meeting. We had twelve accessions and about fifty conversions, and we believe there are more to follow. Pray for us that the revival fire may continue to burn.—W. E. Dickens, Pastor

FARMERVILLE, LA.

We have been getting along nicely this year, and expect to report a successful year along all lines at Conference. We have held three revival meetings on the charge, one at each appointment. The first was held at Farmerville. I was fortunate in securing the assistance of Rev. W. L. Hunter, of Floyd, La., who did the preaching. Brother Hunter is one of the ablest preachers of the Conference and has a bright future before him. The church was greatly revived and we received two members. Our second meeting was held at Marion, La., in which I was forced to do my own preaching. In this meeting the church was wonderfully revived and eight added to the church by vows and baptism, with a prospect of others to follow. Our third and last meeting we closed on Sunday night the 11th inst., at Greenville, La., which lasted only seven days. At this meeting, like the one at Marion, your scribe did all the preaching. The Lord was with us and we had a glorious revival, resulting in a large number of conversions and eight accessions to our church on the last night, with others to follow. Six out of this number were received by vows. My health has not been very good this year, yet notwithstanding this, the Lord has wonderfully blessed my efforts.—A. J. Coburn, P. C.

CHURCH DEDICATION.

Bishop W. B. Murrah will dedicate the new church at Amite City, Sunday, Oct. 16th. Friends and all former pastors are invited to be present. H. W. BOWMAN, Pastor.

RUSKIN-CAVE COLLEGE.

Ruskin-Cave College has easily the best opening ever known in her history—more students, more teachers, better accommodations, greater enthusiasm and spiritual power.

All summer room deposits kept coming in and we knew that we were going to have our 200. So the rooms were nearly all taken before school opened.

A week before, Sept. 7th, the eager students came. Train after train landed them and a jolly crowd it was. Here they came from Texas, Louisiana, Florida, Mississippi, Alabama, Illinois, Indiana, Cuba, Wyoming, the Philippines and every direction. I believe we could get 500, but we take only 200, and thus care for them better.

We have strengthened the Faculty and are very grateful for the superior talent in our midst. It may be of interest to note that we have as teacher of New Testament Greek, a man who speaks Greek and Latin as fluently as I do English. He is a good scholar and at the same time a sweet-spirited Christian gentleman. The young preachers at R. C. C. have a rich feast before them.

We ask all of God's people to continue to pray for us and our little village. It's a lovely spot and we want it to be kept for the Master's use.

R. E. SMITH.

Ruskin, Tenn.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Monroe Dist.—Fourth Round.

Bastrop, at Humphrey's Ch.	Sept. 24, 25
Bonita, at Bartholomew	Oct. 1, 2
Merrouze, 7:30 p. m.	Oct. 2
Farmerville	Oct. 3, 9
Windsboro	Oct. 15, 16
Gilbert, 7:30 p. m.	Oct. 16
Florence, at Jonesville	Oct. 22, 23
Downsville, at Douglas	Oct. 29, 30
Oakridge	Nov. 5, 6
Girard, 7:30 p. m.	Nov. 6
Floyd	Nov. 12, 13
Lake Providence	Nov. 19, 20
Waterproof	Nov. 21
Delhi	Nov. 26, 27
Brookland, at Frantom	Dec. 3
Eros	Dec. 3, 4

S. S. KEENER, P. E.

Ruston Dist.—Fourth Round.

Homer, 8 p. m.	Sept. 28
Plain Dealing, at Concord	Oct. 1, 2
Renion, at Alder Bridge	Oct. 2, 3
Arcadia, 11 a. m.	Oct. 8, 9
Ruston, 7:30 p. m.	Oct. 9
Vernon, at Oak Ridge	Oct. 15, 16
Winnfield	Oct. 22, 23
Jonesboro, at Jonesboro	Oct. 23, 24
Haynesville, at H.	Oct. 29, 30
Haynesville Mission, at Shouguloo	Oct. 29, 30
Simsboro, at Pine Grove	Nov. 5, 6
Ringgold, at Andrew	Nov. 11
Gibbsland, at Oak Grove	Nov. 12, 13
Bernice, at Alabama	Nov. 17
Houghton	Nov. 19, 20
Lishon	Nov. 24
Blenville	Nov. 26, 27
Lanesville	Dec. 1
Cotton Valley	Dec. 3, 4
Minden	Dec. 5

R. W. TUCKER, P. E.

Shreveport Dist.—Fourth Round.

Keatchie, at Long St.	Oct. 1, 2
Grand Cane, at Grand C.	Oct. 8, 9
Oakdale, at Spring Hill	Oct. 11, 12
Fullerton	Oct. 15, 16
Longville	Oct. 17, 18
Campiti	Oct. 22, 23
Pleasant Hill, at Williams Chapel	Oct. 29, 30
Pelican, at Pelican	Oct. 30, 31
Ida, at Ida	Nov. 4, 5
Mooringsport	Nov. 6, 7
Coushatta, at Coushatta	Nov. 12, 13
LaChute, at LaChute	Nov. 14, 15
Texas Avenue	Nov. 16
Hornbeck, at Hornbeck	Nov. 18, 19
Leesville	Nov. 20, 21
Bon Ami	Nov. 21, 22
DeRider	Nov. 23, 24
Mary, at Mary	Nov. 25, 26
Zwolle, at Zwolle	Nov. 26, 27
Mansfield	Nov. 28
Rossier City	Nov. 29, 30
Greenwood	Dec. 1, 2
Noel	Dec. 5
Shreveport, First Ch.	Dec. 6

T. J. WARLICK, P. E.

IN USE FOR NINETY YEARS.

It seems a long, long time, and yet, since the year 1820, nearly a century ago, "Gray's Ointment" has been in constant use by thousands of families in this and foreign countries. The merit of this preparation is being heralded North, East, South and West, and it is considered by prominent physicians all over the world, to be the best and safest remedy for boils, bruises, blisters, blood poison, carbuncles, cuts, poison oak, sores and skin eruptions of any kind. Get a 25c box from your druggist, or send us your name and we will send you a free trial box, in order to prove to you its remedial value. Address Dr. W. F. Gray & Co., 809 Gray Building, Nashville, Tenn.

Mr. Parmelia Crow, of Aberdeen, Tex., writes: "Find enclosed $1.00 for which please send me four boxes Gray's Ointment. It has been used in my father's and grandfather's family, and we can't get along without it."

EDUCATIONAL

Grenada College.

Fifty-Ninth Session Opens September 14, 1910.

A School for Girls and Young Women. Full Academic Courses. Superior Advantages in Music, Art, Expression, and Domestic Economy. Careful Attention Given to the Development of Christian Character.

REV. J. R. COUNTISS, President, Grenada, Miss.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE
JACKSON, MISS.

Rev. David Carlisle Hull, M. S., President.

A high-grade College, situated at the Capital of the State. Location high, dry and healthful. Entrance requirement and Curriculum same as in other leading colleges and universities, North and South. The very finest Moral and Religious Influences. Extraordinary Advantages in

LITERARY AND LAW DEPARTMENTS.

Courses Leading to A. B., B. S., A. M., M. S., and LL.D. Degrees.

NINETEENTH SESSION BEGINS SEPTEMBER 28, 1910.

For Catalog and other information address

J. E. WALMSLEY, Secretary, Jackson, Miss.

SILLIMAN COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE

A home school for girls. 59th year. Endowed. Modern. Beautiful. Healthful hill country. Thorough courses leading to degrees. Very moderate charges. Illustrated catalogue.

Address, Pres. E. E. BROWLER.

CLINTON, LA.

RANDOLPH-MACON COLLEGE
FOR MEN. ASHLAND, VIRGINIABranch
Memorial
Dormitory
Our Newest BuildingOne Teacher to Every Ten
Students

R. E. BLACKWELL, A. M., LL. D., President WM. S. BROWN, Sec'y and Treas.

STEWART HOME and SCHOOL FOR BACKWARD CHILDREN AND ADULTS.

Expert training and care by specially trained teachers and experienced physician who has devoted his life to this work. Home on 100 acres of beautiful lawn and woodland for pleasure grounds. Hot water system. Elegantly appointed buildings, electric light and steam heat. Highly endorsed and recommended by prominent physicians, ministers and patrons.

A beautiful book will be mailed upon application.

DR. JOHN P. STEWART, Box 4, Farmdale, Ky.

MODES OF THE HEAVENLY LIFE

BY

REV. WALTER G. HARBIN.

Rev. C. K. Dickey, M.A., B.D., has the following to say of this book in the Central Methodist Advocate:

"I have just finished reading the book, 'Modes of The Heavenly Life,' by Rev. Walter G. Harbin, Haynesville, La., and I have never read a more fascinating book of the kind. My heart was strangely warmed as I read the stirring messages from the graphic pen of this gifted pastor-cum-cum. The book is a series of five sermons on the work of the Holy Spirit. The author has given the world a small book that will long abide. It is truly said, 'No one can read it without being stirred to holier aspirations.' by Dr. R. A. Meek in the introduction. The book may move you to tears as it did me. It is sure to make you want to be a better person and inspire you to greater and more heroic service for our Master. The style is easy and inviting to all classes of readers. The English is good, the diction is pure and the illustrations are well chosen and captivating. The book is modern and yet sound and Biblical. The one sermon on power is worth the price of the entire volume."

Price, 75 cents, postpaid. Order from C. O. Chalmers, 512 Camp St., New Orleans, La.

FRECKLES
TAN, SUNBURN

Quickly removed by WILSON'S FRECKLE CURE. Guaranteed for freckles, sunburn, tan, moths, pimples. Postpaid 50c a box. Trial size 25c—postage, 5c. Dealers and agents write for special offer to Wilson's Freckle Cure Mfg. Co., Charleston, S. C.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

VOL. 57—No. 38.

"PROVE ALL THINGS; HOLD FAST THAT WHICH IS GOOD."

WHOLE No. 2851

ROBERT A. MEEK, Editor.

NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, SEPT. 29, 1910.

CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Publisher.

THE FAMILY ALTAR.

It is somewhat popular now to recall with a look of pitying amusement the religious austerities of former years, and even a prominent preacher, himself the descendant of Puritan ancestors and pastor of a church whose glory and strength rests upon the firm foundations laid by the men and women of the stern convictions and immovable faith of earlier days, has seen fit to hold up for the amusement of his hearers the frailties of those whose weaknesses often were stronger than the strength of their latter day successors. But however this may be, there were at least some things in which we can take a lesson from the years of ancient times and which we would do well to copy from them.

Among these virtues of the past was the erection and maintenance of the family altar. The Christian father or mother of earlier days would as soon have thought of omitting the public as the family worship of God. Each day's work was hallowed by the invocation of the Divine care and guidance and each night's sleep made the more sweet because commended to the care of Him who neither slumbers nor sleeps. Family life was built up around the conviction that the God of the father and the mother was a God at hand and not a God afar off. Childhood knowledge of and reverence for religion was systematically and continually fostered. The Bible was a familiar work, and an everyday companion. It lay upon the table in close contact with the daily paper and the school book, and imparted something of its sacredness to them. The songs of Zion did not have to be rendered by a cultured and well paid choir; they were sung by parents and the children at home and were therefore not unknown in words or tune when announced in the sanctuary. Prayer was not an exercise to be reserved for the Church service or to be voiced only in the retirement of private devotions; it was the common language of hope and faith; where in were expressed to the attentive ear of the Heavenly Father all the little cares and ills, all the common mercies and causes of thanksgiving which must ever knit the family together in their fellowship and affections. Family worship in other days, and let us hope even now, was the time for intercourse upon the mightiest themes, whereby the real motives and aspirations of those whom God had set together in families, were made known to each other, and the memory of whose earnest and hallowed petitions and praises must surely invoke a sigh of regret rather than a smile of pity from any one whose finer and truer feelings have been spared to him in later life. Well did Robert Burns, though himself neglectful of the religious faith of his fathers and his own early youth, voice his unalterable convictions of the value of piety in the home when in his immortal poem, "The Cottar's Saturday Night," after describing the reverent and earnest family worship of the humble ploughman, he exclaimed:

"From scenes like these auld Scotia's grandeur springs
That makes her loved at home, revered abroad;
Princes and lords are but the breath of kings,
An honest man's the noblest work of God."

But the objection is made to this revered and hallowed custom that it is unfitted for the conditions of our present life. Is this, however, an honest objection? To hear men talk now-a-days one would think that no one was ever really busy about the affairs of life until the present generation. We look back a few dozen years and say, "Oh, well, you know everybody had plenty of time then. They did not have so much to do as we have, and of course they could pray in the morning and pray at night and pray all day long, for the matter of that, and never miss the time." They did perhaps have somewhat more leisure than we do, but we still have time for whatever we really wish to do. We do not often hear of one who habitually refuses to eat because he has no time to do so, or to sleep because the hours thus spent are withdrawn from activity, nor do we turn aside from pleasurable or profitable occupations for lack of time. Is not then this excuse simply a frivolous one? Because it is well to be "diligent in business," must we never halt so much as to breathe a thanksgiving to him who prospers our undertakings or to utter a prayer to him who alone can deliver us from evil? An old proverb quaintly reminds us that "Prayer and pro-vender hinder no man's journey," and our day's work would be speeded rather than retarded if ushered in by a united plea for God's guiding and restraining mercy upon all the members of the family. Even allowing that there are many cases where the members of the household are no longer children, but rise and leave for their various duties at different hours in the morning, there are still but few families where the members do not, as a rule, meet around the dinner table at noon or at night, and then, if at no other time, may opportunity be taken for praise and prayer and instruction from the Word of God. Many of our Holland brethren in the West have the beautiful custom of remaining at the table after the principal meal of the day and there conducting their family worship. The occasion is fitting and the possibility of this gathering together the entire family is much increased.

But whatever may be the time or the method of the exercise, the erection of the family altar is to be sought perhaps above everything else, save the personal piety of the members of the family. Its maintenance has been and ever is the root of mutual love, confidence and good understanding in the fear of the Lord. It is the oldest form of public worship and the one that touches most nearly and frequently each one in the home. Its decadence inevitably precedes or accompanies loss of spiritual tone in the household and often in the individual; its maintenance is a continued safeguard against spiritual danger, an encouragement in time of trial, and a blessed memory to which to look back when surrounded by the cares of life or amid the recollections of the passing years.

"Why, therefore, should we do ourselves this wrong,
Or others—that we are not always strong;
That we are ever overborne with care;
That we should ever work or heartless be,
Anxious or troubled, when with us is prayer;
And joy and strength and courage are with Thee?"
—From the Christian Intelligencer.

OUR ENCOURAGEMENTS.

By C. H. Wetherbe.

While it is true that there are events in our life which bring discouragement to our hearts, yet there are also many encouragements. And the question which we ought to definitely and decidedly settle is, Shall we allow the discouraging features of our experiences to govern us, or will we be ruled by those things which are charged with encouraging power? As an abstract principle this question is easy to answer. The philosophy is plain, pointed, and pregnant with meaning. To be habitually thinking of one's discouragements and thus be largely controlled by such thinking, is to keep one in a state of mental misery. It tends to produce spiritual weakness. It makes one measurably cowardly. Chronically discouraged Christians present an unattractive appearance to the people of the world. All this is philosophically true. Turn to the other side of the question. We have many bright encouragements. If we be Christians, then God is with us. This one truth is enough to keep our heads above all the flood and flow of discouragement. It is what gave stimulus and strength to the ancient patriarchs, prophets and priests. The assurance that God was verily with them as their all-wise Director and Almighty Helper made them high-spirited and energetic amid all foes and all temptation to fears and trouble. And the same assurance guided and governed the apostles and their heroic assistants. Paul's constantly encouraging thought was, "If God be for us, who can be against us?" Was he ever discouraged? Very likely he was, but he was never ruled by discouragement. He kept his mind upon the towering encouragements, which were always within his sight—the sight of his penetrating faith. And so should we do. Our labor is not in vain, though our natural eyes may see no results. A steady vision of our encouragements will keep us hopeful, happy and healthy.

By a firm and persistent purpose one can achieve large things in the face of great difficulties. The accomplishments of Helen Keller have written her name high upon the scroll of fame. And others, perhaps inspired by her example, are achieving wonderful results. The press dispatches report that Miss Theodore Josephine Frankensen, a blind student at Chicago University, has been elected to the Phi Beta Kappa Society this year, besides being awarded honors in Latin and Greek and the scholarship in the graduate school.

The Harvard University Library has come into possession of the magnificent Lefferts collection of the works of Alexander Pope, which consists of upward of 500 volumes of books and pamphlets. The collection is the most extensive brought together by any student, and includes some volumes not in the British Museum library. Harvard already had some 150 volumes in addition to those given, so that its collection is now unequalled in America. While the name of the donor is withheld, it is understood to be J. Pierpont Morgan.

Christian Advocate.

Published for the Proprietor, Messrs. L. and North Mississippi, New Orleans, La. by the Messrs. L. and North, 1111 Poydras Street, New Orleans, La.

DIRECTIONS.

Advertisements are accepted for insertion in the Christian Advocate, New Orleans, La. on the following conditions:—The advertiser must send the copy of the advertisement to the Proprietor, Messrs. L. and North, 1111 Poydras Street, New Orleans, La. and must pay for the same in advance. The advertiser must also send the copy of the advertisement to the Proprietor, Messrs. L. and North, 1111 Poydras Street, New Orleans, La. and must pay for the same in advance.

The Proprietor, Messrs. L. and North, 1111 Poydras Street, New Orleans, La. will not be responsible for the loss of any advertisement or for the loss of any money paid for the same. The Proprietor, Messrs. L. and North, 1111 Poydras Street, New Orleans, La. will not be responsible for the loss of any advertisement or for the loss of any money paid for the same.

WHAT IS THE EXPLANATION?

By J. R. Bingham.

In Chicago I worshipped in the leading Methodist Church in the residential section of that great city and heard a beautiful sermon by a district superintendent on the necessity for a personal experience of religion. The service was about half full of worshippers, and the preacher congratulated himself on having twice as many hearers as he had expected to meet.

In the evening I attended a church in the business section, finding about thirty people engaged in an Epworth League meeting led by a deaconess. Preaching by the pastor followed immediately the League service, the auditorium being about one-fourth filled with hearers, some half-dozen Mississippians being in the congregation. The sermon was evangelistic, earnest and pleasing.

Immediately following this service I went to a nearby Episcopal Church, which was not more than one-tenth full of people.

An ardent Christian Scientist, who had gone with me to the morning worship, invited me to go to one of their meetings on Wednesday evening. I did so. It was my first experience. The building was as large as, and was finer than, any I had visited on Sunday, and it was crowded. The meeting began with an organ solo, followed by a hymn. Then a lesson from the 11th chapter of the Gospel according to St. John, and a reading from Science and Healing. Those who came into the room while the leader was reading stood until the reading was concluded, and then were seated. After the reading there was a moment of silent prayer, and the Lord's Prayer was recited in concert.

The leader called for testimonies, and thirteen women and two men testified to having been healed of disease after all other remedies had failed. A hymn was sung and the audience dispersed. Can anyone explain why there were many more people present at this Wednesday evening meeting than there were at all the three services combined in three different churches on Sunday?

While in the city I heard Rev. Wm. Adams Brown, D.D., of Union Theological Seminary, New York, preach in the chapel of Chicago University on "This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." He discussed the triumph of science over material things, the place of faith in the work of scientists, the necessity for faith in all things. Here is faith and faith. John speaks of "our faith," which is faith in a Person. That Person is Jesus Christ, the Son of God. It was a very sacred hour to me, not alone because of the stimulating sermon and helpful worship, but also because there was before my eye the majestic form of, and in my ears the bugle notes of the marvelous voice of, and in my heart sweet communion with the spirit of my noble friend who, on that platform, delivered a great address on "Christ and Caesar in Education." On that occasion Chicago University conferred on him the degree of LL.D. His going away left the world and Methodism poorer, and left me poor indeed.

The feature of my visit was a sermon by Professor G. B. Foster, of Chicago University, on "The meaning of the death of Christ." Text: "He was wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed." My heart was warmed not strangely, but to an unusual degree, as he spoke of sacrifice, the law of sacrifice, the necessity for sacrifice, the value of sacrifice, the sacrifice for us by Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God.

Rarely have I been so moved as under the spell of that great discussion: "The bleeding sacrifice in my behalf appeared" in a very real and deep and powerful sense. A sympathetic and devout worshiper at my side whispered, "His simplicity, earnestness and deep spirituality remind me of Dr. Wheat." And this witness is true. Could praise be higher?

Never have I so appreciated Watts' great hymn, always a favorite, as I did when, immediately following the overpowering climax of the sermon, the great congregation jubilantly sang:

When I saw the wondrous cross
On which the Prince of Glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And my contempt on all my pride.

Were the whole realm of nature mine,
That were my lot, I should not care;
To all the wealth that doth increase,
I would give for the life of my dear Lord and Saviour.

I have not time to do a preceding Sunday Dr. Foster had preached on "The reality of God," and there was a winning throughout that great city conviction that I can well believe in. Nothing I ever heard had a more tremendous impression on me than his sermon. Thinking of it, I recall a sermon by Bishop Hendrix in 1892 on, "He shall see the fall of his seed, and shall be satisfied." One in 1893 by Bishop Galloway on, "The Fatherhood of God." One in 1894 by Dr. Hayne Leavell on, "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him." One in 1895 on "Stewardship," by Dr. Barber. One in 1896 by Bishop Candier on, "A Suffering Savior," and one in 1897 by Bishop Hoss on, "What think ye of Christ?" These great discourses register for me the high watermark of preaching, and give a new meaning to "All are yours" whether Paul or Apollos or Cephas.

Therein do I rejoice.

Yea, and will rejoice.

Not a day has passed since I heard Dr. Foster that I have not recalled with devout gratitude and a glowing heart his great discussion of that vital theme, and even as I write the tears of joy well up, and my spirit cries:

Dissolve my heart in thankfulness.

And melt mine eyes to tears.

That occasion was an event in my life, and I pray Almighty God that it may prove to be an epoch in my apprehension of Jesus Christ as my sacrifice for sin, as he was wounded for my transgressions and bruised for my iniquities; the righteous dying for the unrighteous that he might bring me to God. Amen!

I believe no one values friendship and appreciates friends more than I do. It is a peculiar pleasure to meet them and worship with them when otherwise one would be alone in a city of two and one-half millions of souls. Hence it was a priceless privilege to be with Bishop and Mrs. Morrah, Mrs. Percy Ray, Miss Harvey, the accomplished voice teacher in Granada College; Rev. Jno. T. Myers, Rev. W. L. Duran, and Rev. H. S. Spradins and his sweet little daughter. They greatly refreshed the spirits of Mrs. Bingham and myself in Chicago.

Carrollton, Miss.

DR. WINTON VERSUS FEATHERSTUN.

By Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

Dr. G. B. Winton essays to reply to my article in the Advocate of Sept. 8, on "The Usurpation at Vanderbilt." He entitles his article, "A Plea for Reason." His example would be better than his plea.

He says my article is "surprising alike for its dogmatic misstatement of facts and for its intemperate language; yet he does not point out a single sentence or word that is intemperate, nor does he disprove a single statement that I made. He claims that I "forget to be kind or courteous." If telling the plain truth in defense of the Church is unkind and discourteous, I plead guilty to his charge.

When I wrote, "No State imposes conditions relative to the constitution of its board upon any institution," I meant clearly that no State would deny to any church, or like institution, the right to appoint in its own way the members of its boards of trustees. Dr. Winton declares that the State of Tennessee most certainly does deny this right to the Church. Nevertheless, there is on the statute books of Tennessee a law unimpeached, hence valid, which says: "Whenever any educational institution has been established, and is maintained and patronized by any religious body or denomination, or shall hereafter be so established, maintained and patronized, the representative governing body of such society or denomination shall have the power and authority, at its option, to elect its board of directors or trustees, or to fill vacancies occurring therein." Am I wrong, then, when I insist that no State imposes conditions which forbid the Church to appoint through her representative governing body the trustees of her schools, since this is specially true of Tennessee? Who has made a "dogmatic misstatement" in this matter?—Dr. Winton, or I? I give the proof; the very language of the law; while Dr. Winton gives "certain positive assertions of his own," unsupported and unprovable.

He says: "Dr. Featherstun argues so much more forcibly on the basis of unfounded assertions than he possibly could if embarrassed by facts, that perhaps he will not care to know that the laws of Tennessee governing corporations of this kind are summarized in Article ix, section 3, of the Constitution, and in Articles 1470-1473, inclusive, of Shannon's Code. Laws passed by the Legislature since the issuance of the charter of Vanderbilt cannot, under the above article of the Constitution, have an ex post facto application." This is amazing. If Dr. Winton had examined some encyclopaedia he would have learned that the constitution prohibition of ex post facto laws "only applies to criminal and penal statutes," and never to corporation laws. These are railroads in Tennessee chartered and built before railroad commissions were dreamed of, are they exempt from the control or supervision or restriction of Tennessee's present-day Railroad Commission?

What does all of this advertising of legal ignorance and proved to be a bit rhetorical, but is the language alluding to me "impertinent" or "kind"? Is it even "courteous"? He will not care to know—ah! how does he know that I do not wish to know the truth? Such language discredits more than the intelligence of this brilliant man—it discredits his judgment and his heart as well. Is the language even illuminating? Have the readers of the Advocate copies of Shannon's Code, or Tennessee's Constitution? I am sure that some of them know more about the meaning of ex post facto laws than does Dr. Winton. We have schoolboys in Mississippi who would not have blundered in the matter as he has.

He introduces this rhetorical display of legal ignorance with a statement that my contention rests on a "basis of unfounded assertions." Who is using unfounded assertions now? Let the Advocate readers decide!

He rushes madly on—hear him! A second unfounded assertion of this critic of the Board of Trust is that the law of 1895 "the law I have recited above" has been declared by the Supreme Court constitutional. Yes, I said so—did I make an "unfounded assertion" when I said it? Let us see! I "founded" my assertion on a statement made by Bishop E. E. Hoss in the Nashville Advocate of July 8, 1895, page 10. Whom shall I credit—Bishop Hoss, or Dr. Winton? I recall that years ago the Church called E. E. Hoss to the editorship of her "connectional organ," and from quadrennium to quadrennium kept him there, until she called him to be Bishop; and I sadly recall that this same great Church called this Dr. Winton to succeed Bishop Hoss as editor of the Nashville Advocate; but her last General Conference declined to retain him in that high office, because she was persuaded that he made too many "unfounded assertions," and based too many wild conclusions on his "unfounded assertions."

O wad some power the giftie gie us
To see oursel's as ithers see us!

I commend to my rhetorical friend this rustic philosophy of Robbie Burns. But who am I to believe, Bishop Hoss, honored and trusted by my Church, or Dr. Winton, discounted by the Church? Am I unreasonable if I trust the unchallenged Bishop?

Dr. Winton hides behind some lawyer, whom he does not name, but who boldly, from this seclusion of anonymity, contradicts Bishop Hoss. Who is this chivalrous lawyer? Dr. Winton says that he is "one of the best lawyers in the State." Is he, indeed? Maybe this is another of the Doctor's "unfounded assertions"—but who is this best, brave but nameless lawyer? I yearn to know his name.

More madly still he rushes on into another "unfounded assertion." He recalls his former statement in an article I alluded to, "that the charter of Vanderbilt requires the trustees to fill their own vacancies," and which statement I contradicted; and he asserts thus: "Yet that very assertion, in so many words, is found—in the charter." He once said it in essence, but now he sidetracks the assertion—hear him: "It is found in formal acts of the Board," even as early as 1873. "Formal" or informal "acts of the Board" have nothing to do with what I said. Bylaws passed by a board of trust and other formal acts are not parts of a charter. Both charters of Vanderbilt, that of 1872 and the "amended charter" of 1873—i.e., copies of them—are before me, and I have just carefully reread them, both; and I challenge Dr. Winton to point out one statement or hint most remote, that the Church may not, "at its option," as the law of Tennessee provides, "elect its board of trustees or fill vacancies occurring therein."

Read this: "It is true that this provision does not appear formally set out in the words of the charter. But the men who took out that charter, as I have taken pains to ascertain, knew perfectly what I myself have later learned, and what Dr. Featherstun might have ascertained but for his indifference to mere facts (what Christian courtesy—see Matt. vii, 1-5), namely, that under the legal practice of this State the members of a corporation of which the charter contains no specifications as to the filling of vacancies, not only may but must fill those vacancies."

Notwithstanding my friend's charitable (?) declaration of my stolid and wilful ignorance, yet I did know and do know that if the charter does not stipulate how the trustees shall be elected, or if the Church fails to fill vacancies, the Board may, yes, must, fill them. But if the Church fails for some years and the Board does in those years the Church's neglected work—exactly the case in the Vanderbilt matter—this does not make it a provision of the charter, nor does it vitiate or negative the Church's right, "at her option, to elect the trustees or to fill the vacancies occurring therein." Dr. Winton knows only a part of all this; but I am less ignorant than he: for I know it all.

There are some other things that I know. First, that if the charter of Vanderbilt does not sufficiently protect the Church in its right to name the trustees, that charter can be so amended as to conform it to the expressed will of the Church; second, that in 1872 a board of trustees did obtain a charter containing certain provisions, not forced into it by an arbitrary decree of the court granting it, but written into it by the trustees, or "commissioners," acting for certain Annual Conferences, and under their authorization; third, that in 1873 these same persons did, under the same authorization, secure from the State of Tennessee an amended charter; fourth, that this same Board of Trust—the same by the law of "perpetual succession," though the personnel was different—did in 1898 transfer, by authorization of the Conferences as above recited, the Vanderbilt University to the General Conference; fifth, that this Board of Trust can, in obedience to the expressed will of the Church, get from the State of Tennessee another "amended charter," conformable to "the option" of the General Conference already expressed. Dr. Winton also knows these things, or might have ascertained them but for his indifference to mere facts—"no, no, I shall not say this of him," he said it of me, but as I have already proved that I am not so ignorant, even of law as he, I shall show that I am not so "discourteous" as he—no, I shall not say it of him.

Why do the Vanderbilt Trustees refuse to get this amended charter, if it is needed, to meet the Church's demands? Why do they quibble about the legal difficulties arising from the silence of the charter? Why do they not remove these difficulties by breaking this silence?

Dr. Winton still insists that it would be "an immoral thing" for the Board of Trust to obey the Church in this matter. Dr. Winton once vowed to "be subject to the Discipline of the Church," and at a later time he stood before an Annual Conference and vowed to "obey them to whom the charge and government over him is committed." Now, when he sets aside the explicit command of his Church, as he did last June, at the Vanderbilt Board meeting, is it not "an immoral thing" that he does? More immoral by far than if he should neglect to conform to all the laws on corporation in Tennessee's Code. "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's." Yes, by all means do it—"but unto God the things that are God's"—the Church is His Son's own bride; in giving the State its due, do not rob the Bride.

All of this talk about an irreconcilable conflict between the laws of Tennessee and the rights of the Church in Vanderbilt is as supremely absurd as it is disingenuous; and my brilliant friend ought to be heartily ashamed that he ever voiced the disingenuous twaddle. His friends are ashamed of him.

I repeat what I have already insisted, that this talk about settling the question by "a friendly suit at law" is disgusting nonsense. I may not be quite ready to practice law in Tennessee; but I have learned to practice Christianity in Mississippi; and as Dr. Winton is even less qualified than I to practice law, let me suggest that if he will learn to practice Christ's teachings and persuade the Vanderbilt Board not to do "an immoral thing" by disobeying the Church, that most of them have sworn to obey, a lawsuit will be as impossible as unnecessary.

Again the name of the sainted Galloway has been dragged into this controversy. That stainless name, bright with a supernal lustre, is sacred to us Methodists of Mississippi. It is writ high on the temple of fame and deep in the hearts of millions of Methodists; and it shall not be used to give dignity to petty contentions based on "unfounded assertions," without a vigorous protest from one who knew and loved him from the days of our early manhood. Requiescat in pace!

A CONTINUING FORCE.

By C. H. Wetherhe.

It is an unfortunate fact that not a few Christian people entertain the false idea that the Old Testament has long ceased to be of any special value to the world, and that it has no binding authority on Christians to-day. I have known Christians who declared that they did not read that part of the Bible because they believed that it was out of date, and hence that it was not designed for their present obedience and guidance. But there could scarcely be a greater misconception. It betrays a lamentable lack of discerning the purpose and living and abiding force of that portion of the inspired volume. The truth is, there is a mighty and regnant power in the Old Testament, and the marvel is that any one can carefully and devoutly read it without feeling more or less strongly its teaching and trenchant life and influence.

It is said that the late Charles Reade, of England, the eminent novelist, was led to the study of the Old Testament by a remark of the late and famous Matthew Arnold, the remark being, according to a writer in the Andover Review, in these words: "The Old Bible is getting to be to us literary men of England a sealed book. We may think that we know it. We were taught it at home. We heard it read in church. Perhaps we can quote some verse, or even passage, but we really know very little of it. I wish, Reade, that you would take up the Old Testament and go through it as though every page of it were altogether new to you—as though you had never read a line of it before. I think it will astonish you."

Mr. Reade did so. He entered upon the task with such a zeal as characterized his other work. The result was, he not only became astonished at his discoveries, but the study led to his conversion. He opened his heart to the truths and lessons of the Old Testament and found that they were full of a mighty and convincing force, before which he humbly bowed, and by which he was brought into the kingdom of which the holy prophets foretold with graphic interest and spiritual eloquence. And there are very many others to-day who, if they would reverently search these ancient Scriptures, would find them to be the power of God, even unto eternal salvation.

LAY BAPTISM VERSUS APOSTOLIC SUCCESSION.

By Rev. W. T. Woodward.

I have been asked to write an article on the authenticity of the boasted claims of our Baptist brethren. "That we are the true Church of Christ, hence our teaching and mode of administering the ordinances are correct and others are wrong." I want to treat this subject in this article as it bears on their authority for administering the Sacrament of Baptism.

In their claim, that they came down from John the Baptist, they fail positively to establish an unbroken succession. I want our people to know the fallacy of their claim. I want it distinctly understood that I stand prepared to prove every word in this article or any other article that I may write shall contain.

The English Baptists started without an ordained minister of the gospel. In the second Revolution a better period was ushered in for religious toleration. After the English nation had thrown off the Papal yoke, evangelical doctrine began to prevail in the Church. The Bible was translated into English, and several versions were printed and circulated and read by the masses. A spirit of inquiry and investigation was started. Discovering that so many things into which they had been led by the popish teachers and leaders of the past were wrong and superstitious, vain and false, there was eager searching for the truth. Out of this condition of affairs the various churches came toward the close of the 16th century. They were called Puritans, Separatists, Dissenters, etc., and out of this movement grew the Independent, the Congregational, and the Baptist denominations, though most of them drifted into the Presbyterian Church, which was already established in Scotland. At this point we find James I. takes the throne. Very wise in his own conceit, and having no patience with those who differed from his way of thinking, he could not see nor understand why everybody could not see matters just as he did. Everybody ought to belong to the church, and all ought to attend church, be taught as he directed, etc., and if not, as he commanded, they ought to be "forced out of his kingdom." Many Dissenters fled, mainly to Holland, ultimately to America, planting the New England colonies.

Among those who fled to Holland was Rev. John Smyth. He was originally a minister in the Church of England. He became pastor of a Separatist Church in 1602 and fled to Holland about 1606. "On arriving in Amsterdam, Smyth, at first, united with the 'Ancient' English Separatist Church there in charge of Johnson, with Ainsworth as teacher. At that time the Separatists of Amsterdam were in warm controversy as to the true nature of a Visible Church. Smyth published a work on the fallen church, entitled 'The Character of the Beast,' and a tract of 71 pages against infant baptism. For this he was disfellowshipped by the First Church. . . . This led Smyth, Helwys, Morton and thirty-six others to form a new church, which should practice believer's baptism and reject infant baptism. Finding themselves unbaptized, they were in a strait. They were on good terms with the Dutch Baptists, but would not receive their baptism lest they should recognize them as a true Church, for they believed that the true churches of Christ had perished. He believed the Apostolic Church model was lost, and determined on its recovery. With the purpose of restoring this pattern, he baptized himself on his faith in Christ in 1608, then baptized Thomas Helwys, with about forty others, and so formed a new church." (Armitage's History of the Baptists, pp. 153-4.) So, from the above, there was certainly no valid baptism in this case.

Dr. Cramp thinks it of little consequence whether Smyth baptized himself, or like Roger Williams, got one of his companions to baptize him and then returned the favor. I quite agree with Dr. Cramp, and so does their most eminent historian, Dr. Thos. Armitage, though he shows very conclusively that Smyth did baptize himself, but whether by dipping or otherwise, he is not quite so clear, though dipping became the custom of the church he founded very soon, if not from the first. Benedict copies his account from Taylor's History of the General Baptists, as follows:

"It seems that Mr. Smyth and his friends were put to the same difficulty in reviving the practice of immersion. He and all his disciples had been sprinkled in their infancy, and therefore, according to their new views, were unbaptized. There were indeed many churches in Holland which practiced immersion, but as they differed widely in sentiment from him, he did not choose to receive baptism from them. This completely refutes Dr. Mosheim's supposition that the English Baptists derived their origin from the German and Dutch Mennonites. On the contrary, we see that the first English Baptists of which we have any regular account, after the Reformation, although living in the midst of the Dutch Mennonites, declined receiving baptism from them on account of their differences of opinion on many important points. This obliged Mr. Smyth to consider some other means of reviving the ordinance. What method he took is not very clearly stated. It is most probably that those who were convinced of the duty of believer's baptism formed themselves into a church and then appointed two of their number (perhaps Mr. Smyth and Mr. Helwys) to baptize each other and afterwards to baptize the rest. This subject caused considerable uneasiness and reproach to the first Baptists after the Reformation, both general and particular. A similar difficulty occurred at the formation of the original Baptist Church in America by Mr. R. Williams, who had recourse to the same expedient." (Benedict's History of the Baptist Denomination, pp. 229, 230.)

Mr. Armitage gives us in unmistakable terms the following from Mr. Smyth himself, viz: "But many, being unbaptized, baptize themselves, as we did, and proceed to build churches themselves." "Each of them unbaptized hath power to assume baptism each for himself." (Armitage, p. 457.)

A member of the first Baptist Church in England, published a treatise in 1615 in which he argues thus: "Who then shall baptize after Antichrist's exaltation? That is, how shall baptism be recovered, when it has been lost through the long prevalence of anti-Christian rule." The answer is thus given: "We and others affirm that any disciple of Christ, in what part of the world so ever, coming to the Lord's way, he by the Word and Spirit of God preaching that way, unto others and converting, he may and ought also to baptize them." (Cramp's Baptist History, p. 296.)

We have seen how the English Baptist Church was planted. This church grew, others were organized, proceeding from it. In 1626 there were eleven such in England. They were afterwards known as the denomination of General Baptists. I will give the remainder of the English Baptists in my next article.

Haynesville, La.

NEW BOOKS.

A Study of Christianity as Organized. By John A. Kern, Professor of Practical Theology in Vanderbilt University. Publishing House of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Smith & Lamar, Agents. Price, $2.50.

This is a large volume of 572 pages. The binding, paper, and mechanical work are of exceptional merit and most attractive. The field traversed is of much interest, and the author handles his subject in a manner both instructive and masterful. The book is divided into three parts, as follows: "Brotherhood," "Office," and "Autonomy." It is really a work of great historical value, tracing step by step the evolution of Christianity from a mere informal fraternity up to its present complex organization. In Part 1, Christianity as a social religion, the conditions of Church membership, discipline at various periods, the origin of the parish, monastery, and Protestant congregation are among the themes discussed. Part 2 deals with the development and significance of the various church offices, and Part 3 treats of the various forms of Church government: The Congregational, the Conciliar, and the Episcopal. The place and merits of our Methodist polity among the several systems are admirably set forth. Dr. Kern has for years been enriching Southern Methodism with the products of his pen, and this latest publication is one of the best treatises that he has given us. We heartily commend it to our people, and especially our preachers, as a rich mine of valuable information, which they would do well to procure and read. It may be had of the publishers, or Rev. G. W. Bachman, Winona, Miss.

The characteristic of St. Thomas is not that he doubted, but that he doubted and loved.—John Watson.

SPEARING & CO.,

(Established 1817.)

SAIL MAKERS

AWNINGS, FLAGS, TARPAULINS and TENTS.

CORNER CANAL AND TCHOUPITOUAS STREETS

Cumberland Phone M. 3891. New Orleans, La.

Church News

There are persistent rumors about that the Mission is in feeble and failing health.

Dr. Chapman, the famous evangelist, and Mr. Charles Alexander, the well known scholar, will conduct a revival campaign in England this fall and winter. They are highly esteemed on the side of the Atlantic.

The population of Jerusalem is now estimated to be eighty thousand, and fifty thousand of these are said to be Jews. The Hebrews there are reported to lack the prosperity for which they have become proverbial in other countries.

Bishop Waterhouse won all hearts at the Montana Conference. The Pacific Methodist Advocate says that he can measure men and that his administration of affairs, fellowship in the social circle, and preaching gave eminent satisfaction.

An evangelistic campaign on a large scale will be launched in Chicago on October 12th. Four hundred churches have already agreed to co-operate. The meeting will be under the general control of Dr. J. Wilbur Chapman, and associated with him will be Mr. Alexander and thirty-seven other picked leaders.

Miss Maggie Beran, of Wales, has been conducting revival services in the First Welsh Presbyterian Church of Philadelphia, and commanding large audiences. She is reported to be only seventeen years old, and to look even younger. It is said that from early childhood she has cherished a purpose to do evangelistic work.

From many sources comes the report that Bishop Denny gave an excellent account of himself both in the chair and in the pulpit while holding the late session of the Missouri Conference. This was expected, since viewed from any standpoint he is an uncommon man. He is a first-class parliamentarian and a preacher of strength and power.

Rev. James L. Humphrey, M.D., a veteran missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church, passed away at his home in Little Falls, New York, on September 5, in his 24 year. He enjoyed the unique distinction of having baptized the first Methodist convert in India fifty-one years ago. There are now thousands of Methodists in that distant land.

Dr. C. M. Bishop has been transferred from the Missouri Conference to Texas, and stationed at Wichita Falls. He led the Missouri Conference delegation at the last General Conference, and was regarded as one of the strongest Methodist preachers in that State. Texas has greatly profited by the exercise of the transfer power in this instance.

Dr. Lundy H. Harris, formerly assistant secretary of the General Board of Education of the M. E. Church, South, and for fifteen years professor of Greek at Emory College, died at Pine Loz, Ga., on September 19th. He was the original circuit rider in the book of that name, recently published by his wife, Mrs. Cora Harris. He was forty-eight years of age.

In the September-October number of the Bimonthly Review of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Dr. R. J. Cooke replies to Archbishop Ireland's arraignment of the methods of that denomination in Italy. Eaton & Mains have also issued his paper in pamphlet form. It is a strong and timely defense of the missionary operations of our sister Methodism in the land of the Vatican.

The Central Christian Advocate makes the following pointed observation: "The High Church party in the Episcopal Church is much disturbed that the Roman Catholic Church should assume to be the Catholic Church. But, really, is that as preposterous as for the little Episcopal Church to set up to be the American Church? We don't care! We only laugh in our sleeve. But at the same time why is not sauce for the goose sauce for the gander?"

